This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

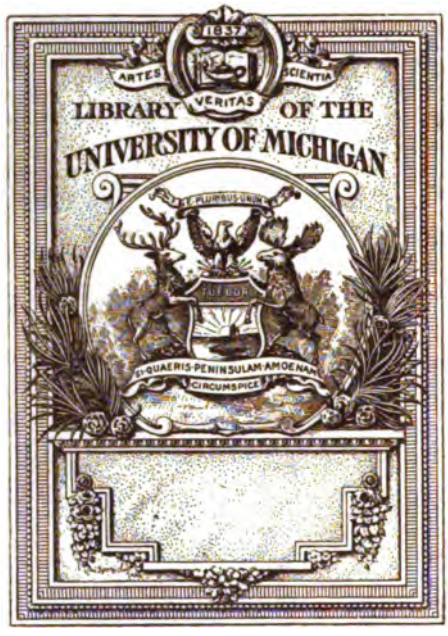
We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

B 866,117



1837
ARTES
VERITAS
SCIENTIA
LIBRARY OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
E PLURIBUS UNUM
TUEBOR
SI QUAERIS PENINSULAM AMOENAM
CIRCUMSPICE

ARGU

RE

NIT

11

U. S. Supreme Court

CASES ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERMS, 1884, 1885, IN 114, 115, 116, 117 U. S.

BOOK 29,

LAWYERS' EDITION,

COMPLETE WITH HEADLINES, HEADNOTES, STATEMENTS OF CASES, POINTS AND AUTHORITIES OF COUNSEL, FOOTNOTES AND PARALLEL REFERENCES,

BY

STEPHEN K. WILLIAMS, LLD.

WITH

"NOTES ON U. S. REPORTS"

BY

WALTER MALINS ROSE.

THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY,

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.

1901.

Copyright 1886 by
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.

Copyright 1900-1901 by
WALTER MALINS ROSE.

Copyright 1901 by
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO., and WALTER MALINS ROSE.

E. R. ANDREWS, Printer, Rochester, N. Y.

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION.

THE first republication, nearly twenty years ago, of the United States Supreme Court Reports in the Lawyers' Edition, was an event of public importance. It has resulted, not merely in the increase, but in the literal multiplication, of the number of lawyers and judges who own and use this great series of decisions. It has, therefore, materially extended the influence of those decisions upon the general jurisprudence of the country. Now the inclusion of Rose's Notes obviously adds great value to these reports.

At the end of each volume of reports, several of which are bound in every book of this set, will be found Rose's Notes for that volume. These volumes are separated by colored sheets.

289844

JUSTICES

OF THE

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

DURING THE TIME OF THESE REPORTS.

CHIEF JUSTICE,

HON. MORRISON R. WAITE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES,

HON. SAMUEL F. MILLER,
HON. STEPHEN J. FIELD,
HON. JOSEPH P. BRADLEY,
HON. JOHN M. HARLAN
HON. WILLIAM B. WOODS,
HON. STANLEY MATTHEWS,
HON. HORACE GRAY,
HON. SAMUEL BLATCHFORD.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL,

HON. AUGUSTUS H. GARLAND.

SOLICITORS-GENERAL,

HON. SAMUEL F. PHILLIPS.

to May 4, 1885; after that

HON. JOHN GOODE.

CLERK,

JAMES H. MCKENNEY, ESQ.

REPORTER,

J. C. BANCROFT DAVIS, ESQ.

MARSHAL,

JOHN G. NICOLAY, ESQ.

ALLOTMENTS, ETC., OF THE

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,

AS THEY STOOD DURING THE TERMS OF 1834–5, TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND TERMS OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.

(Allotment Apr. 3, 1882.)

NAMES OF JUSTICES, AND WHENCE APPOINTED.	BY WHOM APPOINTED.	CIRCUITS, 1881, 1883.	COMMISSIONED.	SWORN IN.
ASSOCIATE JJ. HORACE GRAY, Massachusetts.	President ARTHUR.	FIRST. ME., N. H. MASS., RHODE ISLAND.	1881. (Dec. 20.)	1882. (Jan. 9.)
SAMUEL BLATCHFORD, New York.	President ARTHUR.	SECOND. VERMONT, CONN., NEW YORK.	1882. (Mar. 22.)	1882. (April 3.)
JOSEPH P. BRADLEY, New Jersey.	President GRANT.	THIRD. NEW JERSEY, PENN., DEL.	1870. (Mar. 21.)	1870. (Mar. 23.)
CHIEF JUSTICE. MORRISON R. WAITE, Ohio.	President GRANT.	FOURTH. MD., VA., N. C., W. VA., S. C.	1874. (Jan. 21.)	1874. (Mar. 4.)
ASSOCIATE JJ. WILLIAM B. WOODS, Georgia.	President HAYES.	FIFTH. GA., ALA., FLA., MISS., LA., TEX.	1880. (Dec. 21.)	1881. (Jan. 5.)
STANLEY MATTHEWS, Ohio.	President GARFIELD.	SIXTH. KY., TENN., OHIO, MICH.	1881. (May 12.)	1881. (May 17.)
JOHN M. HARLAN, Kentucky.	President HAYES.	SEVENTH. IND., ILL., WIS.	1877. (Nov. 29.)	1877. (Dec. 10.)
SAMUEL F. MILLER, Iowa.	President LINCOLN.	EIGHTH. MINN., IOWA, MO. KAN., ARK.., NEB. COL.	1862. (July 16.)	1862. (Dec. 1.)
STEPHEN J. FIELD, California.	President LINCOLN.	NINTH. CALIFORNIA, OREGON, NEVADA.	1863. (Mar. 10.)	1863. (Dec. 7.)

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1885.

ORDERED, That the following regulations be established under section 765 of the Revis Statutes:

RULE 34.

CUSTODY OF PRISONERS ON HABEAS CORPUS.

1. Pending an appeal from the final decision of any court or judge declining to grant t writ of habeas corpus, the custody of the prisoner shall not be disturbed.

2. Pending an appeal from the final decision of any court or judge discharging the w after it has been issued, the prisoner shall be remanded to the custody from which he v taken by the writ, or shall, for good cause shown, be detained in custody of the court or jud *or be enlarged upon recognizance as hereinafter provided.

3. Pending an appeal from the final decision of any court or judge discharging the p oner, he shall be enlarged upon recognizance, with surety, for appearance to answer the ju ment of the appellate court, except where, for special reasons, sureties ought not to be requir

(Promulgated March 29, 1886.)

*This clause added, by order announced May 10, 1886.

GENERAL TABLE OF CASES REPORTED

IN THIS BOOK.

VOLUMES 114, 115, 116, 117.

A.

[illegible] v. - - - - - 629
[illegible] ("Akers v. Akers.") - 888
[illegible] Barr, - - - - - - 435
[illegible] Montague, - - - 1000, 1003
[illegible] Baltimore & O. R. R. Co., - 200
[illegible] Thompson v. - - - 472
[illegible] United States, - - - - 272
[illegible] - - - - - - - 393
[illegible] Taxing Dist. of Shelby Co., - 172
[illegible] Sloane v. - - - - - - 899
[illegible] Township of Santa Anna, - 633
[illegible] Brocklin v. - - - - - 845
[illegible] Brass & Copper Co., Western Electric Mfg. Co. v. - - 210
[illegible] v. Lexington & Carter Co. Min. Co., - - - - - - - 892
[illegible] Mut. L. Ins. Co. of N. Y. v. 997
[illegible] Murphy, - - - - - 491
[illegible] Ferguson v. - - - - - 979
[illegible] Bohlen v. - - - - - 454
[illegible] Corp. London, v. Drennen, - 688
[illegible] Soc., Provident Sav. Life, v. Lord, - - - - - - 261
[illegible] Phosphate Co. v. Grafflin, - 221
[illegible] Mfg. Co., Beecher Mfg. Co. v. 232
[illegible] v. Bangs, - - 170, 172
[illegible] Clark, - - - - - - 172
[illegible] French, - - - - - 172
[illegible] Gerk, - - - - - - 172
[illegible] Sinclair, - - - - - - 172

B.

[illegible] Litchfield v. - - - - - 132
[illegible] & O. R. R. Co., Allen v. - 200
[illegible] & P. R. R. Co., Edmonds v. - 216
[illegible] Raleigh & A. Air Line R. R. Co., - - - - - - 505
[illegible] v. - - - 170, 172
[illegible] Sav., v. State Sav. Asso., 174
[illegible] National, Bell v. - - - 409
[illegible] v. Stewart, - - - - 101
[illegible] Mfrs. Nat., v. Morgan, - 811
[illegible] Exchange National, v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 430
[illegible] Nat., v. Mixter, - - 221
[illegible] Nat., v. Furness, - - - 168
[illegible] Nat., v. United States, - 149
[illegible] v. Ramsey, - - - - - 47
[illegible] & St. P. R. R. Co., 858
[illegible] Webb v. - - - - - - 595
[illegible] Edmonds, - - - - - 729
[illegible] Mfg. Co. v. Atwater Mfg. Co., 282
[illegible] v. - - - - - - 852
[illegible] Steamship v. Jensen, - - 152

B.

Bell v. First National Bank, - - 409
Bergen County Chosen Freeholders, Merch. Exch. Nat. Bank v. 430
Bigelow Carpet Co., Dobson v. - - 177
Bissell v. Foss, - - - - - - 126
Black, Smith v. - - - - - - 398
Blair, Kings Co. Savings Institution v. 657
Bloxham, Littlefield v. - - - - 930
Reed v. - - - - - - - 930
Board of Chosen Freeholders, Merchants Exchange National Bank v. - 430
Boardman v. Toffey, - - - - - 898
Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. State Sav. Asso., 174
Bohall v. Dilla, - - - - - - 61
Bohlen v. Arthurs, - - - - - 454
Boisselier, Thompson v. - - - - 76
Borg v. Illinois Midland R.Co., - - 963
Boston Hydraulic Gold Mining Co. v. Eagle Copper & S.Mining Co., 392
Boston Pacific Nat. Bank v. Mixter, - 221
Boston State Nat. Bank v. United States, 149
Bourbon County, Kentucky Cent. R. R. Co. v. - - - - - - 725
Bowman v. Chicago & N.W. R.Co., - 502
Boyd v. United States, - - - - 746
Bradner, Strang v. - - - - - - 248
Bradstreet Co. v. Higgins, - - - 176
Brass & Copper Co., Western Electric Mfg. Co. v. - - - - - 210
Brewer, Chapman v. - - - - - 83
Bridgeport Steamboat Co., Pollock v. - 147
Bridgewater Iron Co. v. Lissberger, - 557
Brooklyn Cross Town R. R. Co., Stephenson v. - - - - - 58
Broomall, Eachus v. - - - - - 419
Brown, Ex parte, - - - - - - 676
v. Davis, - - - - - - - 659
v. Grant, - - - - - - - 598
v. Houston, - - - - - - 257
v. State, - - - - - - - 233
Bruce v. Manchester & K. R.R. Co., - 990
Bullard, Long v. - - - - - - 1004
Buncombe Co. Comrs. v. Tommey, - 305
Burgess, Graffam v. - - - - - 839
Turpin v. - - - - - - - 988
Burnes v. Scott, - - - - - - 991
Burnett v. United States, - - - 586
Burr, State v. - - - - - - - 435
Burton v. West Jersey Ferry Co., - 215
Butterworth v. Hill, - - - - - 119

C.

Call v. Palmer, - - - - - - 559
Camors v. Watts, - - - - - - 406

C.

Campbell v. District of Columbia, - - 1007
v. Holt, - - - - - - - 483
O'Reilly v. - - - - - - 669
Canal & Claiborne St. R. R. Co. v. Hart, 226
Canal Co. v. Superior Court, - - 671
Cannon v. United States, - - - - 561
Cantrell v. Wallick, - - - - - 1017
Car Co., Pullman Pal., v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., - - - - - - 499
Car Co., Pullman Southern, Picard v. 785
State v. - - - - - - - 791
Carpet Co., Bigelow, Dobson v. - - 177
Carpet Co., Hartford, Dobson v. - - 177
Carriere, Tua v. - - - - - - 855
Carrigan, Shepard v. - - - - - 723
Carter v. Greenhow, - - - - - 202
Sturges v. - - - - - - 240
Cavender v. Cavender, - - - - - 212
Chaffin v. Taylor, - - - - 198, 727
Chapman v. Brewer, - - - - - 83
"Charles Morgan, The" - - - - - 316
Chatfield, Leonard v. - - - - - 445
Cheesman, Iron Silver Mining Co. v. - 712
Cherokee Indians, Eastern Band of, v. United States, - - - - 880
"Cherokee Trust Funds" - - - - - 880
Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Miller, - 121
Chesapeake, O. & S. R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, - - - - - 414
Chicago First Nat. Bank, Bell v. - - 409
Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., Schofield v. 224
Sioux City & St. P. R. R. Co. v. - 928
Chicago & N. R. Co., Bowman v. - - 502
v. Ohle, - - - - - 837
Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, - 270
Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - - - - - 281
Chicago Tyre & Spring Works Co. v. Spalding, - - - - - 720
Cincinnati, C. G. & C. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - - - - - 281
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, - - - 414
Citizens Gas Light Co., Louisville Gas Co. v. - - - - - - 510
City of Helena, Jacks v. - - - - 892
Kansas, Union Pacific R. Co. v. - 319
Litchfield v. Ballou, - - - - 132
Milwaukee v. Kœffler, - - - - 612
Waterville v. Van Slyke, - 406, 772
Clark, Aurrecoechea v. - - - - - 172
v. Beecher Mfg. Co., - - - - 852
Clawson v. Ramsey, - - - - - - 47
v. United States, - - - - - 179
Clay v. Field, - - - - - - - 375
Clay County v. United States, ex rel., 482
Clews, Traer v. - - - - - - - 467
Coe v. Errol, - - - - - - - 715
Coffey v. United States, - - - 681, 684, 890
Collins, Lancaster v. - - - - - 373
Commissioners of Buncombe Co. v. Tommey, - - - - - - 305
Commonwealth, Chesapeake, O. & S. R. R. Co. v. - - - - - - 414
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. R. Co. v. - - - - - - - 414
Gloucester Ferry Co. v. - - - - 158
Louisville & N. R. R. Co. v. - - 414
Coney v. Winchell, - - - - - - 610
Confarr v. Township of Santa Anna, - 636
Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Scammon, 1007
Copper Co., Dimock v. - - - - - 994
Core v. Vinal, - - - - - - - 912

D.

Corson, United States v. - - - - - 254
County of Bourbon, Kentucky Cent R. R. Co. v. - - - - - - 725
Daviess v. Dickinson, - - - - 1026
San Mateo v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., - - - - - - 589
Coyle v. Davis, - - - - - - - 583
Creary, Winchester and Partridge Mfg. Co. v. - - - - - - - 591
Crump v. Thurber, - - - - - - 828

D.

Daviess County v. Dickinson, - - - - 1026
Davis, Brown v. - - - - - - - 659
Coyle v. - - - - - - - - 583
Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. Richards, 480
De Comeau, Field v. - - - - - - 596
Deffeback v. Hawke, - - - - - 423
Delamore, New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. - - - - - - - 244
Dennis, Vicksburg, S. & Pac. R. R. Co. v. - - - - - - - 770
Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, - - 118
Dickerhoff, Harwood v. - - - - - 887
Dilla, Bohall v. - - - - - - - 61
Dimock v. Revere Copper Co., - - 994
Dingley v. Oler, - - - - - - - 984
Dinsmore, Missouri, Kansas & T. R. R. Co. v. - - - - - - 791
District of Columbia, Campbell v. - - 1070
Gibbons v. - - - - - - - 680
Laughlin v. - - - - - - - 701
v. McElligott - - - - - - 946
Dobson v. Bigelow Carpet Co., - - 177
v. Hartford Carpet Co., - - 177
Dodge v. Knowles, - - - - 144, 296
Doe, East Alabama R. Co. v. - - 136
v. Hyde, - - - - - - - 142
v. Larmore, - - - - - - 598
Donnellan, Gwillim v. - - - - - 348
Donoghue, Hanley v. - - - - - 535
Drennen, London Assurance Corp. v. - 688
Drew v. Grinnell, - - - - - - 453
Driver, Jefferson v. - - - - - - 897
Dunham, Stewart v. - - - - - 329
Dunphy v. Ryan, - - - - - - 703
v. Sullivan, - - - - - - 912

E.

Eachus v. Broomall, - - - - - 419
Eagle Copper & S. Mining Co., Boston Hydraulic Gold Mining Co. v. 392
East Alabama R. Co. v. Doe, - - 136
Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians v. United States, - - - - 880
East Tennessee, V. & G. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - - - - - - 281
Eaton, Holgate v. - - - - - - 538
v. Thompson, - - - - - 76
Edmonds v. Baltimore & P. R. R. Co., - 216
Edmunds, Barry v. - - - - - - 729
Sands v. - - - - - - - 739
Effinger v. Kenney, - - - - - 495
Kenney v. - - - - - - - 498
Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, - - - - 346
Electric R. R. Signal Co. v. Hall R. Signal Co., - - - - - - 96
Erie & Western Trans. Co., Phœnix Ins. Co. v. - - - - - - 873
Errol, Coe v. - - - - - - - 715
Eureka Lake & Y. Can. Co. v. Superior Ct. of Yuba Co., - - - 671

E.

[illegible] Brown, - - - - - - - 676
[illegible] - - - - - - - 994
[illegible] Petr. - - - - 134, 281
[illegible] Petr. - - - - - - 135
[illegible] Ins. Co., - - - - - - 922
[illegible] - - - - - - - 250
[illegible] - - - - - 868, 872
[illegible] - - - - - - - 89
[illegible] Cases," - - - - - - - 791
[illegible] Co., Southern, Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. - - - - - - 791
[illegible] L. M. & S. R. Co. v. - 791

F.

[illegible] Loan & Trust Co., Stone, v. - 636
[illegible] Wright, - - - - - - - 821
[illegible] Village v. Pillsbury, - - 114
[illegible] Arthur, - - - - - 979
[illegible] Co., Gloucester, v. Commonwealth, - - - - - - - 158
[illegible] & Co. v. Livingston, - - - 489
[illegible] Ins., Tr. & Safe Deposit Co. v. Huntington, - - - - - - 898
[illegible] Clay v - - - - - - - 375
[illegible] De Comeau, - - - - - 596
[illegible] Weaver v. - - - - - - 148
[illegible] Hewitt v. - - - - - - - 581
[illegible] Pope, - - - - - - - 372
[illegible] National Bank, Bell v. - - - - 409
[illegible] Stewart, - - - - - - 101
[illegible] Utah & N. R. Co. v. - - - 542
[illegible] v. Police Jury of Jefferson, - - - - - - - 587
[illegible] Hamlet, - - - - - - - 679
[illegible] Illinois Midland R. Co., - 963
[illegible] - - - - - - 117, 593
New York Life Ins. Co. v. - 934
[illegible] ex parte, - - - - - - - 994
[illegible] Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. 261
[illegible] United States, - - - - 608
[illegible] Killer v - - - - - - - 552
[illegible] Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 264
[illegible] Russell v. - - - - - - 126
[illegible] O'Connor, - - - - - - 311
[illegible] Arrucoechea v. - - - - 172
[illegible] v. Holmes, - - - - - 915
[illegible] Penn. Nat. Bank v. - - 168

G.

[illegible] Pumpelly, - - - - - - - 449
[illegible] Gas Light Co., - - - - 510
[illegible] Co. v. La. Light, etc. Mfg. Co., 516
[illegible] Southwestern R. R. Co. v. - 626
[illegible] Arrucoechea v. - - - - 172
[illegible] v. District of Columbia, - - 680
[illegible] v. Lyon, - - - - - - 440
[illegible] Morris v. - - - - - - 403
[illegible] v. Wright, - - - - - 1021
[illegible] v. Lopez, - - - - - 901
[illegible] Ferry Co. v. Commonwealth, 158
[illegible] O'Connor, - - - - - - 316
[illegible] v. Burgess, - - - - - 839
[illegible] Atlantic Phosphate Co. v. - - 221
[illegible] v. - - - - - - - 593
[illegible] Parker, - - - - - - - 346
[illegible] National Steamship Co., - - 309
[illegible], Carter v. - - - - - 202
[illegible] v - - - - - - - 240
[illegible] v. - - - - - - - 204
[illegible] v. - - - - - - 185
[illegible] v - - - - - - - 199
[illegible] Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. - 963
[illegible] v - - - - - - - 453

H.

Guthard, Detroit City R. Co. v. - - 118
Gunther, Liverpool and London & Globe Ins. Co. v. - - - - - - 575
Gwillim v. Donnellan, - - - - - 848

H.

Hackett, Little v. - - - - - - - 652
Hadden v. Merritt, - - - - - - 338
Hagood v. Southern, - - - - - - 805
v. Williams, - - - - - - 805
Hall R. Signal Co., Electric R. R. Signal Co. v. - - - - - - - 96
Hall Safe and Lock Co., Sargent v. - 67
Halsey, Inhab. of New Providence Twp., v. 904
Ham, Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. - 235
Hamlet, Fletcher v. - - - - - - 679
Hanley v. Donoghue, - - - - - - 535
Harrison v. Merritt, - - - - - - 494
Hart, Canal & Claiborne St. R. R. Co. v. 226
Hartford Carpet Co., Dobson v. - - 177
Hartog v. Memory, - - - - - - 725
Harwood v. Dickerhoff, - - - - 887
Union Pac. R. Co. v. - - - - 319
Hassall v. Wilcox, - - - - - - 504
Hawke, Deffeback v. - - - - - - 423
Hayes v. Mayor, etc. of Holly Springs, 81
Hazard v. O'Connor, - - - - - - 316
Hazlett v. United States, - - - - 382
Healy v. Joliet & Chicago R. R. Co., - 607
Helena, City of, Jacks v. - - - - 892
Helton, Sargent v. - - - - - - - 412
Henderson v. Wadsworth, - - - - 377
Herbert, Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. - 755
Hewitt v. Filbert, - - - - - - - 581
Higgins, Bradstreet Co. v. - - - - 176
v. McCrea, - - - - - - - 764
Hill, Butterworth v. - - - - - - 119
Hoagland, Wurts v. - - - - - - 229
Hobbs v. McLean, - - - - - - - 940
Hogaboom, Ehrhardt v. - - - - - 846
Hoisington, Jones v. - - - - - - 742
Holgate v. Eaton, - - - - - - - 538
Holmes, Fulkerson v. - - - - - - 915
Holly Springs, Mayor, etc., Hayes v. - 81
Holt, Campbell v. - - - - - - - 488
Homœopathic Mut. L. Ins. Co., Knapp v. 960
Hopkins, Zeigler v. - - - - - - 1019
Hopt v. People of Utah, - - - - - 183
Houston, Brown v. - - - - - - - 257
Hoyt v. Russell, - - - - - - - 914
Hubbard, Marshall v. - - - - - - 919
Hughes, Petnr., ex parte, - - 134, 281
Humes, Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. - - 463
Hunt v. United States, - - - - - 674
Huntington, Fidelity Ins., Tr. & Safe Deposit Co. v. - - - - - - 898
Huntley v. Huntley, - - - - - - 130
Hyde, Doe v. - - - - - - - - 142

I.

Ide, Louisville & N. R. R. Co. v. - - 63
Illinois, Presser v. - - - - - - 615
Illinois Cent. R. R. Co., Stone v. - - 650
Illinois Midland R. Co., Borg v. - - 963
Fletcher v. - - - - - - - 963
Union Trust Co. v. - - - - 963
Independent Steamboat Co. v. Mayor, etc. of N. Y. - - - - - - 888
Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co., St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. R. Co. v. - 696
Ingraham, Putnam v. - - - - - - 65
Inhabitants of New Providence Twp. v. Halsey, - - - - - - 904

J.

Ins. Co., Connecticut Mut. L., v. Scammon, 1007
Homœopathic Mut. L., Knapp v. 960
Knickerbocker Life, v. Pendleton, 432
Liverpool and London & Globe, v. Gunther - - - - - 575
Mut. L. of N. Y., v. Armstrong, 997
New York Life, v. Fletcher, - 934
Phœnix, Ex parte, - - - 923
v. Erie & Western Trans. Co., 873
Phœnix Mut. Life, v. Walrath, - 924
Iron Co., Bridgewater, v. Lissberger, - 557
Iron Silver Mining Co. v. Cheesman, - 712
Reynolds v. - - - - - 774

J.

Jacks v. City of Helena, - - - - - 892
Jackson v. Lawrence, - - - - - 1024
Jefferson v. Driver, - - - - - 897
"Jefferson Police Jury, Fisk v." - 587
"Jefferson Police Jury, Stewart v." - 588
Jensen, Steamship Belgenland v. - - 152
Jerome, Richter v. - - - - - 345
Johnson v. Keith, - - - - - 888
Lee v. - - - - - - 570
v. Wilkins, - - - - - 671
Joliet & Chicago R. R. Co., Healey v. - 607
Jones v. Hoisington, - - - - 742
v. Simpson, - - - - - 742
v. Van Benthuysen, - - - 446

K.

Kansas City, Union Pacific R. Co. v. - 319
Keith, Johnson v. - - - - - - 888
Kenney, Effinger v. - - - - - 495
v. Effinger, - - - - - - 498
Kentucky Cent. R. R. Co. v. County of Bourbon, - - - - - 725
Kentucky, Chesapeake, O. & S. R. R. Co. v. - - - - - 414
Kentucky, Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. R. Co. v. - - - - 414
Kentucky & G. E. R. Co., Wright v. - 821
Kentucky, Louisville & N. R. R. Co. v. 414
"Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases," - - 414
Kerr v. South Park Comrs., - 924, 927
Kings Co. Savings Institution v. Blair, - 657
Kirk, Texas & Pac. R. Co., v. - - 319
Kleinschmidt v. McAndrews, - - - 905
Knapp v. Homœopathic Mut. L. Ins. Co. 960
Knevals, Walden v. - - - - 167
Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, 432
Knowles, Dodge v. - - - - 144, 296
Kœffler, Milwaukee v. - - - - 612
Kouns, Steamboat Charles Morgan v. - 316
Knoxville & K. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - 281
Knuth, Union Pacific R. Co. v. - - 319
Kurtz v. Moffit, - - - - - - 458

L.

Lamar v. McCulloch, - - - - - 360
v. Micou, - - - - - - 94
United States v. - - - - - 677
Lancaster v Collins, - - - - - 373
Land Co., Ozark, Leonard v. - - - 445
Larmore, Doe v. - - - - - - 598
Laughlin v. District of Columbia, - - 701
"Laura, The," - - - - - - 147
Lawrence, Jackson v. - - - - 1024
Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, - 811
Lee v. Johnson, - - - - - - 570
Leonard v. Chatfield, - - - - 445
v. Ozark Land Co. - - - - 445

M.

Lexington & Carter Co. Min. Co., Applegate v. - - - - - - 892
Liebke v. Thomas, - - - - - 744
Lipse, Glasgow v. - - - - - - 901
Lissberger, Bridgewater Iron Co. v. - 557
Litchfield v. Ballou, - - - - - 132
Livingston v. Ferry & Co. - - - 489
Little v. Hackett, - - - - - 652
Littlefield v. Bloxham, - - - - 930
Liverpool and London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Gunther, - - - - - - 575 Loan & Trust Co., Stone v. - - - 366
v. Wright, - - - - - 821
London Assurance Corp. v. Drennen, - 688
Long v. Bullard, - - - - - 1004
Louisiana Light, etc., Mfg. Co., N. O. Gas Light Co. v. - - - 516
Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Light Co. - - - - - - 510
Louisville & N. R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, - - - - - 414
v. Idé, - - - - - - 63
Louisville, N. & G. S. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - - - - - 281
Lowe, Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. - 264
Lyon, Gibson v. - - - - - 440

M.

McAleer, U. S., ex rel., Clay County v. - 482
"Macalester's Admr. v. Maryland," - 233
McAlister, Texas & Pac. R. Co. v. - - 319
McAndrews, Kleinschmidt v. - - 905
McCarthy v. Wadsworth, - - - 377
McClure v. United States, - - - 572
McCrea, Higgins v. - - - - - 764
McCulloch, Lamar v. - - - - 360
McElligott, District of Columbia v. - - 946
McGee, St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. 446
McGlinn, Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. 270
Mackall v. Richards, - - - - 558
Mackin v. United States, - - - 909
McLean, Hobbs v. - - - - - 940
McMinnville & M. R. R. Co., Stevens v. 281
McNab & H. Mfg. Co., Eaton v. - - 76
v. Thompson, - - - - - 76
Mahomet, Town of, v. Quackenbush, - 983
Manard, Preston v. - - - - 763
Manchester & K. R. R. Co., Bruce v. - 990
Manufacturing Co., Atwater, Beecher Mfg. Co. v. - - - - - 237
Beecher, v. Atwater Mfg. Co. - 233
La. Light, etc., N. O. Gas Light Co. v. - - - - - - 516 McNab & H., Eaton v. - - - 76
v. Thompson, - - - - 76
Western Electric, v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. - - - 210
Winchester and Partridge, v. Creary, - - - - - - 591
Yale Lock, v. Greenleaf, - - 952
v. Sargent, - - - 950, 954
March, Martinsburg & P. R. R. Co. v. - 255
Marshall v. Hubbard, - - - - 919
Martinsburg & P. R. R. Co. v. March, - 255
Marvel v. Merritt, - - - - - 550
Marye v. Parsons, - - - - - 205
Maryland, Brown v. - - - - - 233
"Maryland, Macalester's Admr. v." - 233
May, Shepherd v. - - - - - 450
Mayfield v. Richards, - - - - 334
Mayor, etc. of Holly Springs, Hayes v. 81
Mayor, etc. of N. Y., Independent Steamboat Co. v. - - - - 388

N.

Sarin v. - - - - - - - 388
Haring v. - - - - - 725
...& C. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - 281
...C. & L. R. R. R. Co., Stevens v. 281
...& L. R. R. R. Co. v. Southern Express Co., - - - - 791
...Exchange National Bank v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, - 430
...Hadden v. - - - - - - - 333
Harrison v. - - - - - - - 494
Marvel v. - - - - - - - 550
...Walling v. - - - - - - 691
...Lamar v. - - - - - - - 94
...Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. - 121
v. Force, - - - - - - - 552
...v. Koeffler, - - - - - - 612
...Woolfolk, - - - - - - - 740
...Company v. Mining Company, 392
...Iron Silver, v. Cheesman, - - 712
Reynolds v. - - - - - 774
Lexington & Carter Co., Applegate v. - - - - - - 892
...United States v. - - - - 110
...& T. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - 281
...K. & T. R. R. Co. v. Dinsmore, 791
...Pacific R. Co. v. Humes, - 463
Pullman Pal. Car Co. v. - - 499
v. Terry, - - - - - - - 467
...Pacific Nat. Bank v. - - - - 221
...v. Watson, - - - - - - 620
...& O. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - - 281
...Kurtz v. - - - - - - - 458
...State v. - - - - 1000, 1008
...United States v. - - - - 550
...v. Greenhow, - - - - - - 240
...Ex Parte, - - - - - - 185
Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. - - 811
...v. Giddings, - - - - - 408
...v. Wooster, - - - - - - 891
...v. Fletcher, - - - - 117, 593
...Armson v. - - - - - - - 491
v. Ramsey, - - - - - - - 47
Texas & Pac. R. Co. v. - - - 319
...L. Ins. Co. of N. Y. v. Armstrong, 997
...Union Pacific R. Co. v. - - 319

N.

...& C. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - 281
...& D. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - 281
...& N. R. R. Co., Stevens v. - 281
...Steamship Co., Gray v. - - 309
...Sommerman v. - - - - 535
...Phillips v. - - - - - - 1013
...Mining Co. v. Ross, - - - 273
...Brunswick & C. R. R. Co., Wheeler v. - - - - - - - 341
...Wright, - - - - - - 1021
...Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light, etc. Mfg. Co. - - 516
...& Northeastern R. R. Co., Stone v. - - - - - - 651
...S. F. & L. R. R. Co. v. Delmore, - - - - - - 244
...Water Works Co. v. Rivers, 525
...Providence Twp., Inhab. of, v. Halsey, - - - - - - - 904
...Life Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, - 934
...Mayor, etc., Ind. Steamboat Co. v. - - - - - - - 388
Sarin v. - - - - - - - 388
...Merch. Exch. Nat. Bank v. Bergen Co. Chosen Freeholders, - - - 430

O.

New York Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 997
New York Prov. Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Ford, - - - - - 261
New York Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co., - - - - - 963
Waring v. - - - - - - 963
Norrington v. Wright, - - - - - 366
Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Herbert, - - 755
v. Rockne, - - - - - - 477
"Northern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Traill Co.," 477

O.

Oaks, Phelps v. - - - - - - 888
Oberteuffer v. Robertson, - - - 706
O'Connor, Frasher v. - - - - - 311
Good v. - - - - - - - 316
Hazard v. - - - - - - - 316
Ohle, Chicago & N. R. Co. v. - - 837
Oler v. Dingley, - - - - - - 984
Oregon Steamship Co., Otis v. - - 719
O'Reilly v. Campbell, - - - - - 669
Otis v. Oregon Steamship Co., - - 719
Ozark Land Co., Leonard v. - - - 445

P.

Pacific Nat. Bank v. Mixter, - - 221
"Pacific Railroad Removal Cases," - 319
Palmer, Call v. - - - - - - 559
Parker, Grant v. - - - - - - 346
Parsons, Marye v. - - - - - - 205
Patch v. White, - - - - - - 860
Pendleton, Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. 432
Penn Nat. Bank v. Furness, - - 168
Pennsylvania, Gloucester Ferry Co. v. - 158
Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. St. Louis A. & T. H. R. R. Co., - - - 696
People, Hopt v. - - - - - - 183
Presser v. - - - - - - - 615
Walling v. - - - - - - - 691
Perkins, United States v. - - - - 700
Petit, United States v. - - - - - 93
Phelps v. Oaks, - - - - - - 888
Philippe, Philippi v. - - - - - - 336
Philippi v. Philippe, - - - - - 336
Phillips v. Negley, - - - - - 1013
Phœnix Ins. Co., Ex parte, - - - 923
v. Erie & Western Trans. Co., - 873
Phœnix Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Walrath, 924
Phosphate Co., Atlantic, v. Grafflin, - 221
Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 785
Pierce, Sparks v. - - - - - - 428
Pillsbury, Farmington Village v. - - 114
Pirie v. Tvedt, - - - - - - - 331
Pleasants v. Greenhow, - - - - 204
Poindexter v. Greenhow, - - - - 185
Police Jury of Jefferson, Fisk v. - - 587
State, ex rel. v. - - - 587, 588
Pollock v. Bridgeport Steamboat Co., - 147
Pope v. Allis, - - - - - - - 393
Filley v. - - - - - - - 372
Port of Mobile v. United States, ex rel., 620
v. Watson, - - - - - - 620
Pratt v. Ramsey, - - - - - - 47
Presser v. People, - - - - - - 615
Preston v. Manard, - - - - - 763
Price, United States v. - - - - - 541
Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Lord, 261
Pullman Pal. Car. Co. v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., - - - - - - 499
Pullman Southern Car Co., Pickard v. 785
Tennessee v. - - - - - - 791
Pumpelly, Gage v. - - - - - 449
Putnam v. Ingraham, - - - - 65

R.

Quackenbush, Town of Mahomet v. - 982

R.

R. Co., Chesapeake & O., v. Miller, - 121
Chicago, M. & St. P., Schofield v. 224
Sioux City & St. P. R. R. Co. v. 928
Chicago & N., v. Ohle, - - - 837
Bowman v. - - - - - 502
Chicago, R. I. & P., v. McGlinn, - 270
Detroit City, v. Guthard, - - 118
East Alabama, v. Doe, - - - 136
Illinois Midland, Borg v. - - 963
Fletcher v. - - - - - 963
Union Trust Co. v. - - 963
Indianapolis & St. L., St. Louis A. & T. H. R. R. Co. v. - - 696
Kentucky & G. E., Wright v. - 821
Missouri, K. & T., v. Dinsmore, 791, 805
Missouri Pacific, v. Humes, - 463
Pullman Pal. Car Co. v. - - 499
v. Terry, - - - - - 467
New Orleans, S. F & L., v. Delamore, - - - - - 244
St. Louis, I. M. & S., v. McGee, 446
v. Southern Express Co., - 791, 805
St. Louis & S. F., v. Wilson, - 66
Southern Pac., County of San Mateo v. - - - - - 589
Texas & Pac., v. Kirk, - - 319
v. McAlister, - - - - - 319
v. Murphy, - - - - - 319
Union Pacific, v. City of Kansas, - 319
v. Harwood, - - - - - 319
v. Knuth, - - - - - - 319
v. Myers, - - - - - 319
v. United States, - 584, 677, 920
Utah & N., v. Fisher, - - - 542
Wabash, St. L. & P., v. Ham, - 285
R R Co., Baltimore & O., Allen v. - 200
Baltimore & P., Edmonds v. - 216
Brooklyn Cross-Town, Stephenson v. 58
Canal & Claiborne St., v. Hart, - 226
Chesapeake, O. & S., v. Commonwealth, - - - - - 414
Chicago, St. L. & N. O., Stevens v. 281
Cincinnati, C. G. & C., Stevens v. - 281
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P., v. Commonwealth, - - - - 414
East Tennessee, V. & G., Stevens v. 281
Fort Leavenworth, v. Lowe, - - 264
Illinois Cent., Stone v. - - 650
Joliet & Chicago, Healy v. - - 607
Kentucky Cent., v. County of Bourbon, - - - - - - 725
Knoxville & K., Stevens v. - - 281
Louisville & N., v. Commonwealth, 414
v. Ide, - - - - - - 63
Louisville, N. & G. S., Stevens v. - 281
McMinnville & M., Stevens v. - 281
Manchester & K., Bruce v. - - 990
Martinsburg & P., v. March, - 255
Memphis & C., Stevens v. - - 281
Memphis, C. & L., Stevens v. - 281
Memphis & L. R., v. Southern Express Co., - - - - 791
Mississippi & T., Stevens v. - 281
Mobile & O., Stevens v. - - 281
Nashville & C., Stevens v. - 281
Nashville & D., Stevens v. - - 281
Nashville & N., Stevens v. - - 281
New Brunswick & C., Wheeler v. 341
N. O & Northeastern, Stone v. - 651
Northern Pac., v. Herbert, - - 755

S.

v. Rockne, - - - - - 477
Pennsylvania, v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. R. Co., - - 696
Raleigh & A. Air Line, Baltzer v. 505
St. Louis, A. & T. H., v. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co., - - 696
Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. - 696
Sioux City & St. P., v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., - - - 928
Southwestern, v. State, - - 626
v. Wright, - - - - - 626
Vicksburg, S. & Pac., v. Dennis, 770
Winchester & A., Stevens v. - 281
Winona & St. P., Barney v. - - 858
Raleigh & A. Air Line R. R. Co., Baltzer v. - - - - - - 505
Ramsey, Barlow v. - - - - - - 47
Clawson v. - - - - - - 47
Murphy v. - - - - - - 47
Pratt v. - - - - - - 47
Randall v. - - - - - - 47
Rand v. Walker, - - - - - - 907
Randall v. Ramsey, - - - - - 47
Redgrave, United States v. - - - 697
Reed v. Bloxham, - - - - - 930
Reggel, Ex parte, - - - - - 250
Reiher, Wollensak v. - - - 350, 355
Reilly, Roberts v. - - - - - 544
Renaud v. Abbott, - - - - - - 629
Revere Copper Co., Dimock v. - - 994
Reynolds v. Iron Silver Mining Co., - 774
Richards, Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. 480
Mackall v. - - - - - - 558
Mayfield v. - - - - - - 834
Richmond Mining Co. of Nevada v. Rose, 273
Richter v. Jerome, - - - - - 345
Rivers, New Orleans Water Works Co. v. 525
Roberts v. Reilly, - - - - - 544
Robertson, Oberteuffer v. - - - 706
Rockne, Northern Pacific R. R. Co. v. - 477
Rose, Richmond Mining Co. of Nevada v. 273
Royall, Ex parte, - - - - 868, 872
v. State, - - - - - - - 785
Russell, Hoyt v. - - - - - - 914
Saxonville Mills v. - - - - 554
Ryan, Dunphy v. - - - - - - 703

S.

St. Anne, Town of, Stebbins v. - - 667
St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. R. Co. v. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co., - 696
Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. - - 696
St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McGee, 446
v. Southern Express Co., - 791
St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilson, - 66
St. Louis State Sav. Asso., Boatmen's Sav. Bk. v. - - - - - 174
Safe & Lock Co., Sargent v. - - - 67
Sands v. Edmunds, - - - - - 739
San Mateo County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., - - - - - - 589
Santa Anna, Anderson v. - - - 633
Confarr v. - - - - - - 636
Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co., - 67
v. Helton, - - - - - - 412
Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. - 950, 954
Savings Association, Savings Bank v. - 174
Savings Bank v. Savings Association, - 174
Savings Institution, Kings Co. v. Blair, - 657
Saxonville Mills v. Russell, - - - 554
Scammon, Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. - - - - - - 1007
Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 224

S.

[illegible] v. [illegible] 991
[illegible] Machine Co., Davis, v. Richards, 480
[illegible] Co. Taxing Dist., Amy v. 172
[illegible] v. Carrigan, 723
[illegible] v. May, 456
[illegible] Co. v. Signal Co., 96
[illegible] v. State, 535
[illegible], Jones v. 742
[illegible], Aurrecoechea v. 172
[illegible] City & St. P. R. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. R. Co., 928
[illegible] v. Anderson, 890
[illegible] v. Ahern, 888
v. Black, 898
v. Whitney, 601
v. Woolfolk, 857
[illegible] Carolina Stone v. 962
[illegible], Hagood v. 805
[illegible] Express Co., Memphis & L. R. R. R. Co. v. 791
[illegible] Louis, L. M. & S. R. R. Co. v. 791
[illegible] Pac. R. Co., County of San Mateo v. 589
[illegible] Park Comrs., Kerr v. 924, 927
[illegible] R. R. Co. v. State, 626
v. Wright, 626
[illegible] Chicago Tyre & Spring Works Co. v. 720
Van Riswick v. 918
[illegible] v. Pierce, 428
[illegible] United States v. 664
[illegible] v. Mayor, etc. of N. Y., 388
[illegible] Brown v. 233
v. Burr, 435
v. Montague, 1000, 1008
v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 791
Royall v. 735
Summerman v. 535
Southwestern R. R. Co. v. 626
Stewart v. 1006
Stone v. 962
v. Whitworth, 880, 883
v. Wright, 1021
[illegible] v. Police Jury of Jefferson, 587, 588
[illegible] Nat. Bank v. United States, 149
[illegible] Sav. Asso., Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. 174
[illegible] Charles Morgan v. Kouns, 316
[illegible] Co., Bridgeport, Pollock v. 147
Independent, v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y. 388
[illegible] Belgraland v. Jensen, 152
[illegible] Co., National, Gray v. 309
Oregon, Otis v. 719
[illegible] v. Town of St. Anne, 667
[illegible] v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. R. Co., 58
[illegible] v. Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. R. Co. 281
v. Cincinnati, C. G. & C. R. R. Co., 281
v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. R. Co. 281
v. Knoxville & K. R. R. Co., 281
v. Louisville, N. & G. S. R. R. Co., 281
v. McMinnville & M. R. R. Co., 281
v. Memphis & C. R. R. Co., 281
v. Memphis, C. & L. R. R. Co., 281
v. Mississippi & T. R. R. Co., 281
v. Mobile & O. R. R. Co., 281
v. Nashville & C. R. R. Co., 281
v. Nashville & D. R. R. Co., 281
v. Nashville & N. R. R. Co., 281
v. Winchester & A. R. R. Co., 281

T.

Stewart v. Dunham, 829
First Nat. Bank v. 101
"Stewart v. Jefferson Police Jury," 588
Stewart v. State, 1006
Stone v. Farmers Loan & Trust Co., 636
v. Illinois Cent. R. R. Co., 650
v. N. O. & Northeastern R. R. Co., 651
v. State, 962
Strang v. Bradner, 248
Sturges v. Carter, 240
v. United States, 920
Sullivan, Dunphy v. 912
Superior Ct. of Yuba Co., Eureka Lake & Y. Can. Co. v. 671

T.

Taxing Dist. of Shelby Co., Amy v. 172
Taylor, Chadlin v. 198, 727
Tennessee v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 791
v. Whitworth, 880, 883
Tennessee Bond Cases, 281
Terry, Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. 467
Texas & Pac. R. Co. v. Kirk, 319
v. McAlister, 319
v. Murphy, 319
"The Charles Morgan," 316
"The Laura," 147
Thomas, Liebke v. 744
Thompson v. Allen County, 472
v. Boisselier, 76
McNab & H. Mfg. Co. v. 76
Thomson v. Wooster, 105
Thurber, Crump v. 328
Toffey, Boardman v. 898
Tommey, Comrs. of Buncombe Co. v. 305
Town of Errol, Coe v. 715
Mahomet v. Quackenbush, 982
St. Anne, Stebbins v. 667
Township of Santa Anna, Anderson v. 633
Confarr v. 636
Traer v. Clews, 467
"Traill Co., Northern Pacific R. R. Co. v." 477
Transportation Co., Erie & W. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. 873
Tua v. Carriere, 855
Turpin v. Burgess, 988
Tvedt, Pirie v. 331
Tyre & Spring Works Co. v. Spalding, 720

U.

Union Pacific R. Co. v. City of Kansas, 319
v. Harwood, 319
v. Knuth, 319
v. Myers, 319
v. United States, 584, 677, 920
Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co., 963
Waring v. 963
United States, Alling v. 272
Boyd v. 746
Burnett v. 586
Cannon v. 561
Clawson v. 179
Coffey v. 681, 684, 890
v. Corson, 254
Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians v. 880
Ford v. 608
Hazlett v. 382
Hunt v. 674
v. Lamar, 677
McClure v. 572
Mackin v. 909

V.

United States v. Minor, - - - - - 110
v. Mooney, - - - - - - 550
v. Perkins, - - - - - - 700
v. Petit, - - - - - - 93
v. Price, - - - - - - 541
v. Redgrave, - - - - - 697
v. Spiegel, - - - - - - 664
State Nat. Bank v. - - - - 149
Sturges v. - - - - - - 920
v. Union Pacific R. Co., - - 920
Union Pac. R. Co. v. - - 584, 677
v. Wallace, - - - - - - 675 ex rel., Clay Co. v. - - - - 482
Port of Mobile v. - - 620
Utah & N. R. Co. v. Fisher, - - 542
Utah, People of, Hopt v. - - - 183

V.

Van Benthuysen, Jones v. - - - 446
Van Brocklin v. Anderson, - - - 845
Van Riswick v. Spalding, - - - 913
Van Slyke, City of Waterville v. - 406, 772
Van Weel v. Winston, - - - - 384
Vicksburg, S. & Pac. R. R. Co. v. Dennis, 770
Vinal, Core v. - - - - - - - 912
Virginia, Royall v. - - - - - 735
Stewart v. - - - - - - 1006

W.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Ham, - 235
Wadsworth, Henderson v. - - - 377
McCarthy v. - - - - - - 377
Walden v. Knevals, - - - - - 167
Wales v. Whitney, - - - - - - 277
Walker, Rand v. - - - - - - 907
Wallace, United States v. - - - 675
Wallick, Cantrell v. - - - - - 1017
Walling v. People, - - - - - - 691
Walrath, Phœnix Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. 924
Waring v. Union Trust Co., - - - 963
Waterville v. Van Slyke, - - - 406, 772
Water Works Co., New Orleans, v. Rivers, - - - - - - 525
Watson, Port of Mobile v. - - - 620
Watts v. Camors, - - - - - 406
Weaver v. Field, - - - - - - 143

W.

Webb v. Barnwall, - - - - - - 535
Wells v. Wilkins, - - - - - - 671
Western Electric Mfg. Co. v. Ansonia Brass and Copper Co., - - 210
West Jersey Ferry Co., Burton v. - 215
Wheeler v. New Brunswick & C. R. R. Co., - - - - - - - 341
White v. Greenhow, - - - - - 199
Patch v. - - - - - - - 860
Whitney, Smith v. - - - - - 601
Wales v. - - - - - - - 277
Whitworth, Tennessee v. - - 830, 833
Winchell, Coney v. - - - - - - 610
Winchester & A. R. R. Co., Stevens v. 281
Wilcox, Hassall v. - - - - - - 504
Wilkins, Johnson v. - - - - - 671
Wells v. - - - - - - - 671
Williams, Hagood v. - - - - - 805
Wilson, Ex parte, - - - - - - 89
St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. - 66
Winchester & Partridge Mfg. Co. v. Creary, - - - - - - 591
Winona & St. P. R. R. Co., Barney v. 858
Winston, Van Weel v. - - - - - 384
Wollensak v. Reiher, - - - 350, 355
Woolfolk, Ming v. - - - - - - 740
Smith v. - - - - - - 357
Wooster, Moses v. - - - - - - 391
Thomson v. - - - - - 105
Wright, Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. - 821
v. Kentucky & G. E. R. Co., - 821
New Jersey v. - - - - - 1021
Norrington v. - - - - - 366
Southwestern R. R. Co. v. - - 626
Wurts v. Hoagland, - - - - - 229

X.

Xenia First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, - - 101

Y.

Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Greenleaf, - - 952
v. Sargent, - - - - - 950, 954

Z.

Zeigler v. Hopkins, - - - - - - 1019

CITATIONS

IN OPINIONS OF THE JUDGES CONTAINED IN THIS BOOK.

CASES CITED.

A.

Abbott v. Abbott, 53 Me. 356, 360..... 865
v. Wilbur, 23 La. Ann. 368..... 681
Abbotsford, The, 98 U.S. 440 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 168)..... 409
Abeman v. Booth, 21 How. 506 (62 U.S. bk. 16, L. ed. 169)..... 871
Aby v. Brigham, 28 La. Ann. 340..... 336
Ackley School District v. Hall, 113 U. S. 135 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 954)....904, 984
Adams v. Boston, H. & E. R. R. Co., 1 Holmes, 30..... 246
v. Crittenden, 106 U. S. 576 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 99).....331, 379, 924
v. District of Columbia, 17 Ct. Cl. 351..... 703
Admiralty Rule 24, 3 How. XIV..... 318
Agincourt, The, 2 Prob. Div. 239..... 156
Ala. & Chat. R. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 N. B. Reg. 97..... 246
Alard v. Lamirande, 29 Wis. 502..... 994
Alex v. Balt. & O. R. R. Co., 114 U. S. 311 (Infra, 200)..... 811
Alis v. Ins. Co., 97 U.S. 144, 145 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1006)..... 375
Allen v. Chicago & N. W. R. R. Co., 42 Iowa, 274..... 993
Alny v. California, 24 How. 169 (65 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 644)..... 790
Alvino v. U. S., 5 Wall. 324 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 492)..... 582
Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 590 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 334)..... 384
American Fur Co. v. U. S., 2 Pet. 358.. 103
American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511, 542 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 242, 255).....57, 272
v. Reiberger, 74 Mo. 167..... 940
Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 462 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 483, 487)....324, 390, 963
Amiable Nancy, The, 3 Wheat. 546 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 456)..... 783
Amy v. Selma, Sup. Ct. of Ala., not yet reported 625, 626
Ancrum v. Stone, 2 Speer, 594..... 224
Andemon v. Maltby, 2 Ves. Jr. 244..... 169
v. Radcliffe, El. Bl. & El. 806..... 471
v. Santa Anna, 116 U. S. 356 (Infra, 963)..... 963
v. Talbot, 1 Heisk. 407 88
Andersen County Comrs. v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 241 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 966 971).....225, 230, 962
Andrews v. Auditor, 26 Gratt. 115, 124.. 852
v. Scotton, 2 Bland, 629..... 843
v. State, 3 Heisk. 165..... 619
Anonymous, 1 P. Wms. 476..... 603

A.

Anthony v. Jasper Co., 101 U. S. 699 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 1008)..... 432
Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 771, 775 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 468, 470, 471)....188, 194, 195, 209, 240, 278, 737, 740, 869, 1006
v. Wright, 22 Gratt, 833.....188, 736
Applegate v. Lexington, etc. Mining Co., 117 U. S. 255 (Infra, 892)..... 918
Archibald v. Mut. Ins. Co., 38 Wis. 542, 545..... 999
Arguello v. Edinger, 10 Cal. 150..... 62
Armstrong v. Lancashire & Y. R. R. Co., L. R. 10 Exch. 47, 52.....655, 656
v. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 20 Blatchf. 493 999
v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258(24 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 468)..... 769
Armstrong's Foundry, 6 Wall. 766, 769 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 882, 884).....684, 891
Arnold v. Horse, 12 S. C. 600 224
Arnson v. Murphy, 109 U. S. 238 (Bk. 27, L.ed. 920); 115 U.S. 579 (Infra, 491) 492, 659, 722
Arthur v. Bank, 9 S. & M. 394..... 309
v. Rheims, 96 U. S. 143 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 813)..... 982
v. Stephani, 96 U. S. 125 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 771)..... 982
Ashburner v. Balchen, 7 N. Y. 262..... 408
Ashmead v. McCarthur, 67 Pa. St. 326.. 443
Asylum v. New Orleans, 105 U. S. 368 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1130)..... 522
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. Co v. Denver & N. O. R. R. Co., 110 U. S. 673 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 294)..... 903
v. Franklin, 23 Kan. 74..... 758
Atherton v. Fowler, 91 U. S. 143 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 265); 96 U. S. 513, 519 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 732, 734)....570, 575
Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S. 192, 200 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 438,441)... .....61, 80, 422, 953, 954
Atty-Gen. v. Drummond, 1 Dru. & W. 353..... 214
v. Fed. St. Meeting House, 3 Gray, 1..... 340
v. Garrison, 101 Mass. 223..... 214
v. Kohler, 9 H. L. Cas. 660..... 918
v. London, etc. R. Co., 6 Q. B. D. 216; 5 Exch. Div. 247..... 789
v. Shore, 7 Sim. 309, note..... 214
Atwater Mfg. Co. v. Beecher Mfg. Co., 8 Fed. Rep. 608 232
Atwood v. Weems, 99 U. S. 183 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 471).....190, 737

A.

Avery v. Bowden, 5 El. & Bl. 714; 6 El. & Bl. 953 988
Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S. 594, 598 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1093) 228, 325
v. Wiswall, 112 U. S. 187 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 693) 64, 329, 611

B.

Babbitt v. Clark, 103 U. S. 612 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 509) 924
Babcock v. Wyman, 19 How. 289 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 644) 1025
Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. 87, 95 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 836, 838) .. 340, 352
Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. 436 (38 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 235) 993
Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 636) 470
v. Magwire, 22 Wall. 215 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 850) 643
v. U. S., 109 U. S. 432 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 988) 944
Baird v. Gillett, 47 N. Y. 186 104
Baker v. Union Ins. Co., 43 N. Y. 283 .. 961
Baldro v. Tolmie, 1 Oreg. 176 488
Ball v. Wyeth, 99 Mass. 338 488
Balt. & O. R. R. Co., Ex parte, 106 U. S. 5 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 78) 378, 924
v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 678) 642, 643
Bangs v. Strong, 7 Hill, 250; 42 Am. Dec. 64 457
Bank v. Field, 2 Hill, 445 103
v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 403 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 866) 87
v. Steward, 37 Me. 519 103
Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. 200 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 793) 243, 847
Bank of Commerce v. New York, 2 Black, 620 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 451) 847
Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. 492 (27 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 496) 993 Ky. v. Express Co., 93 U. S. 174 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 872) 879
v. Wistar, 3 Pet. 431 (28U. S. bk.7, L. ed. 731) 1015 of Ohio v. Knoop, 16 How. 376 (57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 980) 522 U. S. v. Merch. Bank, 7 Gill. 415, 431 ..... 537, 538
v. Moss, 6 How. 31, 38 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 531) 1015
v. Waggener, 9 Pet. 397 (34 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 171) 560
Wash. v. Triplett, 1 Pet. 25, 31 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 37, 40) 411
Banking Asso. v. Ins. Asso., 102 U. S. 121 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 45) 503
Banks v. Mayor, 7 Wall. 16 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 57) 847
Baptiste v. De Volumbrum, 5 Har. & J. 86, 98 537
Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 923, 924) 232, 459, 467, 520
Barker v. Barker, 14 Wis. 131 994
v. N. Y. Cent. R. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 599 435
v. Windle, 6 E. & B. 675 408
Barkley v. Levee Comrs., 93 U. S. 258 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 893) 474, 477
Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 288 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 827) 116

B.

v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 224) 851
Barr v. Gibson, 3 M. & W. 390 398
v. Gratz, 4 Wheat. 213, 220 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 555) 893, 894
Barrett v. Hopkins, 2 McCrary, 129 604
v. Snowden, 5 Wend. 181 561
Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243 (32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 672) 619
Barrow v. Bloom, 18 La. Ann. 276 409
Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 550 (Infra, 729) 726
v. Mercein, 5 How. 120 (46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed 78) 459, 460
Bartlett v. Morris, 9 Port. (Ala.) 266 945
Barton v. Barbour, 104 U. S. 126 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 672) 971
Bass v. Mitchell, 22 Tex. 285 865
Bateman, Re, L. R. 9 Eq. 660 603
Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 471) 192
Baton Rouge Railroad v. Kirkland, 33 La. Ann. 622 771
Baugher v. Nelson, 9 Gill. 304 486
Baughman v. Penn., 6 Pacific Rep. 890 .. 744
Baylis v. Travelers Ins. Co. 113 U. S. 316, 320 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 989, 990) 226, 920, 932
Pearce v. Barstow, 9 Mass. 48 561
Beardmore v. Carrington, 2 Wils. 244 ... 734
Beaubien v. Beaubien, 23 How. 190 (Bk. 16, L. ed. 484) 352
Beaulieu v. Pleasant Hill, 4 McCrary, 554 483
Becherdass Ambaidass, The, 1 Low. 569 155
Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 32 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 989) 522, 523
Beeson v. Green Mt. Gold Mining Co., 57 Cal. 20 ..... 760, 763
Behn v. Burness, 3 B. & S. 751 368
Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 284 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 737) 349
Bell v. Day, 32 N. Y. 165 561
v. Midland R. Co., 10 C. B. (N. S.) 287 734
Belle, The, 1 Ben. 320 157
Belleville, etc. R. R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20, 29 983
Belleville Nail Co. v. People, 98 Ill. 399, 483 452
Belmont v. Coman, 22 N. Y. 438 457
Bender v. Crawford, 33 Tex. 745 487
Bennett v. Butterworth, 11 How. 669 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 859) 992
v. Hunter, 9 Wall. 326 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 672) 190, 737, 855
v. N. J. R. R. Co., 36 N. J. L. 225, 227, 228 655
Bentinck v. Franklin, 38 Tex. 458 487
Bernards Township v. Stebbins, 109 U. S. 341 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 956) 117, 904, 906
Bernhard v. Greene, 3 Sawy. 230 157
Bessex v. Chicago N. W. R. Co., 45 Wis. 477, 481 760
Bible Society v. Grove, 101 U. S. 610 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 848) 898
Bicknell v. Comstock, 113 U. S. 152 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 933) 485
Bigelow, Ex parte, 113 U. S. 328 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1005) 90
Bigelow v. Bemis, 2 Allen, 496 488
Binghamton Bridge, 3 Wall. 51 (Bk. 70, L. ed. 137) 521

B.

[illegible] v. Coolidge, 98 U. S. 64 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 892) 179
[illegible] v. Main, 29 Ark. 591 863
[illegible] v. Thorne, 111 U. S. 122 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 372) 179
Barborough v. Davis, 1 P. Wms. 41, 43 602
[illegible] v. Crawfords, 3 Wall. 175 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 186) 918
[illegible] Blackwell, 33 Ala. 57 340
[illegible] v. Queen, 8 App. Cas. 82 95
[illegible] Wait, 69 N. Y. 116 816
[illegible] v. Bogle, Macqueen's App. Jur. H. of L. 244 392
[illegible] v. McKim, 1[illegible] U. S. 336 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 563) 329, 903
[illegible] v. Robertson, 94 U. S. 728 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 345) 179
[illegible] v. San Francisco, 113 U. S. 679 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1070) 60
[illegible] v. U. S. 103 U. S. 231 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 462) 254
Bachard v. Dedham Gas Co., 12 Gray, 213 558
[illegible] v. Tobin, 7 Mon. 612 250
[illegible] v. Nichols, 12 Allen, 443 397
[illegible] v. Windley, 95 U. S. 173 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 424) 174
[illegible] v. Elwes, 6 B. & C. 169 945
[illegible] Jackson v. Johnson Co. Comrs., 3 Kan. 299, 348; 5 Wall. 737 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 667) 853
[illegible] v. Little, 3 Mason, 102, 107 758
[illegible] of Liq. v. McCombs, 92 U. S. 531, 541 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 628, 628) .. 201, 209, 813
[illegible], Re, 2 Sawy. 396 664
[illegible] v. Merced Mining Co., 14 Cal. 279, 283 63
[illegible] v. Dills, 114 U. S. 47, 51 (Infra, 47, 61) 430, 571
[illegible] v. Home Ins. Co., 13 Wis. 677 395
[illegible] Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 206) 325
[illegible] v. Chilton, 10 Pet. 177 (35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 386) 993
[illegible] v. Scales, 27 Wis. 626 898
[illegible] v. Richardson, 13 Allen, 146 520
[illegible] & L. R. R. Co. v. Salem & L. R. R. Co., 2 Gray, 1, 35 525
[illegible] Water Power Co. v. Boston & W. R. R. Co., 23 Pick. 360, 393 .. 525
[illegible] v. Brinkerhoff, 106 U. S. 3, 4 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 73, 74) 117, 888
[illegible] v. U. S., 1 Story, 135, 144 1000
[illegible] v. Boston, 101 U. S. 16 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 980) 225, 982
[illegible] v. Newell, 8 N. Y. 190 412
[illegible] v. Shand, 1 Q. B. D. 470; 2 Q. B. D. 112, 2 App. Cas. 455 .. 368, 370, 371
[illegible] v. Chicago N. W. R. Co., 115 U. S. 611 (Infra, 502) 733
[illegible] v. Wathen, 1 How. 189 (42 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 97) 340
[illegible] v. Burnett, L. R. 3 Eq. 244, 249 867
[illegible], Ex parte, 105 U. S. 647 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1200) 228
[illegible] v. Alabama, 94 U. S. 645 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 392) 625
[illegible] v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co., 17 Md. 395 235
[illegible] v. Brooks, 2 Alk. (Vt.) 284 488
[illegible] v. [illegible], 102 Mass. 473 997

B.

Bradford v. Union Bk., 13 How. 66 (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 53) 509
Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 28 244
v. People, 4 Wall. 462 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 435) 832
Bradstreet Co. v. Higgins, 112 U. S. 227 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 715) 379, 508
Brady v. State, 26 Md. 290 235
Branch v. Charleston, 92 U. S. 682 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 772) 836
Brandlacht, Ex parte, 2 Hill, 367 604
Brandt v. Lawrence, 1 Q. B. D. 344 .... 370, 371
Brant v. Robertson, 16 Mo. 129 1025
v. Va. Coal & Iron Co., 93 U. S. 326 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 927) 945
Brawley v. U. S. 96 U. S. 168, 171, 172 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 622, 623, 624). 369, 406
Brick v. Brick, 98 U. S. 514 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 256) 1025
Bridendolph v. Zeller, 3 Md. 325 1016
Bridge Co. v. Heidelbach, 94 U. S. 798 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 144) 235
Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co., 1 Wall. 116, 143 (68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 571, 576) 118, 521, 643
Bridges, Ex parte, 2 Woods, 428 872
Brigham v. Myers, 51 Iowa, 397 561
Bright v. Legerton, 2 De G. F. & J. 606. 340
Brinckerhoff v. Brown, 7 Johns. Ch. 217 214
Briscoe v. Bk. of Ky., 11 Pet. 257, 314 (36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 709, 781) ... 190
Britton v. Thornton, 112 U. S. 526 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 816) 442
Brobst v. Brobst, 4 Wall. 2 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 387) 773
v. Brock, 10 Wall. 519 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1002) 442, 858, 919
Brockway v. Crawford, 3 Jones (N. C.), 423 462
Broderick's Will, 21 Wall. 503, 519, 520 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 599, 605) 88
Bronson v. Schulten, 104 U. S. 410, 415 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 797) 1014
Brooklyn v. Ins. Co., 99 U. S. 362 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 416) 360
Brooks v. R. Co., 101 U. S. 443 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 1057) 307
Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266, 270 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 896) 624, 626
Brown's Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 53 442
Brown v. Buena Vista Co., 95 U. S. 157 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 422) 1015
v. Castles, 11 Cush. 348 741
v. Colorado, 106 U. S. 95, 97 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 132, 133) 119, 535
v. Houston, 33 La. Ann. 843 257
v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 631 (Infra, 257) 694, 719, 790
v. Huger, 21 How. 305 (62 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 125) 193
v. Lull, 2 Sumn. 443 409
v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 444 (25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 677, 687) .. 259, 696, 718, 738
v. Mayor, 63 N. Y. 239, 244 635
v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 200) 423
v. R. R. Co., 22 Minn. 165 225
v. Saltonstall, 3 Met. 423, 426 867
v. Tarkington, 3 Wall. 377 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 255) 769

B.

Brundage v. Goodfellow, 4 Halst. Ch. 513 110
Buchanan v. Alexander, 4 How. 20 (45 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 857) 848
v. Hamilton, 5 Ves. 722 214
v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 138) 133, 432
Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 257) 858
Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 150 (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 90) 630
Buckley v. Osburn, 8 Ohio, 180, 187 852
Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. 590 (27 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 520) 536, 537
Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 33 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 359, 365) 140, 307, 442, 635
Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 776 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 596) 973
Burns v. Erben, 40 N. Y. 463 462
Burr v. Des Moines Co., 1 Wall. 102 (68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 562) 573, 574
Burt v. Delano, 4 Cliff. 611, 618 632
Burtis, Ex parte, 103 U. S. 238 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 392) 126
Burtis v. Thompson, 42 N. Y. 246 938
Burwell v. Burgess, 32 Gratt. 472 989
Busk v. Spence, 4 Camp. 329 371
Bussey v. Excel. Mfg. Co., 110 U. S. 131 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 95) 80
Butchers Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U. S. 746 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 585) 523
Butler v. Haskell, 4 Desaus. 651, 697 843
v. Palmer, 1 Hill, 324 486
v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402 (51 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 472) 588
v. Watkins, 13 Wall. 456, 464 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 630) 1000
Buttemere v. Hayes, 5 M. & W. 456 704, 705
Byers v. Surget, 19 How. 303 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 670) 843

C.

C. H. Foster, The, 1 Fed. Rep. 733 318
Cable v. Ellis, 110 U. S. 389 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 186) 898
Cairncross v. Lorimer, 3 Macq. 827, 830 818
Callicott v. Parks, 58 Miss. 528 376
Cameron v. McRoberts, 3 Wheat. 591 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 467) 1015
Campbell v. Gardner, 11 N. J. Eq. 423 843
v. Kenosha, 5 Wall. 194 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 610) 636
Cannon v. Pratt, 99 U. S. 619, 623 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 446, 448) 375
Cardwell v. Bridge Co., 113 U. S. 210 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 961) 645
Carll, Ex parte, 106 U. S. 521 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 288) 90
Carpenter v. Dame, 10 Ind. 125, 130 758
Carpet Co. v. Dobson, 10 Fed. Rep. 385 178
Carr v. London & N. W. R. Co., L. R., 10 C. P. 307 816
Carrington v. Roots, 2 M. & W. 248 705
Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. 441, 463 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 671) 88, 851
Carroll Co. v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 517) 442
Carson's Sale, 6 Watts, 140 843
Carstairs v. Mechanics F. Ins. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 473 880
Carter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 317 (Infra, 202) 204
v. Pryke, 1 Peake, 95 104

C.

Cartridge Co. v. Cartridge Co., 112 U. S. 624–644 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 828–834) 7
Caruthers v. Eldridge, 12 Gratt. 670 894, 9
Carver v. Astor, 4 Pet. 1 (29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 761) 9
Casco Bank v. Keene, 53 Me. 103 8
Case of Broderick's Will, 21 Wall. 503, 519, 520 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 599, 605)
Freight Tax, 15 Wall. 232, 281 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 146, 163) 790, 7
Cass Co. v. Morrison, 28 Minn. 257 4
Cassius, The, 2 Dall. 365 (2 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 859) 5
Castle v. Bullard, 23 How. 172 (64 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 424) 10
Castro v. U. S. 3 Wall. 50 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 163) 5
Cary v. Hotailing, 1 Hill, 311 10
Cawood Patent, 94 U. S. 695, 710 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 234, 243) 110, 1
Cedar Rapids Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 56) 9
Central Bridge v. Lowell, 15 Gray, 106 3
Central Nat. Bank v. Williston, 138 Mass. 244 5
Central R. R. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 915) 9
Cent. R. R. & Banking Co. v. Georgia, 92 U. S. 665, 670 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 757, 760) 501, 8
Cesar v. Chew, 7 G. & J. 127 8
Chaffee v. Ludeling, 27 La. Ann. 607 2
Chamber of Commerce v. Sollitt, 43 Ill. 519 9 Chambers v. Green, L. R. 20 Eq. 552–555 6
v. Minchin, 4 Ves. 675 8
Chanter v. Hopkins, 4 M. & W. 399, 404 3
Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U.S. 158 (Infra, 83) 4
v. N. H. R. R. Co., 19 N. Y. 341 6
Charles Riv. Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 419 (36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 773) 6
Charleston v. Weston, Harp. 340 6
Cheatham v. U. S., 92 U. S. 85 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 561) 493, 6
Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. 108 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 604) 5
Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1 (30 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 1) 8
Cherokees v. U. S., 20 Ct. Cl. 449 8
Chesapeake & O. R. R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U. S. 176 (Infra, 131) 194, 8
v. White, 111 U. S. 137 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 379) 9
Chester v. Dickerson, 54 N. Y. 1 2
Cheyney's Case, 5 Rep. (Coke) 68 8
Chicago, B. & Q. R. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U.S. 155 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 94 642, 643, 644, 6
Chicago, & M.R. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U.S. 377, 381 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 787, 789) 7
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. R. Co. v. Davenport, 51 Iowa, 451–454 8
Childs v. Frazee, 15 S. C. 612 2
Chiles, Re, 22 Wall. 168 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 822) 67
Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & W. 1, 138 3
Choutcau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 400) 11

C.

[illegible] v. Russell 5 Wall. 290, 305 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 475, 478); 14 Wall. 69 (81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 762) 537, 596
[illegible] v. Hobbart, 2 Cranch, 187, 236 (6 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 249, 265) .. 536
[illegible] 2 Story, 455 409
[illegible] v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 550) 521
[illegible] R. R. Co. v. Com. of Ky. [illegible] Ky. 492, 513 417
[illegible] v. Sawyer, 9 Wall. 477, 485 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 725, 729) 635, 636
[illegible] Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 12 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 835, 840) 204
[illegible] v. Horseman, 93 U. S. 134 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 838) 996
[illegible] v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436, 453 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 780, 786) 408
[illegible] v. Beecher Mfg. Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 816 352
[illegible] v. Clark 10 N. H. 380 243
[illegible] v. Conklin, Mason Co. Cir. Ct. of Ky. 895, 896
[illegible] v. Keith, 106 U. S. 464 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 202) 729
[illegible] v. Leach, 13 Pet. 195, 203 88
[illegible] v. Tyler, 30 Gratt. 134 188
[illegible] v. Wilson, 106 Mass. 219 878
[illegible] v. Rippon, 1 B. & Ald. 586, 587 .. 392
[illegible] v. Tyler, 30 Gratt. 134 ..... 736, 737
[illegible] v. Meredith 1 Wall. 42 (63 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 609) 501
[illegible] v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon. 171, 174 214, 215
[illegible] v. Gandy, 1 Keen, 809 867
[illegible] v. Williams, 8 Cranch, 74 (12 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 492) 488
[illegible] v. U. S., 4 How. 242, 250 (45 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 957, 961) 683
[illegible] v. Champagne, 3 Wall. 114 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 116) 103
[illegible] v. Martin, 11 Ala. 187 509
[illegible] v. Shearer, 99 Mass. 209 88
[illegible] v. Lemee, 33 La. Ann. 305 .... 836, 857
[illegible] v. Dawkins, 3 How. 689 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 785) 713
[illegible] v. Mackey, 56 Md. 416, 419 .... 537, 538
[illegible] v. Taylor, 15 Beav. 103 471
[illegible] v. Paleologo, L. R. 2 Ex. 193 369, 371
[illegible] v. Bird 116 U. S. 517, 524 (Infra, [illegible]) 855, 989
[illegible] v. U. S., 116 U. S. 427, 436 (Infra, 681, 683, 684) 686, 752, 891
[illegible] v. Davenport, 26 Ia. 515 483
[illegible] v. Loring, 5 Allen, 153 412
[illegible] v. Orden, 18 Wall. 120, 124 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 821, 824) 1019
[illegible] v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 279 (19 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 257, 284) .148, 390
[illegible] v. Sealer, 3 Burr. 1866 625
[illegible] v. Johnson, 34 Ark. 312 860
[illegible] v. Day, 11 Wall. 113 (78 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 122, 125) 854
[illegible] v. Whipple, 13 Wend. 224-226 .. 843
[illegible] v. Duffy, 7 La. Ann. 39 853
[illegible] Ins. Co. v. Wheelright, 7 Wheat. 534 (20 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 316) 603
[illegible] v. Vattel, 1 Pet. 193, 213, 214 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 108, 117) 471 878
[illegible] v. Dubbins, 7 Watts, 513. 852

C.

Commissioners v. Rather, 48 Ala. 433 ... 626 Commonwealth v. Bacon, 13 Bush, 210, 212 514
v. Clary, 8 Mass. 72 267
v. Dana, 2 Met. 329 749
v. Purchase, 2 Pick. 521 619
v. Shoe & L. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 131 879
v. Whipps, 80 Ky. 269, 272 514
v. Young, 1 Hall's Jour. Jur. 47; Brightley, 302 851
Condit v. Baldwin, 21 N. Y. 219 561
Cone v. Cotton, 2 Blackf. 82 537
Confederate Note Case, 19 Wall. 548 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 196) 497
Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Scammon, 4 Fed. Rep. 263 1007
v. Union Trust Co., 112 U. S. 250, 261 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 708) 216
Conn. Riv. R. R. v. Franklin County Comrs. 127 Mass. 50, 59, 60 ... 604
Connemara, The, 103 U. S. 754 n. (Bk. 26, L. ed. 522) 379, 409
Conner v. Long, 104 U. S. 228 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 723) 87
Connolly v. Belt, 5 Cranch, C. C. 405 402
Conover v. Van Mater, 18 N. J. Eq. 486. 561
Conrad v. Griffey, 16 How. 46 (57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 838) 319
Continental Bank v. Bank of Com'th, 50 N. Y. 575, 583 ..... 816, 819
Cont. Imp. Co. v. Stead, 95 U. S. 161 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 403) 713
Cook v. Barr, 44 N. Y. 156 397
v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S. 566 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1015) 260
v. Renick, 19 Ill. 598, 602 412
v. Lillo, 103 U. S. 793 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 461) 497
v. South Park Comrs., 61 Ill. 115, 124 927
Cook Co. v. Chicago, etc. R. R. Co., 35 Ill. 465 614
Cooke v. Cooke, 43 Md. 522, 533 744
v. U. S., 91 U. S. 396 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 242) 817, 821
Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. 219, 315, 319 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 996, 1003, 1004) 148, 260, 694
v. Norton, 4 Cush. 93 103
Cooper v. Omohundro, 19 Wall. 69 (86 U. S. bk. 24, L. ed. 49) 898
v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 921) 536
v. Wandsworth Bd. of Works, 14 C. B. N. S. 180, 194 418
Copeland v. N. Eng. Ins. Co., 2 Met. 432, 442 879
Corbin v. Cannon, 31 Miss. 570 376
Corcoran v. Holbrook, 59 N. Y. 517 759
Cornish v. Abington, 4 H. & N. 549 816
Cornwall v. Culver, 16 Cal. 429 318
Coster v. Tide Water Co., 18 N. J. Ch. 54, 68, 518, 531 ..... 230, 231
Cotton v. New Providence, 47 N. J. L. 401; 1 Cent. Rep. 444 904
County of Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 697 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 238, 239) 790
v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 697 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 238) 694
County of Scotland v. Thomas, 94 U. S. 690 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 220) 836
Course v. Stead, 4 Dall. 22, 27, n. (4 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 724, 726) 537

C.

Covell v. Heyman, 111 U.S. 176, 182 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 390, 393).... 88, 89, 871
Covington Draw Bridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. 227, 230 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 89)..... 537
Cowdrey v. Vandenburgh, 101 U. S. 572 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 923).....702, 703
Cowgill v. Long, 15 Ill. 202.....634, 635
Cox v. Mobile, etc. R. R. Co., 37 Ala. 323. 458
Coy v. City of Lyons, 17 Ia. 1..... 483
Crabtree v. Messersmith, 19 Iowa, 179... 988
Crafts v. Clark, 31 Ia. 77..... 537
Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 432 (29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 903, 911)..... 190
v. Wroth, 47 Md. 281..... 1016
Cramer v. Arthur, 102 U. S. 612, 616, 619, (Bk. 26, L. ed. 259, 261, 262). 334
Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 41, 49 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 726, 729, 745).....260, 790
Crane v. Astor, 6 Pet. 598 (81 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 514)..... 919
Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192 (46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 111)..... 1015
Crescent City Gas. Co. v. N. O. Gas. Co., 27 La. Ann. 188, 147.....520, 522
Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 216)..... 1015
Cromwell v. Sac Co., 94 U. S. 357 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 200)..... 996
Crooks v. Douglass, 56 Pa. St. 51..... 443
Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 164 (57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 889)..... 57
Crouch, Ex parte, 112 U.S. 178 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 690)..... 90
Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 398 (35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 470)..... 118
Crowley v. Cohen, 3 B. & Ad. 478..... 879
Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. 289 (Bk. 18, L. ed. 580)..... 485
Cucullu v. Hernandes, 103 U. S. 105 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 322)..... 457
Cuddon v. Eastwick, 1 Salk. 192..... 625
Cuddy v. Horn, 46 Mich. 596..... 657
Cullum v. Erwin, 4 Ala. 452..... 359
Cummins v. Gill, 6 Ala. 562..... 359
v. Nat. Bk. 101 U. S. 153, 157 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 903, 904).....88, 194, 201
Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. R. Co., 109 U. S. 446 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 992).....191, 811
Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304 (56 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 705)..... 238
Currie v. Stewart, 26 Miss. 461; 27 Miss. 52 376
Curtis, Ex parte, 106 U. S. 371 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 232)..... 90
Cushing v. Laird, 107 U. S. 69 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 391)..... 945
Cuthbart v. Haley, 8 T. R. 390..... 561
Cutter v. Powell, 2 Sm. Lead. Cas. 37, 7 Am. Ed. (Notes)..... 398

D.

Dagnall v. Wigley, 11 East, 43..... 561
Dalnese v. Hale, 91 U. S. 13, 20 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 190, 193)..... 536
Dale v. Medcalf, 9 Pa. St. 108..... 443
Dana v. Bank of Republic, 132 Mass. 156–158.....820, 821
v. Kemble, 19 Pick. 112..... 434
Daniel Ball, The, 10 Wall. 565 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1002)..... 719
Daniel v. Richmond, 78 Ky. 542..... 695

D.

Daniels v. Newton, 114 Mass. 530..... 9[illegible]
Danube, etc. R. Co. v. Xenos, 11 C. B. (N. S.) 152..... 9[illegible]
Danville, L. & N. Tpke. Co. v. Stewart, 2 Met. (Ky.) 119..... 6[illegible]
D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 176 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 618, 648, 653).....537, 6[illegible]
Darden v. Wyatt, 15 Ga. 414..... [illegible]
Darrington v. Bk. of Ala., 13 How. 12 (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 30).... 1[illegible]
Dartmouth Coll. v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 629). 20
Davidson v. Burnand, L. R. 4 C. P. 117, 121 87
v. Lanier, 4 Wall. 447 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 377)..... 76
v. N. Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 104, 107 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 616, 619, 620) 232, 417, 418, 46
Davies v. Corbin, 112 U. S. 36 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 627)..... 37
Davis v. Brown, 19 Blatchf. 263..... 66
v. Davis, 2 Atk. 21..... 10
v. Friedlander, 104 U. S. 570 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 818)..... 99
v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 220 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 447, 453) 201, 209 81
v. Minor, 1 How. (Miss.) 183..... 48
v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 686)..... 48
v. Wood, 1 Wheat. 6 (14 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 22)..... 91
Davison v. Von Lingen, 113 U. S. 40 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 885)..... 36
Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 363, 370, 371, (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 180, 181, 184, 185).....374, 466, 73
Dayton v. Lash, 94 U. S. 112 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 33)..... 58
Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 499 (39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 560)..... 67
Deery v. Cray, 5 Wall. 795, 803 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 653, 655)....375, 91
Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 405, (infra, 423).....429, 430, 8[illegible]
DeForest v. Fulton Ins. Co., 1 Hall, 84, 110..... 87
DeKrafft v. Barney, 2 Black, 704 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 350)..... 46
Delaware R. R. Tax Case, 18 Wall. 206, 225, 226 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 888–894).....520, 628, 642, 77
Dennistoun v. Stewart, 18 How. 565 (59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 489)..... 77
DeRonge v. Elliott, 23 N. J. Eq. 486, 495 9[illegible]
Desmare v. U. S., 93 U. S. 605 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 959)..... 3[illegible]
DeSobry v. Nicholson, 3 Wall. 423 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 264)..... 1[illegible]
Detreville v. Smalls, 98 U. S. 517 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 174)..... 8[illegible]
Detroit v. Dean, 106 U. S. 541 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 302) ..... 1[illegible]
Detroit R. R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133 (Infra, 118).....392, 5[illegible]
Devaynes v. Noble, 1 Meriv. 530, 535.... 8[illegible]
Dewing v. Perdicaries, 96 U. S. 193 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 654)..... 2[illegible]
DeWhelpdale v. Millburn, 5 Price, 485... 3[illegible]
DeWolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. 367 (23 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 343)..... 5
Dial v. Reynolds, 96 U. S. 340 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 644)..... 4

D.

[illegible] v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 583 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 620) 485
[illegible] v. Burrell, L. R. 1 Eq. 337 471
[illegible] v. Oliver, 8 Kan. 365 744
[illegible] v. Adams Co. Ins. Co., 58 Pa. St. 443 580
[illegible] v. Hazlehurst, 103 U. S. 494 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 497) 414
[illegible] v. Ohio & M. R. R. Co., 9 Biss. 159 975
[illegible] v. School Directors, 42 Pa. St. 21 852
[illegible] Co. v. Field, 111 U. S. 83 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 370) 432, 1030
[illegible] v. Willcutt, 16 Gray, 368, 371 865
[illegible] v. Erie Co. Comrs. 16 Pet. 435, 448 (41 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 1022, 1027) 847, 852, 854
[illegible] v. Case, 6 Mart. (La.) 569 279
[illegible] v. Knowles, 114 U. S. 438 (Infra, 296) 582
[illegible] v. Perkins, 9 Pick. 368, 388 224
[illegible] v. Windsey, 18 How. 331 (59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 401) 201
[illegible] v. Berbe, 13 How. 25 (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 35[illegible]) 851
[illegible] v. Galloway, 5 B. & Ad. 43 865
[illegible] v. Ozenden, 3 Taunt. 147 867
[illegible] v. Pennington, 2 Car. & P. 440 894
[illegible] v. Steel, 3 Camp. 115 397
[illegible] v. Westlake, 4 B. & Ald. 57 867
[illegible] v. Smith, 1 South. 142 230
[illegible] v. Pike Co., 101 U. S. 677 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 968) 635
[illegible] v. Johnson, 100 U. S. 158 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 632) 773
[illegible] v. Morris, 4 N. H. 16 243
[illegible] v. Smith, 38 Vt. 464 129
[illegible] v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108 (78 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 65) 613
[illegible] v. Dixon, 97 Mass. 208, 213 758
[illegible] Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. 227 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 896) .. 95
[illegible] Scott Case, 19 How. 393 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 691) 57
[illegible] v. London Assur. Co., 113 U. S. 31 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 919) 689
[illegible] v. Nichols, 115 Mass. 353 843
[illegible] v. Thompson, 26 Minn. 40 760
[illegible] v. Anderson, 26 Md. 567 988
[illegible] v. Harper, 66 Mo. 51 993
[illegible] Tac, 1 Swab. 63 157
[illegible] v. Myers, 94 U. S. 187 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 34) 99
[illegible] v. Dodd, 2 Paige, 99 843
[illegible] v. Sun Fire Ins. Co., 6 Wend. 488 580
[illegible] v. Hitchcock, 12 How. 256, note 13 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 978) .. 458
[illegible] v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 494 705
[illegible] v. Stetson, 4 Mason, 349 596
[illegible] v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 1 (33 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 845) 596
[illegible] v. Rogers, 87 Ill. 508 250
[illegible] v. Burt, 28 Cal. 569 129
[illegible] v. Overton, 35 Tex. 390 487
[illegible] v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 498 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 236) 116
[illegible] v. Erie R. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 228 656
[illegible] v. Hoover, 20 How. 65 (61 U. S. bk. 15 L. ed. 838, 845) ... 461, 604, 605, 606

E.

[illegible] v. Godfrey, 1 Wall. 78 (68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 847) 99
East St. Louis v. U. S. 110 U. S. 321 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 162) 483
Eastern Band of Cherokees v. U. S., 20 Ct. Cl. 449 886
Eastern R. R. Co. v. Relief Ins. Co., 98 Mass. 420, 423 373
Easton, Ex parte, 95 U. S. 68 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 373) 604
Eberhart v. Gilchrist, 11 N. J. Eq. 167 .. 843
Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 793) 626
Edmonds v. Cranshaw, 14 Pet. 166 (39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 402) 903
Edrington v. Jefferson, 111 U. S. 770–775 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 594, 596) ... 897, 924
Edwards v. Ricks, 30 La. Ann. 926, 928 . 381
v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145 626
Elborough v. Ayres, L. R. 10 Eq. 367 994
Eldred v. Bank, 17 Wall. 545 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 685) 586
Elec. Tel. Co. v. Brett, 10 C. B. 838 100
Elger's Admr. v. Lovell, 1 Woolw. 103 .. 365
Elgin v. Marshall, 106 U. S. 578 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 249) 460, 990
Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 98 (Bk. 28, L. ed 643, 644) 603
Elliott v. Hayden, 104 Mass. 180 397
v. Ray, 2 Blackf. 31 537
v. Sackett, 108 U. S. 132 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 678) 457
v. Stoddard, 98 Mass. 145 744
Ellis v. Ohio L. & T. Co., 4 Ohio St. 628, 667 817
Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 663 214
Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 152 (23 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 289) 340
Elmwood v. Marcy, 92 U. S. 289 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 710) 636
Elwine Kreplin, The, 9 Blatchf. 438; 4 Ben. 413 155
Emblen v. Myers, 6 H. & N. 54 784
Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 346) 1015
Empire v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 87 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 878) 360
English v. Latham, 3 Mart. (La.) N. S. 88 409
Enraght v. Penzance, 7 App. Cas. 240 ... 606
Entick v. Carrington, etc., 19 How. St. Tr. 1029 749
Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 492–499 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 595, 598) 771
Erstein v. Rothschild, 22 Fed. Rep. 61, 64 890
Erwin v. U. S. 97 U. S. 392 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1065) 471, 610, 944
Esterly v. Cole, 3 N. Y. 502 224
Estey v. Burdett, 109 U. S. 633 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1058) 80
Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 248, 278 62
Eureka Case, 4 Sawy. 302, 311 ..... 275, 713
Evangelistria, The, 2 Prob. Div. 241 (note) 156
Evans v. Bollen, 4 Dall. 342 (4 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 859) 551
v. Gee, 11 Pet. 83 (36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 640) 116
v. Brothers, 1 De G. M. & G. 572 . 994
Ex parte Balt. & O. R. R. Co., 106 U. S. 5 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 78) 879, 924
Braudlacht, 2 Hill, 367 604
Bridges, 2 Woods, 428 872
Easton, 95 U. S. 68 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 373 604
Ferry Co., 104 U. S. 519 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 815) 604

E.

Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 1117) 891
Gordon, 104 U. S. 515 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 814) 604
Karstendick, 93 U. S. 396 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 889) 911
Lange, 18 Wall. 163 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 872) 872 McCardle, 6 Wall. 318 (73 U.S. bk. 18, L. ed. 816); 7 Wall. 506 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 264 460
Mason, 105 U. S. 696 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1213) 461, 604
Milligan, 4 Wall. 3, 111 (71 U.S. bk. 18, L. ed. 281, 292) 871
Morgan, 114 U. S. 174 (Infra, 185) 677
Pennsylvania, 109 U. S. 174 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 894) 604
R. Co., 101 U. S. 720 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 875) 136
Reed, 100 U. S. 13 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 538) 604, 605, 607
Reggel, 114 U. S. 642 (Infra, 250) 549
Royall, 112 U. S. 181 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 690); 117 U. S. 241 (Infra, 868)) 460, 872, 994
Siebold, 100 U. S. 376 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 719) 870
Smyth, Tyrwh. & Gr. 222, 225; 2 Cr. M. & Ros. 748, 753 603
Tom Long, 108 U. S. 556 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 826) 459
Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 201 (28 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 650, 663) 871
Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 423 (Infra, 89) 460, 910, 911
Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 654 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 274) 870
Yerger, 8 Wall. 85 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 332) 460, 548
Express Co. v. Caldwell, 21 Wall. 264 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 556 878
Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 403) 996

F.

Factors & T. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 582) 246, 469
Fagan v. Chicago, 84 Ill. 227, 233, 234 849
Fairfield v. Madison Mfg. Co., 38 Wis. 346 398
Fall Riv. Bank v. Buffinton, 97 Mass. 498 819
Farm. L. & T. Co. v. Waterman, 106 U.S. 265, 270 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 115, 117) 379, 504, 924
Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114 U. S. 138, 143 (Infra, 114) 726
Farnsworth v. Childs, 4 Mass. 637 558
v. R. R. Co. 92 U.S. 66 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 535) 448
Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 689 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 522, 558 244, 522, 832
Fay v. Cordesman, 109 U. S. 408, 420, 421 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 979, 984) 76, 99, 663, 724
Fee v. New Orleans G. L. Co., 35 La. Ann. 413 519
Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U.S. 659, 663 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1036, 1037) 522, 523, 643
Ferry Co., Ex parte, 104 U. S. 519 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 815) 604

F.

Fife v. State, 31 Ark. 455 618
Filley v. Pope, 115 U. S. 213 (Infra, 372) 398
Finlay v. King's Lessee, 3 Pet. 346, 377 (28 U.S. bk. 7, L. ed. 712) 865
Fire Association v. Williamson, 26 Pa. St. 196 580
Firemen's Benev. Asso. v. Lounsbury, 21 Ill. 511 983
First Nat. Bank v. Redick, 110 U. S. 224 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 124) 379
v. Whitman, 94 U. S. 346 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 231) 816
Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray, 373 558
v. Vose, 3 Rob. (La.) 457 856
Fisk, Ex parte, 113 U. S. 713 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1117) 891
Fiske v. Tolman, 124 Mass. 254 457
Fitch v. Baldwin, 17 Johns. 161, note 458
Fitzpatrick v. Fitzpatrick, 36 Iowa, 674 867
Fleckner v. U. S. Bk. 8 Wheat., 360 103
Fletcher v. Mower, 55 Cal. 119; 56 Cal. 421 594
v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87 (10 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 162) 191, 195
Flike v. Boston & A. R. R. Co., 53 N. Y. 549 759
Flippin, Ex parte, 94 U. S. 350 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 195) 136
Flood v. Hicks, 4 Fish. Pat. Cas. 156; 2 Biss. 169 764
Florida v. Anderson, 91 U. S. 667 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 290) 930, 931
Flower v. O'Conner, 7 La. 194 857
Floyd Acceptances, The, 7 Wall. 676 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 173 432
Foote v. Blanchard, 6 Allen, 221 224
Ford v. Fitchburg Railroad, 110 Mass. 240 759
v. Williams, 21 How. 287 (62 U.S. bk. 16, L. ed. 36) 767
Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 27 Kan. 749; 114 U. S. 525, 531, 532 (Infra, 264, 266) 271, 846, 850
Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 235, 253, 254 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 339, 343) 973
Foster, Re, 24 Beav. 423 603
Foster v. Essex Bk., 16 Mass. 245 243, 487
v. Gray, 22 Pa. St. 9, 15 442, 443
v. Mora, 98 U. S. 425 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 191) 993
Fourth Nat. Bank v. Stout, 113 U. S. 684 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1152) 331, 379, 924
Fowler v. Fay, 62 Ill. 375 457
v. Lindsey, 3 Dall. 411 (3 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 658) 195
Fox v. Kitton, 19 Ill. 519 988
v. Ohio, 5 How. 410, 433, 434 (46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 212) 91, 619
Francis Wright, The, 105 U. S. 381 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1100) 409
Frank v. Chemical Bank, 84 N. Y. 209, 213 819
Fraser v. Jennison, 106 U.S. 191 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 131) 64
Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102 (Infra, 311) 594
Freeman v. Auld, 44 N. Y. 50, note 458
v. Cooke, 2 Exch. 658 816
v. Howe, 24 How. 450 (65 U.S. bk. 16, L. ed. 749) 80, 89, 858
Freeth v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 208 371
Frelinghuysen v. Key, 110 U. S. 63 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 71) 273

F.

[illegible] v. Ryan, 93 U. S. 169 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 812) 346
v. Hope Ins. Co., 16 Pick. 397 373
[illegible] v. Ball, 12 How. 466, 468 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 1068, 1069) 878
[illegible] v. Knight, L. R. 7 Ex. 111 988
[illegible] v. Jewett, 80 N.Y. 46 759
v. People, 22 Ill. 182, 185 984
v. Yentzer, 94 U. S. 288 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 103) 99

G.

[illegible] v. Bailey, 102 Ill. 11 452
v. Busse, 102 Ill. 532 452
v. Herring, 107 U. S. 640, 648 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 601, 604, 605) 99, 176, 663, 952, 960
[illegible] v. Fuentes, 92 U.S. 20 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 528) 325
[illegible] v. Page, 18 Wall. 350 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 959) 897
[illegible] R. R. Co. v. Cowdrey, 11 Wall. 459 (78 U.S. bk. 20, L. ed. 199) 247
[illegible] v. Witty, 55 Miss. 26 452
[illegible] v. Clark, 111 U.S. 120 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 371) 179
[illegible] v. Memphis Ins. Co., 19 How. 312, 317 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 656, 658) 878
[illegible] v. Howard, 8 Bing. 451 103
[illegible] v. Dennis, 4 Binn. 314 919
[illegible] v. Van Loan, 15 Wend. 308 816
[illegible] v. Sheridan, 8 Ves. 192 108
[illegible] v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 246 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 381) 570, 687
General Ins. Co. v. Sherwood, 14 How. 351, 366 (55 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 451, 453) 879
[illegible] v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 203, 209, 222 (23 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 23, 71, 73, 76) 164, 166, 260, 520, 620, 694
[illegible] v. Bruce, 108 U. S. 561 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 825) 888
v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 99 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 534, 536) ..850, 851
v. Commonwealth, 2 Va. Cas. 111, 121 188
[illegible] v. West, 33 Wis. 617 395
[illegible] v. Canal Co. 109 U. S. 401 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 977) 244
[illegible] v. Wells, 23 Wall. 1 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 699) 99
[illegible] v. Moon, 2 Johns. Ch. 585 509
[illegible] v. Ill. & Miss. Tel. Co., 91 U. S. 603 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 405) 235
v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 96) 620
v. Sheboygan, 2 Black. 510, 513 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 305, 307) .. 771
[illegible] v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. 1 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 53) 624
[illegible] v. Stephens, 1 Heisk. 280 488
[illegible] v. Clapp, 11 G. & J. 1 843
[illegible] Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 59, 69 878
v. Wolff, 95 U. S. 329 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 288) 938
[illegible] Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. 33 817
[illegible] Fer. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 204, 211 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 158) 790

G.

Goddard v. Foster, 17 Wall. 123 (84 U.S. bk. 21, L. ed. 589) 768
Godden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S. 201 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 431) 352
Goetcheus v. Matthewson, 61 N.Y. 420 .. 461
Gokey v. Knapp, 44 Ia., 32 561
Golden v. Blaskopf, 126 Mass. 523 996
Golden Gate Mining Co. v. Superior Ct., 65 Cal. 187, 192 673
Gold W. & W. Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 201 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 658) 390
Golubchick, The, 1 W. Rob. 143 ....155, 156
Gompertz v. Bartlett, 2 El. & Bl. 849 ... 398
Gooch v. McGee, 83 N.C. 59 309
Goodin v. Cin. & W. Canal Co., 18 Ohio St. 169 238
Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S. 556 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 229) 944
Goodright v. Pears, 11 East, 58 865
Goodtitle v. Kibbe, 9 How. 471 (50 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 220) 851
v. Southern, 1 M. & S. 299 865
v. Tombs, 3 Wils. 118 376
Goodwyn v. Baldwin, 59 Ala. 127 340
Goodyear Dental Vul. Co. v. Davis, 102 U. S. 222, 228 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 149, 151) 724
Gordon, Ex parte, 104 U. S. 515 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 814) 604
Gordon v. Appeal Tax Ct., 3 How. 133 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 529) .522, 643
v. Ogden, 3 Pet. 33 (28 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 592) 379
v. Winchester Co., 12 Bush. 110, 114 514
Goshorn v. Purcell, 11 Ohio St. 641 243
Gould v. Reese, 15 Wall. 154 (82 U.S. bk. 21, L. ed. 41) 99
Graceland Cem. Co. v. People, 92 Ill. 619 451, 452
Graff v. Mer. & M. Tr. Co., 18 Md. 364 . 1016
Graham v. R. R. Co., 102 U. S. 148, 161 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 106, 161) ...238, 471
Granada Co. v. Brogden, 112 U. S. 271 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 707) 635
Grant v. Gould, 2 H. Bl. 69 .....604, 607
Gratz v. Prevost, 6 Wheat., 481 (19 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 311) 340
Graves v. Legg, 9 Exch. 709 371
Gray v. Blanchard, 97 U. S. 564 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1108) 503
v. Hill, Ry. & M. 420 705
v. McCallister, 50 Ia. 498 471
Great W. Ins. Co v. U. S. 112 U. S. 193 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 687) 273
Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 84 (21 U.S. bk. 5, L. ed. 547, 568) 191, 524
Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 109) 536, 537
Green Co. v. Conness, 109 U. S. 104, 105 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 872) 635, 836
Greene Twp. v. Campbell, 16 Ohio St. 11 . 243
Greenfield Sav. Bank v. Stowell, 123 Mass. 196, 202 818
Greenhouse, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 92 214
Greenlaw v. Greenlaw, 12 N. H. 200 243
Greenleaf v. Birth, 5 Pet. 132 (30 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 72) 214
Greenlees v. Greenlees, 62 Ala. 330 340
Greenwood v. Freight Co., 105 U. S. 20 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 964) 520
Greer v. Mezes, 24 How. 268 (65 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 661) 993

G.

Gregg v. Moss, 14 Wall. 564, 569 (81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 740, 742)..... 375
Gregory v. Hartley, 113 U. S. 745 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1151)..... 924
Grenada Co. v. Brown, 112 U. S. 261 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 704).....83, 620
Griefswald, The, 1 Swab. 430.....156, 157
Griffin v. Goff, 12 Johns. 423..... 411
Griffith v. Young, 12 East. 513..... 705
Griggs v. Houston, 104 U. S. 553 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 840).....225, 768, 982
Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 319 (43 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 283)..... 896
Grignon's Lessee v. Astor, 2 How. 338 (43 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 290)..... 896
Grigsby v. Purcell, 99 U. S. 506 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 354)..... 582
Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. 363 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 863)..... 192
Grosvenor v. Cartwright, 2 Cas. in Ch. 21 214
Gue v. Tide Water Canal, 24 How. 257 (65 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 635).141, 309
Guidet v. Brooklyn, 105 U. S. 550 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1106)..... 764
Guild v. Chicago, 82 Ill. 475..... 984
Guy v. Blatimore, 100 U. S. 434, 438 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 743, 744)....260, 694, 790

H.

Hadji, The, 22 Blatchf. 235..... 879
Hagar v. Reclamation Dist., 111 U. S. 701 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 569)....232, 418
Hailes v. Van Wormer, 20 Wall. 353 (87 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 241)... 61, 232, 1018
Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 254 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 345)..... 413
Hall v. Hurlbut, Taney, 589, 600..... 409
v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 168 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 271–274).....536, 632
v. Law, 102 U. S. 461 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 217)..... 896
v. Macneale, 107 U. S. 90 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 367).....80, 422
v. R. R. Co., 13 Wall. 367, 370, 371 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 594, 596).....878, 880
v. Sullivan R. R. Co., 21 Law. Rep. 138; 2 Redf. R. Cas. 621; 1 Brunner, 613..... 247
v. Wells, 54 Miss. 289..... 376
v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 10 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 305)..... 588
Halloway v. Griffith, 32 Iowa, 409..... 968
Hampton v. Commonwealth, 19 Pa. St. 329..... 486
Hanauer v. Doane, 12 Wall. 342 (79 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 439)..... 769
Hancock v. Holbrook, 112 U. S. 229 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 714)..... 329
Hand v. R. R. Co., 12 S. C. 314..... 290
Hanley v. Donoughue, 116 U. S. 1 (Infra, 535).....631, 632
Hanna v. Creditors, 12 Mart. (La.) 32... 856
Hannay v. Stewart, 6 Watts. 487..... 103
Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 231)..... 614
Hanney v. Healy, 14 La. Ann, 426..... 857
Harden v. Boyd, 113 U. S. 756 764 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1141, 1143)..359, 360, 844
Hardenburg v. Kidd, 10 Cal. 402..... 452

H.

Hardy v. Chesapeake Bank, 51 Md. 562, 591.....820, 821
Harkness v. Hyde, 98 U. S. 476 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 237).....360, 542
Harlan v. Howard, 79 Ky. 378..... 894
Harriett, The, 1 W. Rob. 182, 192..... 409
Harris v. Elliott, 10 Pet. 25 (35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 333)..... 846
v. Knox, 10 La. 230..... 858
Harrison v. Heflin, 54 Ala. 552.....340, 341
v. Wright, 13 East, 343..... 408
Hart v. Bleight, 3 T. B. Mon. 273..... 843
v. New Orleans, No. 4413, U. S. Cir. Ct.; 13 Fed. Rep. 292, 778..... 229
v. Penn. R. R. Co., 112 U. S. 331 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 717)..... 878
Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672, 679 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 271, 274).. 188, 189, 736, 737
Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. 328 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 871)..... 896
v. U. S., 105 U. S. 671 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1206)..... 573
Harward v. St. Cl. Drainage Co., 51 Ill. 130..... 636
Hatch v. Bayley, 12 Cush. 30..... 744
v. Hatch, 28 Law Times (N. Y.) Ex. Ch. 506..... 746
Havana, The, 1 Spr. 402..... 155
Havemeyer v. Iowa Co., 3 Wall. 294 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 38)..... 773
Hawes v. Oakland, 104 U. S. 459 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 832)..... 117
Hawkins v. Bowie, 9 G. & J. 428, 437... 1016
v. Crook, 2 P. Wms. 556..... 107
Hawley v. Fairbanks, 108 U. S. 543, 548 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 820, 822).... 331, 379, 924
Hay v. La Neve, 2 Shaws Scotch Appeals, 395..... 655
Hayden v. Florence Sewing Machine Co., 54 N. Y. 221, 225..... 758
v. Manning, 106 U. S. 586 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 306)..... 117
Hays v. Pacific M. S. S. Co., 17 How. 596 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 254).....163, 164
Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co., 113 U. S. 91 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 889)..... 232
Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, 591 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 798, 801)..... 790
Heald v. Rice, 104 U. S. 754 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 916)..... 422
Heaston v. Cin. & Ft. W. R. R. Co., 16 Ind. 275, 279..... 758
Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S. 235 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1018)..... 54
Heine v. Levee Comrs., 1 Woods, 246. 474, 477
Heinrich, Re, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 414, 427.. 460
Heirs v. Hornsby, 32 La. Ann. 337..... 836
Henderson v. Mayor of N. Y., 92 U. S. 259, 263 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 543).. 165, 260, 521
Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 445 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 123,)..... 1015
Henkle v. Roy. Ins. Co., 1 Ves. Sen. 317 509
Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 682 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 568)..... 249
Henry v. Gregory, 29 Mich. 68..... 615

H.

[illegible] v. Butler, 97 U. S. 319 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 938).....225, 982
[illegible] v. Drainage Comrs., 53 Ill. 105.. 636
[illegible] v. Wilson, 55 Miss. 587..... 376
[illegible] v. Kemp, 4 Camp. 193.... 434
[illegible] v. Wilcox, 1 Met. 154..... 486
[illegible] v. Cock, 7 Wend. 371..... 894
[illegible] v. Deaves, 2 Johns. Ch. 154..... 402
[illegible] v. Bern, Jacob, 49..... 110
[illegible] v. Eastman, 47 N. H. 507..... 993
[illegible] v. 380 Casks of Lime, 130 Mass. 1 694
v. Senior, 8 M. & W. 834..... 767
[illegible] v. Weld, 14 Gray, 165..... 408
[illegible] v. Rake, 97 N. Y. 216..... 371
v. Butler, 6 Ohio St. 207..... 769
v. Harding, 107 U. S. 631 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 493)..... 996
[illegible] v. Exchange Bank, 105 U. S. 319 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1052).....190, 737 [illegible] v. Dickinson, 108 U. S. 165, 174 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 688, 691).... 379, 503, 733
v. Scarborough, 5 Gray, 422..... 104
v. Woods, L. R. 4 Eq. 432..... 993
[illegible] v. Rose, 5 Cranch, 313 (9 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 111)..... 729
[illegible] v. Vattier, 5 Pet. 398 (30 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 168)..... 537
[illegible] v. Lott, 8 Wall. 148 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 387)..... 696
[illegible] v. Wurts, 41 N. J. L. 175, 179 230
[illegible] v. Rennie, 5 H. & N. 19, 28....369, 371
[illegible] v. Memphis & C. Railroad, 9 Heisk. 673..... 537
[illegible] v. De la Tour, 2 El. & Bl. 678. 988
[illegible] R. R. Co., 99 U. S. 348, 355 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 303, 304)..... 771
v. Richmond, etc. R. R. Co., 98 U. S. 1 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 781)... 725
[illegible] v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 53)..... 88
[illegible] v. Mix, 3 Wend. 350..... 462
[illegible] v. Head, 4 C. B. (N. S.) 388. 104
[illegible] v. Abbott, (11 Fost.) 31 N. H. 443..... 997
v. Mfg. Co., 113 U. S. 59 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 901)..... 80
[illegible] v. Jamieson, 14 Pet. 540 (39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 579)..... 460
[illegible] v. Johnson, Cowp. 341-343..... 769
[illegible] of Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 495) 532, 643
[illegible] Ins. Co. v. Balt. W. Co., 93 U. S. 327 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 868)..... 879
[illegible] v. Collector, 1 Wall. 486 (68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 688)..... 982
[illegible] v. Muller, 7 Q. B. D. 92..... 871
[illegible] v. Columbus & W. R. Co., Dec. Term, 1884, Sup. Ct. of Ala.. 140
[illegible] v. Montclair, etc. R. Co., 29 N. J. Eq. 4..... 973
[illegible] v. Fuchser, 47 Mo. 331..... 993
[illegible] v. Lockhart, 17 Wall. 570, 573 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 657)...193, 906
[illegible] v. Crischfield, 18 Ill. 133..... 537
[illegible] v. Stafford, 111 U. S. 389, 394 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 468, 470)..... 875
[illegible] v. Collector, 9 Wall. 566 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 563)..... 176
[illegible] v. Greenwood, 11 How. 248 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 683)..... 61

H.

Hough v. R. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 612).....758, 948, 949
Houghton v. Payne, 26 Conn. 396..... 561
House v. Walker, 4 Md. Ch. 62..... 843
Houseman v. The North Carolina, 15 Pet. 50 (40 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 657) 318
Houston v. Moore, 3 Wheat. 433 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 428)..... 888
Hovenden v. Ld. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 636..... 340
Hovey v. McDonald, 109 U. S. 161 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 891)..... 445
Howe v. Plainfield, 37 N. J. L. 145..... 232
Howell v. Baker, 4 John. Ch. 118..... 843
Howells v. Balt. Eq. Soc., 16 Md. 377.. 580
Howland v. Blake, 97 U. S. 624, 626 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1027, 1028)..... 584
Hoy v. Bramhall, 4 C. E. Green, 78..... 457
Huber v. Reily, 53 Pa. St. 112..... 461
Huckle v. Money, 2 Wils. 205..... 734
Huff v. Doyle, 93 U. S. 558 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 975)..... 171
Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 489 (22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 142)..... 1025
v. Heirs of Shore, U. S. Cir. Ct. for Dist. of Ky.....893, 894
Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 244, 249 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 326, 327).....124, 522, 835
Humphreys v. Norfolk, 25 Gratt. 97..... 737
Hunt v. Rousmaniere, 1 Pet. 1 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 27)..... 510
Huntington v. Knox, 7 Cush. 371..... 767
Huntley v. Whittier, 105 Mass. 391..... 434
Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 534 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 232).....93, 911
Hussey v. Coffin, 1 Allen, 354..... 214
Hutchings v. Van Bokkelen, 34 Me. 126. 462
Hyde v. Ruble, 104 U. S. 407, 409 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 823, 824).....64, 329, 963

I.

Imhaeuser v. Buerk, 101 U. S. 647 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 945)..... 99
Improvement Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. 442 (81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 867).....225, 982
v. Stead, 95 U. S. 161 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 403)..... 225
Indianapolis, etc. R. R. Co. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291, 300 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 898, 901).....713, 889, 891
Inglee v. Coolidge, 2 Wheat. 368 (15 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 262)..... 176
In re Heinrich, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 414, 427 460
In re Newman, 4 Ch. D. 724..... 408
Ins. Co. v. Harris, 97 U. S. 331 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 959)..... 536
v. Mahone, 21 Wall. 152 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 593)..... 938
v. Norton, 96 U. S. 240 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 691)..... 938
v. Kechner, 95 U. S. 185 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 427)..... 962
v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 222 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 617).....938, 939
Iowa R. L. Co. v. Sac Co., 39 Ia. 124.... 483
Iron, Sil. Mining Co. v. Cheeseman, 116 U. S. 529 (Infra, 712)..... 772
Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How 558, 563 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 994, 997).. 851
Ivory v. State Bank, 36 Mo. 475..... 412

J

Jackson v. Browner, 18 Johns. 37..... 918
v. Cooley, 8 Johns. 128..... 919
v. King, 5 Cow. 237..... 918
v. Laroway, 3 Johns. Cas. 283.... 894
v. Ludeling, 99 U. S. 513 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 460)..... 247
v. Luquere, 5 Cow. 221..... 894
v. Roby, 109 U. S. 440 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 990)..... 670
v. Sill, 11 Johns. 201.....864, 867
v. Smith, 7 Cow. 717..... 104
v. Willson, 9 Johns. 92..... 918
v. Wood, 2 Cow. 819..... 619
Jackson Co. v. Boylston Ins. Co., 139 Mass. 508.....879, 880
Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black. 436, 446 (66 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 178, 178).....191, 515, 771
Jenness v. Citizens' Nat. Bk., 110 U. S. 52 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 67)..... 503
Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453, 457 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 240-242)..... 670
Jermon v. Lyon, 81 Pa. St. 107.....444, 445
Jerome v. McCarter, 21 Wall. 17 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 515)..... 887
Jerusalem, The, 2 Gall. 191..... 156
Jesse Williamson, Jr., The, 108 U. S. 309 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 731)..... 503
Jewell v. Jewell, 1 How. 219 (42 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 108)..... 918
Johann Friederick, The, 1 W. Rob. 35.156, 157
Johnson v. Hannahan, 3 Strob. 425..... 734
v. Johnson, 2 Hill (S. C. Ch.) 277.. 215
v. Lawson, 2 Bing. 86..... 918
v. Simpson, 9 Pa. St. 416..... 214
v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 485)..... 571
v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 547)..... 336
Johnstone v. Milling, 16 Q. B. D. 460.... 988
Jones v. Andrews, 10 Wall. 327 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 935)..... 596
v. Berryhill, 25 Ia. 289..... 561
v. Corp. of Liverpool, 14 Q. B. D. 890 654
v. Davis, 35 Ohio St. 474..... 244
v. Jones, 18 Ala. 248..... 485
v. League, 18 How. 81 (59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 264)..... 116
v. Lore, 2 Pen. 1048..... 230
v. McMasters, 20 How. 8 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 805)..... 993
v. Robbins, 8 Gray, 329, 349..... 93
v. Robinson, 78 N. C. 396..... 865
v. Smart, 1 T. R. 44..... 945
v. Van Benthuysen, 103 U. S. 87 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 477)..... 446
Jonesboro City v. Cairo & St. L. R. R. Co., 110 U. S. 199 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 118)..... 984
Joyce v. Kennard, L. R. 7 Q. B. 78..... 879
Juliana, The, 2 Dod. 504, 521..... 409
Junction R. R. Co. v. Bank of Ashland, 12 Wall. 226, 230 (79 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 385-387)..... 537
Jupiter, The, 1 Ben. 536..... 156

K.

Kahn v. Smelting Co., 102 U. S. 641 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 266)..... 129
Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. 90..... 340
Kan. Pac. R. R. Co. v. Atchison R. R. Co., 112 U. S. 414, 416 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 794, 795).....390, 928

K

v. Prescott, 16 Wall. 603, 608 (83 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 373, 374)..... 8
Karr v. Karr, 6 Dana, 3..... 2
Karstendick, Ex parte, 93 U. S. 396 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 889).....90, Kay v. Curd, 6 B. Mon. 100..... 7
v. Marshall, 7 Scott, 548; 5 Bing. N. Cas. 492; 1 Beav. 535; 8 Cl. & Fin. 245; West. H. Lords, 682 7
Kean v. Drainage Co., 45 N. J. L. 91..... 2
Kearney v. Sascer, 37 Md. 264..... 10
Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 327)..... 8
Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S. 454, 465 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1071, 1075)..... 1
Keithsburg v. Frick, 34 Ill. 405.....634, 6
Kellogg v. Union Co., 12 Corn. 7.....
Kelly v. Worcester Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 97 Mass. 284..... 5
Kemp v. Cook, 18 Md. 130..... 10
Kempe v. Kennedy, 5 Cranch, 173 (9 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 70)..... 8
Kemper v. McClelland, 19 Ohio, 308.... 4
Kennedy v. Barnwell, 7 Rich. 124..... 2
Kenner v. Creditors, 1 La. 120; 7 Mart. La. (N. S.) 540; 8 Mart. La. (N. S.) 36..... 4
Kent v. Walton, 7 Wend. 256..... 5
Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 99, 104 (65 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 717, 726, 728).....252, 5
Kern v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 485 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 354)..... 9
Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 155, 160 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 845)..... 9
Keyes v. U. S., 109 U. S. 336-339 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 954, 956).....254, 6
Keystone Bridge Co. v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 95 U. S. 274 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 344) 9
Kidder v. Hunt, 1 Pick. 328..... 7
Kihlberg v. U. S., 97 U. S. 398 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1106)..... 2
King v. Beal, 3 Mod. 124..... 4
v. Burrell, 12 Ad. & E. 460..... 9
v. Dale, 2 Show. 511..... 4
v. Gallun, 109 U. S. 99 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 870).....80, 16
v. Priddle, 1 Leach, 442..... 9
v. Wheeler, 2 B. & Ald. 345, 354. 76
King Philip Mills v. Slater, 12 R. I. 82.. 37
Kloepping v. Stellmacker, 21 N. J. Eq. 328 88
Knapp v. Abell, 10 Allen, 485..... 53
v. Banks, 2 How. 73 (43 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 184)..... 37
Knickerbocker Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, 112 U. S. 696 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 866).. 43
Knights v. Wiffen, L. R. 5 Q. B. 660.... 81
Knowles v. Gas & C. Co., 19 Wall. 58 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 70).....537, 63
Kohl v. U. S., 91 U. S. 367 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 449).....266, 84
Kolb v. Bankhead, 18 Tex. 228..... 73
Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 145).....88, 858, 89
Kurtz v. Hibner, 55 Ill. 514.....864, 8
v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 500 (Infra, 458).....604, 91
Kyle v. L. R. R. Co., 10 Rich. 382..... 22

L.

Lamar v. Micou, 114 U. S. 218 (Infra, 94) 53
v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 476 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 751, 759).....94, 95, 96

L.

[illegible] v. Mortgagee, 20 Scotch, Ct. Sess. Cas. (2 Ser.) 1323..... 95
[illegible] v. Parkman, 21 Law Rep. 589 318
[illegible] v. Eiffe, 3 Q. B. 910..... 945
[illegible] v. Fenner, 111 U. S. 17 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 337)..... 306
[illegible] v. Smith, 106 U. S. 391 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 219).....340, 352
[illegible] v. Oregon, 7 Wall. 71, 76 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 101, 104)..... 193
[illegible] Ex parte, 18 Wall. 163 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 872).....90, 872
[illegible] v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 147 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 54)..... 542
[illegible] v. U. S., 101 U. S. 341 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 1010)..... 192
[illegible] v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192.214, 215
[illegible] v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317 (18 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 98).... 681
[illegible] v. Hempstead, 10 Conn. 23..... 865
[illegible] v. People, 87 Ill. 385..... 452
[illegible] v. Lee, 8 Pet. 44 (33 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 862).....459
[illegible] v. Watson, 1 Wall. 337 (68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 557).....503, 733
[illegible] v. Lyraway, 22 Barb. 167, 173.. 843
[illegible] v. Warren, 2 Black, 599 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 261)..... 485
[illegible] v. Avery, 101 U. S. 256 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 865).....724, 725
[illegible] v. Holthaus, 105 U. S. 94 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 969)..... 1019
[illegible] The, XIII, 8 Prob. Div. 121..... 155
[illegible] v. Van Kirk, 29 Wis. 548, 553.. 395
[illegible] v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, 151.. 486
[illegible] v. Cary, 52 Miss. 791..... 376
[illegible] v. Gadsby, 3 Cranch, 180 (7 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 404)..... 768
[illegible] v. Langridge, 4 M. & W. 337..... 741
[illegible] v. Davidson, 51 Tex. 251..... 487
[illegible] v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 39 Conn. 100. 939
[illegible] Cases, 5 How. 504, 575, 592, 594, 600, 605 (46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 255, 288, 296, 299, 302).... 260
[illegible] Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 471 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 497, 500).620, 787
[illegible] v. Robinson, 2 Brock. 160.... 903
[illegible] v. Claflin, 7 Wall. 132 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 106)..... 1000
[illegible] v. Bland, 2 Speer, 30..... 224
[illegible] v. Rouse, 9 Wall. 468 (76 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 721)..... 832
[illegible] v. Register, 9 Wall. 577 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 682)..... 678
[illegible] v. Webster Co., 101 U. S. 778 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 925)..... 202
[illegible] Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 349)..... 148
[illegible] v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 577)..... 179
[illegible] v. Byrne, 11 Johns. 555, 566. 843
[illegible] v. Story, 9 Pet. 632 (34 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 255)..... 409
[illegible] v. Woodworth, 15 How. 546 (56 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 809)..... 179
[illegible] v. Guibert, 6 B. & S. 100, 130; L. R. Q. B. 115, 120..... 95
[illegible] v. Lynch, 26 Pa. St. 419..... 129
[illegible] v. Scott, 4 Pet. 205 (29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 833)..... 561
[illegible] & T. Co. v. Waterman, 106 U. S. 265 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 115)..... 331
[illegible] v. Stearns, 1 Met. 200..... 250

L.

Lochner v. Home Ins. Co., 17 Mo. 247 256..... 938
Lockport v. Gaylord, 61 Ill. 276..... 984
London & N. R. Co. v. Glyn, 1 El. & El. 652..... 879
Loom Co. v. Higgins, 105 U. S. 580 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1177)..... 1018
Looney v. District of Columbia, 118 U.S. 258 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 974)..... 702
Lorillard v. Clyde, 86 N. Y. 384..... 944
Loring, Ex parte, 94 U. S. 418 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 165)..... 136
Lorymer v. Smith, 1 B. & C. 1..... 398
Lothrop v. Adams, 133 Mass. 471..... 250
v. Highland Foundry, 128 Mass. 120 858
Lottawanna, The, 21 Wall. 558 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 654)..... 409
Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 721, 727 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 448, 452, 454).....194, 810, 811
v. New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 936)..... 626
v. Pillsbury, 105 U. S. 278 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1090)..... 626
Louisville v. Commonwealth, 1 Duv. 295 851
Louisville, C. & L. R. R. Co. v. Case, 9 Bush, 728..... 657
Louisville N. R. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52 (Infra, 63) 63, 66, 67, 391, 899, 900
v. Palmes 109 U. S. 244, 253, 254, 256, 257 (Bk. 27, L.ed. 922, 925, 926).....124, 501, 515, 771, 885
v. R. R. Commission of Tenn. 19 Fed. Rep. 679..... 646
Lovingston v. Wider, 53 Ill. 302..... 636
Lowber v. Bangs, 2 Wall. 728 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 768)..... 368
Lower Chatham Drainage, Re, 35 N. J. L. 497, 501, 506.....231, 232
Lucas v. Brooks, 18 Wall. 436, 454 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 779, 782).... 375
Lucille The, 19 Wall. 74 (86 U. S. Bk. 22, L. ed. 64)..... 318
Lyman v. United Ins. Co. 2 Johns. Ch. 630 509
Lyon v. Bertram, 20 How. 149 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 847)..... 369, 398

M.

McCardle, Ex parte, 6 Wall. 318 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 816); 7 Wall. 506 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 264).. 460
McCarty v. McCarty, 74 Ala. 546.....340, 341
McClure v. U. S., 116 U. S. 145 (Infra, 572).....585, 586
McComb v. Brodie, 1 Woods, 153, 161.. 960
McCormick v. Talcott, 20 How. 402 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 930)..... 99
McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 612 (43 U. S. bk. 11, L.ed. 397, 399) 197
McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 425, 429, 431, 436 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 579, 606–609)..... 168, 846, 847, 852, 854
McDonald v. Lee, 12 La. 485..... 411
v. Smalley, 1 Pet. 620 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 287)..... 116
McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 324 (38 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 177, 183).486, 537
McElrath v. U. S., 102 U. S. 436–439 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 189, 191).....254, 255
McGenness v. Adriatic Mills, 116 Mass. 177 103
McGoon v. Scales, 9 Wall. 23, 27 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 545, 546).... 851

M.

Macgregor v. Kelly, 3 Exch. 794..... 434
McGuire v. Commonwealth, 3 Wall. 387 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 165).. 737
v. Parker, 32 La. Ann. 832..... 695
McHenry v. La. Soc. Francaise, 95 U. S. 58 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 370)..... 1006
McIver v. Wattles, 9 Wheat. 650 (22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 182)..... 176
McKenzie v. Brit. Lin. Co. 6 App. Cas. 101 816
v. Whitworth, L. R. 10 Ex. 142; 1 Ex. Div. 36..... 879
McKinney v. Carroll, 12 Pet. 66 (37 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 1002)..... 392
v. Springer, 8 Blackf. 506..... 488
McKowen v. McGuire, 15 La. Ann. 637.. 857
McLaughlin v. Thompson, 55 Ill. 249. 451, 452
McLean Co. Precinct v. Deposit Bank, 81 Ky. 254..... 476
McLeod v. Callicot, Chase Dec. 443..... 366
McMahon v. Allen, 35 N. Y. 403..... 471
v. Morrison, 16 Ind. 172..... 239
McMicken v. U. S., 97 U. S. 217, 218 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 951, 952)..... 448
McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 42 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 335, 336)..... 417
McMurray v. Mallory, 111 U. S. 97 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 365)..... 99
McNair v. Thompson, 5 Mart. (La.) 525, 563, 564..... 409
McNitt v. Clark, 7 Johns. 465..... 344
McRae v. Farrow, 4 Hen. & M. 444..... 902
McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush, 447. 165
Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676–678 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 754, 755)....696, 790
v. Murphy, 97 U. S. 120 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 935)..... 1019
Mackall v. Richards, 112 U. S. 369 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 737)..... 558
Mackey v. People, 2 Col. 13..... 183
Macnamara v. Hulse, Car. & M. 471, 477 764
Magee v. Billingsley, 3 Ala. 679..... 398
Maggie Hammond, The, 9 Wall. 435, 457 (76 U. S. bk. 19 L. ed. 772, 780) 157
Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354, 359 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 665, 667).....851, 724
Mahoney v. Van Winkle, 21 Cal. 552.... 313
M. C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 387 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 465)..... 176
Malony v. Dows, 8 Abb. Pr. 316..... 154
Mamie, The, 105 U. S. 733 n. (Bk. 26, L, ed. 937)..... 879
Mandal v. Mandal, 28 La. Ann. 556..... 944
Manly v. United Ins. Co., 9 Mass. 85.... 373
Mann v. Mann, 1 Johns. Ch. 231..... 867
Manufacturers Bank v. Barnes, 65 Ill. 69 819, 820
v. Hazard, 30 N. Y. 229..... 816
Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, 105 U. S. 253 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 987)..... 179
Maraist v. Guilbeau, 31 La. Ann. 713.... 336
Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137 (5 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 60)..... 195
Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 7 Cranch, 332, 336 (11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 362, 363).....1015, 1016
Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 112 n. (Bk. 25, L. ed. 782)..... 379
Marlatt v. Warwick, 18 N. J. Eq. 108... 843
Marsh v. Brooklyn, 59 N. Y. 280..... 88
v. Fulton Co., 10 Wall. 676 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1040)....432, 1030
v. Whitmore, 21 Wall. 178, 185 (88 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 482, 485). 352

M.

Marshall v. Grimes, 41 Miss. 27)..... 621
v. Silliman, 61 Ill. 218..... 636
Martin v. Graves, 5 Allen, 601..... 88
v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304 (14 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 97)..... 148
v. Mott, 12 Wheat. 19, 35 (25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 537, 542)..... 605
Martinton v. Fairbanks, 112 U. S. 678 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 863)..... 898
Marye v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 325 (Infra, 205)..... 809
Mason, Ex parte, 105 U. S. 696 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1213).....461, 604
Mason v. Eldred, 2 Wall. 231 (78 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 783)..... 536
v. Sargent, 104 U. S. 689 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 894)..... 920
v. The Blaireau, 2 Cranch, 240 (6 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 266)..... 155
Matson v. Farm Bldgs. Ins. Co., 78 N. Y. 310..... 580
Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1098)... 681
Maury v. Mason, 8 Port. (Ala.) 211..... 340
Maxwell v. Levy, 2 Dall. 381 (2 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 424); 4 Dall. 330 (4 U. S, bk. 1, L. ed. 854)..... 116
v. Stewart, 22 Wall. 77 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 564)..... 536
May v. Sloan, 101 U. S. 231 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 797)..... 704
Mayor v. Cooper, 6 Wall. 247, 252 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 851, 852)..890, 603
v. Ransom, 23 How. 487 (64 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 515)..... 179
v. Ray, 19 Wall. 468 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 164)..... 432
v. Second Ave. R. R. Co., 32 N. Y. 261..... 738 of Coventry v. Atty-Gen., 7 Bro. P. C. 235..... 214 of London v. Cox, L. R. 2 H. L. 239, 280..... 608
Mead v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 7 N. Y. 530..... 580
Meade v. Dep. Marsh. of Va., 1 Brock. 324 604
Mech. Bk. v. Bk. of Columbia, 5 Wheat. 326–336..... 105
v. Merch. Bk., 6 Met. 13..... 412
Meigs v. McClung, 9 Cr. 11 (13 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 639)..... 192
Memphis Gas. Co. v. Shelby Tax Dist., 109 U. S. 398, 401 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 976, 977)..... 771
Memphis & L. R. R. R. Co. v. R. R. Comrs. 112 U. S. 609, 617, 618 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 837, 840) .....
..... 124, 194, 247, 771
Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Calebs, 20 N. Y. 173 880
Merch. Bank v. Bergen Co., 115 U. S. 384 (Infra, 430)..... 1030
Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 501 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 197, 200)...173, 474
Merriam v. Hassam, 14 Allen, 522..... 340
Merrill v. Petty, 16 Wall. 338 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 499)..... 379
Mersey Co. v. Naylor, 9 App. Cas. 434, 439 368, 371, 648
Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala. 237..... 973
Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 398 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 520)..... 87
Middleport v. Ætna Ins. Co., 82 Ill. 562 984
Milan, The, Lush. 388..... 655

M.

Ellis v. McIlwraith, 8 App. Cas. 183... 816
Elmer v. Brass Co., 104 U. S. 350 (Bk. 26 L. ed. 788)....350, 351
v. Littlefield, U. S. Cir. Ct. for Northern District of Florida, 932, 933
v. Palmer, 55 Miss. 823..... 876
Elphin, Ex parte, 4 Wall. 3, 111 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 281, 292).... 871
Ely v. Smith, 8 Wall. 27 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 346)..... 713
Emmerger v. Logansport R. Co., 106 U. S. 286 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 117).... 971
Emmetsburg & St. P. R. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 489, 493 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 374, 376)....466, 733
Emmerick v. U. S., 97 U. S. 426 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1069)..... 355
Emory Co. v. Taylor, 100 U. S. 37, 42 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 541, 542)..... 875
Ennis v. P. W. & B. R. R., 18 Wall. 206 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 888).. 642
Ennis v. Lewis, 101 U. S. 22, 30 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 989, 992)..... 419
Eastern Pac. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512 (Infra, 463)..... 733 Erskell v. Harmony, 13 How. 115 (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 75)..... 192
v. Tibbetts, 17 Pick. 208..... 268
v. Torup, Parker, 227, 236..... 753
Erie, etc. R. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 74 Ala. 568..... 625
Erie & M. Ry. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584, 594 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 527-531) 878, 879
Erie Co. v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 697 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 238, 239) 162, 694, 790
Esbat v. U. S., 112 U. S. 24 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 623)..... 118
Estwick v. Atty-Gen., 2 Russ. & M. 156, 159..... 918
Estabrook v. Dawes, 14 Allen, 369..... 845
Eustis v. Murray, 4 Cranch, 47 (8 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 545)..... 176
Eustis v. Dana, 107 U. S. 162 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 436)..... 920
v. Bazadell, 107 U. S. 147 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 431)..... 984 Evansville v. Blair, 2 Sch. & Lef. 136 603
v. Murphy, 19 Md. 576..... 1016
Evansville, The, 17 How. 152, 155 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 68)..... 878
Evans v. Smedley, 6 Johns. Ch. 28..... 614
Eve v. Felkel, 7 Fla. 44..... 95
v. Greene, 19 How. 69 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 532)..... 352
v. Hamilton, 4 Fla. 112..... 95
v. Mississippi, 21 Wall. 639 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 654)..... 720
v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 535 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 848, 850)..... 571
Exum v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 653, 743)....259, 260, 790
Exparte, 114 U. S. 174 (Infra, 135)..... 677
Exparte v. Harrisburg Lodge, 53 Miss. 665 376
v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 217 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 829)...123, 124, 247, 772, 835
v. McKee, 77 Pa. St. 238..... 871
v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 305).....163, 164
v. R. R. Co., 96 U. S. 720 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 744)..... 816

M.

Morningstar, The, 14 Fed. Rep. 866.... 318
Morris Cotton, 8 Wall. 507, 511 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 481, 482)....684, 891
Morris v. Levison, 1 C. P. D. 155..... 408
v. McMillin, 112 U. S. 244 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 702)..... 80
v. Nixon, 1 How. 118 (42 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 69)..... 1025
Morrison v. Lovejoy, 6 Minn. 349, 350.. 758
Morrow v. Peyton, 8 Leigh, 54..... 908
Morse v. R. R. Co., 6 Gray, 450..... 103
Moseley v. Lee, 37 Tex. 479..... 487
Moss v. Bainbrigge, 18 Beav. 478..... 944
Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 161..... 154
Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 699).....625, 626
Morvins v. Arthur, 95 U. S. 144 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 420)..... 982
Mowry v. Chase, 100 Mass. 79..... 537
v. Whitney, 14 Wall. 620 (81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 860)..... 179
Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 206..... 1021
Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 134, 135 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 87).....644, 646
Murdock v. Memphis, 22 Wall. 590, 636 (87 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 429, 444).....118, 471, 620, 628, 1024
Murphy v. McCleary, 3 Yeates, 405..... 443
Murray v. Col. Ins. Co., 4 Johns. 443... 373
Musson v. Lake, 4 How. 262 (45 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 966)..... 435
Mustian v. Jones, 30 Ga. 951..... 88
Mutual Benefit Ins. Co. v. Elizabeth, 42 N. J. L. 235.....904, 905
Myers v. Swann, 107 U. S. 546 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 583)..... 898

N.

Nashua v. Louisiana, 8 How. 73, 82 (49 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 993, 995, 996) 696, 854
National Bank v. Commonwealth, 9 Wall. 353, 362, (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 701, 703).....244, 854
v. Ins. Co., 100 U. S. 43 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 547)..... 406
v. Tappan, 6 Kan. 456, 467..... 819
v. Yankton Co., 101 U. S. 129 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 1046)..... 57
Neal v. Clark, 95 U. S. 709 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 587)..... 249
v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 567)..... 418
Neale v. Neales, 9 Wall. 1 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 590)..... 844
Neiffing v. Pontiac, 56 Ill. 172..... 963
Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. 98, 107, 108 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 909, 913)..... 846
Nelson v. St. Martins Parish, 111 U. S. 716 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 574)..... 588
v. Simpson, 9 La. Ann. 311..... 858
Nettles v. Nettles, 67 Ala. 599..... 840
Neves v. Scott, 13 How. 268 (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 140)..... 409
New v. Nicoll, 73 N. Y. 181..... 977
Newburgh v. Newburgh, 5 Madd. 364.. 867
Newcomb v. Wood, 97 U. S. 584 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1086)..... 891
New Hampshire v. La., 108 U. S. 76 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 656)..... 191

N.

New Jersey v. Wilson, 1 Penn. N. J. 300; 7 Cranch, 164, 166 (11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 303)..... 191, 209, 522, 524, 1022, 1023, 1024
New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 113 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 354)..... 520
New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merch. Bank, 6 How. 344 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 466)..... 799
New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Trotter, 108 U. S. 564 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 828)..... 379
Newman, Ex parte, 14 Wall. 152 (81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 877)..... 155
Newman, Re, 4 Ch. D. 724..... 408
New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 644 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 522)..... 519
v. Morris, 3 Woods, 115..... 229
v. U. S., 10 Pet. 662, 737 (35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 573, 602)..... 851
New Orleans Gas Co. v. La. Light Co. 115 U. S. 650 (Infra, 516)..516, 527, 695
New Orleans, etc. R. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501 (Infra, 244)..... 469
New Orleans R. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 478..... 625
Newton v. Comrs., 100 U. S. 548, 559 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 710, 711).....588, 643
New York v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 76 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 656)..... 191
v. Miln, 11 Pet. 102 (36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 648)..... 620
New York Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nat. Protection Ins. Co., 14 N. Y. 85..... 579
New York Ins. Co. v. Flack, 3 Md. 341. 999
New York, L. E. & W. R. R. Co. v. Steinbrenner, 47 N. J. L. 161, 171.....655, 657
Nichol v. Godts, 10 Exch. 191..... 398
Nimick v. Ingram, 17 La. Ann. 85..... 857
Nina, The, L. R. 2 Adm. & Ec. 44; L. R. 2 P. C. 38..... 155
Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188, 204 (Infra, 366).....573, 398, 408
Norris v. Boston, 4 Met. 282, 293..... 695
v. Jackson, 9 Wall. 125 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 608)..... 898
v. Ogden, 11 Mart. (La.) 455..... 857
Northern Bk. of Toledo v. Porter Twp. Trs., 110 U. S. 608 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 258)..... 432
North British Ins. Co. v. London L. & G. Ins. Co., 5 Ch. D. 569..... 879
Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Traill Co., 115 U. S. 600, 610 (Infra, 477)... 851
Notrebe v. McKinney, 6 Rob. (La.) 13.. 856
Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 286)..... 891

O.

Oberteuffer v. Robertson, 24 Fed. Rep. 852 711
O'Connor v. Memphis, 6 La. 730..... 635
Oder, The, 21 Blatchf. 26..... 318
Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 341 (25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 650)..... 705
Ogilvie v. Hearne, 13 Ves. 563..... 107
O'Hara v. Lexington & O. R. R. Co., 1 Dana, 232, 233..... 514
v. MacConnell, 93 U. S. 150 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 840)..... 110
O'Hare v. Downing, 130 Mass. 16, 19... 88
Ohio v. Hinchman, 27 Pa. St. 479..... 537
Ohio L. & T. Co v. Debott, 16 How. 428, 429 (57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 1002)... 324

O.

Okell v. Smith, 1 Stark, N. P. 107..... 81
Olcott v. Supervisors, 16 Wall. 678 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 382)..... 69
O'Leary v. Cook Co., 28 Ill. 543..... 98
Oliver v. Alexander, 6 Pet. 143 (31 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 349)..... 37
v. Piatt, 3 How. 333 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 622)..... 34
v. Wash. Mills, 11 Allen, 268..... 69
One hundred and ninety-four Shawls, 1 Abb. Adm. 317..... 15
O'Neil v. Teague, 8 Ala. 345..... 50
O'Neill v. Capelle, 62 Mo. 202..... 102
Opinion of Mass. Judges, 1 Met. 580.... 26
Oridge v. Sherborne, 11 M. & W. 374, 378.....411, 41
Orr v. Lisso, 33 La. Ann. 476..... 85
Osborn v. U. S. Bank, 9 Wheat. 738, 739, 824, 859, 868 (22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 204, 224, 233, 235)..... 192, 194, 195, 201, 209, 264, 323, 324, 327, 390, 846, 847, 85
Osborne v. Mobile, 16 Wall. 479 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed.).....790, 79
Oscanyan v. Arms Co., 103 U. S. 261, 268 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 539, 542)...571, 76
Otoe Co. v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 15, 16 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 336).....636, 98
Ould v. Richmond, 23 Gratt. 464..... 73
v. Washington Hospital, 95 U. S. 303 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 450)..... 101
Owings v. Hull, 9 Pet. 607, 625 (34 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 246, 252).....95, 53

P.

Pace v. Burgess, 92 U. S. 372 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 657)..... 68
Packet Co. v. Catlettsburg, 105 U. S. 559 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1169, 1170).167, 26
v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 80 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 377).....167, 61
v. St. Louis, 100 U. S. 423 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 688)..... 16
Page v. Cole, 123 Mass. 93..... 99
Paine v. R. R. Co., 31 Ind. 283, 349..... 23
v. Schen. Ins. Co., 11 R. I. 411... 53
Palmyra, The, 12 Wheat. 114 (25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 531, 535).....687, 101
Pantzar v. Tilly F. Iron Co., 99 N. Y. 368 75
Parker v. Winsor, 5 Kan. 362, 367, 372.. 85
Parks, Ex parte, 93 U. S. 18 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 787)..... 9
Parks v. Ross, 11 How. 373 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 735)..... 40
Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. 433 (28 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 732)..... 62
v. N. O., No. 8088 U. S. Cir. Ct.. 22
Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 51..... 74
Passenger Cases, 7 How. 282, 407, 414, 419, 445, 462, 464 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 702, 754, 757, 759, 770, 777, 778).....260, 694, 69
Patchin v. Swift, 21 Vt. 292..... 34
Patteson v. Bondurant, 30 Gratt. 94..... 90
Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 182, 184 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 357, 361).162, 26
Paving Co. v. Mulford, 100 U. S. 147 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 591)..... 37
Pawashick, The, 2 Low. 142..... 15
Paxton's Case, Quincy's Rep. 51, 57, n.. 74
Peacock v. Carnes, 110 Ill. 100..... 45
Peck v. Mallams, 10 N. Y. 509, 532..... 86

P.

[illegible] C. & N. W. R. R. Co., 94 U. S. 164 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 97) 642, 643, 646
[illegible] Parker, 13 Ohio, 209 537
[illegible] v. Evans, 4 Wash. C. C. 336 .. 110
[illegible] v. Mackinder, Willes, 665 91
[illegible]'s Case, 103 U. S. 717 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 604) 618
[illegible] v. Gibson, 16 How. 65 (57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 846) 95, 537
[illegible] v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 727, 734 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 565, 570, 572). 360, 632, 897
[illegible]vania, Ex parte, 109 U. S. 174 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 894) 604
[illegible]vania v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119 164
[illegible] R. R. Co. v. Locomotive Truck Co., 110 U. S. 490 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 222) 60, 211, 422, 554
[illegible] v. Austin, 46 Cal. 520 850
[illegible] v. Bralin, 80 Ill. 423 983
[illegible] v. Cowen, 4 Wall. 244 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 344) 832
[illegible] v. Doe, 36 Cal. 220 852
[illegible] v. Godfrey, 17 John. 225 269
[illegible] v. McCreery, 34 Cal. 432, 456 850
[illegible] v. Mayor, 51 Ill. 17 636
[illegible] v. Morris, 13 Wend. 325 625
[illegible] v. Morrison, 22 Cal. 73 850
[illegible] v. Nevins, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 154 91
[illegible] v. Shearer, 30 Cal. 645, 658 ..... 850, 851
[illegible] v. U. S., 93 Ill. 30 849
[illegible] v. Wright, 70 Ill. 388, 396 983
[illegible]'s Bank v. Calhoun, 102 U. S. 256, (Bk. 26, L. ed. 101) 858
[illegible] Riv. Drainage, Re, 39 N. J. L. 423, 434; 41 N. J. L. 175, 179; 42 N. J. L. 553, 554; 43 N. J. L. 456 231
[illegible] v. Franklin Bk., 21 Pick. 483 411
[illegible] v. Hart, 11 Wheat. 256 (24 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 468) 816
[illegible] v. Nichols, 11 Allen, 542 214
[illegible] v. First Mun. of New Orleans, 8 How. 569, 610 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 739) 848
[illegible], Ex parte, 102 U. S. 183 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 43) 136
[illegible] v. Com'th, 5 Wall. 475-479 (72 U. S. Bk. 18 L. ed. 609) 259
[illegible] v. Shepherd, 5 Paige, 493 88
[illegible] v. Davis, 110 U. S. 227 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 127) 297
[illegible] v. Davis, 96 U. S. 332 (Bk. 24, L. ed. [illegible]) 1025
[illegible], Ex parte, 9 Mod. 357 214
[illegible] R. R. Co. v. Maryland, 10 How. 376, 393 (51 U. S. bk. 13 L. ed. 461, 469) 771, 835
[illegible] v. Quigley, 21 How. 202, 214 (62 U. S. L. ed. 78, 77) 783
[illegible] v. Phillippi, 61 Ala. 41 340
[illegible] v. Detroit, 111 U. S. 604 (Bk. 28 L. ed. 532) 61, 80, 954
[illegible] v. Negley, 2 Mackey, 236 1014
[illegible] Construction Co. v. Seymour, 91 U. S. 646 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 341) 858, 919
[illegible] v. Nock, 17 Wall. 460, 462 (84 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 679) 179, 960
[illegible] Bank v. Risley, 111 U. S. 125, 127 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 374, 375) .. 815

P.

Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Erie Trans. Co. 10 Biss. 18, 38 880
v. Liv. & G. W. S. Co., 22 Blatchf. 372 318
Piatt v. Vattier, 1 McLean, 146 488
Pickard v. Pullman S. Car Co., 117 U. S. 34 (Infra, 785) 791
Pickerell v. Fisk, 11 La. Ann. 277 857
Pickering v. McCullough, 104 U. S. 310 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 749) 61, 232
Pickett v. Legerwood, 7 Pet. 144 (32 U. S. bk. 8 L. ed. 638) 1015
Pierce v. Kneeland, 7 Wis. 224 843
v. New Hampshire, 5 How. 593 (46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 296) 696
v. State, 13 N. H. 536, 582 695
Piper v. Singer, 4 S. & R. 354 852
Pirie v. Toedt, 115 U. S. 41, 43 (Infra, 65, 331) 329, 391, 898, 899, 900, 913
Platt, Re, 7 Ben. 261 753
Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. 116 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 780) .. 225, 768, 920, 982
Poe, Re, 5 B. & Ad. 681, 688 607
Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270 (Infra, 185) 199, 201, 209, 728, 737, 738, 811
Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114 741
Polk v. Winett, 37 Ia. 34 483
Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 224 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 565, 571) .. 850, 851
Pollock v. Steamboat Laura, 5 Fed. Rep. 133 147
Pontchartrain R. R. Co. v. Lafayette & P. R. R. Co., 10 La. Ann. 741 519, 522
v. New Orleans R. Co., 11 La. Ann. 253; 15 La. 404, 413 521
Pope v. Allis, 115 U. S. 363 (Infra, 393) .. 839
Porret's Case, Perry, Cr. Cases, 414, 419 .. 605
Porter v. Lazear, 109 U. S. 84-86 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 866) 1006
Portsmouth v. Fellows, 5 Madd. 450 214
Potomac, The, 2 Black, 581 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 263) 244
Potomac S. B. Co. v. Upper Potomac Co., 109 U. S. 672 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1070) 220
Potts, Ex parte, 1 Ash. 340 214
Potts v. Chumasers, 92 U. S. 358 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 499) 460
Powder Co. v. Powder Works, 98 U. S. 126 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 77) 423
Powell v. Waters, 8 Cow. 669 561
Pratt v. Fitzhugh, 1 Black, 271 (66 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 206) 459
Prentice v. Dehon, 10 Allen, 353 488
Preston v. Melville, 8 Cl. & F. 1 95
Prewit v. Wilson, 103 U. S. 24 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 363) 744
Price v. Abbott, 17 Fed. Rep. 506 552
v. State, 8 Gill, 295, 310 603
Priest v. Rice, 1 Pick. 164 558
Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 104) 94, 409
Prouty v. Ruggles, 16 Pet. 336 99
Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 560, 561, 563, 564 (29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 939, 955, 956) 191, 244, 524, 642, 771, 847, 1024
Prov. Sav. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 641 (Infra, 261) 390
Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Mo. Pac. R. Co. 115 U. S. 587 (Infra, 499) .. 803

P.

Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Speck, 113 U. S. 87 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 926)..... 924
Pullman South. Car Co. v. Gaines, 8 Tenn. Ch. 587..... 791
Purcell v. Miner, 4 Wall. 513 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 435)..... 705
Putnam v. Ingraham, 114 U.S. 57 (Infra, 65).....329, 391, 899, 900

Q.

Quarman v. Burnett, 6 M. & W. 499, 507.. 654
Queen v. Newel, Parker, 269..... 753
Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 422 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 800, 802)... 162, 571
Quinney v. Stockbridge, 33 Wis. 505.... 614
Quinn's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 447, 453..... 445

R.

Ragland v. Morton, 41 Ala. 344..... 340
R. Co., ex parte, 101 U. S. 720 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 875)..... 136
R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1122)..... 168
v. McShane, 22 Wall. 444, 462 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 747, 751)..479, 851
Railroad Commission v. N. J. & C. R. R. Co., Miss. Sup. Ct., not yet reported.....644, 646
v. Yazoo & M. R. R. Co., Miss. Sup. Ct., not yet reported..644, 646
R. R. Co. v. Blair, 100 U. S. 661, 662 (Bk. 25, L. ed 587) 297, 582
v. Burkett, 42 Ala. 83..... 140
v. Comrs., 103 U. S. 14 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 359, 360) 835, 836
v. Gaines, 97 U. S. 697, 711 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1094).....831, 832, 835, 836
v. Cowdrey, 11 Wall. 459 (78 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 199)..... 235
v. Georgia, 98 U. S. 359, 360, 364 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 185, 186, 187).. 125, 239, 501, 835
v. Hamblen Co., 102 U. S. 277 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 152)..... 835
v. Hendricks, 41 Ind. 48..... 239
v. Houston, 95 U. S. 697 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 542)..... 225
v. Howard, 7 Wall. 392 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 117)..... 238
v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 469, 474 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 527, 529, 531).260, 521
v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52 (Infra, 63)..329, 332
v. Jones, 29 Ind. 465..... 239
v. Koontz, 104 U. S. 15 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 646)..... 963
v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 627)..... 879
v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 997)..... 524
v. Maine, 96 U. S. 499, 508, 512 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 836, 839, 841).. 125, 501, 836
v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 472 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 678, 684) 790
v. Mellon, 104 U. S. 112 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 639).....212, 953
v. Mills, 113 U. S. 249 (Bk. 28, L. ed 949).....67, 329
v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 140, 141 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 98).....390, 963
v. Palmes, 109 U. S. 244 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 922)..... 125
R. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 32, 34, 41, (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 787, 792, 795)..... 854
v. Pennsylvania, 15 Wall. 300 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 179)..... 163
v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 123 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 827)..... 879
v. Prescott, 16 Wall. 603 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 373).....479, 480
v. Richmond, 96 U. S. 529 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 737)..... 646
v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118, 140 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 327, 335)..... 290, 930, 931, 932, 933
v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 535)..... 879
v. Stout, 17 Wall. 663 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 749)..... 821
v. Truck Co., 110 U. S. 490 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 222)..... 80
v. U. S., 101 U. S. 543 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 1068)..... 659
v. Wilson, 114 U. S. 60 (Infra, 66) 329
Rairden v. Holden, 15 Ohio St. 207..... 243
Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 328..... 537
Ralls Co. v. Douglass, 105 U. S. 732 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 958)..... 685
Ralls Co. Ct. v. U. S., 105 U. S. 733 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1220)..... 626
Rancliffe v. Parkyns, 6 Dow. 149, 202.. 894
Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. R. Co., 109 U. S. 478, 483 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1003, 1005).....225, 768, 920, 982 Ray v. Wight, 119 Mass. 426..... 996
v. Young, 13 Tex. 550..... 705
Re Bateman, L. R. 9 Eq. 660..... 603
Bogart, 2 Sawy. 396..... 604
Chiles, 22 Wall. 168 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 822)..... 674
Foster, 24 Beav. 428..... 603
Heinrich, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 414, 427 460
Newman, 4 Ch. D. 724..... 408
Platt, 7 Ben. 261..... 753
Poe, 5 B. & Ad. 681, 688, 2 Nev. & Man. 636, 644..... 607
White, 9 Sawy. 49..... 604
Reading R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 15 Wall. 232 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 146)..... 165
Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S. 347 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 719)..... 61
Redlich v. Doll, 54 N. Y. 234-238..... 818
Reed, Ex parte, 100 U. S. 13 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 538).....604, 605, 607
Reed v. Carter, 1 Blackf. 410..... 843
Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 72).....473, 474, 477
Reggel, Ex parte, 114 U. S. 642 (Infra, 250) 549
Reily v. Lamar, 2 Cranch, 3419 (6 U. S. bk. 2 L. ed. 302)..... 582
Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 471, 474 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 593, 598, 599)..... 228, 962, 963
Renshaw v. Stafford, 30 La. Ann. 853.... 336
Republica v. Arnold, 3 Yeates, 263..... 280
Reuck v. McGregor, 32 N. J. L. 70..... 462
Reuter v. Sala, 4 C. P. D. 239.....370, 371
Rex v. All-Saints, 7 B. & C. 789..... 918
v. Dawes, 1 Burr. 636..... 280
v. Duchess of Kingston, 20 How. St. Tr. 355, 538..... 687

R.

[illegible] Kavel, 1 Burr. 637 280
[illegible] v. Simpson, 22 How. 341 (63 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 260) 457
[illegible], Ex parte, 5 Ves. 707 214
[illegible] v. Gaawfordsville Bk., 112 U. S. 495 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 733) 88, 214
[illegible] v. U. S., 98 U. S. 158 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 348) 674
[illegible] v. Turner, 21 Ala. 210 340
[illegible] v. Hancock, 1 Harp. (S. C.) Law, 388 224
[illegible] v. Lambert, 12 How. 347 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 1017) 379
[illegible] v. Holmes, 18 How. 143 (59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 304) 401
[illegible] v. Mackall, 113 U. S. 540 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1132) 559
[illegible] v. Boston, 19 How. 268 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 642) 404
[illegible] v. Maine Ins. Co., 46 Me. 394 940
[illegible] v. New Bedford Copper Co., 2 Low. 315 409
[illegible], etc. R. R. Co. v. La. R. R. Co., 13 How. 71, 83 (Bk. 14, L. ed. 55-60) 525
[illegible] v. Heisch, 18 Cal. 198 313
[illegible] v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. R., 21 Blatchf. 439 880
[illegible] v. Franklin, 22 Wall. 67 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 825) 635
[illegible] v. Washington, 34 Tex. 267 487
[illegible] Co. v. Howell, 113 Ill. 259 452
[illegible] v. Duke, 105 U. S. 132 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1061) 497
[illegible] v. Phila. Co., 2 Amer. Law Jour. (N. S.) 444 ..... 851, 852, 853
[illegible] v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 624, 637 (Bk. [illegible], L. ed. 542, 545) 548, 870, 871
[illegible] v. Carr, 64 Cal. 431, 433 459
[illegible] v. Ryer, 91 U. S. 157 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 270) 422
[illegible] v. Richardson, 13 Gray, 454 751
[illegible] v. Beall, 26 Ga. 17 998
[illegible] v. Rush, 80 N. Y. 302 852
[illegible] v. Buckingham, 33 Conn. 81 561
[illegible] v. Sawin, 5 Cush. 281 462
[illegible] Catholic Orphan Asylum v. Emmons, 3 Bradf. 144 864
[illegible] R. Co., 105 U. S. 189, 212 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 975, 983) 178
[illegible] v. Johnson, L. R. 8 C. P. 167, 178 988
[illegible] v. Woodruff, 4 Johns. Ch. 547, 548. 108
[illegible] v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185, 187, 188 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 395, 398) .. 434, 470
[illegible] v. Dawson, 2 Black, 613 (67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 309) 128
[illegible] Ex parte 112 U. S. 181 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 690) 460
[illegible] Ex parte, 117 U. S. 241 (Infra, 888) 872
[illegible] v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 572 (Infra, [illegible]) 788
[illegible] v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 531 (Bk. [illegible], L. ed. 815) 642, 643
[illegible] v. U. S., 19 Ct. of Cl. 396, 414 607
[illegible] v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163, 171 (Bk. [illegible], L. ed. 397, 399) 1016
[illegible] v. Southard, 12 How. 139, 148 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 927, 931,) 409, 584, 1025
[illegible] v. Sunwell, 105 U. S. 303 (Bk. 26, L. ed. [illegible]) 279

R.

Russia The, 3 Ben. 471 156
Ryan v. World Ins. Co., 41 Conn. 168 .. 939
Ryder v Wilson, 41 N. J. L. 9, 11 488

S.

Sadler v. Hoover, 7 How. 646 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 855) 778
Sage v. R. R. Co., 96 U. S. 715 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 643) 582
St. Joseph Township v. Rogers, 16 Wall. 644, 663 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 328, 338) 634, 635, 636
St. Lawrence, The, 1 Black, 522 (66 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 180) 409
St. Louis v. Ferry Co., 11 Wall. 423 (78 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 192) 163
St. Louis, etc. R. Co. v. Berry, 113 U. S. 465 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1055) 194
St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McGee, 115 U. S. 469 (Infra, 446) 598
v. R. R. Comrs., 113 U. S. 465 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1055) 124, 125
St. Paul, etc. R. R. Co. v. U. S., 112 U. S. 733 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 861). 944
v. Winona R. R. Co., 112 U. S. 720 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 872) 928, 929
Salem's Cargo, The, 1 Sprague, 389 408
Sandusky Tool Co. v. Comstock, not reported 446
San Pedro, The, 2 Wheat. 142 (15 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 202) 582
Sarah, The, 8 Wheat. 391 (21 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 644) 684, 691
Sargent v. Hall Safe & L. Co., 114 U. S. 63, 86 (Infra, 67) 663, 724
v. Yale Lock Co., 17 Blatchf. 244. 958
Saulet v. Trepagnier, 11 Rob. (La.) 266 .. 381
Savage v. Corn Exch. Ins. Co., 36 N. Y. 655 879
Sawin v. Kenny, 93 U. S. 289 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 926) 536
Schacker v. Hartford Ins. Co., 93 U. S. 241 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 862) 503
Schell v. Dodge, 107 U. S. 629 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 601) 1015
Schermerhorn v. Perman, 2 Bailey, 173. 224
Schofield v. Chicago, etc. R. Co., 114 U. S. 615 (Infra, 224) 982
Scholfield v. Watkins, 22 Ill. 66, 73 ... 634, 635
Schollenberger, Ex parte, 96 U. S. 369 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 853) 263
Schuchardt v. Allens, 1 Wall. 370 (68 U. S. bk 17, L. ed. 646) 404
Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 63 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 555) .. 448
Schuyler Co. Supervisors v. Rock Island & A. R. R. Co., 25 Ill. 182 983, 984
Schwed v. Smith, 106 U. S. 188 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 156) 331, 924
Scofield v. Lansing, 17 Mich. 437, 447, 448 88
Scotia, The, 14 Wall. 170, 184 (81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 822, 824) 157
Scotland Co. v. Thomas, 94 U. S. 690 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 220) 836
Scotland, The, 105 U. S. 24, 29 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1001, 1003) 157
Scott v. Coleman, 5 Litt. 349 537
v. Kittanning Coal Co., 89 Pa. St. 231 371
v. Sanford, 19 How. 393 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 691) 57
v. Watkins, 22 Ark. 556, 564 695

S.

Scudder v. Tren. Del. Falls Co., Saxton, 694, 721-725 232
v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 245) 560
Seaman v. Riggins, 2 N. J. Eq. 214 843
Seaver v. Bigelow, 5 Wall. 208 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 595) 331, 379, 924
Seibold, Ex parte, 100 U. S. 371 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 717) 90
Settembre v. Putnam, 30 Cal. 490 129
Severance v. Healey, 50 N. H. 448 461
Seymour v. McCormick, 16 How. 480 (57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 1024) 179
v. Osborne, 11 Wall. 516 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 33) 99, 1018
Shaffer v. State, 1 How. (Miss.) 238, 241. 183
Shainwald v. Lewis, 108 U. S. 158 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 691) 329
Shanny v. Androscoggin Mills, 66 Me. 420 759
Shelburne v. Inchiquin, 1 Bro. Ch. 338.. 509
Shelby v. Smith, 2 A. K. Marsh. 504 359
Shelden v. Hopkins, 7 Wend. 435 537
Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 340 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 424, 428) 571
Sheppard v. Gosnold, Vaughn, 159, 172. 753
Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 819) 260
Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 130 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 158) 359
v. Miltenberger, 14 Pa. St. 77 443
v. Thomas, 17 How. 3 n. (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 93) 379
v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 323 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 357, 358) 125, 239, 501 Shinn v. Bodine, 60 Pa. St. 182 371
Shipman v. Hickman, 9 Rob. (La.) 149.. 856
Shore v. Wilson, 9 Cl. & F. 355, 397 944
Shute v. Dorr, 5 Wend. 204 705
Sibbald v. U. S., 12 Pet. 488, 492 (37 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 1167, 1169) ... 1015
Sibley v. Quinsigamond Bank, 133 Mass. 515, 521 558
Sidney, The, 23 Fed. Rep. 88 880
Siebold, Ex parte, 100 U. S. 376 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 719) 90, 870
Sights v. Yarnalls, 12 Gratt. 292 737
Sikes v. Bladen Co., 72 N. C. 34 308
Silsby v. Foote, 14 How. 217; 20 How. 378, 387 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 953, 956) 99, 960
Simmins v. Parker, 4 Mart. (N. S.) 200-207 856
Simms v. Guthrie, 9 Cranch, 19 (13 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 642) 596
v. Hundley, 6 How. 1 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 319) 113
Simpson v. Crippin, L. R. 8 Q. B. 14.370, 371
Simpson v. Thomson, 3 App. Cas. 279, 286, 292, 293 878
Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 719, 725 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 503, 504). 203, 479
Sinks v. Reese, 19 Ohio St. 306 268
Sivley v. Summers, 57 Miss. 712 376
Skilbeck v. Garbett, 7 Q. B. 846 434
Skillman v. Lachman, 23 Cal. 208 129
Skipwith v. Lea, 16 La. Ann. 247 857
Slaughter v. Mobile Co., 73 Ala. 134 626
Slaughter-House Cases, 10 Wall. 273, 297 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 922); 16 Wall. 36, 62 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 394, 404, 405) 445, 520, 523

S.

Slawson v. Grand St R. R. Co., 107 U. S. 649 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 576) 61, 80, 953, 954
Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275 Infra, 899) 913
Sloman v. Walter, 1 Bro. Ch. 418 408
Smart v. Baugh, 3 J. J. Marsh, 364 485
Smelting Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 640, 647 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 875, 876, 879) 63, 571, 775
Smith v. Goodyear Den. V. Co., 93 U. S. 486 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 952) 1019
v. Greenhow, 109 U. S. 669 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1080) 503, 732
v. Hutchinson, 108 Ill. 668 452
v. Kernochen, 7 How. 216 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 673) 116
v. Maitland, 1 Ves. Jr. 362 867
v. Nichols, 21 Wall. 112 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 566) 60
v. Rines, 2 Sum. 338, 348, 354, 355 64, 332, 945
Smoot's Case, 15 Wall. 36 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 107) 988
Smyth, Ex parte, Tyrwh. & Gr. 222, 225; 2 Cr. M. & Ros. 748, 753 603
Snyder v. Snyder, 25 Ind. 399 537
v. U. S., 112 U. S. 216 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 697) 90, 683
Society v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. 139 243
Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 594, 605 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 897, 902) 854
Solarte v. Melville, 7 B. & C. 430 561
Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1145) 467
Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Georgia, 92 U. S. 676 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 762) 628, 885
Southwestern Railroad v. Wright, 116 U. S. 231 (Infra, 626) 771
Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408 (Infra, 428) 571
Spencer v. Thompson, 6 Ir. L. Rep. (N. S.) 537, 565 434
Spindle v. Shreve, 111 U. S. 544 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 512) 1003
Spofford v. Kirk, 97 U. S. 484 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1032) 944
Sprigg v. Bank of Mt. Pleasant, 14 Pet. 201 (39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 419) 457, 1025
Spring Val. Water Works v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 354 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 176) 646
Stackpole v. Glassford, 16 S. & R. 163 ... 443
Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. R. Co., 2 Woods, 506 972
Star S. Cas. Co. v. Crossman, 4 Cliff. 568 1018
Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 248 (Infra, 338) 899
State v. Blake, 35 N. J. L. 208; 36 N. J. L. 442 .....230, 231, 232
v. Browning, 62 Mo. 591 695
v. Cin. Gas Co., 18 Ohio St. 262 ... 520
v. Cunningham, 72 N. C. 469 308
v. F. & G. Creek Co., 2 J. S. Green, 301 230
v. Furbush, 72 Me. 493, 495 694
v. Green, 34 La. Ann. 1027 857
v. Harris, 17 Chic. Leg. News, 58. 183
v. Hartford, 50 Conn. 89 852
v. Hearst, 12 Mo. 365 215

U.

Carll, 105 U. S. 611 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1185)..... 569
v. Chicago, 7 How. 185, 194, 195 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 661, 664, 665)..... 849
v. Clark Co., 96 U. S. 211 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 628)..... 483
v. Comrs., 5 Wall. 563 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 692)..... 678
v. Cornell, 2 Mason, 60, 104....267, 758
v. Cross, 1 McArthur, 149..... 93
v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308; 92 U. S. 542 (Bk. 23, L ed. 588) 619, 620
v. Curry, 6 How. 111 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 365)..... 583
v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 593)..... 620
v. Distillery, 6 Biss. 483..... 758
v. Eliason, 16 Pet. 291 (41 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 968)..... 463
v. Field, 21 Blatchf. 330..... 62
v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 320 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 192, 193)..... 846
v. Freeman, 3 How. 556 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 724)..... 463
v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 482)..... 700
v. Gillis, 95 U. S. 407 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 502)..... 944
v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. 526 (39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 573).....57, 651
v. Great Falls Mfg. Co., 112 U. S. 645 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 846)..... 846
v. Guthrie, 17 How. 284 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 102)..... 678
v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 830)..... 700
v. Hill, 1 Brock. 156, 158.....92, 183
v. Howland, 4 Wheat. 108 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 526)..... 409
v. Hughes, 12 Blatchf. 553..... 753
v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 728)..... 93
v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 519 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1015, 1017).....266, 846
v. Jordan, 113 U. S. 418 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1013)..... 541
v. Lawton, 110 U. S. 146 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 100)..... 855
v. Lee, 106 U. S. 193 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 171).....190, 192, 195, 787, 811
v. McKee, 4 Dill. 128.....683, 687
v. Macon Co., 99 U. S. 582 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 331)..... 483
v. Mann, 1 Gall. 3, 177..... 93
v. Mason, 6 Biss. 350..... 753
v. Maurice, 2 Brock. 96, 105, 109 605, 846
v. Maxwell, 3 Dill. 275..... 93
v. Miller, 3 Hughes, 553..... 93
v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142 (32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 636, 637)..... 569
v. Mooney, 11 Fed. Rep. 476..... 551
v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760 (Bk. 24, L. 588)..... 700
10 Wheat. 246 (23 U. S. , L. ed. 314)..... 148
3 Dall. 121 (3 U. S. bk. ed. 535)..... 604
1 Fed. Rep. 58..... 93
99 U. S. 265 (Bk. 25, L. 522).....158, 54

T.

Thames Bk. v. Lovell, 18 Conn. 500..... 165
Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 467 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 949)..... 996
Thayer v. Life Asso., 112 U. S. 717 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 864, 865).....67, 329
The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 168)..... 409
Agincourt, 2 Prob. Div. 239..... 156
Amiable Nancy, 3 Wheat. 546 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 456)..... 733 Becherdass Ambaidass, 1 Low. 569 155
Belle, 1 Ben. 320..... 157
Cassino, 2 Dall. 365 (2 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 417)..... 551
Chusan, 2 Story, 455..... 409
C. H. Foster, 1 Fed. Rep. 733..... 318
Connemara, 103 U. S. 754 n. (Bk. 26, L. ed. 322) 379; 109 U. S. 352 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 751)..... 409
Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 565 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1002)..... 719
Dumfries, 1 Swab. 68..... 157
Elwine Kreplin, 9 Blatchf. 438; 4 Ben. 418..... 155
Evangelistria, 2 Prob. Div. 241 (note)..... 156
Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. 676 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 178)..... 432
Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381, 387 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1100)..409, 574, 586
Gaetano & Maria, 7 P. Div. 137, 147..... 95
Golubchick, 1 W. Rob. 143...155, 156
Griefswald, 1 Swab. 430.....156, 157
Hadji, 22 Blatchf. 235..... 879
Harriett, 1 W. Rob. 182, 192..... 409
Havana, 1 Spr. 402..... 155
Jerusalem, 2 Gall. 191..... 156
Jesse Williamson, Jr., 108 U. S. 309 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 781)..... 503
Johann Friederich, 1 W. Rob. 35 156, 157
Juliana, 2 Dod. 504, 521..... 409
Jupiter, 1 Ben. 536..... 156
Laura, 19 Blatchf. 562..... 147
Leon XIII, 6 Prob. Div. 148; 8 Prob. Div. 121.....155, 157
Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, 581 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 654, 664) 260, 409
Lucille, 19 Wall. 74 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 64)..... 318
Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall. 435, 457 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 772, 780)..... 157
Mamie, 105 U. S. 773 n. (Bk. 26, L. ed. 937)..... 379
Milan, Lush. 388..... 655
Monticello, 17 How. 152, 155 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 68)..... 878
Morning Star, 14 Fed. Rep. 866... 318
Nina, L. R. 2 Adm. & Ec. 44; L. R. 2 P. C. 38..... 155
Oder, 21 Blatchf. 26..... 318
Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, 14 (25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 531, 535)....687, 1015
Potomac v. Cannon, 105 U. S. 630, 634, 635 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1194. 1195)..... 878
Pawshick, 2 Low. 142..... 155
Russia, 3 Ben. 471..... 156
St. Lawrence, 1 Black, 522 (66 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 180)..... 409
Salem's Cargo, 1 Sprague, 389.... 408
San Pedro, 2 Wheat. 142 (15 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 202)..... 582
Sarah, 8 Wheat. 391 (21 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 644).....684, 891
Scotia, 14 Wall. 170, 184 (81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 822, 824). 157
Scotland, 105 U. S. 24, 29 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1001, 1003)..... 157
Sidney, 23 Fed. Rep. 88..... 880
Tremolo Patent, 23 Wall. 518, 527 (90 U. S. bk. 23, L. ed. 98)... 844
Two Friends, 1 C. Rob. 271, 278. 155
Virgin, 3 Pet. 538, 550 (33 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 1036, 1040)..... 409
Wild Ranger, Lush. 553..... 157
Zollverein, 1 Swab. 96..... 157
Third Nat. Bank v. Harrison, 3 McCrary, 162..... 552
Thomas v. Liebke, 9 Mo. App. 424; 81 Mo. 675.....745, 746
v. R. R. Co., 101 U. S. 71 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 950)..... 975
Thomas v. Robinson, 3 Wend. 267..... 537
Thompson v. Bowie, 4 Wall. 463 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 423)..... 104
v. Catharina, 1 Pet. Adm. 104.... 155
v. Lee Co., 3 Wall. 330 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 178).....635, 636
v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 815 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 616)..... 635
v. R. R. Co's., 6 Wall. 134 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 765)..... 992
v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 897).....537, 632
Thomson v. Pacific R. R. Co., 9 Wall. 579 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 792).... 854
v. Tracy, 60 N. Y. 31..... 604
v. Wooster, 114 U. S. 104 (Infra, 105)..... 179 Thorington v. Smith, 8 Wall. 1, 9, 12 (75 (U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 361, 363, 364).....193, 496, 497, 498
Thornton v. Wynn, 12 Wheat. 183 (25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 595)..... 398
Thowgood v. Bryan, 8 C. B. 114..655, 656, 657
Thorpe v. Mattingley, 1 Phil. Ch. 200... 892
Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 103)..... 260
v. Wilson, 6 Johns. Ch. 411..... 843
Tillson v. U. S., 100 U. S. 43 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 543)..... 573
Tintsman v. Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 6 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 530)..... 503
Tioga R. R. Co. v. B. & C. R. R. Co., 20 Wall. 150 (87 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 337)..... 487
Tol. R. R. Co. v. Conroy, 68 Ill. 560..... 760
Tomlinson v. Branch, 15 Wall. 460 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 189)..202, 835, 836
Tommey v. Ellis, 41 Ga. 260..... 993
Tomkins v. Clay St. R. R. Co., 4 West. Coast Rep. 537..... 657
Tom Tong, Ex parte, 108 U. S. 556 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 826)..... 459
Townsend v. Jemison, 7 How. 714 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 883); 9 How. 407 (50 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 194)..224, 486
v. Wells, 3 Day, 327..... 344
Township of Elmwood v. Marcy, 92 U. S. 289 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 710)..... 636
Tracey v. Irwin, 18 Wall. 549 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 786).....190, 787

T.

Tracy v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 80, 95 (35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 354, 359)..... 733
Trade Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 550).....198, 618
Traveler Co. v. Kelly, 26 Ohio St. 86, 91 656
Transportation Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 695, 701 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 584, 588, 588).....167, 201, 260
v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273, 279 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 413, 414)..... 854
Trask v. Payne, 43 Barb. 569..... 462
Trustees Patent, The, 23 Wall. 518, 527 (90 U. S. bk. 23, L. ed. 98).... 844
Troy v. Cook, 26 Wend. 143..... 843
True v. Evans, 97 U. S. 1 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 941)..... 879
Trustees v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1157)..... 946
v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667, 681 852, 853
Tuck v. Whitmarsh, 1 Met. 1..... 741 Turner v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 527, 573, 575 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 805, 815, 816).....771, 851
v. Seaman's Aid Society, 7 Met. 188..... 867
v. Spalding, 13 Wall. 453 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 515)..... 422
Tupper v. Wise, 110 U. S. 398 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 189)..... 879
Turner v. Leville, 4 Dall. 7 (4 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 717)..... 176
v. Smith, 11 Tex. 620..... 840
Turnbull v. Commonwealth, 7 Wall. 327 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 224.... 619
The Twenda, The, 1 C. Rob. 271, 278.... 155
Tyler v. Creditors, 9 Rob. (La.) 372..... 858
v. Pomeroy, 8 Allen, 480, 487–490 461

U.

Union Ins. Co. v. U. S., 6 Wall. 759, 765 (73 U.S. bk. 18, L. ed. 879)..684, 891
Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 336 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1101)... 614
v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 439)..... 923
v. U. S., 104 U. S. 662, 667 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 884, 885).....585, 931
Union Pac. R. R. Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 11 (Infra) 819..... 890
Union Trust Co. v. Souther, 107 U. S. 591 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 498)..... 973
U. S. In Petition of, 96 N. Y. 227..... 207
U. S. v. Addison, 22 How. 174 (63 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 304) 603
v. Ames, 1 Woodb. & M. 76, 85... 854
v. Bailey, 9 Pet. 273 (34 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 124)..... 773
v. 7 Barrels Oil, etc. 6 Blatchf. 174 683
v. 6 Barrels Spirits, 5 Blatchf. 542. 683
v. 300 Barrels Spirits, 5 Blatchf. 407 685
v. 200 Barrels Whiskey, 2 Woods, 34..... 683
v. Beach, 4 Hughes, 501..... 92
v. Beck, 4 Sawy. 211, 213..... 92
v. Bevan, 100 U. S. 508, 513 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 631, 633)..... 426
v. Brigg, 3 How. 208, 210 (46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 1070–1072).773, 774
v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 539)..... 569
v. Burns, 18 Wall. 125 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 812)..... 92
U. S. Carll, 105 U. S. 611 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1185)..... 569
v. Chicago, 7 How. 185, 194, 195 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 661, 664, 665)..... 842
v. Clark Co., 96 U. S. 211 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 628)..... 483
v. Comrs., 5 Wall. 563 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 692)..... 678
v. Cornell, 2 Mason, 60, 104....267, 758
v. Cross, 1 McArthur, 149..... 92
v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308; 92 U. S. 542 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 588) 619, 620
v. Curry, 6 How. 111 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 365)..... 582
v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 593)..... 620
v. Distillery, 6 Biss. 483..... 758
v. Eliason, 16 Pet. 291 (41 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 968)..... 462
v. Field, 21 Blatchf. 330..... 92
v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 320 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 192, 193)..... 846
v. Freeman, 3 How. 556 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 724)..... 462
v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 482)..... 700
v. Gillis, 95 U. S. 407 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 502)..... 944
v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. 526 (39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 573).....57, 651
v. Great Falls Mfg. Co., 112 U. S. 645 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 846)..... 846
v. Guthrie, 17 How. 284 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 102)..... 678
v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 830)..... 700
v. Hill, 1 Brock. 156, 158.....92, 183
v. Howland, 4 Wheat. 108 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 526)..... 409
v. Hughes, 12 Blatchf. 553..... 753
v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 728)..... 92
v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 519 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1015, 1017).....266, 846
v. Jordan, 113 U. S. 418 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1013)..... 541
v. Lawton, 110 U. S. 146 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 100)..... 855
v. Lee, 106 U. S. 193 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 171).....190, 192, 195, 787, 811
v. McKee, 4 Dill. 128.....683, 687
v. Macon Co., 99 U. S. 582 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 331)..... 483
v. Mann, 1 Gall. 3, 177..... 92
v. Mason, 6 Biss. 350..... 753
v. Maurice, 2 Brock. 96, 105, 109 605, 846
v. Maxwell, 3 Dill. 275..... 92
v. Miller, 3 Hughes, 553..... 92
v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142 (32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 636, 637)..... 569
v. Mooney, 11 Fed. Rep. 476..... 551
v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 588)..... 700
v. Morris, 10 Wheat. 246 (23 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 314)..... 148
v. Peters, 3 Dall. 121 (3 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 535)..... 604
v. Petit, 11 Fed. Rep. 58..... 92
v. Pugh, 99 U. S. 265 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 322) 158, 547

U.

R. R. Bridge Co., 6 McLean, 517, 531, 533 848
v. R. R. Co., 17 Wall. 322 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 597) 855
v. Repentigny, 5 Wall. 267, 268 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 645, 646) .. 448
v. Ross, 92 U. S. 281 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 707) 104, 435
v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 167) 603
v. Shepard, 1 Abb. U. S. 431 92
v. Simmons, 96 U. S. 360 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 819) 684
v. Sixty-seven Packages, 17 How. 85, 93 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 54, 57) 557
v. State Bank, 96 U. S. 33 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 647) 151, 152
v. 1 Still, etc., 5 Blatchf. 403 683
v. Taylor, 104 U. S. 216 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 721) 855
v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 93) 113
v. 2 Tons of Coal, etc., 5 Blatchf. 386 683
v. 8 Tons Coal, 6 Biss. 379 753
v. Turner, 11 How. 663, 668 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 856, 859) 537
v. Union Pac. R. R. Co., 98 U. S. 614 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 154) 387
v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 82 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 673, 679) 92, 112, 911
v. Waller, 1 Sawy. 701 92
v. Weise, 2 Wall. Jr. 72 854
v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 160 (32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 643) 149
v. Wynn, 3 McCrary, 266; 11 Fed. Rep. 57 92
v. Yates, 6 Fed. Rep. 861; 6 How. 608 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 576) 92, 630
v. Yates, 6 Fed. Rep. 861 92
U. S. Bank v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. 340, 343 (23 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 337) 816
U. S. Mortgage Co. v. Gross, 93 Ill. 483, 494 636
Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 459 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 409) 618
Utley v. Merrick, 11 Met. 302 91

V.

Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. 573 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 229) 832
Van Buren v. Digges, 11 How. 461, 477 (52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 771, 777) 408
Van Buskirk v. Mulock, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 184 537
Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 929) 113, 114
v. Campbell, 1 Black, 427 (64 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 168) 99, 422
Van Cott v. Supers. of Milwaukee Co., 18 Wis. 247 614
Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. 351 166
Van Duzer v. Howe, 21 N. Y. 531, 538 .. 818
Van Horne v. Fonda, 5 Johns. Ch. 388 .. 129
Van Norden v. Morton, 99 U. S. 378, 380 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 453, 454) 88
Van Rensselaer v. Jewett, 2 Const. (N. Y.) 135 224
Van Reynegan v. Bolton, 95 U. S. 36 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 352) 318

V.

Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 201) 167, 448
Ventress v. Smith, 10 Pet. 161 (35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 382) 244
Vicksburg v. Tobin, 100 U. S. 430 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 690) 167
Vicksburg, etc. R. R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665 (Infra, 770) 836, 1024
Villabolos v. U. S., 6 How. 90 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 356) 582
Vinton v. Hamilton, 104 U. S. 485 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 807) 60, 80, 211
Virgin, The, 8 Pet. 538, 550 (33 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 1036, 1040) 409
Virginia v. Ches. & O. Canal Co., 32 Md. 501 235
Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 403) 588, 626
Voorhees v. U. S. Bank, 10 Pet. 449 (35 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 490) 896
Voorhis v. Olmstead, 66 N. Y. 113, 118 819
Vowles v. Young, 13 Ves. 147 918

W.

Wabash, etc. R. Co. v. Hare, 11 Biss. 510 .. 236
Wabash, St. L. & P. R. R. v. Schacklet, 105 Ill. 364 656
Wagner v. Baird, 7 How. 234 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 681) 340
Wakely v. Hart, 6 Binn. 316 462
Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564, 570 (Infra, 277) 460, 461, 604
Walker v. Bank of Wash., 3 How. 62 (44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed.) 768
v. Byers, 14 Ark. 246 359
v. Maitland, 5 B. & Ald. 171, 174, 175 880
v. Robbins, 14 How. 584 (55 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 551) 1015
v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90 (Bk. 23, L. 678) 232
v. U. S., 4 Wall. 163 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 319) 379
Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. 481 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 930) 473, 474, 476
Wallace v. Loomis, 97 U. S. 146 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 895) 970, 971
Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446 (Infra, 691) 718, 790
Walsh v. U. S., 3 Woodb. & M. 341 92
Walston v. White, 5 Md. 297 867
Wambursee v. Kennedy, 4 Desaus. 474, 480 844
Ward v. Dewey, 16 N. Y. 519 88
v. Londesborough, 12 C. B. 252 434
v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 427, 430, 431 (79 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 449, 451, 453) 260, 694, 738, 854
v. Proctor, 7 Met. 318 858
Wardell v. R. R. Co., 103 U. S. 651 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 509) 829
Warnock v. Davis, 104 U. S. 775, 780 (bk. 26, L. ed. 924, 927) 999
Warren v. Stoddart, 105 U. S. 224 (bk. 26, L. ed. 1117) 409
Washburn v. Gould, 2 Story, 122, 142 1019
v. Phillips, 2 Met. 299 ..... 604, 605
Washington v. McCaughan, 34 Miss. 304 .. 376
Waterlow v. Bacon, L. R. 2 Eq. 514 993
Water Met. Co. v. Desper, 101 U. S. 332, 337 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 1024, 1026) 76, 663, 952
Waters v. Merch. Ins. Co., 11 Pet. 213, 222 (36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 691, 695) 879

W.

Vance v. Monarch Assur. Co., 5 El. & Bl. 870 879
Vaughn, Ex parte, 3 Pet. 193 (28 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 650); 7 Pet. 568 (32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 786) 90
Vaughn v. Holman, 16 Pet. 25 (41 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 874) 993
v. State, 2 Gill. & J. 220 215
Vance v. Poulson, 15 Jur. 1111 741
Vanman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 48 (23 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 252, 264) 94, 409
Vanner v. Thomson, 1 Wall. Jr. 343 318
Vasher v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 565) 694
Vasser v. Buffalo Ins. Co., 110 U. S. 388 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 173) 503
Vaskierbern v. Wedderburn, 4 Myl. & Cr. 52 340
Vaughn v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 41 Wis. 478 760
Veberg v. St. Oloff, 2 Pet. Adm. 428 155
Veen v. Davenport, 11 Iowa, 49 471
Venner v. Dennison, 10 N. Y. 68, 70..819, 820
Vetch v. Cook, 97 U. S. 541, 687 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1098, 1112) 681
v. Post, 99 Ill. 474 984
v. Thorn, 16 La. 188, 196 409
v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149 486
Veth v. Ger. Am. Bank, 73 N.Y. 424 819
Vetos v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 282 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 347, 350) 162, 260, 694, 738, 790
Vandebone v. Parks, 18 Ia. 546 561
Verney v. Pawling, 5 Gill & J. 500–508 537
Vetsent v. Garrison, 1 Halst. 132 230
Vetsera Union Tel. Co. v. Richmond, 26 Gratt. 1, 30 ..... 737, 852
Vet Hartford v. Water Comrs., 44 Conn. 360–368 852
Vetsen v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 467 (27 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 481, 487) 603, 847
Vet Riv. Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 531 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 535, 544) 521, 525
Vet Wis. R. Co. v. Supervisors, 93 U. S. 595, 597 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 814, 815) 771
Vetsuhus v. Potter, 99 Mass. 354 705
Veuir v. Schauman, 24 N. J. Eq. 60 843
Vieuir v. New Brunswick, etc. R. R. Co., 115 U. S. 29 (Infra, 341) 987
Vhipple v. Cumberland Mfg. Co., 2 Story, 661, 670 734
Vhisker v. Smith, 81 N. C. 340 307
Vhite, In, 9 Sawy. 49 604
Vhite v. Dunnn, 7 Ves. 30–34 843
v. Floyd, Speers, Eq. 351 843
v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 307 (Infra, 129) 732
v. Strother, 11 Ala. 720 918
v. Turk, 12 Pet. 238 (37 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 1069) 773
v. Wilson, 14 Ves. 151 843
Vhitney v. Kirtland, 27 N. J. Eq. (12 C. E. Green) 333 993
Vhytes v. Burkham, 10 Wall. 182 (77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 886) 810, 821
Vhytes Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 419) 790, 791
Vhum v. State, 21 Ark. 198, 201 183
Vhum v. Jackson, 12 Pet. 496 (38 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 364) 192

W,

Wild v. Bank, 3 Mason, 505 103
Wild Ranger, The, Lush. 553 157
Wiley v. Silliman, 62 Ill. 170 636
Willendson, v. The Forsoket, 1 Pet. Adm. 197 155
Williams v. Attenborough, Tur. & Russ. 75 843
v. Bruffy, 96 U. S. 176, 192 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 716, 720); 102 U. S. 248 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 135) 193, 199
v. Corwin, Hopk. Ch. 471 107
v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 560 615
v. First Pres. Soc., 1 Ohio St. 478 840
v. Hagood, 98 U. S. 72 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 51) 806, 809
v. Jones, 13 East, 439 486
v. Mech. & T. Fire Ins. Co., 54 N. Y. 577 579
v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 209, 211 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 719, 720) 116, 726
v. People's Fire Ins. Co., 57 N. Y. 274 579
Williamson v. Dale, 3 Johns. Ch. 290, 292 843
Wilmington & W. R. R. Co. v. King, 91 U. S. 3 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 186) 497, 498
Wilmington R. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 266 (80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 569) 522
Wiley v. Parmer, 14 Ala. 627 695
Wilmot v. Mudge, 103 U. S. 217 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 536) 745
Wilson, Ex parte, 114 U. S. 417, 423; (Infra, 89) 89, 94, 460, 910, 911
Wilson, Re, 18 Fed. Rep. 33 92
Wilson v. Barnum, 8 How. 258 (49 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 1070) 773
v. Boyce, 92 U. S. 320, 325 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 608, 610) 449, 1003
v. Daniel, 3 Dall. 401 (3 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 654) 732
v. Drumrite, 21 Mo. 325 1026
v. Fuller, 9 Kan. 176, 187 744
v. Gaines, 9 Baxt. 546 835
v. Gaines, 103 U. S. 417 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 401) 124, 835
v. Gray, 8 Watts, 25, 35 455
Winchester v. Jackson, 3 Cranch, 514 (7 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 516) 176
v. Loud, 108 U. S. 130 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 677) 329
v. Newton, 2 Allen, 492 371
Winchester & P. Mfg. Co. v. Creary, 116 U. S. 161 (Infra, 591) 743
Windsor v. McVeagh, 93 U. S. 274 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 914) 360
Winn v. Patterson, 9 Pet. 663 (34 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 266) 894
Winona & St. P. R. R. Co. v. Blake, 94 U. S. 155, 164, 180 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 94, 97, 99) 642, 643, 646
Winter v. Iowa, etc. R. R. Co., 2 Dill. 487 246
Wisconsin Cent. R. R. Co. v. Taylor Co., 52, Wis. 37, 51, 52 852
Wise v. Rogers, 24 Gratt. 169 ..... 188, 738
v. Withers, 3 Cr. 331 (7 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 457) 604
Wiswell v. First Cong. Church, 14 Ohio St. 31 769
Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 218 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 339, 342) 427, 851
Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 395) 191, 525, 626

W.

Wolfley v. Rising, 8 Kan. 297 744
Wolton v. Freese, 16 Q. B. 81 (note) 461
v. Gavin, 16 Q. B. 48, 81 461
Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 807) 352, 470
v. Kennedy, 19 Ind. 68 486
v. Welder, 42 Tex. 396 487
Woodle v. Whitney, 23 Wis. 55 398
Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 138 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 382, 386) 259, 260, 261, 718, 719, 790
v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 208 (51 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 388, 390) 190, 191 525
Woodsides v. State, 2 How. (Miss.) 655, 659 183
Woolf v. Hamilton, 108 U. S. 15 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 635) 54
Worcester Co. v. Worcester, 116 Mass. 193 ..... 852, 853
Worthington v. Jeffries, L. R. 10, C. P. 379, 380 608
Worley v. Dryden, 57 Mo. 226 1025
v. High, 40 Ala. 171 840
Wright v. Andrews, 130 Mass. 149 587

W.

Wright v. Court, 6 D. & R. 623; 4 B & C. 596 460
v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 794 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 921, 922) 515, 771
Wyllis v. Ault, 46 Ia. 46 561

Y.

Yarbrough, Ex parte, 110 U. S. 654 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 274) 90, 870
Yates v. Cole, 1 Jones, Eq. (N. C.) 110 .. 867
Yeaton v. Lenox, 7 Pet. 220 (32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 664) 582
Yerger, Ex parte, 8 Wall. 85 (75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 332) 460, 548
York Mfg. Co. v. Cent. R. R. Co., 3 Wall. 107 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 170) 878
Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253 818
v. Teague, 1 Bailey, Eq. 18, 14 843
Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406 615
Yulee v. Vose, 99 U. S. 545 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 356) 962

Z.

Ziegler's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 173 443
Zollverein The, 1 Swab. 96 157

ACTS, TREATIES AND PROCLAMATIONS.

1785, Nov. 28 (7 Stat. 18, Treaty with Cherokees) 881, 882
1786, May 31, Joint Res. Cong. (11 Journals of Congress, 81, Army Deserters) 462
1789, July 31, Ch. 5 (1 Stat. 43, Duties) .. 92
1789, Sept. 24, Ch. 20 (Stat. 73, 84, 90, Judiciary Act) ... 93, 115, 116, 391, 459, 460, 732,
1789, Sept. 24, Ch. 20, sec. 9 (1 Stat. 76, 78, Judiciary Act) 551, 552
1789, Sept. 24, Ch. 20, sec. 15 (1 Stat. 82, Judiciary Act) 751
1789, Sept. 29, Ch. 25 (1 Stat. 96, Articles of War, Desertion) 461
1790, April 30, Ch. 9 (1 Stat. 112-117, 119, Punishment of Crimes against U. S.) 92
1790, May 26, Ch. 11 (1 Stat. 122, Authentication of Records, and Judicial Proceedings of State Courts) 536, 632
1790, May 26, Ch. 12 (1 Stat. 122, Remission of Penalties) 148
1791, July 2 (7 Stat. 39, Treaty with Cherokees) 881
1792, Feb. 17 (7 Stat. 42, Treaty with Cherokees) 882
1792, May 8, Ch. 33 (1 Stat. 271, Militia) 617
1792, May 8, Ch. 35 (1 Stat. 275, Remission of Penalties) 148
1793, Feb. 12, Ch. 7 (1 Stat. 302, Fugitives from Justice) 252, 548, 549
1795, Feb. 28, Ch. 36 (1 Stat. 424, Militia) 617
1795, March 2, Ch. 40 (1 Stat. 426, Public Reservations) 267
1796, May 18, Ch. 29 (1 Stat. 464, Sale U. S. Lands) 315
1797, March 3, Ch. 13 (1 Stat. 506, Remission of Penalties) 148
1798, Oct. 2, (7 Stat. 62, Treaty with Cherokees) 882
1799, March 2, ch. 22, sec. 36 (1 Stat. 627, 655) Duties 556
1800, Feb. 11, ch. 6 (2 Stat. 7, Remission of Penalties) 148
1801, Feb. 27, ch. 15 (2 Stat. 103, District of Columbia) 1014, 1016
1802, March 16, ch. 9, (2 Stat. 136, Desertion) 461
1803, March 3, ch. 40, sec. 2 (2 Stat. 244, Appeals, Equity and Admiralty) 582
1804, March 26, ch. 38 (2 Stat. 283, Louisiana Territorial Gov't.) 849
1804, March 26, ch. 40 (2 Stat. 290, Punishment Against Crimes) 92
1805, Oct. 25, (7 Stat. 93, Treaty with Cherokees) 882
1806, April 10, ch. 20 (2 Stat. 362, Articles of War, Deserters) 461
1806, April 21, ch. 49 (2 Stat. 404, Punishment of Counterfeiting) ... 92
1808, Jan. 9, ch. 8 (2 Stat. 454, Embargo, Penalties and Forfeitures) 148
1808, April 25, ch. 66 (2 Stat. 502, Embargo-Forfeitures and Penalties) 148
1809, Jan. 9, ch. 5 (2 Stat. 510, Embargo, —Penalties and Forfeitures) .. 148
1809, March 1, ch. 24 (2 Stat. 532, Nonintercourse Act) 92
1811, Feb. 20, ch. 21 (2 Stat. 641, Admission of Louisiana) 849
1812, Jan. 11, ch. 14 (2 Stat. 673, Desertion) 461
1812, April 8, ch. 50 (2 Stat. 701, Admission of Louisiana) 849
1812, April 14, ch. 49 (2 Stat. 701, Embargo, Penalties and Forfeitures) 148
1812, June 13, ch. 99 (2 Stat. 748, Missouri Land Titles) 678
1813, Jan. 29, ch. 16 (2 Stat. 796, Desertion) 461
1813, Aug. 2, ch. 48 (3 Stat. 75, Sale of Public Land in Pittsburg) 851
1813, Dec. 17, ch. 1 (3 Stat. 92, Embargo, Penalties and Forfeitures) 148

ACTS, TREATIES AND PROCLAMATIONS.

[illegible] April 2, ch. 39 (3 Stat. 261, Appeal to U. S. Sup. Ct.) 459, 460
[illegible] April 24, ch. 69, sec. 9 (3 Stat. 298, Army Regulations) 605
[illegible] March 1, ch. 23 (3 Stat. 348, Admission of Mississippi) 849
[illegible] July 8, (7 Stat. 156, Treaty with Cherokees) 882, 883
[illegible] Feb. 27 (7 Stat. 195, Treaty with Cherokees) 882, 883
[illegible] March 2, ch. 47 (3 Stat. 489, Admission of Alabama) 849
[illegible] March 6, ch. 22 (3 Stat. 545, Admission of Missouri) 849
[illegible] May 1, ch. 52, sec. 7 (3 Stat. 568, Purchase of Land for U. S.) 846
[illegible] March 2, ch. 14 (3 Stat. 617, Duties, —Penalties and Forfeitures) .. 148
[illegible] March 1, ch. 21 (3 Stat. 739, Duties, —Penalties and Forfeitures) .. 148
[illegible] May 26, ch. 184 (4 Stat. 65, Missouri Land Titles) 678
[illegible] March 3, ch. 53 (4 Stat. 101, Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Co.) 233
[illegible] March 3, ch. 65 (4 Stat. 115, Punishment of Crimes Against U. S.) 92
[illegible] May 6, (7 Stat. 311, Treaty with Cherokees) 883
[illegible] May 29, ch. 183 (4 Stat. 418, Desertion) 461
[illegible] Feb. 14 (7 Stat. 414, Treaty with Cherokees) 883
[illegible] Dec. 29 (7 Stat. 478, Treaty with Cherokees) 881, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887
[illegible] June 15, ch. 100 (5 Stat. 50, Admission of Arkansas) 849
[illegible] July 4, ch. 257 (5 Stat. 119, Patents) 79
[illegible] Jan. 26, ch. 6 (5 Stat. 144, Admission of Michigan) 849
[illegible] Feb. 28, ch. 36, (5 Stat. 322, Punishments Abolished) 92
[illegible] Sept. 4, ch. 16 (5 Stat. 453, 455, Preemption Act, Public Lands) 312, 425
[illegible] Aug. 28, ch. 186 (5 Stat. 518, Admiralty Rules) 318
[illegible] Aug. 29, ch. 257 (5 Stat. 539, Appeals to U. S. Sup. Ct.) 460
[illegible] June 17, ch. 106 (5 Stat. 697, Deserters) 461
[illegible] March 3, ch. 48 (5 Stat. 742, Admission of Iowa) 849
[illegible] May 22, ch. 23 (9 Stat. 14, Value of Certain Coins) 834
[illegible] July 30, ch. 74 (9 Stat. 42, Duties) 982
[illegible] Aug. 4, ch. 88 (9 Stat. 52, Admission of Iowa) 849
[illegible] Aug. 6 (9 Stat. 871, Treaty with Cherokees) 885
[illegible] Act of March 3, ch. 53 (9 Stat. 178, Admission of Wisconsin) 849
[illegible] Sept. 9, ch. 49 (9 Stat. 446, Texas, Relinquishment of Claims) 404
[illegible] Sept. 20, ch. 61 (9 Stat. at L. 466, Right of Way and Grants of Land to Sundry States) 641
[illegible] Sept. 28, ch. 84 (9 Stat. 519, Swamp Land Act) 846
1851, March 3, ch. 21 (9 Stat. 598, Appropriation P. O. Dept.—Fines and Forfeitures) 148
1852, Aug. 4, ch. 80 (10 Stat. 28, Right of Way Through Public Lands) 849
1853, Feb. 9, ch. 59 (10 Stat. 155, Grant to Mo. and Ark. for Railroads) 447, 448, 449
1853, March 3, ch. 145 (10 Stat. 245, 246, 248, California Public Lands) 170, 171, 311, 314, 425, 593
1854, Aug. 3, ch. 201 (10 Stat. 346, Grants of Land to States and Territories) 594
1855, Feb. 24, ch. 122 (10 Stat. 612, 613, Court of Claims) 600
1855, March. 3, ch. 200 (10 Stat. 688, Right of Way Through Public Lands) 849
1856, June 3, ch. 41 (11 Stat. 17, Grant of Land to Ala. for Railroads) .. 598
1856, Aug. 18, ch. 130 (11 Stat. 95, Appropriation P. O. Dept.—Remission of Fines) 148
1857, Feb. 26, ch. 60 (11 Stat. 166, Admission of Minnesota) 849
1857, March 3, ch. 98 (11 Stat. 192, Duties) 982
1857, March 3, ch. 99 (11 Stat. 195, Grant of Land to Minn. for Railroads) 859
1858, May 11, ch. 31 (11 Stat. 285, Admission of Minnesota) 859
1859, Feb. 14, ch. 33 (11 Stat. 383, Admission of Oregon) 849
1859, March 3, ch. 82 (11 Stat. 430, Appropriations—Kansas Indians) 266
1861, Jan. 29, ch. 20 (12 Stat. 127, Admission of Kansas) 850
1861, March. 2, ch. 68 (12 Stat. 178, Duties) 982
1861, July 13, ch. 3 (12 Stat. 257, Duties —Remission of Penalties) 148
1861, July 22, ch. 9 (12 Stat. 268, Volunteers) 617
1861, July 24, ch. 10 (12 Stat. 271, Remission of Fines and Penalties) .. 148
1862, May 20, ch. 81 (12 Stat. 405, Duties —Penalties and Forfeitures) .. 148
1862, May 30, ch. 86 (12 Stat. 409, 410, California Public Lands) 425
1862, June 7, ch. 98, sec. 7 (12 Stat. 428, Collection of Taxes in Insurrectionary Districts) 845, 855
1862, July 1, ch. 119 (12 Stat. 484, Internal Revenue) 981
1862, July 1, ch. 120 (12 Stat. 489, 493, 497, Pacific Railroad) 320–322, 324, 325, 425, 479, 480, 921, 922, 923
1862, July 1, ch. 126 (12 Stat. 501, Utah —Polygamy) 56, 181, 562
1862, July 1 (12 Stat. 1266, Proc., States in Insurrection) 361, 364
1862, July 2, ch. 216 (12 Stat. 358, Pacific Railroad) 425
1862, July 14, ch. 163 (12 Stat. 548, Duties) 981, 982
1862, July 16, ch. 183 (12 Stat. 586, Navy, Officers) 675
1862, July 17, ch. 200 (12 Stat. 596, Pay of Army Officers) 254

ACTS, TREATIES AND PROCLAMATIONS.

1863, March 3, ch. 75, secs. 24, 26 (12 Stat. 735, Deserters, Drafting Soldiers) 461, 462
1863, March 3, ch. 76 (12 Stat. 737, Revenue Frauds, Remission of Fines).....148, 748, 751, 752
1863, March 3, ch. 92 (12 Stat. 766, 767, Court of Claims, Appeals).... 573
1863, March 3, ch. 117 (12 Stat. 808, Idaho Territory)..... 542
1863, March 10 (13 Stat. 775, Proc. to Absent Soldiers)..... 462
1863, March 12, ch. 120 (12 Stat. 820, Abandoned and Captured Property).....361, 364, 365, 366, 609, 610
1863, July 1 (12 Stat. 1266, Proc., States in Insurrection).....361, 364, 365
1863, Dec. 8 (13 Stat. 737, Amnesty)..365, 366
1864, March 21, ch. 35 (13 Stat. 30, Admission of Nevada)..... 849
1864, April 19, ch. 59 (13 Stat. 47, Admission of Nebraska)..... 849
1864, May 12, ch. 84 (13 Stat. 72, Grant of Lands to Iowa for Railroads) 928
1864, June 27, ch. 164 (13 Stat. 198, Smuggling—Remission of Fines)... 148
1864, June 30, ch. 171 (13 Stat. 210, 214, 216, 217, Duties)..453, 454, 492, 493, 708
1864, July 1, ch. 194 (13 Stat. 334, California Land Titles)....313, 314, 315
1864, July 2, ch. 216 (13 Stat. 356, 362, Pacific Railroad).....320, 321, 324, 921, 923
1864, July 2, ch. 217 (13 Stat. 365, 372, Pacific Railroad).....479, 480
1864, July 2, ch. 225 (13 Stat. 375, Abandoned and Captured Property) 365, 609
1864, July 4, ch. 253 (13 Stat. 394, Quartermaster's Dept.)..... 254
1865, March 3, ch. 79 (13 Stat. 490, Desertion)..... 461
1865, March 3, ch. 80 (13 Stat. 491, 493, Duties) 556, 707, 708
1865, March 3, ch. 81 (13 Stat. 497, Appropriation for Army)..... 254
1865, March 3, ch. 105 (13 Stat. 526, Railroad Land Grants to Minnesota) 859, 860
1866, April 9, ch. 31 (14 Stat. 27, Civil Rights Act).....203, 504
1866, July 13, ch. 176 (14 Stat. 92, Appropriation for Army)..... 254
1866, July 13, ch. 181 (14 Stat. 94, Appropriation for Army)..... 254
1866, July 13, ch. 184 (14 Stat. 152, 169, Internal Revenue Taxes) 148, 493
1866, July 19 (14 Stat. 799, 805, Treaty with Cherokees) 884, 886
1866, July 23, ch. 212 (14 Stat. 210, Kansas Lands)..... 167
1866, July 23, ch. 219 (14 Stat. 218, 220, California Land Titles)..... 171, 312, 313, 314, 316, 595
1866, July 25, ch. 246 (14 Stat. 244, Bridges, Post Roads).....922, 923
1866, July 26, ch. 262 (14 Stat. 251, 253, Right of Way to Ditch and Canal Owners Over Public Lands) 425, 426, 427, 849
1866, July 28, ch. 298, sec. 9 (14 Stat. 330, Duties).....556, 708
1866, July 28, ch. 300 (14 Stat. 338, Grant to Mo. & Ark. for Railroads. 447, 448, 449
1867, Feb. 5, ch. 28 (14 Stat. 385, Habeas Corpus) 460, 872
1867, Feb. 5, ch. 29 (14 Stat. 387, Baltimore & Potomac R. R. Co.). 219, 220
1867, Feb. 9, ch. 36 (14 Stat. 391, Admission of Nebraska)..... 849
1867, March 2, ch. 176 (14 Stat. 517, 518, Bankruptcy)...86, 89, 143, 858, 944
1867, March 2, ch. 188 (14 Stat. 547, Duties).....747, 748, 751, 752, 753
1867, March 2, ch. 197 (14 Stat. 559, Duties)..... 555
1868, Feb. 25, ch. 13 (15 Stat. 37, Protection of Persons making Disclosures as Parties, etc.)..751, 752, 753
1868, March 27, ch. 34 (15 Stat. 44, Appeals to U. S. Sup. Ct.)..... 460
1868, July 3 (15 Stat. 673, Treaty with Shoshonees, etc.)..... 542
1868, July 4 (15 Stat. 679, Mexico Treaty) 272
1868, July 20, ch. 186 (15 Stat. 157, Internal Revenue)..... 989
1868, July 27, ch. 255 (15 Stat. 227, Jurisdiction Cir. Cts., Removal of Causes).....320, 327
1868, July 27, ch. 273 (15 Stat. 241, Alaska—Customs, Commerce, Remission of Fines).....92, 148
1868, July 27, ch. 276 (15 Stat. 243, Abandoned and Captured Property).....361, 364, 365, 366
1869, April, 10, ch. 24 (16 Stat. 45, Grant of Land to Ala. for Railroads) 598
1869, March 18, ch. 2 (16 Stat. 1, Baltimore & Potomac R. R. Co).. 219
1870, March 25, ch. 32 (16 Stat. 78, Baltimore & Potomac R. R. Co).. 219
1870, May 31 ch. 114 (16 Stat. 142, 144, Civil Rights Act).....90, 504
1870, June 17, ch. 133, sec. 1 (16 Stat. 153, Police Court of D. C., Jurisdiction)..... 912
1870, June 21, ch. 142 (16 Stat. 161, Baltimore & Potomac R. R. Co)... 219
1870, July 1, ch. 185 (16 Stat. 179, Commerce—Remission of Fines).. 148
1870, July 8, ch. 230 (16 Stat. 201, Patents and Copyrights).....79, 211
1870, July 9, ch. 235 (16 Stat. 217, Public Domain—Mineral Lands).... 426
1870, July 15, ch. 292 (16 Stat. 305, Public Lands)..... 479
1871, Feb. 24, ch. 67 (16 Stat. 430, Union Pac. Railway Bridge).....922, 923
1871, Feb. 28, ch. 100 (16 Stat. 440–454, Steamship Passenger Law)... 147
1871, March 3, ch. 116, sec. 2 (16 Stat. 524, Army Appropriations, Commissioners of Claims)..... 541
1871, March 3, ch. 122 (16 Stat. 573, Texas & Pacific Railroad).....322, 324
1871, March 3, ch. 137 (16 Stat. 585, Baltimore & Potomac R. R. Co).. 220
1871, April 20, ch. 22 (17 Stat. 13, Civil Rights Act).....203, 504

ACTS, TREATIES AND PROCLAMATIONS: OPINIONS ATTYS-GEN.

[illegible], May 8 (17 Stat. at L. 868, Treaty of Washington) 609
[illegible], May 10, ch. 152 (17 Stat. 91, 92, 93, Mining) 275, 772, 773
[illegible], May 21, ch. 189 (17 Stat. 140, Baltimore & Potomac R. R. Co.) 220
[illegible], June 1, ch. 255 (17 Stat. 196, 197, Proceedings in U. S. Courts) 228, 772, 891
[illegible], June 6, ch. 315 (17 Stat. 230, Duties) 585, 989
[illegible], June 8, ch. 335 (17 Stat. 325, P. O. Dept.—Penalties) 148
[illegible], June 8, ch. 337, sec. 4 (17 Stat. 331, Redemption of Lands) 845, 855
[illegible], May 2, ch. 132 (17 Stat. 59, Texas Pacific Railroad) 322, 324
[illegible], May 10, ch. 152 (17 Stat. 91, Mineral Lands) 426, 427, 914, 915,
[illegible], June 6, ch. 315 (17 Stat. 230, Duties) 982
[illegible], Feb. 18, ch. 159 (17 Stat. 465, Public Domain; Mineral Lands) 426
[illegible], Sept. 24, Treaty of Washington 608
[illegible], Feb. 24, ch. [illegible] (18 Stat. 531, Relief of McClure) 572
[illegible], April 7, ch. 80 (18 Stat. 27, Territorial Courts) 54
[illegible], June 18, ch. 298 (18 Stat. 78, Pensions) 586
[illegible], June 20, ch. 337 (18 Stat. 116, Gort. of Dist. of Col.) 701
[illegible], June 22, ch. 391 (18 Stat. 187, 189, 190, 191, Duties, Revenue Laws, Remission of Fines) 148, 709, 710, 711, 746, 747, 751–754
[illegible], June 22, ch. 392, sec. 3 (18 Stat. 191, Navy, Cadets, etc.) 674, 698
[illegible], June 23, ch. 469 (18 Stat. 254, Utah—Courts, Judicial Officers) 180, 182, 183
[illegible], Feb. [illegible], ch. 36, sec. 26 (18 Stat. 313, Time for redeeming from Direct Tax Land Sales) 845, 855
[illegible], Feb. 16, ch. 77 (18 Stat. 315, U. S. Cir. Cts. Practice) 409
[illegible], Feb. 18, ch. 80 (18 Stat. 318, Ct. of Claims, U. S. Revised Statutes) 609, 610
[illegible], March 3, ch. 137 (18 Stat. 470, 471, 472, 501, 506, Jurisdiction U. S. Circuit Courts, Removal of Causes) [illegible], 64, 66, 115, 116, 120, 204, 228, [illegible], 264, 320–323, 325, 327, 329, 332, [illegible], 389, 391, 459, 460, 506, 551, 552, 611, 679, 680, 725, 732, 784, 837, 889, 897–899, 904, 924, 963, 1006
[illegible], March 3, ch. 139 (18 Stat. 474, Admission of Colorado) 849
[illegible], March 3, Ch. 162 (18 Stat. at L. 501, District of Columbia, Taxes) 680
[illegible], March 3, ch. 205 (18 Stat. 637, 646, Private Claims) 541
[illegible], May 3, ch. 91 (19 Stat. 52, Mineral Lands) 426
1876, July 12, ch. 180 (19 Stat. 83, District of Columbia, Taxes) 680, 681
1876, July 24, ch. 226 (19 Stat. 98, Deserters) 462
1876, Aug. 14, ch. 279 (19 Stat. 490, Court of Claims, Equity Jurisdiction) 573
1877, Feb. 27, ch. 69 (19 Stat. 247, 253, Revised Statutes—Correction of mistakes, etc.) 495, 603
1877, March 1, ch. 81, secs. 2, 3 (19 Stat. 267, Indemnity School Selections, California) 315, 594, 595
1877, March 3, ch. 111 (19 Stat. 390, Cadet Midshipmen) 699
1877, March 3, ch. 117 (19 Stat. 396, District of Columbia, Taxes) 680, 681
1877, Nov. 21, ch. 1 (20 Stat. 2, Deserters) 462
1878, June 11, ch. 181 (20 Stat. 108, Military Academy) 699, 700
1878, June 18, ch. 262 (20 Stat. 144, Mexico Awards) 273
1878, June 20, ch. 362, sec. 2 (20 Stat. 241, 242, Utica & Northern Railway) 542
1879, March 1, ch. 125 (20 Stat. 327, 329, Internal Revenue) 665, 666
1879, March 3, ch. 290 (20 Stat. 665, Pension of Burnett) 586, 587
1800, April 23, ch. 33 (2 Stat. 49, Gov't of Navy) 606
1880, June 16, ch. 236 (21 Stat. 281, Pensions) 586
1880, June 16, ch. 243 (21 Stat. 284, Claims against Dist. of Col.) 701
1882, March 22, ch. 47, sec. 3 (22 Stat. 30, 31, Bigamy) 54–58, 180–183, 562, 563, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570
1882, July 3, ch. 268 (22 Stat. 148) 543
1882, July 25, ch. 349 (22 Stat. 176, Pensions) 586
1882, Aug. 5, ch. 391 (22 Stat. 284, Naval Appropriations) 698, 699, 700
1882, Aug. 8, ch. 468 (22 Stat. 372, Export Tax on Tobacco Repealed) 989
1883, March 3, ch. 97 (22 Stat. 472, Naval Appropriations) 699
1883, March 3, ch. 121 (22 Stat. 489, 493, 523, Duties) 489, 491, 706, 707, 709, 710, 711, 982
1883, March 3, 141 ch. (22 Stat. 581, 582, Cherokee Indians, Court of Claims) 881
1883, Nov. 2, Dept. Proc. (29 Int. Rev. Rec. 410, Duty, Seeds) 489
1884, July 5, ch. 225 (23 Stat. 122, Prosecution for Offenses under Internal Revenue Laws) 911
1885, March 3, ch. 353 (23 Stat. 437, Appeal to U. S. Sup. Court, Habeas Corpus) 869
1885, March 3, ch. 355 (23 Stat. 443, Dist. of Col. Sup. Ct., Appeals) 602

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEYS-GENERAL.

[illegible] Ops. Attys-Gen., 187, Taxing U. S. Property in Louisiana 849
[illegible] Ops. Attys-Gen., 435–437, Claim of Cherokees, etc. 886
5 Ops. Attys-Gen., 316, Taxation of Lands, etc. 854
6 Ops. Attys-Gen., 577, Exterritoriality of Mil. Sites 269

10 Ops. Attys-Gen., 84, N. Y. Post Office Site 269
14 Ops. Attys-Gen., 83, Ft. Leav. Military Reservation..... 265
16 Ops. Attys-Gen., 592..... 269

UNITED STATES REVISED STATUTES.

Rev. Stat. sec. 178, p. 27..... 605
Rev. Stat. secs. 415, 419, 420, 421, 425, pp. 69, 70 605
Rev. Stat. secs. 437, 475, 476, pp. 78, 79, 120
Rev. Stat. sec. 563, p. 94..... 203
Rev. Stat. sec. 563, subd. 1, p. 94..... 683
Rev. Stat. sec. 629, p. 109 .....203, 204
Rev. Stat. sec. 629, p. 109..... 552
Rev. Stat. sec. 629, pp. 109, 110, 111, subds. 4, 5, 7, 15.....551, 688
Rev. Stat. sec. 639, p. 113.....228, 897
Rev. Stat. sec. 640, p. 114...320, 321, 322, 327
Rev. Stat. sec. 649, p. 117..... 722
Rev. Stat. sec. 673, p. —— 221
Rev. Stat. sec. 691, p. 128..... 602
Rev. Stat. sec. 692, p. 128..... 602
Rev. Stat. sec. 699, p. 130..... 504
Rev. Stat. sec. 700, p. 132..... 722
Rev. Stat. sec. 705, p. 132..... 602
Rev. Stat. sec. 709, p. 132.....118, 246, 336
Rev. Stat. sec. 708, p. 132..... 573
Rev. Stat. sec. 711, par. 5, p. 135..... 552
Rev. Stat. sec. 720, p. 136.....87, 88, 413
Rev. Stat. sec. 721, p. 136 .....196, 197
Rev. Stat. sec. 724, p. 137..... 751
Rev. Stat. sec. 736, p. 139..... 121
Rev. Stat. secs. 737, 738, p. 139..... 121
Rev. Stat. sec. 739, p. 139...120, 262, 263, 264
Rev. Stat. sec. 751, p. 141..... 869
Rev. Stat. secs. 751–766, pp. 141, 143... 870
Rev. Stat. sec. 752, p. 142..... 869
Rev. Stat. sec. 753, p. 142 .....869, 870
Rev. Stat. secs. 754–758, p. 142..... 280
Rev. Stat. secs. 754, 755, 761, 763, 764, pp. 142, 143 869
Rev. Stat. secs. 763, 765, p. 143..... 548
Rev. Stat. sec. 764, p. 143..... 869
Rev. Stat. sec. 828, p. 154..... 676
Rev. Stat. sec. 847, p. 159..... 676
Rev. Stat. sec. 858..... 945
Rev. Stat. sec. 860, p. 162 751
Rev. Stat. sec. 866, p. 163..... 345
Rev. Stat. sec. 905, p. 170 .....536, 632
Rev. Stat. secs. 913, 914, p. 173..... 409
Rev. Stat. sec. 914, p. 173.....196, 197, 891
Rev. Stat. sec. 916, p. 174..... 228
Rev. Stat. sec. 933, p. 176..... 856
Rev. Stat. sec. 949, p. 179..... 725
Rev. Stat. sec. 956, p. 180..... 392
Rev. Stat. sec. 997, p. 186..... 393
Rev. Stat. sec. 1001, p. 187..... 221
Rev. Stat. sec. 1012, p. 188..... 392
Rev. Stat. sec. 1022, p. 190..... 911
Rev. Stat. sec. 1028, p. 190..... 90
Rev. Stat. sec. 1044, p. 193..... 57
Rev. Stat. secs. 1044–1046, p. 193..... 911
Rev. Stat. sec. 1059, p. 195.....365, 609, 610
Rev. Stat. sec. 1059, cl. 3, p. 195 573
Rev. Stat. sec. 1062, p. 196..... 573
Rev. Stat. sec. 1066, p. 197..... 273
Rev. Stat. sec. 1069, p. 197 .....609, 610
Rev. Stat. sec. 1229, p. 215 .....700, 701
Rev. Stat. sec. 1343, arts. 47, 48, p. 233.. 461
Rev. Stat. secs. 1392, 1394, p. 247..... 698
Rev. Stat. sec. 1520, p. 260..... 698
Rev. Stat. sec. 1521, p. 260..... 699
Rev. Stat. secs. 1471, 1472, 1473, p. 255.. 605
Rev. Stat. secs. 1522, 1523, 1524, p. 260.. 698
Rev. Stat. sec. 1525, p. 260.....698, 701
Rev. Stat. sec. 1547, p. 263..... 605
Rev. Stat. sec. 1556, p. 264..603, 698, 699, 700
Rev. Stat. sec. 1565, p. 268..... 602
Rev. Stat. sec. 1624, p. 275..... 603
Rev. Stat. sec. 1624 (ch. 10, tit. 15), p. 275 605
Rev. Stat. sec. 1624 (art. 8), p. 276..... 605
Rev. Stat. secs. 1868, 1874, p. 331 183
Rev. Stat. sec. 1909, p. 337..... 460
Rev. Stat. sec. 1979, p. 348 .....203, 204
Rev. Stat. secs. 1996, 1998, p. 351..... 461
Rev. Stat. secs. 2258, 2302, pp. 417, 424.. 426
Rev. Stat. sec. 2318, p. 427..... 426
Rev. Stat. secs. 2318, 2336, pp. 427–431.. 776
Rev. Stat. sec. 2319. p. 427..... 427
Rev. Stat. sec. 2320, p. 427..... 348
Rev. Stat. sec. 2321, p. 427..... 670
Rev. Stat. sec. 2322, p. 427.....348, 713
Rev. Stat. sec. 2324, p. 428 .....349, 914
Rev. Stat. sec. 2325, p. 428.....348, 349, 669
Rev. Stat. secs. 2325, 2326, pp. 428, 429.. 275
Rev. Stat. sec. 2326, p. 429.....348, 349, 914
Rev. Stat. sec. 2333, p. 430..... 778
Rev. Stat. secs. 2345, 2386, 2392, pp. 432, 439, 440 426
Rev. Stat. sec. 2449, p. 451..... 594
Rev. Stat. secs. 2491–2516 tit. 33, p. 460–495 .....489, 550
Rev. Stat. sec. 2477, p. 456..... 849
Rev. Stat. sec. 2504 (sched. E.), p. 467... 72
Rev. Stat. sec. 2504 (sched. M.), p. 476... 49
Rev. Stat. sec. 2504, tit. 33 (sched. M.), p. 480 48
Rev. Stat. sec. 2505, Free List, p. 483, 2d ed..... 49
Rev. Stat. sec. 2505, p. 488..... 48
Rev. Stat. sec. 2792, p. 544..... 16
Rev. Stat. sec. 2838, p. 551..... 33
Rev. Stat. sec. 2841, p. 552..... 71
Rev. Stat. sec. 2858, p. 556..... 14
Rev. Stat. sec. 2900, p. 565 .....708, 71
Rev. Stat. sec. 2906, p. 566..708, 709, 710, 71
Rev. Stat. sec. 2907, p. 566..708, 709, 710, 71
Rev. Stat. sec. 2908, p. 567 .....709, 710, 71
Rev. Stat. sec. 2930, p. 570..... 71
Rev. Stat. sec. 2931, p. 570..492, 493, 711, 72
Rev. Stat. sec. 3001, p. 581..... 14
Rev. Stat. sec. 3011, p. 583 .....492, 49
Rev. Stat. sec. 3078, p. 594..... 14
Rev. Stat. secs. 3091, 3092, 3093, pp. 596, 597..... 74
Rev. Stat. sec. 3115, p. 601..... 14
Rev. Stat. sec. 3213, tit. 35, p. 620..... 68
Rev. Stat. sec. 3220, p. 621..... 14
Rev. Stat. secs. 3220, 3228, pp. 621, 623.. 65
Rev. Stat. sec. 3256, p. 631 .....685, 68
Rev. Stat. sec. 3257, p. 631..... 682, 683, 684, 686, 68
Rev. Stat. sec. 3281, p. 638..... 68
Rev. Stat. sec. 3296, p. 641 .....682, 68
Rev. Stat. sec. 3324, p. 6494 .....665, 66
Rev. Stat. sec. 3326, p. 622..... 68
Rev. Stat. sec. 3385, p. 666..... 96
Rev. Stat. sec. 3412, p. 674..... 14

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Rev. Stat. sec. 3419, p. 678 981
Rev. Stat. sec. 3450, p. 686 ..682, 683, 685, 686
Rev. Stat. sec. 3452, p. 686 ..682, 683, 685, 686
Rev. Stat. sec. 3453, p. 687 .....683, 685, 686
Rev. Stat. sec. 3461, p. 689 148
Rev. Stat. sec. 3477, p. 693 943
Rev. Stat. sec. 3564, p. 707 334
Rev. Stat. sec. 3701, p. 736 832
Rev. Stat. sec. 3736, p. 742 846
Rev. Stat. sec. 3737, p. 742 943
Rev. Stat. sec. 4233, p. 820 166
Rev. Stat. sec. 4370, p. 850 166
Rev. Stat. sec. 4399, p. 857 147
Rev. Stat. sec. 4400, p. 857 147
Rev. Stat. sec. 4456, p. 868 166
Rev. Stat. sec. 4453, p. 866 319
Rev. Stat. secs. 4464, 4465, 4499, pp. 869, 870, 875 147
Rev. Stat. sec. 4692, p. 920 586
Rev. Stat. secs. 4694, 4695, pp. 920, 921 .. 587
Rev. Stat. sec. 4702, p. 923 587
Rev. Stat. sec. 4888, p. 954 211
Rev. Stat. sec. 4915, p. 958 .....119, 120
Rev. Stat. secs. 4917, 4922, pp. 959, 960 .. 960
Rev. Stat. sec. 4919, p. 960 .....178, 960
Rev. Stat. sec. 4921, p. 960 .....178, 960
Rev. Stat. sec. 4933, p. 962 178
Rev. Stat. sec. 4979, p. 970 .....87, 88, 418
Rev. Stat. sec. 5034, p. 977 .....88, 418
Rev. Stat. sec. 5036, p. 977 87
Rev. Stat. sec. 5044, p. 980 87
Rev. Stat. sec. 5047, p. 981 88
Rev. Stat. sec. 5057, p. 982 ..... 143, 413, 469, 595, 944
Rev. Stat. sec. 5062, p. 983 471
Rev. Stat. sec. 5067, p. 983 176
Rev. Stat. secs. 5067–5072, pp. 983, 984 .. 250
Rev. Stat. sec. 5070, p. 984 745
Rev. Stat. sec. 5073, p. 984 .....175, 176
Rev. Stat. sec. 5075, p. 984 1006
Rev. Stat. sec. 5117, p. 993 248
Rev. Stat. sec. 5117–5119, p. 993 250
Rev. Stat. sec. 5119, p. 983 .....250, 1006
Rev. Stat. sec. 5121, p. 994 87
Rev. Stat. sec. 5219, p. 1015 832
Rev. Stat. sec. 5260, p. 1023 585
Rev. Stat. sec. 5261, p. 1023 585
Rev. Stat. sec. 5278, p. 1027 .....252, 548
Rev. Stat. sec. 5279, p. 1028 .....252, 548
Rev. Stat. sec. 5292, p. 1032 148
Rev. Stat. sec. 5294, p. 1032 148
Rev. Stat. sec. 5352, p. 1044 ..... 55, 180, 181, 502, 565
Rev. Stat. sec. 5403, p. 1052 909
Rev. Stat. secs. 5430, 5431, p. 1058 .....89, 90
Rev. Stat. sec. 5455, p. 1063 461
Rev. Stat. secs. 5506–5532, pp. 1073–1078 911
Rev. Stat. secs. 5511, 5512, p. 1074 909
Rev. Stat. sec. 5539, p. 1079 911
Rev. Stat. sec. 5541, p. 1079 .....90, 911
Rev. Stat. sec. 5542, p. 1080 .....93, 911
Rev. Stat. sec. 5546, p. 1080 90
Rev. Stat. secs. 5595, 5596 p. 1091 463
Rev. Stat. sec. 5596, p. 1091 426

STATE CONSTITUTIONS.

Const. of Ala. 1865, art. 1, sec. 25 140
1867, art. 1, sec. 25 140
1875, art. 1, sec. 24 140
Ark. art. 17, secs. 3, 5, 6 ...800, 801
Const. of Ill. 1870, art. 9, sec. 12 133
Mo. art. 12, secs. 14, 23 800
Ohio, art. 12, sec. 2 243
W. Va. 1863, art. 11, sec. 5 125

UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.

Art. 1, sec. 2 252
sec. 8 .....79, 266, 617, 618
sec. 8, cl. 1 847
sec. 8, cl. 3 .....258, 698, 696
sec. 9, cl. 3 617
sec. 10 ..... 72, 199, 204, 617, 618, 809, 868, 869
sec. 10, cl. 2 258
Art. 2, sec. 2 .....265, 700, 720, 732, 738
Art. 4, sec. 1 526
Art. 4, sec. 2, cl. 1 258
4, sec. 2, cl. 2 548
Amendment, 4th 748–750, 752, 754
5th 90–93, 748–750, 752, 754
7th 92
11th 207, 209
13th 93
14th 232, 417, 418, 465, 466, 468, 617

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

IN OCTOBER TERM, 1884.

Vol. 114.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1884,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOL. 114

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 114 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
2	Thompson Tr. v. Boisselier, McNab & H. Mfg. Co., v. Thompson Tr.
	Eaton v. Same,	76
	" "	77
	" "	78
	" "	79
	" "	80
	" "	81
	Murphy v. Ramsey,
	Pratt v. Ramsey,
	Randall v. Ramsey,
	Chavass v. Ramsey,
	Barlow v. Ramsey,	47
	" "	48
	" "	49
	" "	50
	" "	51
	" "	52
	" "	53
	" "	54
	" "	55
	" "	56
	" "	57
	" "	58
	Bobell v. Dills,	61
	" "	62
	" "	63
	Louisville & N. R. R. Co. v. Ide,	63
	" " " "	64
	" " " "	65
	Putnam v. Ingraham,	65
	" " "	66
	St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilson,	66
	" " "	67
	Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co.,	67
	" " " "	68
	" " " "	69
	" " " "	70
	" " " "	71
	" " " "	72
	" " " "	73

Off. Rep. 114 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
79-82	Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co.,	74
82-85	" " " "	75
85-86	" " " "	76
87-90	Electric R. R. Signal Co. v. Hall R. Signal Co.,	96
90-93	" " " "	97
93-96	" " " "	98
96-99	" " " "	99
99-102	" " " "	100
102-103	" " " "	101
104	Thomson v. Wooster,	105
104-107	" "	106
107-112	" " "	107
112-115	" " "	108
115-118	" " "	109
118-120	" " "	110
120-122	Hayes v. Holly Springs,	81
122-125	" " "	82
125-127	" " "	83
127-128	Mower v. Fletcher,	117
128-130	Butterworth Comr. v. Hill,	119
130-133	" " " "	120
133	" " " "	121
133-136	Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard,	118
136-137	" " " "	119
138	Farmington v. Pillsbury,	114
138-142	" "	115
142-145	" " "	116
145-146	" "	117
147	Ex parte Hughes,	134
147-149	" " "	135
149-150	Stephenson v. Brooklyn Crosstown R. R. Co.,	58
150-153	" " " "	59
153-156	" " " "	60
156-158	" " " "	61
158	Chapman v. Brewer, Assignee,	83
159	" " "	84
159-162	" " "	85
163-167	" " "	86
167-170	" " "	87
170-173	" "	88
173	" " "	89

Off. Rep. 114 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
174	Ex parte Morgan,	185
174–176	" " "	186
176–178	Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Miller, Auditor,	121
178–181	" " " "	122
181–184	" " " "	123
184–187	" " " "	124
187–189	" " " "	125
190	Litchfield v. Ballou,	183
190–193	" " "	183
193–196	" " "	134
196	Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania,	158
197	" " " "	159
197–198	" " " "	160
202–203	" " " "	161
203–205	" " " "	162
206–208	" " " "	163
208–211	" " " "	164
211–214	" " " "	165
214–217	" " " "	166
217–218	" " " "	167
218–220	Lamar v. Micou, Admrx.,	94
220–223	" " "	95
223	" " "	96
224–225	Xenia Bank v. Stewart et al., Admrx.,	101
225–227	" " "	102
228–231	" " "	103
231–233	" " "	104
233	United States v. Minor,	110
234–236	" " "	111
236–240	" " "	112
240–242	" " "	113
242–244	" " "	114
244–245	Weaver v. Field,	143
245–247	" " " "	144
247–250	Doe v. Hyde, Assignee,	142
250–252	" " "	143
252–255	Bissell v. Foss,	126
255–257	" " "	127
257–259	" " "	128
259–262	" " "	129
262–264	Bradstreet Company v. Higgins,	176
264	" " "	177
265	Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. State Sav. Asso.,	174
265–268	" " " " "	175
268–269	" " " " "	176
270	Virginia Coupon Cases: Poindexter v. Greenhow,	185
273	" "	186
273–276	" "	187
276–278	" "	188
278–281	" "	189
281–284	" "	190
284–287	" "	191
287–290	" "	192
290–293	" "	193
293–296	" "	194
296–299	" "	195
299–302	" "	196
302–305	" "	197
305–306	" "	198
307–308	White v. Greenhow,	199
308	" "	200
309–310	Chaffin v. Taylor,	198
310	" "	199
311–313	Allen, Auditor v. B. & O. R. R. Co.,	200
313–316	" " " "	201

Off. Rep. 114 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
316–317	Allen, Auditor, v. B. & O. R. R. Co.,	202
317–318	Carter v. Greenhow,	202
318–321	" "	203
321–323	" "	204
323–324	Pleasants v. Greenhow,	204
324	" "	205
325–327	Marye, Auditor, v. Parsons,	205
327–330	" " "	206
330–332	" " "	207
332–335	" " "	208
335–338	" " "	209
338	" " "	210
338–340	Moore v. Greenhow,	240
340	East Alabama R. Co. v. Doe ex dem. Visscher,	136
341–344	" " " "	137
344–347	" " " "	138
347–350	" " " "	139
350–353	" " " "	140
353–355	" " " "	141
355	The Belgenland,	162
356–359	" "	153
359–362	" "	154
362–365	" "	155
365–367	" "	156
368–370	" "	157
370–373	" "	158
373–375	Walden v. Knevals,	167
375–376	" "	168
376–377	Penn Bank v. Furness,	168
377–380	" " "	169
380–381	" " "	170
381–383	Aurrecoechea v. Bangs,	170
383–386	" "	171
386–387	" "	172
387	Aurrecoechea v. Sinclair, note	172
387	Aurrecoechea v. Bangs,
	Aurrecoechea v. Gerk,
	Aurrecoechea v. Clark,
	Aurrecoechea v. French, note	172
387–389	Amy, v. Shelby Co. Taxing Dist.	172
389–392	" " " " "	173
392–394	" " " " "	174
394–397	Huntley v. Huntley,	150
397–400	" "	151
400–401	" "	152
401	State Bank v. United States,	149
401–404	" " " "	150
404–409	" " " "	151
409–410	" " " "	152
411–413	The Laura,	147
413–416	" "	148
416–417	" "	149
417–418	Ex parte Wilson	89
418–421	" "	90
421–424	" "	91
424–427	" "	92
427–429	" "	93
429	United States v. Petit, Note,	93
430	" " " "	94
430	Dodge v. Knowles,	144
431–433	" "	145
433–436	" "	146
436	" "	296
436–439	" "	297
439–442	Dobson, v. Hartford Carpet Co.,
	Same v. Biglow Carpet Co.,	177
442–444	" " " "	178
444–447	" " " "	179
447–449	Western Electric Mfg. Co. v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co.,	219

Case	Here in.
Thomson Electric Mfg. Co. v. Anaconda Brass & Copper Co.,	211
" " " " "	212
Comrs. of Columbia Comrs. v. Balt. & P. R. R. Co.,	216
" " "	217
" " "	218
" " "	219
" " "	220
" " "	221
Nat. Bank v. Minor,	221
Cavender v. Cavender,	212
" " "	213
" " "	214
" " "	215
Comrs. v. West Jersey Ferry Co.,	215
" " " "	216
Comrs. v. United States,	179
" " "	180
" " "	181
" " "	182
" " "	183
Ex p. Utah,	183
" "	184
" "	185
Phosphate Co. v. Graffilin,	221
" "	222
" " "	223
" " "	224
Sup. Tribunal, S. F. & L. R. R. Co. v. Dominicos,	244
" " "	245
" " "	246
" " "	247
" " "	248
Comrs. v. Carter, Treas.	240
" " "	241
" " "	242
" " "	243
" " "	244
Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Atwater Mfg.	262
Sup. Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Kelly,	264
" "	265
" "	266
" "	267
" "	268
" "	269
" "	270
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Moore,	270
" "	271
" "	272
Ex parte Hoggins,	281
Pittsburg & F. R. R. Co. v. Keck,	255
" " "	256
" " "	257
Bailey v. Sessions,	248
" " "	249
" " "	250
Long v. United States,	272
" " "	273
Ex p. Whitney, Sec. of Navy,	277
" " "	278
" " "	279
" " "	280
Richmond Mining Co. v. Rose,	273
" " "	274
" " "	275

Cases in 114 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
583–586	Richmond Mining Co. v. Rose,	276
586–587	" " " "	277
587	Wabash, St. L. & P. R. R. Co. v. Ham,	235
588–589	" " "	236
589–592	" " "	237
592–595	" " "	238
595–598	" " "	239
598	" " "	240
598–601	Macalester's Admr. v. Maryland,	233
601–603	" " "	234
603–606	" " "	235
606–608	Wurts v. Hoagland et al., Comrs.,	229
608–611	" " " "	230
611–614	" " " "	231
614–615	" " " "	232
615–616	Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co.,	224
616–619	" " "	225
619	" " "	226
619–621	United States v. Corson,	254
621–622	" " "	255
622–623	Brown v. Houston, Cell.,	257
624–627	" " "	258
627–629	" " "	259
630–632	" " "	260
632–635	" " "	261
635	Provident Sav. L. Assur. Soc. v. Ford,	261
636–638	" " " "	262
638–641	" " " "	263
641–642	" " " "	264
642–643	Ex parte Reggel,	250
643–647	" " "	251
647–650	" " "	252
650–652	" " "	253
652	" " "	254
654–656	Canal & Cl. Sts. R. R. Co., Garnishee v. Hart,	226
656–659	" " " "	227
659–662	" " " "	228
662–663	" " " "	229
663–664	Tennessee Bond Cases:
	Stevens v. Memphis & C. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Memphis, C. & L. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Louisville, N. & G. S. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Mississippi & T. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Mobile & O. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Nashville & N. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Nashville & D. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. McMinnville & M. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Winchester & A. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Cincinnati, C. G. & C. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. Knoxville & K. R. R. Co.,
	Stevens v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. R. Co.,	281
665–667	" " " "	283
667–670	" " " "	284

Off. Rep. 114 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
670–673	Stevens v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. R. Co., . . .	285
673–676	" " " "	286
676–679	" " " "	287
679–682	" " " "	288
682–686	" " " "	289
686–689	" " " "	290
689–692	Stevens v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. R. Co., . . .	291
692–695	" " " "	292
695–698	" " " "	293
698–701	" " " "	294
701–704	" " " "	295
704–705	" " " "	296

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States,

AT OCTOBER TERM, 1884.

JESSE J. MURPHY, Appt.,

v.

ALEXANDER RAMSEY, A. S. PADDOCK, G. L. GODFREY, A. B. CARLETON, J. R. PETTIGREW, E. D. HOGE AND ARTHUR PRATT.

MARY ANN M. PRATT, Appt.,

v.

ALEXANDER RAMSEY, A. S. PADDOCK, G. L. GODFREY, A. B. CARLETON, J. R. PETTIGREW, E. D. HOGE AND JOHN LINDSAY

[illegible] E. RANDALL AND ALFRED RANDALL, Appts.,

v.

ALEXANDER RAMSEY, A. S. PADDOCK, G. L. GODFREY, A. B. CARLETON, J. R. PETTIGREW, E. D. HOGE AND HARRIS PRATT

[illegible] C CLAWSON AND HIRAM B. CLAWSON, Appts.,

v.

ALEXANDER RAMSEY, A. S. PADDOCK, G. L. GODFREY, A. B. CARLETON, J. R. PETTIGREW, E. D. HOGE AND JAMES [illegible] LITTLE.

JAMES M. BARLOW, Appt.,

v.

ALEXANDER RAMSEY, A. S. PADDOCK, G. L. GODFREY, A. B. CARLETON, J. R. PETTIGREW, E. D. HOGE AND HARRIS PRATT.

([illegible] S. C., Reporter's ed., 15-47.)

[illegible] of the Act of March 22, 1882, as to [illegible] of Board of Commissioners [illegible] of Utah—duties of Registra- [illegible] definition of Bigamist or Polyg- [illegible] not Ex Post Facto.

[illegible] of Commissioners appointed for the [illegible] Utah in pursuance of sec. 9 of the Act of Congress approved March 22, 1882, entitled "An Act to Amend Sec. 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in Reference to Bigamy, and for Other Purposes," (22 Stat. at L., 30) have no power over the registration of voters or the conduct of elections. Their authority is limited to the appointment of registration and election officers, to the canass of the returns made by such officers of election, and to the issue of certificates of election to the persons appearing by such canvass to be elected.

2. The registration and election officers thus appointed are required, until other provisions be made by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory, to perform their duties under the existing laws of the United States, including the Act of March 22, 1882, and of the Territory, so far as not inconsistent therewith.

3. As the Board of Commissioners had no lawful power to prescribe conditions of registration or of voting, any rules of that character promulgated by them to govern the registration and election officers were null and void; and as such rules could not be pleaded by the registration officers as lawful commands in justification of refusals to register persons claiming the right to be registered as voters, their illegality is no ground of liability against the Board of Commissioners.

4. The registration officers were bound to register only such persons as, being qualified under the laws previously in force, and offering to take the oath as to such qualifications prescribed by the Territorial Act of 1878, were also not disqualified by the eighth section of the Act of Congress of March 22, 1882.

5. That section provides, as to males, that no polygamist, bigamist, or any person cohabiting with more than one woman; and, as to females, that no woman cohabiting with any polygamist, bigamist, or man cohabiting with more than one woman, shall be entitled to vote, and, consequently, no such person is entitled to be registered as a voter; and the registration officer must either require such disqualifications to be negatived by a modification of the oath, the form of which is given in the Territorial Act, or otherwise to satisfy himself by due inquiry that such disqualifications do not exist; but which course he is bound to adopt it is not necessary in these cases to decide. [16]

6. The plaintiffs in these actions, seeking to recover damages for being unlawfully deprived of their right to be registered as voters, must allege in their declarations, as matter of fact, that they were legally qualified voters, or, that allegation being omitted, must allege all the facts necessary to show, as matter of law, that they were qualified voters; and to this end it is necessary that they should negative all the disqualifications pronounced by the law.

7. A bigamist or polygamist, in the sense of the eighth section of the Act of March 22, 1882, is a man who, having contracted a bigamous or polygamous marriage, and become the husband, at one time, of two or more wives, maintains that relation and status at the time when he offers to be registered as a voter; and this without reference to the question whether he was at any time guilty of the offense of bigamy or polygamy, or whether any prosecution for such offense was barred by the lapse of time; neither is it necessary that he should be guilty of polygamy under the first section of the Act of March 22, 1882. The eighth section of the

* Head notes by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

Act is not intended, and does not operate, as an additional penalty prescribed for the punishment of the offense of polygamy, but merely defines it as a disqualification of a voter. It is not, therefore, objectionable as an ex post facto law, and has no retrospective operation. The disfranchisement operates upon the existing state and condition of the person and not upon a past offense.

8. It was accordingly held:

1. That, as to the five defendants below, composing the Board of Commissioners under the ninth section of the Act of March 22, 1882, the demurrers were rightly sustained, and the judgments are affirmed.

2. That, in the cases in which Jesse J. Murphy and James M. Barlow respectively were plaintiffs, they do not allege that they were not polygamists or bigamists at the time they offered to register, although they deny that they were at that time liable to a criminal prosecution for polygamy or bigamy, and deny that they were cohabiting with more than one woman, and not showing themselves to be legally qualified voters, the judgments on the demurrers as to all the defendants are affirmed.

3. That, in the case in which Ellen C. Clawson, with her husband, is plaintiff, as the declaration does not deny the disqualification of one who is at the time cohabiting with a polygamist or bigamist, the judgment as to all the defendants is affirmed.

4. That, in the cases in which Mary Ann M. Pratt and Mildred E. Randall, with her husband, are the respective plaintiffs, as all the disqualifications are denied, and it is alleged that the defendants, the registration officers, willfully and maliciously refused to register them as voters, the judgments as to Hoge and Lindsay in one, and as to Hoge and Harmel Pratt in the other, are reversed, and the causes remanded for further proceedings.

[Nos. 1027, 1028, 1029, 1030, 1031.]

Argued Jan. 28, 29, 1885. Decided Mar. 23, 1885.

APPEALS from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah.

The history and facts fully appear in the o

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Matthews:

In these actions, five in number, Alexander
[17] Ramsey, A. S. Paddock, G. L. Godfrey, A. B. Carleton and J. R. Pettigrew, defendants in all, were persons who composed the board appointed under section 9 of the Act of Congress approved March 22, 1882, entitled "An Act to Amend Section Fifty-three hundred and fifty-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in Reference to Bigamy, and for Other Purposes." 22 Stat. at L. 30. E. D. Hoge, also a defendant in all the cases, was appointed registration officer for the County of Salt Lake in the Territory of Utah, by that board, in pursuance of that section of the Act. The other defendants (one of whom is joined in each action), to wit: Arthur Pratt, John S. Lindsay, Harmel Pratt and James T. Little, were respectively deputy registration officers in designated election precincts in which the plaintiffs in the actions severally claimed the right to be registered as voters. The object of the actions was to recover damages, alleged to have arisen by reason of the defendants wrongfully and maliciously refusing to permit the plaintiffs respectively to be registered as qualified voters in the Territory of Utah, whereby they were deprived of the right to vote at an election held in that Territory on November 7th, 1882, for the election of a delegate to the forty-eighth Congress.

In the case in which Jesse J. Murphy is plaintiff below and appellant here, the complaint is as follows:

"The plaintiff above named complains of the defendants, and on information and belief alleges, that after the 22d day of March, 1882, and prior to the first day of July, 1882, unde the provisions of section 9 of an Act of th Congress of the United States, approved Marc 22, 1882, and entitled 'An Act to Amend Sec tion 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the Unite States, in Reference to Bigamy, and for Othe Purposes,' the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate of th United States, duly appointed the defendants Alexander Ramsey, A. S. Paddock, G. L. God frey, A. B. Carleton, and J. R. Pettigrew, t perform the duties mentioned in said section to be performed by a board of five persons, an by virtue of said appointment they became board of five persons with the powers name in said section.

"And, on information and belief, the plaint iff alleges that, after such appointment, an prior to the first day of August, 1882, the las named five defendants, duly qualified as suc appointees, came to Utah and organized as board and entered upon the exercise of th powers and the discharge of the duties grante and imposed by said section 9 of said Act o Congress. That after said organization, sai five defendants were commonly called 'com missioners,' and are hereinafter referred to an called the 'Board of Commissioners.'

"That said Board of Commissioners afte ward ordered, directed and supervised a regi tration of the the voters of the Territory o Utah, for the general election in said Territory to be held on the 7th day of November, 188 for the election of a Delegate for said Territor to the Forty-eighth Congress, and for such othe elections as might be held prior to another reg istration of voters of said Territory; and on o about the 10th day of August, 1882, the sai Board of Commissioners made and publishe rules providing for said registration, for the ap pointment of registration officers and judges o election, and the canvass and return of the votes directed said registration to be made during th week commencing on the second Monday o September, 1882, and, among other rules, wil fully and maliciously made and published th following:

'Rule I.

'There shall be appointed one registratio officer for each county, and one deputy regi tration officer for each precinct thereof.

'Rule II.

'Such registration officer shall, on the sec ond Monday of September next, proceed by him self and his deputies in the manner following The registration officer of each county shall pro cure from the clerk of the county court the las preceding registry list on file in his office, an shall, by himself or his deputies, require of eac person whose name is on said list, or who ap plies to have his name placed on said list, t take and subscribe the following oath or af firmation:

'Territory of Utah, }
County of ——— } ss:

'I, ——— ———, being first duly swor (or affirmed), depose and say: That I am ove twenty-one years of age, and have resided in th Territory of Utah for six months, and in th precinct of ——— one month immediatel preceding the date hereof, and (if a male) am native born or naturalized (as the case may be citizen of the United States, and a taxpayer i the Territory (or if a female) I am native born, or naturalized, or the wife, widow or daughter (as the case may be) of a native born or naturalized citizen of the United States; and I do further solemnly swear (or affirm) that I am not a bigamist nor a polygamist; that I am not a violator of the laws of the United States prohibiting bigamy or polygamy; that I do not live or cohabit with more than one woman in the marriage relation, nor does any relation exist between me and any woman which has been entered into or continued in violation of the said laws of the United States prohibiting bigamy or polygamy, and if a woman) that I am not the wife of a polygamist, nor have I entered into any relation with any man in violation of the laws of the United States concerning polygamy or bigamy.

'Subscribed and sworn to before me, this ——— day of ———, 1881.

———

'Registration Officer, ——— Precinct.'

And said registration officer, or his deputies, shall add to said lists the names of all qualified voters in such precinct whose names are not on the list, upon their taking and subscribing to the aforesaid oath; and the said registration officer shall strike from said lists the names of said voters who fail or refuse to take said oath, or are died or removed from the precinct, or are disqualified as voters under the Act of Congress approved March 22d, A. D. 1882, entitled 'An Act to Amend Section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in Reference to Bigamy, and for Other Purposes;' Provided, that the action of any registration officer may be revised and reversed by this commission, upon a proper showing; And provided, further, that if the registration officer be unable to procure the registration list from the office of the clerk of the county, or if the same have been lost or destroyed, the said officer and his deputies shall make a new registry list in full of all legal voters of each precinct of the county, under the provisions of these rules.'

That said Board of Commissioners also, by [illegible] provided for the appointment of and appointed three judges of election for each election precinct in said Territory.

And on information and belief, the plaintiff alleges that the defendant E. D. Hoge, was appointed registration officer for the County of Salt Lake, in said Territory of Utah, and the defendant Arthur Pratt, was appointed deputy registration officer for the fourth election precinct of the City of Salt Lake in said county, and that each accepted the appointment, duly qualified, and respectively acted throughout the said registration as such registration and deputy registration officer.

And the plaintiff alleges that on the second Monday of September, 1882, the defendant Arthur Pratt, as deputy registration officer for the fourth precinct in the City and County of Salt Lake aforesaid, acting under the direction of the other defendants, commenced registering the voters of said precinct and making a registration list of such voters, and continued daily thereto until the evening of Saturday of the same week, when the registration was closed.

And the plaintiff alleges that he is a native citizen of the United States of America, and, prior to the 22d day of March, 1882, was more than twenty-one years of age; that he has resided continuously in the Territory of Utah for more than eleven years, and resided continuously in the fourth precinct of Salt Lake City in said Territory for more than two years past; that he has, for more than ten years prior to the November election in 1882, lawfully exercised the rights and enjoyed the privileges of the elective franchise in said Territory, and has, for more than ten years last past, owned taxable property and been a taxpayer in said Territory; and that his name was on the last registration list of the voters of the second precinct, Ogden City, Weber County Utah, made prior to the second Monday of September, 1882.

"And the plaintiff alleges that he has not, since more than three years prior to March 22, 1882, married or entered into any marriage contract or relation with any woman, or in anywise violated the Act of Congress approved July 1, 1862, defining and providing for the punishment of bigamy in the Territories, and has resided continuously and openly in the counties of Weber and Salt Lake, Utah, for ten years last past, and has not violated any of the provisions of the Act of Congress approved March 22, 1882, entitled 'An Act to Amend Section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in Reference to Bigamy, and for Other Purposes;' and that he has not, on or since the 22d day of March, 1882, cohabited with more than one woman, and has never been charged with or accused or convicted of bigamy or polygamy, or cohabiting with more than one woman, in any court or before any officer or tribunal. [21]

"And the plaintiff alleges that on the 13th day of September, 1882, he personally went before the defendant Arthur Pratt, then acting as deputy registration officer in and for the fourth precinct in Salt Lake City aforesaid, and signed and presented to said defendant, and offered to verify, and requested the said defendant to take and certify plaintiff's oath to the following affidavit, to wit:

'Territory of Utah, }
County of Salt Lake, } ss:

'I, Jesse J. Murphy, being first duly sworn, depose and say: I am over twenty-one years of age, and have continuously resided in the Territory of Utah for more than six months, to wit: for more than eleven years last past; I have resided in the fourth precinct of Salt Lake City more than six months next preceding the date hereof, and now reside therein; I am a male native born citizen of the United States of America, and a property owner and taxpayer in said Territory of Utah. I have, under the laws of the Territory of Utah, exercised the elective franchise in said Territory for more than ten years last past. I have not, within three years prior to the 22d day of March, 1882, or since, having a wife living, married another, or another woman; and I have continuously and openly resided in the counties of Weber and Salt Lake, in the Territory of Utah, for more than three years prior to the 22d day of March, 1882, and I have not, on or since the 22d day of March, 1882, having a wife living, married another, or simultaneously, or on the same day, married more than one woman, or on or since said last named date married or entered into any marriage contract or relation with any woman, [22] or cohabited with more than one woman, or in anywise violated the Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Amend Section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in Reference to Bigamy, and for Other Purposes,' approved March 22d, 1882. My name is on the last registry list of voters of the second precinct, Ogden City, Weber County Utah.

Jesse J. Murphy.

'Subscribed and sworn to before me, this thirteenth day of September, A. D. 1882.'

"And at the same time the plaintiff requested the said defendant Arthur Pratt, to put plaintiff's name on the registry list of voters of said precinct, and to register him as a voter therein. That the said defendant Arthur Pratt, acting under the directions of the other defendants, willfully and maliciously refused to receive said affidavit or to swear plaintiff thereto, or to register him as a voter of said precinct, but on the contrary willfully and maliciously struck plaintiff's name off the list of registered voters of said precinct, and left his name off the list of voters of said precinct, made at said registration.

"That afterwards, before the close of said registration, and on the 14th day of September, 1882, the plaintiff presented a duplicate of said last named affidavit to the defendant E. D. Hoge, then acting as county registration officer for said County of Salt Lake, and informed him of the ruling and action as aforesaid of the defendant Arthur Pratt, and requested the defendant E. D. Hoge to correct and reverse said ruling, and to instruct the defendant Arthur Pratt to swear plaintiff to said affidavit and register him as a voter, and the said defendant E. D. Hoge willfully and maliciously refused to correct or change said ruling and action, and approved and affirmed the same.

[23]

"That on the 16th day of September, 1882, the plaintiff presented to said Board of Commissioners a duplicate of said last named affidavit and informed them of the action and ruling of the defendants Arthur Pratt and E. D. Hoge, and requested said board to reverse and correct said rulings and action, and to direct that plaintiff's oath to said affidavit be taken, and that he be registered as a voter of said precinct, and the said Board of Commissioners willfully and maliciously refused to correct or change said rulings, and affirmed and approved the same; and said last named ruling was made before the close of the registration in said precinct, and when there was still time for plaintiff to have registered before the close of the registration.

"And, on information and belief, the plaintiff alleges that the defendants all knew that, unless the plaintiff's name appeared on the registration list then being made of the voters of said precinct, his vote would not be received at the election to be held November 7, 1882, or at any election until after another registration of voters.

"That at an election held throughout the Territory of Utah on the 7th of November, 1882, for the election of a delegate for the Territory of Utah for the Forty-eighth Congress, the plaintiff went before the judges of election in said fourth precinct of the City of Salt Lake, in the County of Salt Lake, at the place where the votes in said precinct were being taken, and offered to vote at said election, and tendered and offered to take the same affidavit; but the said judges refused to receive his vote, on the ground that he was not registered as a voter in said precinct.

"And, on information and belief, the plaintiff alleges that the defendants, and each of them, intending to wrongfully deprive the plaintiff of the elective franchise in said Territory, willfully and maliciously, by the acts and in the manner aforesaid, refused the plaintiff registration as a voter at the said registration commenced on the second Monday of September, 1882, and deprived the plaintiff of the right to vote at the election held in said Territory on the 7th day of November, 1882, and at all elections under said registration, whereby plaintiff has sustained damage to the amount of $1,200.

"Wherefore the plaintiff prays judgment against the defendants for the sum of $1,200 and costs of suit."

In the case in which Mary Ann M. Pratt is plaintiff and appellant the complaint is similar in all respects, except the allegations as to her qualifications as a voter, and the contents of the affidavit which she offered to the deputy registration officer. The averments as to her qualifications are as follows:

"And the plaintiff alleges that she is a native citizen of the United States of America, and prior to the 22d day of March, 1882, was more than twenty-one years of age; that she has resided continuously in the Territory of Utah for more than thirty years, and resided continuously in the third precinct of Salt Lake City, in said Territory, for more than two years last past; that she has, for more than five years prior to the November election in 1882, lawfully exercised the rights and enjoyed the privileges of the elective franchise in said Territory, and has, for more than five years last past, owned taxable property and been a taxpayer in said Territory, and that her name was on the last registration list of the voters of the third precinct, made prior to the second Monday of September, 1882.

"And the plaintiff alleges that she is not, and never has been, a bigamist or a polygamist; that she is the widow of Orson Pratt, Sen., who died prior to the 22d day of March, 1882, after a continuous residence in said Territory of more than thirty years, and that since the death of her said husband she has not cohabited with any man."

The affidavit proposed by her contained the same allegations.

Alfred Randall and Mildred E. Randall, plaintiffs in another action, sue as husband and wife, in the right of the wife, for injury to her by reason of being deprived of her right to vote. The averments in the complaint as to her qualifications are as follows:

"And the plaintiffs allege that the plaintiff Mildred E. Randall, is a native citizen of the United States of America, and prior to the 22d day of March, 1882, was more than twenty-one years of age; that she has resided continuously in the Territory of Utah for more than twenty years, and resided continuously in the second precinct of Salt Lake City, in said Territory, for more than two years last past; that she has, for more than ten years prior to the November election in 1882 lawfully exercised the rights [illegible] the privileges of the elective fran-[illegible] said Territory, and has, for more than [illegible] years last past, owned taxable property and [illegible] taxpayer in said Territory; and that her [illegible] was on the last registration list of the vo-[illegible] of the second precinct, made prior to the [illegible] Monday of September, 1882.

And the plaintiffs allege that the plaintiff [illegible] E. Randall, for more than three years [illegible] has been and is the wife of the plaint-[illegible] Randall, who is, and prior to March [illegible] was, a native born citizen of the Unit-[illegible] States of America; that she has not on or [illegible] March 22, 1882, cohabited with any biga-[illegible] polygamist, or with any man cohabiting [illegible] more than one woman; that she is not a [illegible] or polygamist, and never has been a [illegible] or polygamist, and has not in any way [illegible] the Act of Congress entitled 'An Act [illegible] section 5352 of the Revised Statutes [illegible] United States, in Reference to Bigamy, [illegible] Other Purposes,' approved March 22, [illegible]

The affidavit presented by her to the deputy [illegible] officer and rejected by him con-[illegible] the same allegations. In all other re-[illegible] the complaint is similar to all the others.

[illegible] B. Clawson and Ellen C. Clawson also [illegible] husband and wife, in the wife's right, [illegible] averments in the complaint as to her [illegible] are as follows:

And the plaintiffs allege that the plaintiff [illegible] Clawson is a native citizen of the [illegible] States of America, and prior to the 22d [illegible] of March, 1882, was more than twenty-one [illegible] of age; that she has resided continuously [illegible] the Territory of Utah for more than thirty-[illegible] years, and resided continuously in the fifth [illegible] of Salt Lake City, in said Territory, [illegible] than two years last past; that she has, [illegible] more than ten years prior to the November [illegible] 1882, lawfully exercised the rights [illegible] enjoyed the privileges of the elective fran-[illegible] said Territory, and has, for more than [illegible] years last past, owned taxable property and [illegible] taxpayer in said Territory, and that her [illegible] was on the last registration list of the vo-[illegible] of said fifth precinct, made prior to the sec-[illegible] Monday of September, 1882.

And the plaintiffs allege that the plaintiff, [illegible] Clawson, is not and never has been a [illegible] or polygamist, and is not cohabiting [illegible] never has cohabited with any man except [illegible] husband, the co-plaintiff herein, to whom [illegible] was lawfully married more than fifteen [illegible] ago, and of whom she is the first and law-[illegible] wife.

That the plaintiff Hiram B. Clawson has [illegible] married or entered into any marriage con-[illegible] relations with any woman within the [illegible] years and has continuously and openly [illegible] in the City of Salt Lake, in said Terri-[illegible] of Utah, for more than twenty years last [illegible]

[illegible] presented to the deputy registration offi-[illegible] affidavit setting forth the same facts.

[illegible] case in which James M. Barlow is [illegible] and appellant the averments in the com-[illegible] are altogether like those in the case of [illegible] which has been set out in full.

[illegible] case a demurrer was filed to the com-[illegible] by all the defendants on the ground that [illegible] facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. These demurrers were sustained, and the plaintiffs electing to abide by their pleadings, judgment was rendered for the defendants, which are now brought by appeals for revision to this court.

The Act of March 22, 1882, is as follows:

"An Act to Amend Section Fifty-three hundred and fifty-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States in Reference to Bigamy, and for Other Purposes.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section fifty-three hundred and fifty-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows, namely:

"Every person who has a husband or wife [27] living who, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, hereafter marries another, whether married or single, and any man who hereafter simultaneously, or on the same day, marries more than one woman, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of polygamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years; but this section shall not extend to any person by reason of any former marriage whose husband or wife by such marriage shall have been absent for five successive years, and is not known to such person to be living, and is believed by such person to be dead, nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which shall have been dissolved by a valid decree of a competent court, nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which shall have been pronounced void by a valid decree of a competent court, on the ground of nullity of the marriage contract.

"Sec. 2. That the foregoing provisions shall not affect the prosecution or punishment of any offense already committed against the section amended by the first section of this Act.

"Sec. 3. That if any male person, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, hereafter cohabits with more than one woman, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

"Sec. 4. That counts for any or all of the offenses named in sections one and three of this Act may be joined in the same information or indictment.

"Sec. 5. That in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation, under any Statute of the United States, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any person drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman, first, that he is or has been living in the practice of bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation with more than one woman, or that he is or has been guilty of an offense punishable by either of the foregoing sections, or by section fifty-three hundred and fifty-two of the Revised Stat- [28] utes of the United States, or the Act of July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled 'An Act to Punish and Prevent the Practice of Polygamy in the Territories of the United States [illegible] citizen of the United States. (Act [illegible] a territorial government for Utah, [illegible] September 9, 1850, 9 Stats. at L., 453; [illegible] Laws of Utah, 1876, p. 88).

At the same time there was also in force chap. [illegible] of the laws of Utah, 1878, providing for the [illegible] of voters and to further regulate [illegible] manner of conducting elections in that Territory.

That Act contains the following provisions:

"That the assessors in their respective counties are hereby constituted the registration officers, and they are required to appoint a resident agency in each precinct to assist in carrying out the provisions of this Act, and before the first Monday in June, 1878, in person or by deputy, they shall visit every dwelling in each precinct, and make careful inquiry as to any or all persons entitled to vote, and each assessor or deputy, in all cases, shall ascertain upon what ground each person claims to be a voter, and he shall require each person entitled to vote and desiring to be registered to take and subscribe in evidence the following oath or affirmation:

"Territory of Utah, }
"County ———, } ss:

"I, ———, being first duly sworn, depose and say that I am over twenty-one years of age and have resided in the Territory of Utah for six months, and in the precinct of ——— one month next preceding the date hereof, and (if a male) am a 'native born' or 'naturalized,' as the case may be) citizen of the United States, and a taxpayer in this Territory; (or, if a female, I am 'native born' or 'naturalized,' or the 'wife,' 'widow,' or 'daughter' (as the case may be) of a native born or naturalized citizen of the United States.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this — day of ———, A. D. 18—.

'———, Assessor.'

"Upon the receipt of such affidavit the assessor as aforesaid shall place the name of such voter upon the register list of the voters of the county.

"Sec. 2. It shall also be the duty of the assessor of each county, in person or by deputy, at the time of making the annual assessment for taxes in each year, beginning in 1879, to take the transcript of the next preceding registration list and proceed to the revision of the same, and for this purpose he shall visit every dwelling house in each precinct, and make careful inquiry if any person whose name is on his list has died, or removed from the precinct, or is otherwise disqualified [illegible] voter of such precinct [illegible] therefrom; [illegible] besides therein [illegible] so, to add [illegible] provided in [illegible]

"Sec. 3. It shall [illegible] assessor [illegible] week [illegible] each [illegible] of the [illegible] provisions of [illegible] all the registered voters of such precinct, and he shall, on or before the first day of July in each year, deliver all of said lists and affidavits to the clerk of the county court.

"Sec. 5. The clerk of the county court shall deliver to the assessor the registry lists whenever necessary for the revision thereof, or adding names thereto, and the assessor in person or by deputy shall, during the week commencing the second Monday in September in the year 1878 and every second year thereafter, enter names of voters on the registry list in the manner provided in section three of this Act, and upon the list being completed, proceed as required by section four of this Act; Provided, That in such case he shall deliver the list and affidavits on or before the 10th day of October in such year.

"Sec. 6. Voters removing from one election precinct to another in the same county may appear before the assessor at any time previous to the delivery of the registry list to the clerk of the county court, and have their names erased therefrom, and they may thereupon have their names registered in the precinct to which they may remove. [33]

"Sec. 7. The clerk of the county court shall file and carefully preserve all said affidavits and registry lists, and shall make a copy of each precinct registry list, and cause the same to be posted up at least fifteen days before any election, at or near the place of election, and shall make and transmit another copy to the judges of election.

"Sec. 8. The clerk of the county court shall cause to be printed or written a notice which shall designate the offices to be filled, and stating that the election will commence at ——, [designating the place for holding the polls], one hour after sunrise, and continue until sunset on the — day of ———, 18— [naming the day of election]. Dated at ———, A. D. 18—.

———, ———,
Clerk of the County Court.

"A copy of which shall be posted up at least fifteen days before the election, in three public places in said precinct best calculated to give notice to all the voters. It shall also be the duty of the clerk of the county court to give notice on the lists so posted that the senior justices of the peace for said precinct will hear objections to the right to vote of any person registered until sunset of the fifth day preceding the day of election. Said objections shall be made by a qualified voter, in writing, and delivered to the said justice, who shall issue a written notice to the person objected to, stating the place, day and hour when the objection will be heard. The person making the objection shall serve, or cause to be served, said notice upon the person objected to, and shall also make returns of such service to the justice before whom the objection shall be heard. Upon the hearing of the case, if said justice shall find that the person objected to is not a qualified voter, he shall, within three days prior to the election, transmit a certified list of the names of all such unqualified persons to the judges of election, and said judges shall strike such names from the registry list before the opening of the polls.

"Sec. 9. The county court shall, at its first [illegible] in June of each year, appoint three capable and discreet persons in each precinct in the [34] county, one at least of whom shall be of the political party that was in the minority at the last previous election, if any such party there be in such precinct, to act as judges of general and special elections; and they shall designate one of the persons appointed to preside, and the other two to act as clerks of said elections. And the clerk of said court shall make out certificates of said appointments, and transmit the same by mail or other safe conveyance to the persons so appointed, who, previous to entering upon said office, shall take and subscribe an oath to the effect that they will well and faithfully perform all the duties thereof to the best of their ability, and that they will studiously endeavor to prevent any fraud, deceit or abuse at any election over which they may preside. If, in any precinct, any of such judges decline to serve or fail to appear, the voters of said precinct, first assembled on the day of election, to the number of six, at or immediately after the time designated for opening the polls, may elect a judge or judges to fill the vacancy, and the persons so elected shall qualify as hereinbefore provided."

Sections 10 and 11 prescribe how ballot-boxes, keys, etc., shall be procured, and provide for envelopes and ballots, and for keeping the boxes during the voting and until the canvass; and section 12 provides how the judges shall keep the lists, etc.

"Sec. 13. Every voter shall designate on a single ballot, written or printed, the name of the person or persons voted for, with a pertinent designation of the office to be filled, and when any question is to be decided in the affirmative or negative, he shall state the proposition at the bottom of the ballot, and write thereunder yes or no, as he may desire to vote thereon, which ballot shall be neatly folded and placed in one of the envelopes hereinbefore provided for, and delivered to the presiding judge of election, who shall, in the presence of the voter, on the name of the proposed voter being found on the registry list, and on all challenges to such vote being decided in favor of such voter, deposit it in the ballot box, without any mark whatever being placed on such envelope; otherwise the ballot shall be rejected."

The remainder of the Act relates to the can-[35] vass, returns and certificates of election.

Messrs. George G. Vest, Wayne MacVeagh, Franklin S. Richards and Charles W. Bennett, for appellants.

Messrs. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., and Benjamin H. Brewster, Atty-Gen., for appellees.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases, although actions at law, were not tried by jury; and therefore are rightly brought here by appeal, according to the provision of the Act of Congress of April 7, 1874, 18 Stat. at L., pt. 3, p. 27; Supplement Rev. Stat., 12; Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S., 610 [Bk. 25, L. ed., 421]; Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S., 235 [Bk. 26, L. ed., 1018]; Woolf v. Hamilton, 108 U. S., 15 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 635].

The wrong complained of in each case by the respective plaintiffs is, "That the defendants, and each of them, intending to wrongfully deprive the plaintiff of the elective franchise in said Territory, willfully and maliciously, by the acts and in the manner aforesaid, refused the plaintiff registration as a voter, at the said registration commenced on the second Monday of September, 1882, and deprived the plaintiff of the right to vote at the election held in said Territory on the 7th day of November, 1882, and at all elections under said registration."

The acts, which it is alleged were done by the five defendants, as a Board of Commissioners or Canvassers, under the law of March 22, 1882, and which contributed to the wrong and constituted part of it, are, that they prescribed as a condition of registration an unauthorized oath, set out in the complaint, in a rule promulgated by them for the government of the registration officers; and that the deputy registration officer having, in obedience to such rule, "acting under the directions of the other defendants," willfully and maliciously refused to receive the affidavit tendered by the plaintiff in lieu of that prescribed by the rule of the board, and to register the plaintiff; and that the county registration officer, on appeal, having refused to order otherwise, the Board of Commissioners also refused to reverse and correct these rulings and to direct the registration of the plaintiffs respectively, but affirmed and approved the same.

But an examination of the ninth section of the Act of March 22, 1882 [22 Stat. at L., 30], providing for the appointment and prescribing the duties and powers of that board, shows that they have no functions whatever in respect to the registration of voters, except the appointment of officers in place of those previously authorized, whose offices are by that section of the law declared to be vacant; and the persons appointed to succeed them are not subject to the direction and control of the board, but are required, until other provision be made by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory, to perform all the duties relating to the registration of voters, "under the existing laws of the United States and of said Territory." The board are not authorized to prescribe rules for governing them in the performance of these duties, much less to prescribe any qualifications for voters as a condition of registration. The statutory powers of the board are limited to the appointment of the registration and election officers, authorized to act in the first instance under the law until provision is made by the Territorial Legislature for the appointment of their successors, and to the canvass of the returns and the issue of certificates of election "to those persons who, being eligible for such election, shall appear to have been lawfully elected." The proviso in the section does indeed declare "that said board of five persons shall not exclude any person otherwise eligible to vote from the polls on account of any opinion such person may entertain on the subject of bigamy or polygamy;" but, in the absence of any general and express power over the subject of declaring the qualifications of voters, it is not a just inference from the words of this proviso that it was intended to admit by implication the existence of any authority in the board to exclude from registration or the right to vote, any person whatever, or in any manner to define and declare what the qualifications of a voter shall be. The prohibition against excluding any pe

Page.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 114 U. S.	Title.	Here
[illegible]	Western Electric Mfg. Co. v. Anaconda Brass & Copper Co.,	211	583–586	Richmond Mining Co. v. Rose,	276
[illegible]	" " " " "	212	586–587	" " " "	277
[illegible]	Bank of Columbia Comrs. v. Balt. & P. R. R. Co.,	216	587	Wabash, St. L. & P. R. R. Co. v. Ham,	235
[illegible]	" " "	217	588–589	" " "	236
[illegible]	" " "	218	589–592	" " "	237
[illegible]	" " "	219	592–595	" " "	238
[illegible]	" " "	220	595–598	" " "	239
[illegible]	" " "	221	598	" " "	240
[illegible]	Nelle Bank v. Mister,	221	598–601	Macalester's Admr. v. Maryland,	233
[illegible]	Lovejoy v. Cavender,	212	601–603	" " "	234
[illegible]	" "	213	603–606	" " "	235
[illegible]	" "	214	606–608	Wurts v. Hoagland et al., Comrs.,	229
[illegible]	" "	215	608–611	" " " "	230
[illegible]	" "	215	611–614	" " " "	231
[illegible]	Dunn v. West Jersey Ferry Co.,	215	614–615	" " " "	232
[illegible]	" " " "	216	615–616	Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co.,	224
[illegible]	Brown v. United States,	179	616–619	" " "	225
[illegible]	" " "	180	619	" " "	226
[illegible]	" " "	181	619–621	United States v. Corson,	254
[illegible]	" " "	182	621–622	" " "	255
[illegible]	Tyler v. Tiffin,	183	622–623	Brown v. Houston, Coll.,	257
[illegible]	" "	184	624–627	" " "	258
[illegible]	" "	185	627–629	" " "	259
[illegible]	Atlantic Transportation Co. v. Griffin,	221	630–632	" " "	260
[illegible]	" "	222	632–635	" " "	261
[illegible]	" " "	223	635	Provident Sav. L. Assur. Soc. v. Ford,	261
[illegible]	" " "	224	636–638	" " " "	262
[illegible]	New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. R. Co. v. Delassoire,	244	638–641	" " " "	263
[illegible]	" " "	245	641–642	" " " "	264
[illegible]	" " "	246	642–643	Ex parte Reggel,	250
[illegible]	" " "	247	643–647	" " "	251
[illegible]	" " "	248	647–650	" " "	252
[illegible]	Burgess v. Carter, Treas.	240	650–653	" " "	253
[illegible]	" " "	241	653	" " "	254
[illegible]	" " "	242	654–656	Canal & Cl. Sts. R. R. Co., Garnishee v. Hart,	226
[illegible]	" " "	243
[illegible]	" " "	244	656–659	" " " "	227
[illegible]	Meriden Mfg. Co. v. Atwater Mfg. Co.,		659–662	" " " "	228
[illegible]	" " "	262	662–663	" " " "	229
[illegible]	Fort Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe,	264	663–664	Tennessee Bond Cases:
[illegible]	" "	265		Stevens v. Memphis & C. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" "	266		Stevens v. Memphis, C. & L. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" "	267		Stevens v. Louisville, N. & G. S. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" "	268		Stevens v. Mississippi & T. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" "	269		Stevens v. Mobile & O. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" "	270		Stevens v. Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McCann,	270		Stevens v. Nashville & N. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" "	271		Stevens v. Nashville & D. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" "	272		Stevens v. McMinnville & M. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Roth,	281		Stevens v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" " "	255		Stevens v. Winchester & A. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" " "	256		Stevens v. Cincinnati, C. G. & C. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	" " "	257		Stevens v. Knoxville & K. R. R. Co.,
[illegible]	Young v. Bradley,	248		Stevens v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. R. Co.,	281
[illegible]	" " "	249	665–667	" " " "	283
[illegible]	" " "	250	667–670	" " " "	284
[illegible]	Young v. United States,	272
[illegible]	" " "	273
[illegible]	Wilson v. Secy. of Navy,	277
[illegible]	" " "	278
[illegible]	" " "	279
[illegible]	" " "	280
[illegible]	Richmond Mining Co. v. Rose,	273
[illegible]	" " "	274
[illegible]	" " "	275

negative the fact. It cannot therefore be inferred that she was a lawfully qualified voter.

The cases of Murphy and Barlow are alike in substance. In Murphy's case, the allegations are, "that he has not since more than three years prior to March 22, 1882, married or entered into any marriage contract or relation with any woman, or in anywise violated the Act of Congress approved July 1. 1862 [12 Stat. at L., [40] 501], defining and providing for the punishment of bigamy in the Territories, * * * and has not violated any of the provisions of the Act of Congress approved March 22, 1882, etc., * * * and that he has not, on or since the 22d day of March, 1882, cohabited with more than one woman, and has never been charged with or accused or convicted of bigamy or polygamy, or cohabiting with more than one woman, in any court or before any officer or tribunal." In Barlow's case, the statement on one point is stronger. It is, "that he has not, on or since the first day of July, 1862, married or entered into any marriage contract or relation with any woman, or in anywise violated the Act of Congress approved July 1, 1862, defining and providing for the punishment of bigamy in the Territories." That is to say, that, although he may have married a second wife, it was before any law existed in the Territory prohibiting it, and, therefore, it could not have been a criminal offense when committed.

But in both cases the complaints omit the allegation that, at the time the plaintiffs respectively claimed to be registered as voters, they were not each, either a bigamist or a polygamist.

It is admitted that the use of these very terms in the complaint is not necessary, if the disqualifications lawfully implied by them are otherwise substantially denied. That such is their case is maintained by the appellants.

The words "bigamist" and "polygamist" evidently are not used in this statute in the sense of describing those who entertain the opinion that bigamy and polygamy ought to be tolerated as a practice not inconsistent with the good order of society, the welfare of the race, and a true code of morality, if such there be; because, in the proviso in the ninth section of the Act, it is expressly declared that no person shall be excluded from the polls, or be denied his vote, on account of any opinion on the subject.

It is argued that they cannot be understood as meaning those who, prior to the passage of the Act of March 22, 1882, had contracted a bigamous or polygamous marriage, either in violation of an existing law, such as that of July 1, 1862, or before the enactment of any [41] law forbidding it; for to do so would give to the statute a retrospective effect, and by thus depriving citizens of civil rights, merely on account of past offenses, or on account of acts which when committed were not offenses, would make it an ex post facto law, and therefore void. And the conclusion is declared to be necessary, that the words polygamist and bigamist, as used in the 8th section of the Act, can mean only such persons as, having violated the first section of the Act, are guilty of polygamy; that is, "Every person who has a husband or wife living, who, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, hereafter marries another, whether married or single, and any man who hereafter simultaneously or on the same day marries more than one woman, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction."

But there is another meaning which may be given to these words, which, we think, is the one intended by Congress. In our opinion, any man is a polygamist or bigamist, in the sense of this section of the Act, who, having previously married one wife, still living, and having another at the time when he presents himself to claim registration as a voter, still maintains that relation to a plurality of wives, although from the date of the passage of the Act of March 22, 1882, until the day he offers to register and to vote, he may not in fact have cohabited with more than one woman. Without regard to the question whether at the time he entered into such a relation it was a prohibited and punishable offense, or whether by reason of lapse of time since its commission a prosecution for it may not be barred, if he still maintains the relation he is a bigamist or polygamist, because that is the status which the fixed habit and practice of his living has established. He has a plurality of wives, more than one woman whom he recognizes as a wife, of whose children he is the acknowledged father, and whom with their children he maintains as a family, of which he is the head. And this status as to several wives may well continue to exist, as a practical relation, although for a period he may not in fact cohabit with more than one; for that is quite consistent with the constant recognition of the same relation to many, accompanied with possible intention to renew cohabitation with one or more of the others when it may be convenient.

It is not therefore because the person has committed the offense of bigamy or polygamy at some previous time, in violation of some existing statute, and as an additional punishment for its commission, that he is disfranchised by the Act of Congress of March 22, 1882; nor because he is guilty of the offense as defined and punished by the terms of that Act; but because having at some time entered into a bigamous or polygamous relation by a marriage with a second or third wife while the first was living, he still maintains it and has not dissolved it, and though for the time being he restricts actual cohabitation to but one. He might in fact abstain from actual cohabitation with all, and be still as much as ever a bigamist or a polygamist. He can only cease to be such when he has finally and fully dissolved in some effective manner, which we are not called on here to point out, the very relation of husband to several wives, which constitutes the forbidden status he has previously assumed. Cohabitation is but one of many incidents to the marriage relation. It is not essential to it. One man, where such a system has been tolerated and practiced may have several establishments, each of which may be the home of a separate family, none of which he himself may dwell in or even visit. The statute makes an express distinction between bigamists and polygamists on the one hand, and those who cohabit with more than one woman on the other; whereas, if cohabitation with several wives was essential to the [illegible] of those who are bigamists or polygamists, these words in the statute would be superfluous and unnecessary. It follows, therefore, that any person having several wives is a bigamist or polygamist in the sense of the Act of March 22, 1882, although since the date of its passage he may not have cohabited with more than one of them.

Upon this construction the statute is not open to the objection that it is an ex post facto law. It does not seek in this section and by the penalty of disfranchisement to operate as a punishment upon any offense at all. The crime of bigamy or polygamy consists in entering into a bigamous or polygamous marriage, and is complete when the relation begins. That of actual cohabitation with more than one woman is defined and the punishment prescribed in the third section. The disfranchisement operates upon the existing state and condition of the person, and not upon a past offense. It is, therefore, not retrospective. He alone is deprived of his vote who, when he offers to register, is then in the state and condition of a bigamist or a polygamist, or is then actually cohabiting with more than one woman. Disfranchisement is not prescribed as a penalty for being guilty of the crime and offense of bigamy or polygamy; for, as has been said, that offense consists in the fact of unlawful marriage, and a prosecution against the offender is barred by the lapse of three years, under section 1044 of the Revised Statutes. Continuing to live in that state afterwards is not an offense, although cohabitation with more than one woman is. But as one may be living in a bigamous or polygamous state without cohabitation with more than one woman, he is in that state a bigamist or a polygamist, and yet guilty of no criminal offense. So that, in respect to these disqualifications of a voter under the act of March 22, 1882, the objection is not well taken that it represents the inquiry into the fact by the officers of registration as an unlawful mode of prosecution for crime. In respect to the fact of actual cohabitation with more than one woman the objection is equally groundless, for the inquiry into the fact, so far as the registration officers are authorized to make it, or the judges of election, on challenge of the right of the voter if registered, are required to determine it, is not, in view of its character as a crime, for the purpose of punishment, but for the sole purpose of determining as in case of any other condition attached to the right of suffrage, the qualification of one who alleges a right to vote. It is precisely similar to an inquiry into the fact of nativity, of age, or of other status made necessary by law as a condition of the elective franchise. It would be the imperative duty of the sovereign power to determine that no one but a married person shall be entitled to vote, and in that event the election officers would be authorized to determine for themselves, in case of question in any instance, upon the fact of marriage as a continuing status. There is no greater objection, in point of law, to a similar inquiry for the like purpose into the fact of a subsisting and continuing bigamous or polygamous relation, when it is made, as by the statute under consideration, a disqualification to vote.

No reason for the appellants in argument seems to question the constitutional power of Congress to pass the Act of March 22, 1882, so far as it abridges the rights of electors in the Territory under previous laws. But that question is, we think, no longer open to discussion. It has passed beyond the stage of controversy into final judgment. The people of the United States, as sovereign owners of the National Territories, have supreme power over them and their inhabitants. In the exercise of this sovereign dominion, they are represented by the Government of the United States, to whom all the powers of government over that subject have been delegated, subject only to such restrictions as are expressed in the Constitution, or are necessarily implied in its terms, or in the purposes and objects of the power itself; for it may well be admitted in respect to this, as to every power of society over its members, that it is not absolute and unlimited. But in ordaining government for the Territories and the people who inhabit them, all the discretion which belongs to legislative power is vested in Congress; and that extends, beyond all controversy, to determining by law from time to time the form of the local government in a particular Territory and the qualifications of those who shall administer it. It rests with Congress to say whether, in a given case, any of the people, resident in the Territory, shall participate in the election of its officers or the making of its laws; and it may therefore take from them any right of suffrage it may previously have conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it, as it may deem expedient. The right of local self-government, as known to our system as a constitutional franchise, belongs, under the Constitution, to the States and to the people thereof, by whom that Constitution was ordained, and to whom by its terms all power not conferred by it upon the Government of the United States was expressly reserved. The personal and civil rights of the inhabitants of the Territories are secured to them, as to other citizens, by the principles of constitutional liberty which restrain all the agencies of government, State and National; [45] their political rights are franchises which they hold as privileges in the legislative discretion of the Congress of the United States. This doctrine was fully and forcibly declared by the Chief Justice, delivering the opinion of the court in Nat. Bk. v. Yankton Co., 101 U. S., 129 [Bk. 25, L. ed., 1046]. See also, Am. Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet., 511; U. S. v. Gratiot, 14 Pet., 526; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How., 164; Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How., 393 [60 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed., 691]. If we concede that this discretion in Congress is limited by the obvious purposes for which it was conferred, and that those purposes are satisfied by measures which prepare the people of the Territories to become States in the Union, still the conclusion cannot be avoided, that the Act of Congress here in question is clearly within that justification. For certainly no legislation can be supposed more wholesome and necessary in the founding of a free, self-governing commonwealth, fit to take rank as one of the co-ordinate States of the Union, than that which seeks to establish it on the basis of the idea of the family, as consisting in and springing from the union for life of one man and one woman in the holy estate of matrimony; the sure foundation of all that is stable and noble in our civilization, the best guaranty of [illegible] monthly which is the source of all [illegible] political in- [illegible] means are more [illegible] than those pa- [illegible] which endeavors to with- [illegible] influence from those who are [illegible] to be competent.

[illegible] is to be considered whether, in the [illegible] Mary Ann M. Pratt and [illegible] husband are respect- [illegible] plaintiffs and in which the plaintiffs [illegible] the defendants who [illegible] charged [illegible] justice.

[illegible] they were bound by [illegible] under the 8th sec- [illegible] of the act of March 3, 1873, as perform [illegible] of the [illegible] The law of the [illegible] 'An Act Provid- [illegible] of Voters and to Facil- [illegible] of Registering Electors [illegible] approved February 28, 1872. [illegible] the registration officers and [illegible] inquiry as to [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] 7, 1875, was also granted to the appellee for an "improvement in street cars," consisting in placing a mirror in the hood of an ordinary street car to enable the driver to see what was occurring in and behind the car.

The bill charged an infringement of each of these patents by the appellee in all of its cars.

The answer of the appellee denied infringement of any of the patents sued on; averred that all had been anticipated by specified American and foreign patents and by certain persons in this country, naming them; that none of the devices were patentable; and that the devices described in the second and third patents were in public use and on sale for more than two years prior to the application for letters patent therefor respectively.

Upon final hearing the Circuit Court dismissed the bill, and the plaintiff appealed.

Mr. William Allen Butler, Benjamin F. Thurston, George Gifford and Philip J. O'Reilly, for appellant.

Mr. Francis Rawle and Walter George Smith, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

We shall consider each of the patents in the order above stated.

The invention described in the O'Haire patent consists of a combination and arrangement of devices by which the rear door of a street car can be opened and closed by the driver from the front platform where he stands, in order to let passengers into or out of the car.

The drawing by which the specification is illustrated shows the frame of an ordinary street car provided with a door which is supported upon and moves back and forth upon suitable rollers and ways, which, it is said, may be arranged in any desired manner. Passing through the bar from which the hand straps are suspended, and which is made hollow, is a rod or shaft which has a lever or crank upon its front end within easy reach of the driver. Upon its rear end is a similar lever or crank carrying a roller, which works up and down in a rectangular guiding-frame secured to the rear edge of the door and by which the door is opened and closed. The driver, by a slight push upon the front lever, can open the door, or by a pull toward him, can close it without moving off his seat.

The claim is as follows: "The rod 5, crank or lever 3, and guiding-frame 6, secured to the door and combined with an operating lever for the driver, substantially as shown and described."

The infringement charged against the defendant was the use of cars containing an "improvement in operating car doors," described in the patent of George M. Brill, dated December 1st, 1874. The device covered by this patent was essentially the same as that described in the O'Haire patent, except that the rock shaft ran along the bottom of the car instead of through the bar from which the hand straps were suspended.

There is no evidence to show that O'Haire's invention antedates the application for his patent, which was made on June 27, 1873. Considering the state of the art at that time, we are of opinion that the device [illegible] tent does not embody anything new which the defendant infringes. The opening and closing of the rear door of a street car from the front platform is not new. The specification of the O'Haire patent says: "I am aware that it is not new to operate the door from the front platform of the car, as this has heretofore been accomplished by means of an endless cord which passes through the rods to which the holding-straps are secured, and I therefore disclaim such invention." [152]

At the date of O'Haire's application it was well known, as is shown by the evidence, that doors and window shutters guided by slides, both in vehicles and apartments, were opened and closed by mechanism used by persons placed in such situations that they could neither reach nor open and close the doors or shutters directly. The device of O'Haire must, therefore, to be the subject of a valid patent, embody some new means for accomplishing this end.

The elements of which his contrivance was made up were the rod or rock shaft, reaching from the front to the rear of the car, the lever by which a rocking motion was given to the shaft, and the means used for communicating motion from the shaft to the door.

The testimony is conclusive to show that there is nothing new in the rock shaft or in the lever by which it is moved. Long before the date of O'Haire's application, the evidence is clear that rock shafts operated by a lever or crank were used to open and close the doors of furnaces, and the window and door openings of sugar refineries, by persons standing at a distance from the windows and doors to be opened and closed. A rock shaft moved by a lever at the end of a railway carriage for the purpose of opening and closing the sliding doors of the carriage was described in the English letters patent set out in the record of John Johnson, dated March 8, 1857. The use of a rock shaft for a similar purpose, namely: the opening and closing of sliding window blinds, is also shown in the patent of Daniel Kidder, dated June 8, 1869. Rock-shafts, for the same purpose, are shown in the patent of Darwin D. Douglass, dated June 11, 1861, and the patent of W. H. Brown, dated February 23, 1864. The shaft in the Brown patent was moved by a lever, and in the Kidder and Douglass patents by a knob attached to its end, which is the well known equivalent of a lever. It appears, therefore, that the use of a rock shaft actuated by a lever for communicating motion was an old device which had been in use long before the date of the O'Haire patent. [153]

It remains to consider the mode adopted by O'Haire for communicating motion from his rock shaft to the door of the car. We find it to be one of a number of old and well known devices for changing rotary into horizontal or rectilinear motion. The testimony shows that the devices long used for this purpose are a pinion or segment of a pinion whose teeth interlock with the teeth of a straight bar or rack or a rigid lever attached at one end to the rock-shaft, and having on the other a pin or roller working in a slot formed on the door or shutter to be moved. Sometimes the slot is in the lever, and the pin or roller is on the door or shutter. These devices perform the same functions in substantially the same manner, and have long been recognized as mechanical equivalents.

The device covered by the patent of O'Haire, therefore, consists of a rock shaft with a lever attached for the purpose of giving the shaft a rocking motion, combined with a well known and long used device by which the rocking motion was changed into a rectilinear motion and communicated to the door of a car. No one of these devices can be claimed as new.

If there is any ingenuity displayed in the contrivance described in the O'Haire patent, it must, therefore, be in the combination of these devices to attain a result. The claim of the patent is for such a combination. But in our opinion this combination was anticipated by the patents of both Douglass and Brown before mentioned.

The inventions described in these patents are for the opening and closing of outside shutters from the inside of a house without opening the windows, and they consist of a rock shaft passing through the wall of the house to which a rocking motion is imparted from the inside of the house in the one case by a knob, and in the other by a lever or handle on the inner end of the shaft. By means of a pinion on the outer end of the rock shaft applied to a toothed rack [154] on the shutter, a rectilinear sliding motion is imparted to the shutter, which is thus opened and closed. The rock shafts in these patents are identical with the rod or shaft in the O'Haire patent; the lever in the Brown patent, by which the rock shaft is moved, is the same as the lever in the O'Haire patent, and the knob in the Douglass shaft is its well known equivalent; and the contrivance by pinion and rack for transmitting motion from the rock shaft to the shutter is the well known and long used equivalent of the devices used for a similar purpose in the O'Haire contrivance. We find, therefore, that none of the separate elements of the devices described in the O'Haire patent are new, nor is the combination new. So far, therefore, we find no patentable invention in the contrivance described in the patent under consideration. It was said by this court in Smith v. Nichols, 21 Wall., 112 [88 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed., 556], that "a mere carrying forward a new or more extended application of the original thought, a change only in form, proportions or degree, the substitution of equivalents doing substantially the same thing in the same way by substantially the same means, with better results, is not such invention as will sustain a patent." So in Penn. R. R. Co. v. Truck Co., 110 U. S., 490 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 222], Mr. Justice Gray, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The application of an old process or machine to a similar or analogous subject, with no change in the manner of application and no result substantially distinct in its nature, will not sustain a patent, even if the new form of result has not before been contemplated." These authorities are pertinent. See also, Vinton v. Hamilton, 104 U. S. 485 [Bk. 26. L. ed., 807]; Blake v San Francisco, 113 U. S., 679 [Bk. 28, L. ed , 1070].

If, therefore, there is any patentable novelty in the O'Haire contrivance, it is in the placing of the rock shaft inside the bar to which the hand straps are attached. But the plaintiff's counsel, in order to bring the device used by the defendant within the monopoly of the O'Haire patent, insist that this is no part of the patented contrivance, and the testimony shows that the defendant does not use it.

We are of opinion, therefore, that, construing the patent of O'Haire, in view of the state of the art at the date of its issue, as we are compelled to do, in order to leave any ground whatever on which it can be sustained, the defendant does not infringe.

We have next to consider the patent granted to the plaintiff, dated March 30, 1875, "for an improvement in signaling devices for street cars."

The specification thus states the object of the contrivance described in the patent:

"The prevalence of street cars managed by the driver, without the aid of a conductor, makes it necessary that every possible facility should be provided for him as well as the passengers.

"The ordinary street car has a signal bell located at each end, with a bell strap attached thereto, which runs centrally alone the ridge or highest part of the ceiling. This strap, as thus located, is inaccessible to many passengers.

"My improvement is intended to remedy this trouble, and consists in a new combination and arrangement with a street car of bells or gongs and of the cords or straps which operate them, whereby passengers can, without rising from their seats, signal to the driver. This is of primary importance to invalids, ladies and children, and that more especially when the car is crowded."

The device covered by the patent consists of the placing of two bells, attached to the rafters of the bonnet or hood of the driver's platform, one at each corner of the front end of the car. To the hammer of each bell is attached one end of a bell cord, the other end of which is attached to the inner side of the rear wall of the car, the cords being led along the lower margin of the ceiling, one on each side the car, from which bell pulls or hand straps are suspended at intervals within easy reach of the seated passengers so that they, without rising from their seats can ring the bell.

The claim was as follows: "In a street car two bell cords, each provided with a system of pull straps, and arranged in such manner as to pass along the lower margin of the roof on the opposite sides of the car and connect directly with a signal bell or gong attached to the outside of the driver's end of the car, substantially as and for the purposes set forth."

We are of opinion that there is no patentable invention described in this patent. Bell straps or cords running from one end of an omnibus or street car to the other, under the middle of the ceiling, were well known and in common use years before the application of Stephenson for his patent. The fact that they were so placed and used is mentioned in the specification. The evidence also establishes the fact, that before the year 1870 it was a common practice to attach pendant bell pulls or hand straps to the central cord so as to bring it within easier reach of the passengers. The evidence shows that many of the cars in which such hand straps or bell pulls were used were built and sold in New York. The use of such pendant hand straps long before the application of Stephenson for the patent now under consideration is conclusively proven

It is also shown by the evidence that as early as the year 1861 a bell cord or strap running along the sides of the cars above the heads of the passengers was publicly used on street cars in Boston and Philadelphia, and the same arrangement of the cord or strap was shown in the patent of Charles Carr, issued July 5, 1870. When, therefore, the patent of Stephenson for his improvement in signaling devices for street cars was applied for in March, 1875, the only advance in the art which his specification showed was the applying to the cords running along the sides of the cars of the bell pulls or hand straps which had before then been attached to the cord running over the middle of the aisle. This, in our judgment, did not require the least degree of ingenuity, and cannot be called invention. [illegible] v. Greenwood, 11 How., 248; Stimpson v. Woodman, 10 Wall., 117 [77 U. S., bk. [illegible] L. ed., [illegible]]; Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S., 192 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 438]; Slawson v. R. R. [illegible] U. S., 649 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 576]; King v. [illegible] 100 U. S., 99 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 870]; Phillips v. Detroit, 111 U. S., 604 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 532]. The patent, therefore, by which the plaintiff seeks to embrace in his monopoly such an arrangement of the signal cords and hand straps in a street car is void.

The third patent, which the plaintiff avers is infringed by the defendant, is for the improvement in street cars granted to John Stephenson the appellant, September 7, 1875, on an application dated August 7, 1874. It is thus described in the specification:

"In running street cars it has been found to be a serious source of trouble to have the driver continually turning around to ascertain when it is necessary to stop to permit passengers to enter or leave the car, as such constantly takes away his attention from his horses, and that frequently when it is most required.

"To obviate this trouble is the object of my present improvement. My invention for this purpose consists in combining a mirror with the front hood of the car, it being so arranged in connection therewith and with an opening in the front end of the car as to give to the driver a clear view of the inside of the car and through the entrance door of the latter, and that without the necessity of his having to turn around for such purposes, thereby enabling him, without withdrawing his attention from the horses, to see when it is necessary to stop, either to receive a passenger or to allow one to get out.

"This mirror is set at a small angle to a horizontal plane, so that its upper edge will protect [illegible] beyond its lower edge, it being [illegible] at such angle as will enable it, through the opening F in the front end of the car, to give the best view of the interior of the car, and through the glass windows of the entrance door A."

The claim was as follows: "The combination of a hoodlet E provided with a mirror C, with an opening, or an opening covered by a transparent medium F, in the front end of a street car, substantially as and for the purposes set forth."

A combination is patentable only when the several elements of which it is composed produce by their joint action a new and useful result, or an old result in a cheaper or otherwise more advantageous way.

The elements of which the combinati[illegible] scribed in this patent is composed are a[illegible] and well known. They were a mirror, the [illegible] of a street car over the driver's platform, [illegible] glass panel in the front end of the car ove[illegible] door. We are of opinion that the alleged [illegible] bination of these three elements, as describ[illegible] this patent, is not patentable. There is, in [illegible] no combination, but a mere aggregation o[illegible] arate devices, each of which performs the [illegible] tion for which, when used separately, it [illegible] adapted, and does not contribute to any ne[illegible] sult the product of their joint use. The [illegible] attained is merely the reflection of an obj[illegible] a mirror. The hood and the glass panel i[illegible] end of the car do not change in any degre[illegible] function of the mirror. It is used as a m[illegible] only. The function of the hood is not cha[illegible] by the mirror or glass panel, or both. I[illegible] hood only on which, as in the wall of a [illegible] the mirror is hung. The use of a glass in[illegible] of a wooden panel in the front end of th[illegible] simply removes an opaque obstacle betwee[illegible] mirror and the object to be reflected by it. [illegible] ther one of the three elements of the al[illegible] combination performs any new office or im[illegible] any new power to the others, and, comb[illegible] they do not produce any new result or an[illegible] result more cheaply or otherwise more a[illegible] tageously. There is, therefore, no pater[illegible] combination.

This conclusion is illustrated and comfi[illegible] by the following cases: Hailes v. Van Wo[illegible] 20 Wall., 353 [87 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed., [illegible] Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S., 347 [Bk. [illegible] ed. 719]; Pickering v. McCullough, 104 U. S. [Bk. 26, L. ed., 749].

It results from the views we have expresse[illegible] the decree of the Circuit Court dismissing t[illegible] was right. It is, therefore, affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court.

Cited—Post, 524.

WALTER BOHALL, Plff. in Err.,

v.

D. N. DILLA.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 47-51.)

Trusts. 1. What will charge holder of pat[illegible] lands as trustee. 2. Preemption laws—[illegible] dence to be continuous and personal—wh[illegible] cuses absence.

1. To charge the holder of the legal title t[illegible] under the patent as trustee of another, the cla[illegible] must show himself entitled to it, and its refu[illegible] him in consequence of errors in the rulings [illegible] Land Department upon the law applicable [illegible] facts found. It is not sufficient to show that [illegible] may have been error in adjudging the title [illegible] patentee.

2. The preemption laws require a residenc[illegible] continuous and personal. The settler may [illegible] cused for temporary absences caused by well [illegible] ed apprehensions of violence, sickness, the pr[illegible] of an epidemic, judicial compulsion, engagem[illegible] the military or naval service, and other like c[illegible]

[No. 194.]

Submitted Mar. 10, 1885, Decided Mar. 23, [illegible]

NOTE.—Preemption rights. See United St[illegible] Fitzgerald, 40 U. S. (15 Pet.), 407, note.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

[48] The history and facts appear in the Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Field:

This case comes before us from the Supreme Court of California. The plaintiff in the court below, the defendant in error here, is the holder of a patent of the United States for certain lands situated in Humboldt County, in that State, issued to him under the preemption laws upon proof of settlement and improvement, and the present action is to recover their possession. In his complaint he alleges his ownership in fee of the premises on a day designated, the entry thereon of the defendant without license, and the subsequent withholding of them; also that the value of the annual rents and profits of the premises is $800, for which sum and the restitution of the premises he prays judgment.

The answer of the defendant denies the several allegations of the complaint, and sets up in a special count, by way of a cross complaint, various matters, which, as he insists, constitute in equity a good defense to the action and entitle him to a decree; that he has an equitable right to the premises; that the plaintiff holds the title in trust for him; and that the plaintiff should be required to convey the same to him.

The matters set up as grounds for equitable relief are the previous settlement upon the premises and their improvement by the defendant, and certain proceedings taken by him to acquire the title under the preemption laws, which were disregarded and held insufficient by the Land Department of the Government, but which he contends establish his right to the patents.

It appears from the record and findings of the court that in October, 1862, the defendant purchased from his brother William, then in occupation of the land, the possessory right of the latter to the premises and his improvements thereon, received a deed from him, and immediately thereafter went into possession which was held until March 23, 1865; that on that date, in consideration of $600 partly paid in cash, and partly payable in installments, the defendant contracted to convey the premises and improvements to the plaintiff Dilla, who thereupon was put into possession and continued in possession until the 5th of May, 1868; that he was then [49] evicted under a judgment obtained by the defendant upon the contract of purchase, and the latter was restored to the possession. In July, 1869, the defendant removed to Arcata, about twenty miles distant, and remained there until October, 1871, when his family went back to the land, followed by himself in December. In April, 1872, he moved to Mattole, about eighty miles distant, and there remained until August, 1874, when he again returned. In October following he again moved to Arcata and did not return until March, 1875.

The land was surveyed in 1873, and the plat thereof filed in the Land Office in October of that year. On the 3d of that month the defendant Bohall filed his declaratory statement, alleging settlement on October 22, 1862, and claiming the land. On the 26th of December following, the plaintiff Dilla filed his declaratory statement, alleging settlement under the preemption laws on the 25th of March, 1865, and claiming the land. A contest thus arose in the local land office between these parties as to which was entitled to the land under the preemption laws. The register and receiver of the land office differed in their judgment, the receiver holding that the land should be awarded to Dilla, and the register that it should go to Bohall. The contest was thereupon transferred to the General Land Office at Washington, and the Commissioner sustained the claim of Dilla, holding that, from the time of his settlement in 1865 until ejected in 1868, he had fully complied with the law; that his absence since then was compulsory, as he was unable to make a residence on the land without being in contempt of the court under whose judgment he was evicted; that his non-residence was for that reason excusable, and should not be allowed to work against him. But as to Bohall, the Commissioner held that his residence on the land had not been continuous since his settlement, but had been interrupted by residence elsewhere for several periods; and that the occupation of tenants during such periods did not satisfy the provisions of the preemption laws, which required the continuous personal residence of the preemptor; and therefore his claim was rejected. The decision of the commissioner was affirmed on appeal by the acting Secretary of the Interior. It is upon this ruling, charged to be erroneous, that the defendant relies to maintain his claim for equitable relief. The local state court, upon these facts and others not material to the case, adjudged that the defendant was entitled to the decree prayed; but the Supreme Court of the State held otherwise and reversed the judgment; and, as there was no finding as to the value of the rents and profits of the premises, ordered a new trial if the plaintiff so elected. Upon the filing of the remittitur in the lower court, the plaintiff waived his privilege of a new trial, and the court thereupon, on the pleadings and previous findings, gave judgment for the plaintiff, which was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the State; and this judgment is brought here for review.

Messrs. W. W. Cope and S. M. Buck, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Walter Van Dyke, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

The system of pleading in civil cases in the courts of California permits an equitable defense to be set up in a special count, by way of cross complaint, in the answer to an action for the possession of lands. The cross complaint is in the nature of a bill in equity, and must contain its material allegations, disclosing a case which, if established, would entitle the defendant to a decree enjoining the further prosecution of the action, or directing that the title be conveyed to him. This equitable defense is therefore to be first considered, for, according to its disposition will the necessity exist for further proceedings in the action at law, in which the legal title of the parties will alone control. Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S., 420 [Bk. 26, L. ed., 800]; Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal., 248, 273; Arguello v Edinger, 10 Id., 150.

We do not think the claim of the defendant to the equitable relief he seeks can be sustained on the grounds stated in his answer or cross [illegible] To charge the holder of the legal [illegible] to land under a patent of the United States, [illegible] a trustee of another, and to compel him to [illegible] the title, the claimant must present such [illegible] as will show that he himself was entitled [illegible] the patent from the Government, and that, in [illegible] of erroneous rulings of the officers [illegible] Land Department upon the law appli[illegible] to the facts found, it was refused to [illegible] It is not sufficient to show that there [illegible] have been error in adjudging the title [illegible] the patentee. It must appear that by the [illegible] properly administered the title should [illegible] award to the claimant. Smelt[illegible] Kemp, 104 U. S., 636, 647 [Bk. [illegible] 875, 879]; Boggs v. Merced Min[illegible] 14 Cal., 279, 363. It is therefore [illegible] for the decision of this case what [illegible] may be upon the conclusions [illegible] as to the possession of the [illegible] It is plain that the defendant, [illegible] did not bring himself within the pro[illegible] of the preemption laws. Those laws [illegible] for the benefit of persons mak[illegible] a settlement upon the public lands, fol[illegible] residence and improvement and the [illegible] of a dwelling thereon. This implies [illegible] both continuous and personal. [illegible] continuous residence was shown on [illegible] of Bohall. He was placed in pos[illegible] of the premises under the judgment [illegible] state court in May, 1868; and it was [illegible] to prove that he occupied them [illegible] after filing his declaratory [illegible] It was shown, however, that [illegible] elsewhere from July, 1869, to [illegible] 1871, and from April, 1872, [illegible] August, 1874. Though he claimed the land [illegible] years he and his family resided else[illegible] during four of them, and no sufficient [illegible] for such residence was offered. It is only [illegible] circumstances that residence away [illegible] the land is permissible. The settler may [illegible] for temporary absences caused by [illegible] founded apprehensions of violence, by sick[illegible] by the presence of an epidemic, by judi[illegible] compulsion, or by engagement in the mil[illegible] or naval service. Except in such and like [illegible] the requirement of a continuous residence [illegible] of the settler is imperative.

The alleged fraud of Dilla in obtaining pos[illegible] under the alleged contract, if any such [illegible] existed, could have had no effect upon [illegible] defendant's residence after his restoration to [illegible] in May, 1868.

[illegible] could not maintain his equitable de[illegible] the plaintiff was entitled to judgment up[illegible] the legal title as shown by his patent.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test.

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] U. S., [illegible]; 116 U. S., [illegible]

[illegible] AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plf. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES W IDE.

([illegible] S. C., Reporter's ed., [illegible])

[illegible] of [illegible]—joint action against several defendants—separate defenses.

[illegible] of section 2 of the Act of March [illegible]

3, 1875, refers only to suits where exists a separate and distinct cause of action, on which a separate and distinct suit might be maintained. It has no application to cases in which the defendants are sued jointly and as joint contractors.

2. A separate controversy is not introduced into the case by separate defenses to the same cause of action, although they may present different questions for determination.

3. A defendant cannot make an action several which a plaintiff has elected to make joint.

[No. 856.]

Submitted Dec. 22, 1884. Decided Mar. 23, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. John L. Cadwalader, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Austin G. Fox, for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error for the review of an order of the Circuit Court remanding a case which had been removed from the Supreme Court of the State of New York under the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, 18 Stat. at L., 470. The suit was brought by Ide, the defendant in error, a citizen of New York, against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, a Kentucky corporation; the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad Company, and the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad Company, Ohio corporations; the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, a New York corporation, and the Boston and Albany Railroad Company, the Boston and Maine Railroad Company, and the Nashua and Worcester Railroad Company, Massachusetts corporations. The complaint alleged, in substance, that the defendants, being all common carriers, associated themselves together under the name of the "White Line Central Transit Company," for the transportation jointly of goods from places on or near the Mississippi River to places on or near the Atlantic coast, and among others from Columbus, Mississippi, to Dover and Manchester, New Hampshire; that while so associated together the defendants received at Columbus, Mississippi, from certain persons doing business there, several lots of cotton which, in consideration of certain freight to be paid, they agreed to transport and deliver to the Cocheco Manufacturing Company at Dover, and the [53
Amoskeag Manufacturing Company at Manchester, New Hampshire; that bills of lading were issued by the defendants whereby they acknowledged the receipt of the cotton to be transported over their line and delivered to the respective consignees thereof; that the defendants have failed to deliver the cotton, and that the plaintiff is the assignee of all claims against them on that account.

The Louisville and Nashville and the New York Central and Hudson River Companies were served with process and appeared in the State Court. The Louisville and Nashville Company answered the complaint. In the answer it admitted the corporate existence of the several defendants, and that they were each and all common carriers. It denied that the defendants had associated themselves together for the transportation of goods jointly, or that they held themselves out as common carriers engaged jointly in the business of such transportation; but it alleged that a number of corporations, among which were the defendants, entered into an agreement to carry on a fast freight line between cities in the eastern and western parts of the country, and fixing uniform rates of transportation and regulating the necessary incidents to such business, which business was to be done under the name of the "Central Transit Company," afterwards familiarly known as the "White Line," and called in the complaint the "White Line Central Transit Company." It then set out the provisions of the agreement between the several corporations for carrying on the line, showing the way in which the business was to be done and the earnings and expenses divided, "and that each company should pay for any damage or loss occurring on its road, and if such damage could not be located it should be prorated between the companies forming the route over which the property would have passed to its destination, in the same ratios as the freight moneys." It then averred "that when goods were delivered to any one of the said companies to be transported by said fast freight line, bills of lading therefor were to be issued in the name of The Central Transit Company, 'White Line,' by an agent of such Transit Company, who, in his representative capacity, acted separately for each, and was [54] not authorized to act for such companies jointly; and that in all such bills of lading so issued it was expressly stipulated and agreed that in case of any loss, detriment or damage done to or sustained by the property therein receipted for, that company should alone be held answerable therefor in whose actual custody the same might be at the time of the happening thereof." It then denied that the cotton sued for was ever delivered to the line, or to either of the companies composing the same, for transportation, and averred that if any bills of lading were ever issued it was done by a person who had no authority for that purpose, either from the Louisville and Nashville Company or any of the other defendants. It also averred that no loss had happened to the property while in its actual custody, and that Ide, who brought the suit, was not the real party in interest therein, but that the alleged assignment to him was without consideration, and made simply to vest the right of action in the plaintiff, who was a citizen of New York, and that the real parties in interest were the Cocheco Company and the Amoskeag Company.

NOTE.—Removal of causes under Act of 1875; citizenship. See Del., etc., Co. v. Meyer, 100 U. S., XXV., 593, note.

It also appears from the statements in the petition for removal, that the New York Central and Hudson River Company filed a separate answer in the State Court, but that answer has not been copied into the transcript. The Louisville and Nashville Company on filing its answer presented to the State Court a petition for the removal of the suit to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, which was the proper district, on the ground "that there is in said suit a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different States, namely: a controversy between the plaintiff, a citizen of the State of New York, and the defendant, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, your petitioner, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, which can be fully determined as between them without the presence of any of the other persons or bodies corporate made parties to said suit." The Supreme Court of the State accepted the petition and ordered the removal of the suit, but the circuit court when the case got there, remanded it. This writ of error was brought for a reversal of the last order.

The petition for removal was filed under the last clause of section 2 of the Act of 1875, which is as follows:

"And when in any suit * * * there shall be a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different States, and which can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the plaintiffs or defendants, actually interested in such controversy, may remove said suit to the Circuit Court of the United States for the proper district."

As we have already said at this Term in Ayres v. Wiswall, 112 U. S., 192 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 695] "the rule is now well established that this clause in the section refers only to suits where there exists a 'separate and distinct cause of action on which a separate and distinct suit might have been brought and complete relief afforded as to such cause of action, with all the parties on one side of that controversy citizens of different States from those on the other. To say the least the case must be one capable of separation into parts, so that in one of the parts a controversy will be presented with citizens of one or more States on one side and citizens of different States on the other, which can be fully determined without the presence of the other parties to the suit, as it has been begun.'" Hyde v. Ruble, 10 U. S., 407 [Bk. 26, L. ed., 823]; Fraser v. Jennison, 106 U. S., 191 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 131].

In the present case all the defendants are sued jointly and as joint contractors. There is more than one contract set out in the complaint, and there is therefore more than one cause of action embraced in the suit; but all the contracts are alleged to be joint and binding on all the defendants, jointly and in the same right. There is no pretense of a separate cause of action in favor of the plaintiff and against the Louisville and Nashville Company alone. The answer of the company treats the several causes of action alike and makes the same defense to all. For the purposes of the present inquiry the case stands as it would if the complaint contained but a single cause of action. The claim of right to a removal is based entirely on the fact that the Louisville and Nashville Company, the petitioning defendant, has presented a separate defense to the joint action by filing a separate answer tendering separate issues for trial. This it has been frequently decided, is not enough to introduce a separate controversy into the suit within the meaning of the statute. Hyde v. Ruble, supra; Ayres v. Wiswall, supra. Separate answers by the several defendants sued on joint causes of action may present different questions for determination, but they do not necessarily divide the suit into separate controversies. A defendant has no right to say that an action shall be several which a plaintiff elects to make joint. Smith v. Rines, 2 Sum., 348. A sepa [illegible] defense may defeat a joint recovery, but it cannot deprive a plaintiff of his right to prosecute his own suit to final determination in his own way. The cause of action is the subject-matter of the controversy, and that is for all the purposes of the suit whatever the plaintiff declares it to be in his pleadings. Here, it is certain [illegible] contracts, entered into by all the defendants for the transportation of property. On the one side of the controversy upon that cause of action is the plaintiff, and on the other all the defendants. The separate defenses of the defendants relate only to their respective interests in the [illegible] controversy. The controversy is the case, and the case is not divisible.

It is said, however, that by the New York Code of Civil Procedure, section 1204, "judgment may be given for or against one or more plaintiffs, and for or against one or more defendants," and under this it has been held that when several are sued upon a joint contract, and it appears that only a portion are bound, the plaintiff may recover against those who are primarily liable. The same rule undoubtedly prevails in many other States, but this does not make a joint contract several, nor divide a joint [illegible] into separate parts. It may expedite judicial proceedings and save costs, but it does not change the form of the controversy, that is to say the case. The plaintiff can still sue to recover from all, though he may be able to succeed only as to a part.

The order remanding the case is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Blatchford took no part in the decision of this case.

Dissenting: Mr. Justice Harlan.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible]—114 U. S., 88, 62; 115 U. S., 42, 61, 259.

N. D. PUTNAM ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

GEORGE E. INGRAHAM.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 57-60.)

Removal of causes—joint action against several defendants—separate defenses.

1. The act clause of section 2 of the Act of March 3, 1875, has no application to cases in which the defendants are sued jointly and as joint contractors. The preceding case of The Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Ide, ante, 65, affirmed.

2. A separate controversy is not introduced into the case by separate defenses to the same cause of action.

3. The fact that one of the defendants is in default is unimportant.

[No. 1246.]

Submitted Mar. 2, 1885. Decided Mar. 23, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See, also, the preceding case of L. & N. R. R. Co. v. Ide.

Mr. Herbert R. Dickson, Wager Swayne, Lewis E. Stanton and Edward W. Bell, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Charles E. Perkins, for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error for the review of an order of the Circuit Court remanding a suit to a State Court. The suit was brought in the Superior Court of the County of Hartford, Connecticut, by George E. Ingraham, the defendant in error, a citizen of Connecticut, against N. D. Putnam and Henry Earle, citizens of New York, and W. G. Morgan, a citizen of Connecticut, as partners in business under the name of Putnam, Earle & Co., to recover a balance claimed to be due from the partnership on an account for money lent, paid out and expended, and upon a note of $5,000, made by W. G. Morgan to the order of Putnam, Earle & Co. and by the firm indorsed to Ingraham. The complaint contained simply the common counts, but a bill of particulars subsequently filed disclosed the true nature of the claim to be the note, and an account for the purchase and sale of stocks beginning August 17, 1883, and ending February 29, 1884.

The defendants, Putnam and Earle, filed a separate answer, which contained: 1. A general denial of all the allegations in the complaint; 2. An averment as to the account, that the alleged loans were all made to the defendant Morgan for his individual and private use, and not to the firm; 3. An averment as to the note, that it was given for money loaned to W. G. Morgan alone for his individual use, and not to the firm, [58] and that it was indorsed by Morgan in the name of the firm by collusion between him and Ingraham, and with intent to defraud Putnam and Earle; and, 4. A statement that the partnership of Putnam, Earle & Co. was not formed until January 2, 1884, and that all the transactions in the bill of particulars before that date took place, if at all, between the plaintiff and William G. Morgan, who, during the years 1882 and 1883, was only the agent of Putnam and Earle and not a partner with them, and that as to none of the items in the bill dated in the year 1883 were they under any joint liability with Morgan as partners.

Morgan has never answered the complaint, and as to him the case stands on default. After filing their answer the defendants Putnam and Earle, presented a petition to the Superior Court for the removal of the suit to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut. The material part of this petition, aside from a statement of the citizenship of the parties, is as follows:

"And your petitioners further say, that in the suit above mentioned there is a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different States, and which can be fully determined between them, to wit: a controversy between the present petitioners, N. D. Putnam and Henry Earle, and the said George E. Ingraham and William G. Morgan, as by the pleadings in said cause will more fully appear."

Upon the presentation of this petition the Superior Court declined to enter an order for the removal of the cause. Thereupon the petitioners entered a copy of the record in the Circuit

---

Note—Removal of causes under Act of 1875: citizenship: See Mayer v. Delaware, etc., Co., 100 U. S., [illegible] 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

Court of the United States. This being done, the plaintiff Ingraham moved that court to remand the suit, and the motion was granted. To reverse an order to that effect, this writ of error was brought.

[59]

We are unable to distinguish this case materially from that of The Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Ide [ante, 63], just decided. The suit is brought against all the defendants jointly to recover upon what are alleged to be their joint promises and undertakings. The defendants, who are not citizens of Connecticut, have filed a separate answer in which they deny their liability altogether, and claim besides, that if liable at all on part of the account sued for, it is not jointly with the defendant Morgan. This is their separate defense to the joint suit which Ingraham has elected to bring against them and Morgan upon what he claims to be the joint contracts of all the defendants.

In Connecticut, as in New York, "judgment may be given for or against one or more of several plaintiffs, and for or against one or more of several defendants," and in addition to this the court may, in Connecticut, "determine the ultimate rights of the parties on each side as between themselves, and grant to the defendant any affirmative relief he may be entitled to." But this, as we have said in the case just decided, does not make a joint contract several, nor divide a joint suit into separate parts. The suit is still one and indivisible for the purposes of removal.

The fact that Morgan has not answered out is in default is unimportant. The suit is still on joint causes of action, and the plaintiff, if he sustains the allegations of his complaint at the trial, will be entitled to a joint judgment against all the defendants. The default places the parties in no different position with reference to a removal than they would occupy if Morgan had answered and set up an entirely different defense from that of the other defendants. A separate controversy is not introduced into the case by separate defenses to the same cause of action.

As the petitioning defendants have asked no affirmative relief either against the plaintiff or their co-defendant, no question can arise under the rule of practice in Connecticut which allows the court to determine the ultimate rights of the parties on each side as between themselves. In the present case, the only controversy is as to the right of the plaintiff to recover against the defendants.

[60]

The order to remand is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—115 U. S., 61, 259.

ST. LOUIS AND SAN FRANCISCO RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL., Appts.,

v.

WILLIAM C. WILSON.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 60-62.)

Removal of causes—action against a citizen of the same State and one of another State, not removable—parties.

An action brought in a State Court against an incorporated company of that State and a citizen of another State to compel the transfer of stock, which has been purchased at a judicial sale as the property of such citizen by the plaintiff, on the books of the company, is not removable into the Federal Courts. The company is a necessary party although the citizen of the other State raises a separate issue as to the validity of the proceedings under which said sale was had.

[No. 1194.]

Submitted Mar. 2, 1885. Decided Mar. 23, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. James O. Broadhead, for appellants.

Mr. James S. Botsford, for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from an order of the Circuit Court of the United States remanding a suit to the Circuit Court of the City of St. Louis, Missouri, from which it had been removed upon a petition filed under the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, 18 Stat. at L., 470. The suit was in equity and brought by William C. Wilson, the appellee, a citizen of Missouri, against the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company, a Missouri Corporation, and Jesse Seligman and James Seligman, citizens of New York, to compel the Company to transfer to Wilson on its books certain shares of its capital stock standing in the name of the Seligmans, and to issue to him certificates therefor. The petition states that Wilson purchased the stock at a sale under an execution issued upon a judgment in his favor and against the Seligmans, and that on the 19th of December, 1883, he exhibited to the Company his certificate of purchase and demanded that the Company cause his name "to be entered on the stock books of said Corporation as the owner of said shares of said capital stock, * * * and further duly notified said Corporation to pay to him all dividends that might thereafter be declared and payable to and on said stock;" but that the Company refused so to do. The prayer is for a transfer of the stock, the cancellation of the certificates to the Seligmans, the issue of new certificates and payment of dividends to Wilson, and an injunction prohibiting the Seligmans from acting as stockholders.

The Company and the Seligmans filed separate answers, but setting up substantially the same defense, to wit: that the stock, though standing in the names of the Seligmans, did not in fact belong to them when the execution was levied, or when the sale to Wilson was made, because they had long before that time sold and transferred their certificates to other parties for value, who were the real holders and owners of the stock, though not transferred to them on the books. The Seligmans in their answer deny the validity of the judgment against them, for the reason that it was rendered in a suit to which they were not parties.

The petition for removal was presented by the Seligmans alone, and, after stating the citizenship of the parties, proceeds as follows: "That there is in said suit a controversy wholly between citizens of different States, which can be fully determined as between them without the presence of the defendant, the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad. That there is in said suit a separate controversy wholly between said plaintiff and your petitioners, citizens of different States as aforesaid, which can be fully determined as between them, and your petitioners are actually interested in such controversy. That the controversy in said suit between plaintiff and your petitioners, as made by the pleadings, is wholly distinct and separate from that between the plaintiff and the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company."

NOTE.—Removal of causes under Act of 1875; citizenship. See Meyer v. Delaware, etc., Co., 100 U. S., bk. 25, 593, note.

Upon this petition the State Court removed the suit, but the Circuit Court of the United States remanded it. To reverse this order of the United States Court the appeal was taken.

There is but one controversy in this case, and that is as to the duty of the Railroad Company to transfer to Wilson the stock standing in the name of the Seligmans on its books and to issue new certificates therefor. Upon the one side of that controversy is the plaintiff, a citizen of Missouri, and on the other the Railroad Company, a Missouri corporation. The sole purpose of the suit is to establish the duty and enforce its performance. This cannot be done without the presence of the Company, for it is upon the Company itself that the decree must operate. The Seligmans are made parties only in aid of the principal relief which is asked. As the stock stands in their names on the books, the Company may well claim a judicial finding in the same which shall bind them, if upon the final hearing a transfer is ordered. The suit, therefore, is in truth and in form against both the Company and the Seligmans on a single cause of action, and cannot be removed unless the separate answer of the Seligmans introduces a separate controversy. This we have held in Louisville & Nashville R. R. Co. v. Ide [ante, 68], just decided, is not necessarily the effect of separate [illegible] under separate defenses to the same action. No relief whatever can be granted unless it is found to be the duty of the Company to transfer the stock, and as to that controversy the Company is an indispensable party. R. R. v. Mills, 113 U. S., 249 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 949]; Wagner v. Life Assoc., 112 U. S., 717 [Bk. 28, L. ed. [illegible]].

The order remanding the cause is affirmed.

[illegible] copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] U. S., [illegible].

JAMES SARGENT, Appt.,

v.

HALL SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 63-86.)

Patent law—letters patent No. 186369, for improvements in time locks—construction—when against counter.

1. In letters patent No. 186369, granted to James Sargent January 16, 1877, for improvements in time locks, the combination lock forming a member of the combinations claimed by the two claims of the patent, is one which has a bolt or bearing that turns on an axis or revolves, as distinguished from a sliding bolt, and those claims are not infringed by a structure in which the combination lock has not a turning or revolving bolt.

2. Claim 2 of the patent requires that the tumblers of the combination lock and its spindle shall be free to rotate while the bolt work is held in its locked position, by the bolt or bearing of the combination lock.

3. In patents for combinations of mechanism, limitations and provisos imposed by the inventor, especially such as were introduced into an application after it had been persistently rejected, must be strictly construed against the inventor, and in favor of the public, and looked upon as in the nature of disclaimers.

[No. 178.]

Argued Jan. 21, 26, 27, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Edmund Wetmore, George Ticknor Curtis and S. A. Bowman, for appellant.

Messrs. Edward N. Dickerson and William C. Cochran, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity, brought in March, 1877, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio, by James Sargent, the appellant, against the Hall Safe and Lock Company and others, the appellees, for the infringement of letters patent No. 186369, granted to Sargent January 16, 1877, for improvements in time locks. It was afterwards consolidated, as of November, 1879, with another suit in equity, brought in July, 1876, in the same court, by the same plaintiff against the same defendants, for the infringement of reissued letters patent No. 6787, granted to Sargent December 7, 1875, for improvements in time locks, on the surrender of original letters patent No. 121782, granted to Stephen W. Hollen, December 12, 1871. The Circuit Court heard the case on pleadings and proofs and dismissed the bill. The plaintiff has appealed, but no claim is made in this court to recover on the Hollen reissue. [64]

The specification and claims of No. 186369 are as follows:

"Be it known that I, James Sargent, of Rochester in the County of Monroe and State of New York, have invented certain new and useful improvements in locks for safe and vault doors, of which the following is a specification:

This invention relates to certain improvements in locks for safe and vault doors, its object being to construct a time movement in such a manner as to have it guard, and operate in conjunction with, a combination lock, so as to render said combination lock, when locked, inoperative and incapable of being unlocked until the arrival of the appointed hour, at which time the time mechanism will liberate or cease its guarding action on the combination lock, and admit of said lock being operated and unlocked by the person having knowledge of the combination upon which said lock is set, so as to enable the bolt work of the safe or vault door to be retracted and the door opened.

Fig. 1.

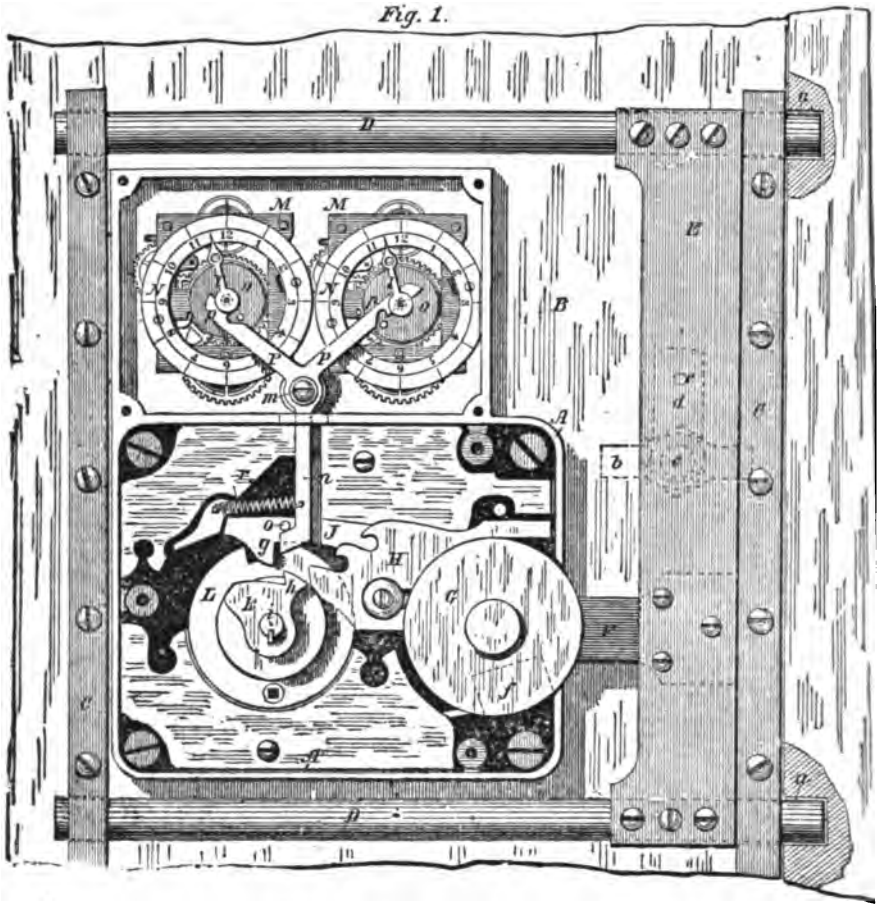

Fig. 2

My invention consists in combining a time mechanism with a combination lock, and adapting the same to operate in connection with the bolt work of a safe or vault door, the time mechanism being constructed to act in conjunction with, and guard, dog, or render inoperative, the aforesaid combination lock, when locked, the said combination lock having a bolt or bearing specially constructed and arranged, so, that, when in one position, it will rest upon or receive the pressure of the bolt work of the door when the latter is thrown out and the lock locked, and thus prevent the retraction of the bolt work.

This arrangement retains the bolt work in a locked condition during the hours appointed for it to remain locked, and prevents the lock from being unlocked by anyone having legitimate or surreptitious knowledge of the co nation upon which the lock is set, until th rival of the appointed hour, when the t mechanism will cease its dogging or guar action upon said combination lock, and a of said lock being operated by those in po sion of the combination, so as to enable t to place the bolt or bearing of the lock in position as to enable the retraction of the work, whereby the safe or vault door ca opened.

The invention further consists in a ce combination, substantially as hereinafte forth, that is to say, a union consisting combination lock, a time movement and a lever or connection, adapted to be placed a safe or vault door, to operate in conjun with the bolt work thereon, said yoke lev connection being constructed and located in respect to the combination lock as to rend

[illegible] of the same absolutely impossible [illegible] locked, and so remain locked until the ar[illegible] of the appointed or predeterminate time, [illegible] which time the said yoke lever or connection, [illegible] the action of the time movement, is [illegible] to cease its guarding or dogging action [illegible] the combination lock, at which time, or [illegible] after during the time the time mech[illegible] has ceased its dogging or guarding ac[illegible] the said lock can be unlocked by the per[illegible] [illegible] of the proper combination up[illegible] the lock is set; the peculiarity and nov[illegible] of this union being, that, when the said [illegible] lock, with its time mechanism, is [illegible] upon a safe or vault door, to operate [illegible] with the bolt work thereon, and [illegible] the tumblers or combination wheels [illegible] lock, and the spindle of the same, to[illegible] with its usual indicator, are all left free [illegible] moved or rotated without exerting any [illegible] action or strain whatever upon the [illegible] composing the combination lock, or [illegible] mechanism composing the time [illegible]

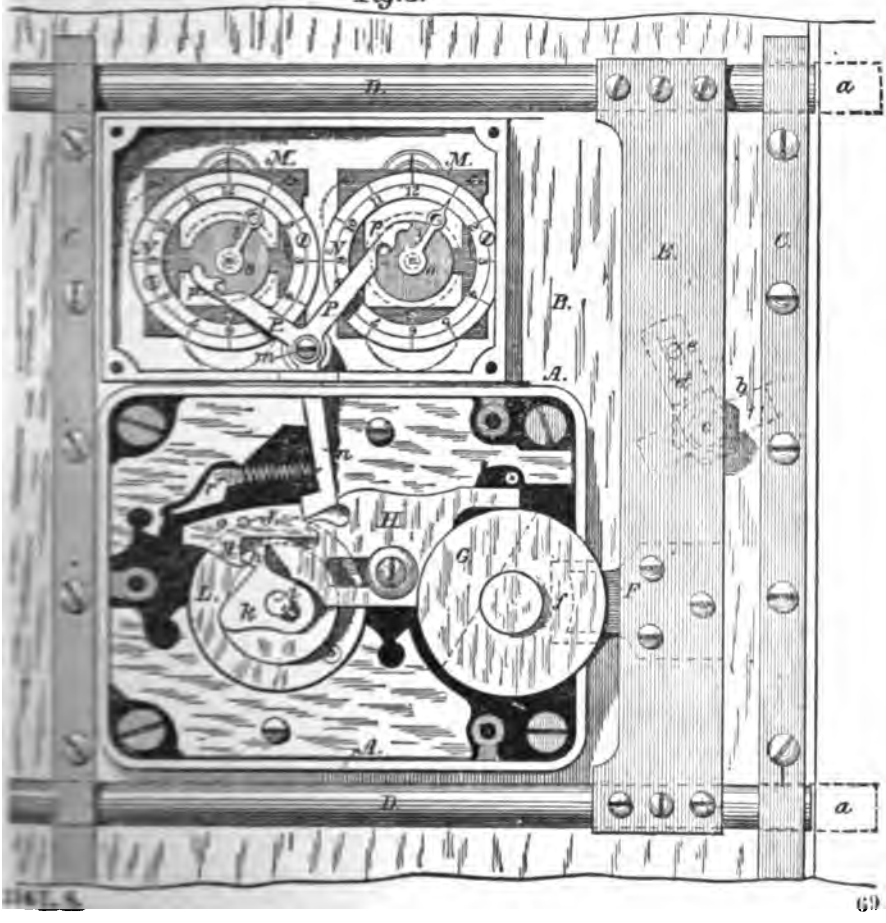
[illegible] the drawings, figure 1 represents a por[illegible] of a safe or vault door, illustrating therein [illegible] work and a combined time mechanism [illegible] combination lock, with covers removed, the [illegible] being thrown out into the jamb of the door, and the combination lock locked and guarded by the time movement. Fig. 2 is a detail view, illustrating a yoke lever or connection adapted to connect with the dog, angle bar, or fence of the combination lock. Fig. 3 represents a portion of a safe or vault door, having thereon a bolt work, and a combined time mechanism and combination lock, the combination lock being unlocked and the bolt work retracted. [66]

Referring to the drawings, the letter A designates the case of a combination lock, the lock-works of which may be of any of the well known forms now in use, provided the same is supplied with a lock bolt or a bearing, constructed and arranged so as to connect with or receive the pressure of the bolt work located on a safe or vault door, when said lock bolt or bearing and the bolt work are placed in a position for locking the door. [67]

The combination lock illustrated in the drawings is one known as "Sargent's Automatic Bank Lock," upon which letters patent were granted August 28, 1866, reissued January 2, 1872.

Said combination lock is shown as applied upon a safe or vault door, B, upon which is arranged a bolt-work, consisting of the usual bolt supporting bars, C, bolts, D, carrying bar, E, having a tongue piece, F, said carrying bar serv- [68]

Fig. 3.



ing as a medium for projecting or retracting the bolts into and out of the sockets, a, constructed in the jamb of the safe or vault, for the purpose of locking or unlocking the door, as shown in Figs. 1 and 3.

The bolt work has the requisite projecting or retracting motion imparted to it from the outside of the door, when opened or closed, through the medium of the usual knob, b, and the spindle, c, which spindle passes through the door, and connects with the carrying bar by any suitable fastening, such as a slot, d, pin, e, and suitable fastening nut.

The lock bolt or bearing of the combination lock may be of a circular, segmental, or other desired form, provided said lock bolt is arranged and adjusted so as to turn upon a suitable axis or bearing, and is so constructed that, in one position, it will prevent the retraction of the bolt-work, so as to retain the safe or vault door locked, while, in another position, it will admit of the bolt work being retracted for the purpose of allowing the safe or vault door to be opened.

In the present example, the lock bolt is shown as provided with an offset or recess, f, which offset or recess is brought in or out of coincidence with the tongue piece on the carrying bar, to admit of the bolt work being projected or retracted through the medium of a sliding bar, H, which carries a dog, fence, or angle bar, J, having a hook, g, which engages with the bit, h, of the cam, K, secured upon the dial spindle, i, which spindle passes through the safe or vault door, in the usual manner, and serves to operate the series of tumblers or combination wheels, L.

The sliding bar H is connected with the lock-bolt or bearing in any suitable manner, its object being to impart motion to said lock bolt or bearing, to secure the objects above specified.

The said lock-bolt or bearing, it will be perceived, is located in its casing, so as to rest closely in the rear of the tongue piece or connection secured upon the carrying bar, and is isolated, so to speak, from the tumblers or combination wheels and the other main working parts of the lock, and, therefore, any strain which is brought to bear upon it by the heavy [69] bolt-work will be expended upon the bolt or bearing and its axis or bearing, and not upon the tumblers or combination wheels.

It will be seen that, to unlock the combination lock, the hook of the dog, angle bar, or fence, J, will drop into the notches or slots of the tumblers or combination wheels, when the notches are brought into juxtaposition by the operator who has possession of the combination upon which the lock is set, at which time the bit, h, of the cam K, will also engage with the hook, g, of the said dog, angle bar, or fence, when, by moving the dial spindle, the lock bolt or bearing can be moved or rotated so as to admit of the tongue piece or connection, with the carrying bar and bolt work, being moved back or retracted, as in Fig. 3 of the drawing, and the safe or vault door opened; but, when said combination lock is locked, the hook of the dog, angle bar, or fence, J, is elevated, due to the combination wheels being disarranged, as in Fig. 1 of the drawings, and then no action can be had upon the connecting bar, dog angle bar or fence, or upon the lock-bolt or bearing, by turning of the dial spindle, and hence the tongue piece or connection on the carrying bar of the bolt work rests upon, or connects with, the lock bolt or bearing, and the bolt work is securely retained in a locked condition.

With such combination lock, a one of substantially the same construction and operation, constructed to be applied for use upon a safe or vault door, to operate in connection with the ponderous or great bolt work thereon, is combined a time mechanism, the works of which may be of any of the improved or desired kinds, since its action is to measure time correctly, the object being that, during the interval that the combination lock is locked and the time movement wound up, the same, through a suitable connection made between it and said combination lock, will guard the said lock, and prevent its being unlocked, even by a cashier or other person in possession of the combination upon which the said combination lock is set.

In the present example, a duplex or double time movement is illustrated, such being preferable to a single time movement, as a safeguard against stopping.

Each of the time movements, which are designated by the letters M M, which may consist of a chronometer or clock movement, is supplied with a pointer or hand, attached to a spindle, l, in such a manner as to be capable of being moved backward to set any elected number on the dials N, said dials being spaced off, or marked with a scale of hours and divisions, from one upward to any desired number, according to the mechanism of the chronometer or clock. With each of the dials are combined adjusting disks or arms O, or some equivalent mechanical device, each of which carries a stud, or pin or projection, which acts upon a yoke or lever, which connects with and guards the combination lock the number of hours or time for which it is designated said lock is to remain locked, and thus controls the action of its lock bolt or bearing while the same is in a locked condition.

The yoke lever or connection is designated by the letter P, and it is pivoted or loosely fixed on its support or axis, as at m, or otherwise arranged so as to operate in conjunction with the moving or revolving disks or arms O, the object being, that the yoke lever or connection and the disks can be adjusted with respect to each other, so as to connect with the dog or fence or other working part of the lock, and thus control the movement of the lock bolt or bearing, and hence the locking and unlocking of the combination lock.

One end of the extension of the yoke lever or connection, in the present example, has a suitable hook, n, that engages with a pin, o, on the dog, angle bar or fence, J, by striking under, in which case it holds said dog, angle bar or fence elevated out of contact with the tumblers or combination wheels and the cam of the dial spindle. The arms of said yoke lever or connection connect with, or rest upon, the axis or spindle of the adjusting disks or arms; and the arrangement of the studs, pins or projections on said disks or arms is such that, when the indicators have reached the proper number on the dials, said studs, pins or projections will have acted upon the yoke lever or connection, and moved it sufficient to withdraw the cam ho from beneath the pin o, and thus allow the dog, angle bar or fence to fall, ready to engage with the tumblers or combination wheels and the lock bolt or bearing, at which time the combination lock can be operated by the person in possession of the combination, as the time movement has ceased its guarding or dogging action.

Notches, p p, should be formed in the yoke lever or connection, to allow the studs, pins or projections to fall therein, when the disks or arms and the indicators have reached the designated number, thus serving as stops for the adjusting disks or arms, and prevent the same from moving on, beyond the prearranged hour without the yoke lever or connection upon the studs or projections; for, if some such provision were not made, the combination lock could not be opened until the disks or arms, with the indicators, came around again to said previously designated hour; at least, there might be danger of such occurring.

The double time pieces are employed, as hereinbefore stated, so as to insure the releasing of the combination lock in case one of the time works should stop or fail to come to proper position. A spring r, or an equivalent, such as a weight, should be connected with the lower end of the yoke lever or connection, to produce the necessary reaction to bring the hook of the yoke lever or connection under the pin on the dog, angle bar or fence.

Thus it will be seen, from the foregoing, that the bolt work of the safe or vault door connects with, or rests upon, the bolt or bearing of the combination lock, and that the yoke lever or connection of the time movement connects with the dog, angle bar or fence of said combination lock, rendering the said combination lock inoperative when locked, that is to say, and this lever or connection has the effect of locking or guarding the combination lock during the time it is locked, and preventing its being unlocked until the arrival of the hour previously designated by the time movement; and, should pressure be exerted upon the great or ponderous bolt work of the door, when locked, it will be received and arrested and retained by the bolt or bearing of the combination lock, and will not be transmitted to the tumblers or combination wheels of the combination lock, or to the time movement, or to the yoke lever or connection.

In lieu of the lever connecting with the dog or fence, it may be made to connect or operate on the lock itself, and thus secure the result mentioned recited.

The time mechanism may be in the same case containing the works of the combination lock; or it may be in an apartment connected with the case of the combination lock, or in a case separate and distinct from the case containing the combination lock.

The advantages of this invention over common time locks is that, when the time mechanism ceases the lock mechanism, that is, ceases its locking or guarding action, it does not admit of the unlocking of the bolt work of the door, but simply leaves the combination lock in the condition that it can be unlocked by the person in possession of the proper combination upon which said lock is set, thus securing the advantage of a combination lock for use during the day with a time mechanism for guarding and protecting said lock during the night.

This improvement is of the utmost importance; for, during the hours when the time mechanism is set, no one, not even the officers of a bank or other institution, can open the combination lock; and, when said time mechanism is not set or adjusted, no one, except the holder of the combination upon which the lock is set, can open it. No one who has the combination, whether obtained surreptitiously or otherwise, can open the lock when the time movement is set, for the simple reason that no connection can be made between the tumbler or combination wheels, the dog, angle bar or fence, the spindle and the lock bolt or bearing.

Further: Another feature of the utmost importance present in the combination of parts brought together is, that the connection between the time movement and the combination lock is such that, when the time movement is set, the parts adjusted, and the safe doors closed, the combination lock will be rendered inoperative until a predeterminate hour, during which interval of time the unlocking action of the combination lock will be suspended by the time movement, while the tumblers or combination wheels of the aforesaid combination lock are left free to rotate, if power is exerted upon the dial spindle for the purpose of twisting said [73] spindle out of place or impairing the lock mechanism, and, by such, the working parts of the combination lock cannot be injured or rendered useless for future action.

I have made a special claim, in a separate application for letters patent, for the combination of a time movement and a lock with a lever adapted to be connected with the dog of said lock, to hold it from falling into the slots or notches of the combination wheels except when released by the time movement. So, therefore, in this application, such special construction and arrangement of parts is not specially claimed.

Having thus described my invention, what I claim and desire to secure by letters patent is.

1. The combination, substantially as hereinbefore set forth, of a time mechanism and a combination lock with the bolt work of a safe or vault door, the time mechanism being constructed to act in conjunction with, and render inoperative, the combination lock when locked, said lock having its bolt or bearing constructed to receive the pressure of the series of bolts constituting the bolt work of the door, when locked, and prevent the unlocking of said bolt work until the arrival of a certain predeterminate hour.

2. The combination, substantially as hereinbefore set forth, of a combination lock, and the series of bolts constituting the bolt work of a safe or vault door, with a time movement and a yoke or lever connection, said lever being constructed and located to render the bolt or bearing of the combination lock inoperative when locked, the tumblers of the combination lock and its spindle being free to rotate while the bolt work is held in its locked position by the bolt or bearing of the combination lock."

An analysis of this specification, to ascertain (in view of the state of the art and of the history of the application for the patent as it passed through the Patent Office) what is the proper construction of the claims allowed, will conduce to a solution of the questions involved. The object of the invention is stated to be to have a time movement guard, and operate in conjunction with, a combination lock, to prevent the action of the combination lock until a time previously appointed by the setting [74] of the time movement shall have arrived, in the ordinary running of the time movement, at which time, and not before, the combination lock will come into action, when operated in the usual way, as if there were no time movement. In other words, by the setting of the time movement, the connection between the combination lock and its lock bolt or bearing is interrupted, so as to destroy the capacity of the combination lock to unlock the bolt work, until the time fixed by the setting of the time movement shall, by the ordinary running of the time movement, have arrived, when the connection between the combination lock and its lock bolt or bearing is automatically restored, through the action of the time mechanism. The combination lock is to remain with its organization unchanged, but the time mechanism is to alternately interrupt and restore its connection with its lock bolt or bearing, and the action of the bolt work.

There are two parts to the invention, represented by the two claims. Both of them are claims to combinations of mechanism. The first claim is a claim to a combination, substantially as set forth in the descriptive part of the specification, of three elements: (1) a time mechanism; (2) a combination lock; (3) the bolt work of a safe or vault door. But, as the claim says that the time mechanism is to be constructed to act in conjunction with, and render inoperative, the combination lock, when locked, it follows that the expression "time mechanism" includes the means of connection between the time movement and the parts on which the combination lock operates. Otherwise, there could be no operative co-action of the three elements named in the claim. The expressions "time mechanism" and "time movement" are carefully used in the specification and claims, as having different meanings, the former including the latter and its means of acting in conjunction with the combination lock. There is a limitation in the first claim, to the effect that the combination lock is to have its bolt or bearing constructed to receive the pressure of the bolt work, when the lock is locked, and prevent the unlocking of the bolt work till the predetermined time shall have arrived.

The second claim is a claim to a combination, substantially as set forth in the descriptive part of the specification, of four elements: [75] (1) a combination lock; (2) the bolt work of a safe or vault door; (3) a time movement; (4) a yoke or lever connection, constructed and located to render the bolt or bearing of the combination lock inoperative when the lock is locked. In the second claim, the time mechanism of the first claim is broken up into a time movement and a yoke or lever connection. There is a limitation in the second claim, to the effect that the tumblers of the combination lock and its spindle are free to rotate during the time the bolt work is held in its locked position by the bolt or bearing of the combination lock. This freedom of rotation is referred to in the specification as being peculiar and novel, and consisting in the fact that, while the combination lock and the bolt work are locked, the tumblers or combination wheels of the combination lock, and its spindle, are free to rotate without exerting any unlocking action or strain on the mechanism composing the combination lock, or the delicate mechanism composing the time movement.

It is also to be noted, that the specification states that the lock bolt or bearing of the combination lock may be of a circular, segmental or other desired form, "provided said lock bolt is arranged and adjusted so as to turn upon a suitable axis or bearing," and is so constructed as, in one position, to prevent the retraction of the bolt work, and, in another position, to permit it. The kind of combination lock referred to is indicated by the one illustrated in the drawings, and which the specification states to be the one of Sargent's patent No. 57574, granted August 28, 1866, and reissued as No. 4696, January 2, 1872. No. 4696 states that such combination lock has no sliding lock bolt, but has combined with its working parts a bolt turning on a pivot or bearing, and so isolated or removed from contact with the combination wheels, as to receive any pressure applied through the bolt work of the door, and cut off the communication between such bolt work and the wheels or fence lever of the combination lock; and that such bolt turning on a pivot or bearing, instead of the sliding bolt theretofore in use, is an important feature. The first claim of No. 4696 is in these words: "In a combination lock for safe or vault doors, a bolt I, which turns on a pivot or bearing, when said bolt I is used in a lock having no ordinary sliding lock bolt, and in connection with the separate bolt work of the door, and so arranged as to receive the pressure of the said bolt work, without transmitting it to the wheels or other equivalent works of the lock."

The history of the application of Sargent for No. 186369, so far as it is important to the present case, is this: On June 11, 1873, having his reissued patent No. 4696, for his combination lock, in the form shown in the drawings of No. 186369, he made application for a patent for combining a time movement with the lock works of a combination lock. The drawing showed the combination lock of No. 4696; and the specification set forth the invention to be so combining a time movement with the lock works as to prevent the lock from being unlocked by the release of the time movement, and to require it to be unlocked by being set on the combination after such release. There was a time movement, consisting of two clocks, and a lever to hold up the dog or angle bar of the lock, until released by the arrival of the predetermined hour. No bolt work was shown or described. There was no idea of patenting any combination of which the bolt work formed a part. The specification had two claims: 1. "In a combination lock, I claim the combination with the lock works and with a time movement that controls the same, of a connection, H, or equivalent, so arranged that when the time movement releases the lock works, the latter still remain locked, substantially as specified. 2. I claim in combination with a time movement, and a lock, the lever H, or equivalent, connected directly with the dog C, to hold it elevated from the wheels, substantially as specified." The specification stated that Sargent did not "claim broadly the combination of a time movement [illegible] lock," that is, a time movement or clock [illegible] to prevent the unlocking of a lock [illegible] the arrival of a predetermined time in the [illegible] of the clock.

The first claim of the application was rejected June 12, 1873, by a reference to patent No. [illegible] granted to S. W. Hollen, December 12, [illegible]. Nothing was said as to the second claim. [illegible] then disclaimed Hollen's arrangement, [illegible] the combination of "a clock movement with an ordinary key lock, by means of a [illegible] that, when the clock work releases the [illegible] the lock remains locked;" and altered [illegible] so as to read thus: "1. In a combination [illegible] the series of wheels of which are set [illegible] and operated by a spindle, I claim [illegible] with the lock works, and with [illegible] time-movement that controls the same, [illegible] H, whereby, when the time [illegible] releases the lock works, the latter [illegible] locked, substantially as and for the [illegible] specified. 2. I claim, in combination [illegible] movement and a lock, the lever H, [illegible] arranged so as to be connected [illegible] substantially as described."

[illegible] claim was again rejected, June 23, [illegible] a reference to Newton's Journal of [illegible] Rutherford's patent of 1831), as describ[illegible] application of a double time movement [illegible] a lock, bar or other fastening," [illegible] the American patent of Holbrook, of [illegible] a double time movement. The [illegible] referring to the Hollen pa[illegible] that Hollen "applies the movement [illegible] lock, which has to be operated by [illegible] the time movement releases it. To [illegible] time movement in one lock is con[illegible] the same and the same thing with doub[illegible] any other. To grant Hollen a patent [illegible] this time movement to a tumbler [illegible] to issue other patents for using [illegible] locks, is simply to nullify Hol[illegible] Sargent is entitled to a limited [illegible] his way or adaptation, but nothing [illegible] This last observation meant that the [illegible] would be allowed, but not the first. [illegible] of this ruling was, that it was not a [illegible] invention or combination to unite a [illegible] with a combination lock in[illegible] with a tumbler lock, each of which re[illegible] to be unlocked after its release, or to [illegible] in connection with one lock after [illegible] in connection with another; [illegible] special arrangement of a lever con[illegible] the time movement and the dog [illegible] patented.

[illegible] were then substituted by Sar[illegible] "1. I claim, in combination [illegible] lock having a spindle and [illegible] wheels, and with two or more sep[illegible] movements, a single lever, or equiv[illegible] H, connecting the lock and [illegible] movements; the whole so arranged that [illegible] released either by a simultaneous [illegible] of the time movements, or by one of them [illegible] and the lock still remains [illegible] when so released, as specified. 2. I [illegible] combination with a time movement [illegible] the lever H, or equivalent, connect[illegible] the dog C, to hold it from falling into [illegible] of the combination wheels, [illegible] released from the clock work, as [illegible]."

The first claim was again rejected, July 5, 1873, on the ground that the change in it did not take the case out of the references; and, on the 28th of July, 1873, Sargent appealed to the board of three examiners in chief. The decision of the board sustaining the decision of the examiner was rendered October 7, 1873. It refers to the English patent of Rutherford, of 1831, and says: "The patent of Rutherford describes an ordinary key lock, to which the time movement is so connected that it may be set for a given hour, before which it cannot be unlocked, but may be at any time thereafter. Rutherford also foresaw that one time movement might stop, and suggested two. Rutherford, as the references show, is not the only one who has thought of thus connecting a time movement to a lock. It happens, however, that the locks shown in the references are all key locks, while applicant's is a combination lock, and it is upon this that the claim is founded. While it is undoubtedly true that the combination lock is the better, there does not appear to be, in any true sense, any new combination in what applicant claims. It may be said that he has substituted, in the Rutherford combination (for example), one well known element for another, and that the result, namely: the security against unlocking before a given hour, is exactly the same in both cases. And it must be remembered that this is the whole end and scope of the combination claimed, not to prevent breakage, or picking, or bursting with gunpowder, but simply unlocking before the hour appointed. It is true that the lock connected to the time movement in the manner shown is rendered secure against [79] unlocking by unauthorized persons who pick up the combination, when the dog rests on the periphery of the cams; but it appears clear that this results from the peculiar mode of application, and is covered by the second claim. Whatever the advantage, then, arising from the substitution for the key lock, so far as has been pointed out to us, it results from the superiority of the former over the latter, and not from the combination. Nor, so far as we see, has any invention been exercised. The time movement was originally invented to prevent locks from being prematurely unlocked, and, when once the combination had been invented, it is obvious that it was as applicable to one form of locks as to another; and, to grant a patent for the union of the time movement with every old form of lock, or with every new form which might appear, would manifestly place unjust restrictions on the original invention and defeat the very purpose of the law. We understand only the first claim to be rejected."

These observations are true, as the record in this case shows, and it also shows many patents in which, prior to 1873, one clock or two clocks were employed to relieve, at a predetermined time, the bolts of a door from a dog obstructing their retraction, so that the door could be opened when that time had arrived, but not before.

Nothing more was done with this application till March 18, 1875, when Sargent presented a new specification and claims, making prominent the feature of the free rotation of the tumblers of the combination lock, through the medium of the lock spindle, during the suspension, by the time movement, of the unlocking action of the combination lock, and changing the claims to read thus: "1. The combination of a time movement with a combination lock and a lever constructed and located to render inoperative such combination lock until a predeterminate hour, the tumblers of the combination lock being free to rotate through the medium of the lock spindle, while the unlocking action of the combination lock is suspended by the time movement. 2. I claim, in combination with a time movement and a lock, the lever H, or equivalent, connected with the dog C, to [80] hold it from falling into the slots or notches of the combination wheels, except when released by the clock work, substantially as described." On the 24th of March, 1875, the first claim was again rejected by references to the Hollen patent of December, 1871, and the Rutherford patent of 1831. The letter of rejection said: "Hollen shows the combination of a time movement and a lock, with a lever constructed and located to render inoperative such lock until a predeterminate hour, the tumblers of the lock being free to rotate through the medium of a key, while the unlocking action of the lock is suspended by the lever. Rutherford shows (figures 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, sheet 2) the combination of a time movement and a lock, with a lever arranged to engage with the bolt of a lock and render inoperative such lock until a predeterminate hour. To merely substitute the ordinary combination lock, such as shown, for example, in the patent permutation lock of James Sargent, August 28, 1866, for the lock shown in either of the above references, is not regarded as a patentable difference. * * * The second claim is not objected to. The first claim is again refused."

This application was not further prosecuted. On the 12th of July, 1875, Sargent addressed a letter to the Patent Office, entitled in the case, in which he said: "So many amendments and actions having been made in the above entitled case, I desire to withdraw and abandon it, for the purpose of filing a new application. I, James Sargent, have this day filed said application for the invention, and request that the model of the case above named be applied as a model in the application filed to day. I intend and request that this application be a substitute application for the one so withdrawn."

Up to this time no bolt work had been shown or described. The object of the new application was to introduce bolt work as an element in the device. The drawings were the same as those in No. 186369, showing bolt work, with the time movements and the combination lock. Bolt work was added to the former model. The specification contained three claims, as follows: "1. The combination, substantially as hereinbefore set forth, of a time mechanism and a combination lock with the bolt work of a safe or vault door, the time mechanism being constructed to act in conjunction with and render [81] inoperative the combination lock when locked, said lock having its bolt or bearing arranged to rest upon and receive the pressure of the bolt work of the door when locked, and prevent the unlocking of said bolt work until the arrival of a certain predeterminate time. 2. The combination, substantially as hereinbefore set forth, of a combination lock and the bolt work of a safe or vault door, with a time movement and a lever connection, said lever being construct and located to render the bolt or bearing of t combination lock inoperative when locked, t tumblers of the combination lock and its sp dle being free to rotate while the bolt work the door rests upon the bolt or bearing of t combination lock. 3. In combination with time movement and a lock, a lever, or its equ alent, adapted to be connected with the dog said lock, to hold it from falling into the sl or notches of the combinatin wheels, exce when released by the time movement, subst tially as described."

On the 31st of July, 1875, claims 1 and 3 w rejected by references to the patent of Holle of December, 1871, and that of Rutherford 1831; and a time lock arranged in connecti with the bolt work of a door, in the time lo of Little, patented in January, 1874, was ferred to. Those claims were again reject September 6, 1875, in a letter which said: "T employment of locks of various kinds for sec ing the bolt work of a door is too common a well known to require further references. ther Hollen's or Rutherford's lock can be plied to the bolt work of a door without t least change being made to adapt it thereto. T mere substitution of one well known kind locks for another kind equally well known been decided again and again as not a pate able difference."

On December 3, 1875, an interference w declared between claims 1 and 2 and four otl applications; and between claim 3 and four otl applications. On February 12, 1876, the int ference as to claims 1 and 2 was dissolved, a they were again rejected. A further amei ment of the specification was made Februa 15, 1876, and claims 1 and 2 were altered so to read as follows: "1. The combination, s stantially as hereinbefore set forth, of a ti mechanism and a combination lock with bolt work of a safe or vault door, the ti mechanism being constructed to act in conju tion with and render inoperative the combi tion lock when locked, said lock having its b or bearing constructed to receive the press of the series of bolts constituting the bolt w of the door when locked, and preventing unlocking of said bolt work until the arriva a certain predeterminate time. 2. The com nation, substantially as hereinbefore set fo of a combination lock and the series of b constituting the bolt work of a safe or v door, with a time movement and a lever c nection, said lever being constructed and lo ed to render the bolt or bearing of the combi tion lock inoperative when locked, the tumb of the combination lock and its spindle be free to rotate while the bolt work is held in locked position by the bolt or bearing of the c bination lock." The claims were not allow but a new interference as to them was decla March 8, 1876, with the same four applicati the subject matter being: "The combinatio a time mechanism and a combination lock w the bolt work of a door."

On the 11th of January, 1877, the appl tion was amended by withdrawing claims 1 2. Two days before this, and on Januar 1877, Sargent had filed the application on w No. 186369 was granted. The special const tion and arrangement of parts, a claim for wh [illegible] the specification of that patent states, was made in a separate application, was covered by the claim of patent No. 198157, granted to Sargent December 11, 1877, in pursuance of the application of July 12, 1875, that claim being as follows: "In combination with a time movement and a lock, a yoke lever or equivalent, adapted to be connected with the dog, fence or other bar of said lock, to hold it from falling in the slots or notches of the combination wheels except when released by the time movement, substantially as described." The present case does not involve any infringement of No. 198157.

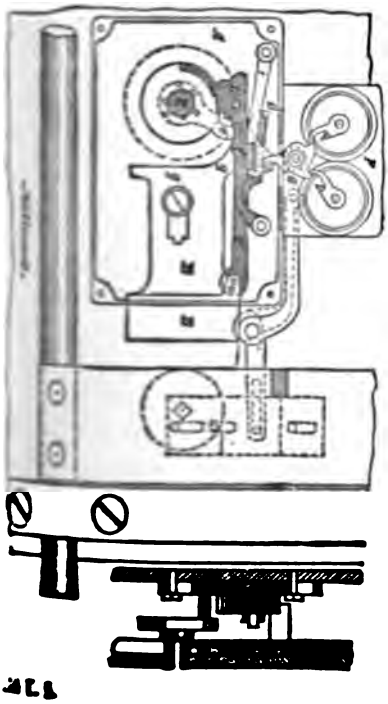
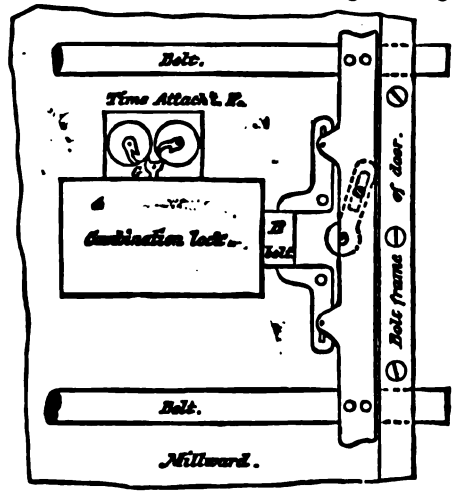
As before remarked, the specification of No. 186369, the patent here sued on, contains the following statement: "The lock bolt or bearer of the combination lock may be of a circular, semicircular or other desired form, provided that such bolt is arranged and adjusted so as to turn upon a suitable axis or bearing, and is so constructed that, in one position, it will prevent the retraction of the bolt work so as to retain the safe or vault door locked, while, in another position, it will admit of the bolt work being retracted, for the purpose of allowing the safe or vault door to be opened." This clause had not appeared in any of the specifications from and including that filed June 11, 1873, until it was inserted in the one filed January 9, 1877, on which the patent No. 186369 was granted. It is a limitation without which it must be assumed, in view of the numerous prior rejections, the claims allowed would not have been granted. The same clause was inserted, May [illegible], in the specification of the application of [illegible] 2, 1875, as it remained after claims 1 and [illegible] were withdrawn, January 11, 1877, as that clause appears in the specification of [illegible], as issued December 11, 1877.



The defendants' lock, which it is alleged infringes the two claims of No. 186369, is of the construction shown by the following drawing, made by the plaintiff's witness Millward:

In that drawing A is the case of the lock; B, the bolt; C, the dog, pivoted in the bolt at c, and engaging, when held up by the time mechanism, behind a fixed stump, D; E, the arbor of the lock, the hook, e, of which engages with the hook, f, of the dog, and throws the bolt B back, when the dog is released by the time mechanism. The same hook, e, by running on the surface, g, throws the bolt B out, to lock the door. F is the time attachment, which has a lever, G, the arm of which, extending through the case of the lock, has the hook H at its lower end, which holds up the pivoted arm I, and through it the dog C. [84]

Another form of the bolt work of the defendants' lock is shown by the following drawing:



It is contended for the defendants, that each of the combinations covered by the two claims of No. 186369 must be limited to the particular devices described in the specification and shown in the drawings, and to their mode of operation, both claims being limited by the words "substantially as hereinbefore set forth;" and that, under this construction, the defendants do not infringe.

The second claim imposes on the combination claimed in it the limitation, that the tumblers of the combination lock and its spindle shall be free to rotate, while the bolt work is held in its locked position by the bolt or bearing of the combination lock. This is enforced by the language of the specification, which, in stating in what the invention consists, states that "the peculiarity and novelty" of the union or combination, consisting of a combination lock, a time movement, and a yoke or lever connection, is that "when the said combination lock, with its time mechanism, is arranged upon a safe or vault door, to operate in conjunction with the bolt work thereon, and all locked, the tumblers or combination wheels of said lock, and the spindle of the same, together with its usual indicator, are all left free to be moved or rotated without exerting any unlocking action or strain whatever upon the mechanism composing the [85] combination lock, or the delicate mechanism composing the time movement." Again, the specification says: "Another feature of the utmost importance present in the combination of parts brought together is, that the connection between the time movement and the combination lock is such that, when the time movement is set, the parts adjusted, and the safe doors closed, the combination lock will be rendered inoperative until a predeterminate hour, during which interval of time the unlocking action of the combination lock will be suspended by the time movement, while the tumblers or combination wheels of the aforesaid combination lock are left free to rotate, if power is exerted upon the dial spindle for the purpose of twisting said spindle out of place, or impairing the lock mechanism, and, by such, the working parts of the combination lock cannot be injured or rendered useless for future action." This feature, thus declared to be peculiar and novel, of the free rotation of the tumblers, is not shown to exist in the defendants' lock. The plaintiff's expert, Mr. E. S. Renwick, testifies that this peculiarity is not found in the defendants' lock, and that, for that reason, that lock does not embody the combination of claim 2 of No. 186369.

As to claim 1, it is limited, by the language of the specification, to a combination lock having a bolt or bearing which turns on an axis or revolves. The defendants' lock has a sliding bolt. It was not new, at the time of Sargent's [86] invention, to apply a time movement to dog the sliding bolt of a lock; and it is plain that he limited himself to a rotating bolt. The specification makes it as necessary that the combination lock should have a turning or revolving bolt or bearing as that such bolt or bearing should have the quality of receiving the pressure of the bolt work, when locked. This turning or revolving feature of the bolt or bearing is made, by the specification, as necessary to the combination lock of claim 2 as to that of claim 1.

In patents for combinations of mechanism, limitations and provisos, imposed by the inventor, especially such as were introduced into an application after it had been persistently rejected, must be strictly construed against the inventor, and in favor of the public, and looked upon as in the nature of disclaimers. As was said in Fay v. Cordesman, 109 U. S., 408, 420 [bk. 27, L. ed., 979, 984]: "The claims of the patents sued on in this case are claims for combinations. In such a claim, if the patentee specifies any element as entering into the combination, either directly by the language of the the claim, or by such a reference to the descriptive part of the specification as carries such element into the claim, he makes such element material to the combination, and the court cannot declare it to be immaterial. It is his province to make his own claim, and his privilege to restrict it. If it be a claim to a combination, and be restricted to specified elements, all must be regarded as material, leaving open only the question whether an omitted device is supplied by an equivalent device or instrumentality. Water-Meter Co. v. Desper, 101 U. S., 332 [bk. 25, L. ed., 1024]; Gage v. Herring, 107 U. S., 640 [bk. 27., L. ed., 601]."

These considerations lead to the conclusion that the decree of the Circuit Court was correct and must be affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—116 U. S., 249.

EDWARD G. THOMPSON ET AL., Appts.,
v.
ELIZABETH E. BOISSELIER ET AL.

SAME, Appts.,
v.
SAME.

McNAB & HARLAN MANUFACTURING COMPANY ET AL., Appts.,
v.
EDWARD G. THOMPSON ET AL.

JOHN EATON ET AL., Appts.,
v.
SAME.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 1-14.)

Patent law—patentability—letters patent No. 21734, and reissued letters patent No. 978, for "improvements in water closets"—state of the art.

*1. The third claim of reissued letters patent No. 978, granted to William S. Carr, June 12, 1860, for "improvements in water closets" (the original patent having been granted to him August 5, 1856, and, as reissued, extended, July 23, 1870, for 7 years from August 5, 1870), namely: "In a valve for water closets, a cup leather for controlling the motion of said valve in closing gradually, substantially as specified, said cup leather moving freely in one direction, and closing against the containing cylinder in the other direction, and the leakage of water in said cylinder allowing the movement of said cup leather, as set forth," construed, and the operation of the device explained.

2. The state of the art, as to prior devices, and the construction and operation of the defendants' device, set forth.

3. In view of the state of the art: Held, that, for the purpose of securing the free passage of water in one direction, and preventing its escape in the other direction otherwise than gradually, the defendants had used nothing which they did not have a right to use, and had not appropriated any patentable invention which Carr had a right to cover, as against the defendants' structure, by the third claim of his reissue.

4. All that Carr did, if anything, was to add his form of orifice to the valve and cup leather of an existing pump plunger.

5. The third claim of the Carr reissue involves, as an element in it, the means of leakage set forth.

6. The only point of invention, if it could be dignified by that name, was the special means of leakage shown by Carr, but which the defendants did not use.

7. To be patentable, a thing must not only be new and useful, but must amount to an invention or discovery.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

NOTE.—What constitutes a patentable invention. See a review of the authorities per Clifford, J., in Dunbar v. Meyers, 94 U. S. 187, bk. 24, L. ed., 34, 35; also Rubber Tip Pencil Co. v. Howard, 87 U. S., 498, bk. 22, L. ed., 410; Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S., 347, bk. 23, L. ed., 719. See briefs of counsel in two last named cases as reported in this edition.

Recent decisions of this court on the subject of what constitutes a patentable invention cited and applied.

Under them, claim three of the Carr reissue must, in view of the state of the art, either be held not to involve a patentable invention, or, if it does, not to have been infringed.

The first claim of letters patent No. 21734, granted to Frederick H. Bartholomew, October 12, 1858, for an "improved water closet," and extended, October 2, 1872, for 7 years from October 12, 1872, namely: "The use of a drip box or leak chamber, arranged above the closet, and below and around the supply cock, substantially as described," must, in view of the state of the art, be limited to a drip box arranged above or on top of the closet, and is not infringed by a structure in which the drip box is set on the side of the trunk, near the top, but below it, and not on top of it.

[Nos. 189, 190, 196, 197.]

Argued Mar. 10, 1885. Decided Mar 30, 1885.

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri (189, 190).

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York (196, 197).

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Edmund Wetmore, G. G. Frelinghuysen and E. G. Thompson, for complainants.

Mr. Llewellyn Deane, Samuel S. Boyd and H. A. Sharpless, for defendants.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

These are four suits in equity. The first one was brought in February, 1877, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri, by Charles F. Blake, as trustee of William S. Carr and Frederick H. Bartholomew, against Elizabeth E. Boisselier and Louis C. Cupferle, for the infringement of reissued letters patent No. 978, granted to William S. Carr, June 12, 1860, for "improvements in water closets," the original patent having been granted to him August 5, 1856, and, as reissued, extended, July 23, 1870, for 7 years from August 5, 1870.

The second suit was brought in February, 1879, in the same court, by Charles F. Blake, as trustee of Sarah Bartholomew, against the same defendants, for the infringement of letters patent No. 21734, granted to Frederick H. Bartholomew, October 12, 1858, for an "improved water closet," and extended, October 2, 1872, for 7 years from October 12, 1872.

The third and fourth suits were brought in [illegible], in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, by Charles F. Blake, as trustee, etc., and William S. Carr and Sarah M. Bartholomew—one against the McNab and Harlan Manufacturing Company and John Harlan, and the other against John Eaton and others—each for the infringement of the said Carr patent, as reissued and extended, and of the said Bartholomew patent as extended.

In each of the two suits in Missouri a decree was made in May, 1880, adjudging that the patent sued on was not good and valid in law, and dismissing the bill. In each of the two suits in New York, a decision was made in February, 1882, 19 Blatchf. C. C., 73, adjudging that the two patents were good and valid in law, and that the third claim of the Carr reissue, and the first claim of the Bartholomew patent, had been infringed, and awarding an account of profits and damages; and in January, 1882, a final decree was made in one suit for $1,200 damages and $118.74 costs, and in the other for $415 damages and $101.24 costs. The plaintiffs in interest in each of the Missouri suits, and the defendants in each of the New York suits, have appealed to this court. The questions are the same in all of the suits and arise on the same proofs.

The third claim of the Carr reissue is the only claim of that patent which is alleged to have been infringed. So much of the specification of that reissue as relates to that claim is as follows: [4]

"Fig. 1 is an elevation of my closet as in place for use; fig. 2 is a plan of the cock and part of the plan of said closet; and fig. 3 is a vertical section of my cock made use of in letting the water into and shutting the same off from said closet. Similar marks of reference indicate the same parts in all the figures. The [5]

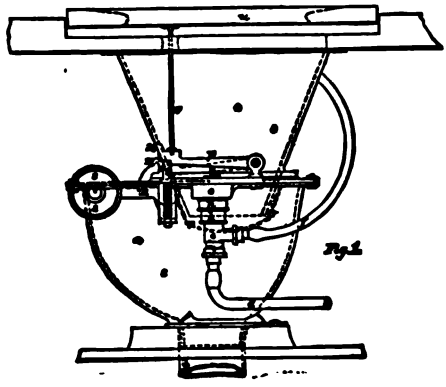

Fig. 1.

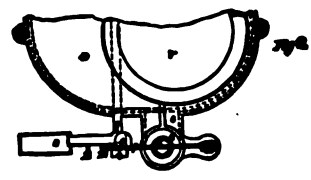

Fig. 2.

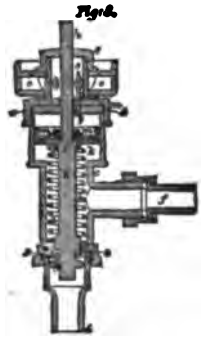

Fig. 3.

nature of my said invention consists in a peculiar construction of cock, which is opened by the motion of the seat of the water closet, and allows but little water to run into the pan of the closet until the weight is removed from the seat, when the cock, gradually closing of itself, allows the water to run for a limited and regulated time, sufficient to wash out the basin. * * * In the drawing, a is the trunk on the upper end of the soil pipe b, fitted with the pan r, on the shaft or spindle q, and c is the basin setting on to the trunk a. These parts, thus far, are to be of any usual or desired character; d is a pipe supplying water from any suitable head, and said pipe is attached to the coupling 1, that screws on to the body e of the cock, and f is a pipe and coupling passing water (when admitted as hereafter detailed) to the basin c, where it is to be fitted with the deflector, as usual. The cock e, that supplies water to the basin, is constructed with a stem h, passing nearly or quite air tight through the leather washer 4, beneath the cap n, and the lower end of said stem

[6] h is formed with a valve g, and with a cylindrical part 3, fitting water tight, or nearly so; the opening of the washer 2, between the coupling 1 of the pipe d and cock e, and the sides of this cylinder 3, are formed with notches, or a groove x. It will now be seen that, if the stem h be pressed down by the weight of the person acting on the seat u, rod v, and lever p, or by any other suitable means, the valve g will be forced away from the washer 2, and allow a dash of water to pass through the notch x sufficient to fill up the parts of the cock, and then that the cylinder 3, descending and filling the opening in the washer 2, will prevent, or nearly so, the passage of any more water into the closet; i is a spring around the stem h, which acts in aid of the pressure of the water on the valve g, to close the same, as soon as the force which opened the said valve is removed, but, if this alone was used, the concussion would be so great as to tend to break the parts, besides which sufficient water would not be supplied to the water closet to cleanse the same. I therefore make use of the following means, which cause said valve g to close slowly and in a regulated amount of time, thereby allowing the desired quantity of water to dash past the washer 2, at the time the notches or openings x are moving past the same. The upper part of the cock e is formed as a cylinder k, in which is a disk l, attached to the stem h, and a cup leather m, above the same; n is a cap of the cylinder k, which is formed with a short tube 8, passing up through a hollow projection 0, from the side of the trunk a, and secured thereto by a nut 6. At the time the valve g is pressed down, as before stated, the water dashes momentarily on to the cock and fills the same, passing the cup leather m, and filling the cylinder k, and, upon the pressure on the stem h being removed, the cup-leather expands by the slight rise of the stem, and would retain the valve g open were the cylinder k water tight, and, therefore, the closing of said valve will be regulated according to the extent of leakage provided in said chamber k, and for this purpose the leakage at the washer 4, around the stem h, may in some cases be sufficient; but I propose to use a screw 9, entered through the cap n, with a head next the washer 4, and part of one side of the screw filed away,
[7] so as to adjust the amount of leakage and regulate the time during which the water will run into the closet. * * * I am also aware that a given amount of water leakage has been used to prevent a sudden motion in cocks, balances meters, and a variety of other instruments therefore I do not claim the same, but I am no aware that a cup leather has ever before been s fitted and applied with a valve as to allow th water to pass the said cup leather freely in th chamber in which it moves, and then act, whe the power is relieved from the valve, upon th water in said chamber and gradually allow th valve to close."

The third claim of the Carr reissue is as fol lows: "Third. I claim, in a valve for wate closets, a cup leather for controlling the motio of said valve in closing gradually, substantiall as specified, said cup leather moving freely i one direction, and closing against the contain ing cylinder in the other direction, and th leakage of water in said cylinder allowing th movement of said cup leather as set forth."

In the Carr apparatus, the valve is combine with a containing cylinder and a cup leather, i such manner that the valve is caused to clos slowly, because the action of the cup leather a a tight packing prevents the passage of wate while the valve is closing; and the valve ca open rapidly, because, as it opens, the cu leather does not act as a packing, but permit the passage of water outside of it. In the co taining cylinder there is a piston which has o it centrally a cup leather, and is provided wit a small aperture which permits the gradual es cape of water from it. When the cylinder i filled with water the valve is held to its seat b a spiral spring. When the valve stem is de pressed, the valve opens rapidly, because th cup leather permits the water to pass freely ou side of it. When the force which depressed th valve stem is removed the spring acts to shu the valve, but it shuts slowly, because the cu leather acts as a tight packing, being forced ou ward against the inner wall of the cylinder b the pressure of the water. Therefore, the wa ter escapes slowly from the cylinder throug the small aperture, and the valve cannot mov faster, in shutting, than it is allowed to move b the escape of the water through the sma aperture.

The apparatus alleged to infringe the two pa tents is the same in all of the suits. It has brass casting, and is thus described by the plain iff's expert: "This brass casting of the defend ants has at its lower part a cavity, whose wall partially bound the variable chamber. Th cavity is a cup-shaped piece of brass, screwe to the bottom of the casting. A cylindric brass plunger enters this cavity, and the uppe end of it is formed into a valve. This bras plunger is packed to the top of the cavity by cup leather, which is secured between the u per part of the brass cup and an internal flang on the brass casting. The stem of the plunge and valve is surrounded by a coiled brass spring which always tends to lift the plunger and shu the valve. The plunger has, also, a small nic or groove cut in its periphery, and extendin from the top to the bottom of the plunger. Whe this contrivance is ready for operation, all part of the cavity in the brass casting, including th variable chamber, are filled with water, and th valve is held on its seat by the spiral spring, th plunger then being in its highest position. Whe it is desired to open the valve, force is applie to depress the valve stem; this force compresse [illegible] the plunger, and opens the [illegible] quickly, owing to the fact that the water [illegible] rapidly from the variable chamber, [illegible] being due to the operation of [illegible] leather, which now ceases to hug the [illegible] and acts as a valve, permitting the water [illegible] freely from the variable chamber. [illegible] which was applied to depress [illegible] and open the valve is removed, then [illegible] strives to shut the valve and elevate [illegible] and, as soon as it commences to [illegible] the plunger, the pressure of water causes [illegible] leather to hug the plunger tightly, so [illegible] to act as a valve, and becomes a [illegible] packing. As soon as this occurs, water [illegible] enter the chamber through the small [illegible] in the periphery of the plunger, and the [illegible] shut no faster than this small flow of [illegible] permits it to shut."

[illegible] shown by the evidence that cup leathers [illegible] used in the central valves of the [illegible] of pumps, the cup leather contracting [illegible] down stroke and allowing the water to [illegible] by, and spreading out on the up stroke and [illegible] the water; and that it was not new to [illegible] a variable chamber to effect, by the [illegible] escape of water from it, the slow and [illegible] closing of a valve.

[illegible] Hulme's English patent No. 8971, [illegible] 1841, is shown a device for "keeping a valve open for any required length of [illegible] for the supply of water to the basins of water-closets generally." The specification says: "[illegible] the length of time that the valve [illegible] kept open for the flow of water from [illegible] to the basin of the closet, after the [illegible] valve has closed, the barrel A A is furnished with the openings N N, communicating [illegible] the under to the upper side of the bucket [illegible] and fitted with a cock O. Now, by turning [illegible] cock O in such a position that the water [illegible] through the cock O will be diminished, [illegible] will be required for the bucket to [illegible] the contents of the barrel, and vice versa. The bucket D does not have a cup leather, [illegible] a central valve E to allow the water to [illegible]

[illegible] defendants have substantially the Hulme [illegible], using a cup leather centrally, instead of the Hulme central valve. A central [illegible] being old, and a cup leather being old, and [illegible] valve and a cup leather combined being old, and a plunger with a central valve and [illegible] of regulating the escape of the water [illegible] being old, and the device for the [illegible] of the water, used by the defendants, being [illegible] as in Hulme, it must be held that, [illegible] purpose of securing the free passage of [illegible] in one direction and preventing its escape [illegible] other direction otherwise than gradually, [illegible] have used nothing which they [illegible] a right to use, and have not appropriated any patentable invention which Carr had [illegible] against the defendants' structure [illegible] the third claim of his reissue. If Carr [illegible] the defendants' form of structure [illegible] made his own, he would not, in view [illegible] of the art, have made anything having [illegible] novelty in it; and, therefore, what [illegible] in claim three of his reissue has [illegible] feature which the defendants' [illegible] infringes. The action of the [illegible] water in Carr's structure and in the defendants' to admit the free passage of the water while the valve is moving in one direction, [10] and to prevent such passage while the valve is moving in the other direction, is due to the flexibility of the leather, and to the pressure of the water on its different sides alternately, and to its position with reference to the wall of the chamber, and is the same as in the old central valve of a pump plunger which was furnished with a cup leather. The effect resulting from allowing the water, which cannot return through the passage by which it entered, to escape by a small orifice and gradually, and thus cause a gradual movement in a valve attached to the central stem, is due to the small orifice. All that Carr did, if anything, was to add his form of orifice to the valve and cup leather of the pump plunger. But the idea of having openings extending from one side to the other of a bucket, and thus regulating the closing of a water valve by the slow escape of the water from the upper side of the bucket, through such openings, was fully exhibited in the apparatus of Hulme.

Claim 3 of Carr's reissue speaks of the cup-leather as "moving freely in one direction and closing against the containing cylinder in the other direction." This action existed in the cup-leather of the old pump plunger. The claim also says: "the leakage of water in said cylinder allowing the movement of said cup leather, as set forth." This means, that the greater or less extent of the leakage allows a faster or slower movement of the cup leather, and a faster or slower closing of the valve. The claim involves, therefore, as an element in it, the means of leakage set forth. It says that the use of the cup leather is "for controlling the motion of said valve in closing gradually, substantially as specified." But it is the gradual escape of the water through the small orifice which controls the motion of the valve. The cup leather does not control such motion. The only action of the cup leather is the same which it had in the old pump plunger—to hold up a column of water and act as a packing to prevent the return passage of the water. In this condition of things, it would seem that the only point of invention, if it could be dignified by that name, was the special means of leakage shown by Carr, of having a screw through the cap, with part [11] of the screw filed away; and which is not used by the defendants, who use the same means of leakage as Hulme did.

The provision of the Constitution (Art. 1, sec. 8, subd. 8), is, that the Congress shall have power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." The beneficiary must be an inventor and he must have made a discovery. The statute has always carried out this idea. Under the Act of July 4, 1836, 5 Stat. at L., 119, sec. 6, in force when these patents were granted, the patentee was required to be a person who had "discovered or invented" a "new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter," or a "new and useful improvement in any art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter." In the Act of July 8, 1870, 16 Stat. at L., 201, sec. 24, the patentee was required to be a person who had "invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof;" and that language is reproduced in section 4886 of the Revised Statutes. So, it is not enough that a thing shall be new, in the sense that in the shape or form in which it is produced it shall not have been before known, and that it shall be useful, but it must, under the Constitution and the statute, amount to an invention or discovery.

To refer only to some more recent cases, adjudged since these suits were decided below, this principle was applied in Vinton v. Hamilton, 104 U. S., 485 [Bk. 26, L. ed., 807], where, a cupola furnace being old, and a cinder notch being old, and the use of a cinder notch to draw off cinders from a blast furnace being old, and the cinder notch, in drawing off the cinder from a cupola furnace, performing the same function as in the blast furnace, it was held that the application of the cinder notch to the cupola furnace would occur to any practical man, and that there was nothing patentable in such application.

In Hall v. McNeale, 107 U. S., 90 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 367], a cored conical bolt, in a safe, with a screw thread on it, having existed before, and also a solid conical bolt, it was held to be no invention to add the screw thread to the solid conical bolt.

[12] In Atlantic Works v. Brady, Id., 192, 200 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 438, 441], it was said, that it is not the object of the patent laws to grant a monopoly for every trifling device which would naturally and spontaneously occur to any skilled mechanic or operator, in the ordinary progress of manufactures; and this doctrine was applied in Slawson v. R. R. Co., Id., 649 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 576]; in King v. Gallun, 109 Id., 99 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 870]; in Tack Co. v. Mfg. Co., Id., 117 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 877]; in Estey v. Burdett, Id., 633 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 1058]; in Bussey v. Mfg. Co., 110 Id., 181 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 95]; in R. R. Co. v. Truck Co., Id., 490 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 222]; in Phillips v. Detroit, 111 Id., 604 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 532]; in Morris v. McMillin, 112 Id., 244 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 702]; and in Hollister v. Mfg. Co., 113 Id., 59 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 901].

In the case last cited the thing claimed was new, in the sense that it had not been anticipated by any previous invention, and it was shown to have superior utility, yet it was held not to be such an improvement as was entitled to be regarded, in the patent law, as an invention. The claim was: "A stamp, the body of which is made of paper or other material, and having a removable slip of metal or other material, displaying thereon a serial number, or other specific identifying mark, corresponding with a similar mark upon the stub, and so attached that the removal of such slip must mutilate or destroy the stamp." The part designed to become a stub when the stamp proper was separated therefrom, and displaying a serial number, was well known; and so was the constituent part of the stamp proper designed to be permanently attached to a barrel. The third element, namely: a constituent part of the stamp proper displaying the same identifying serial number as the stub, which part, after the stamp proper had been affixed to the barrel, bore such relation to the permanent part, that it could be removed therefrom so as to retain its own integrity, but to mutilate, and thereby cancel t stamp, by its removal, was not new, so far the contents of such constituent part were ide tical with those on the stub. But the questi turned on that feature of the third eleme whereby a removable part of the stamp prop the contents of which identified the stamp wi the stub after the stamp had been attache could be so removed as to retain its own int rity, but mutilate, and thereby cancel, the star by its removal. This was held not to be a p tentable invention; and "not to spring fr that intuitive faculty of the mind put forth the search for new results, or new metho creating what had not before existed, or bri ing to light what lay hidden from vision;" to be only "the display of the expected skill the calling," and involving "only the exerc of the ordinary faculties of reasoning upon materials supplied by a special knowledge, a the facility of manipulation which results fr its habitual and intelligent practice;" and to "in no sense the creative work of that inve ive faculty which it is the purpose of the C stitution and patent laws to encourage and ward."

On these principles claim 3 of the Carr reis must, in view of the state of the art, either held not to involve a patentable invention, if it does, not to have been infringed.

The specification of the Bartholomew pat says: "The nature of my invention consist providing for water closets a cistern, or dri leak chamber, arranged upon the top of or c the trunk of a closet, and placing a supply c within or above said drip box or cistern, so t any waste or leak or drip from the cock s be conducted into the trunk, so as to insure keeping of the floor dry. * * * Fig. 1 prospective view of a pan closet, showing drip box arranged upon the top plate of closet, and the cock for supplying water to same secured to the closet within the drip b * * * The general form of the closet is s as is in common use. Upon the cover, cast a box, inclosure or cistern, E, about inch high (more or less), and broad enoug admit of placing the 'A' cock (I use a v cock) within the cistern, and (where it is p ticable) so as also to receive the drip that escape from the joint at the arm of the b called the 'putty joint.' I screw the cock the cover of the closet, and make a hole wi the drip box, or in the bottom of the cock admit the leak to fall into the trunk, P, and on to the floor." The first claim of the pat which is the only one alleged to have bee fringed, reads thus: "First. I claim the u a drip box or leak chamber, arranged abov closet, and below and around the supply c substantially as described."

The defendants' structure has a trunk, a supply cock, and a drip box arranged below around the supply cock, but the drip box is on the side of the trunk, near the top, bu low it, and not on top of it. The drip goe to the drip box, and thence into the trunk the soil pipe. The following devices are sh to have been old: A drip-cup or drip bo pipe to convey away drippings, in machin from a drip box arranged in connection wi cock; a drip cup applied to the valve of a ter-closet, the leakage from the valve fallin [illegible], and thence finding its way, through a [illegible] into the inside of the trunk; a valve on the floor at the foot of the trunk; a valve attached to the trunk and below its top; a valve [illegible] top; a valve with a drip pan conducting the drip into the soil pipe at the foot of the trunk, a valve on top of the trunk, and a pro[illegible], by means of a hollow arm, to conduct the drip into the trunk. In view of this state of the art, the claim must be limited, as defined by its language and that of the specification, to a drip box "arranged upon the top of or over the trunk"—"arranged upon the top plate"—"upon the cover"—"arranged above the trunk." The limitation imposed by the patent must be presumed to have been made with good reason, and, even if there was anything patentable in the claim as it reads, it cannot, in view of the state of the art, be extended to cover any structure except one which has a drip box arranged above or on top of the closet, and, therefore, has not been infringed.

From these considerations it results that the decrees in the Missouri suits must be affirmed; and those in the New York suits must be reversed, with directions to dismiss the bills, with costs.

[illegible] copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

J. ADDISON HAYES, Plf. in Err.,

v.

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN of the CITY OF HOLLY SPRINGS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 120-127.)

Constitutional law—Act of Legislature of Mississippi of March 16, 1872, not sufficient to validate unauthorized issue of bonds by the City of Holly Springs.

The Constitution of Mississippi, adopted December 1, 1869, provided as follows (art. 12, [illegible]): "The Legislature shall not authorize any county, city or town, to become a stockholder in, or to lend its credit to, any company, association or corporation, unless two thirds of the qualified voters of such county, city or town, at a special election, or regular election, to be held [illegible], assent thereto." A city in that State subscribed for stock in a railroad corporation after what was called a "special election" was held, but neither the election nor the subscription was authorized by any Act of the Legislature. Afterwards, the Legislature passed an Act providing "That all subscriptions to the capital stock of the corporation, made by any city or town in this State, which were made in violation of the Constitution of this State, are hereby legalized, ratified and confirmed." Thereafter the city issued bonds [illegible] for its subscription. In a suit [illegible] by a bona fide holder of coupons cut from the bonds, to recover their amount, Held:

(1) The intention of the Legislature to confirm and ratify the subscription could not be ascertained with certainty from the language of the Act;

(2) The bonds were void, for want of power to issue them, notwithstanding any recitals on their face, or any acts in pais, claimed to operate by way of estoppel.

[No. 200.]

Argued Mar. 17, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Mississippi.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. H. T. Ellett and B. M. Estes, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Ed. M. Watson, W. S. Featherston and Van H. Manning, for defendants in error.

[121.]

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit at law brought by J. Addison Hayes, in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Mississippi, against the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Holly Springs, to recover the sum of $8,560, as due on 568 coupons, cut from 43 bonds, for the payment of $16,250, purporting to be issued by the City of Holly Springs, in the State of Mississippi, the bonds and coupons being owned by the plaintiff. Each bond is in the following form:

"State of Mississippi, City of Holly Springs.

Bond. Issued in payment of stock of the Selma, Marion and Memphis Railroad Co.

No. ———, $———. Fifteen years.

Know all men by these presents, that the City of Holly Springs, Marshall County, in the State of Mississippi, acknowledges itself indebted and firmly bound to the Selma, Marion and Memphis Railroad Company, in the sum of ——— dollars, which sum the City of Holly Springs promises to pay to the Selma, Marion and Memphis Railroad Company, or bearer, at the Holly Springs Savings and Insurance Company, Holly Springs, Mississippi, on the first day of January, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven, together with the interest thereon from the first day of January, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, at the rate of eight per cent per annum, which interest shall be payable semi-annually, on the presentation and delivery of the attached interest coupons, at the office of the said Holly Springs Savings and Insurance Company.

[122]

This bond is issued under and in pursuance to an order of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Holly Springs, Marshall County, State of Mississippi, made under authority of the Constitution of the State of Mississippi and the laws of the Legislature of the State of Mississippi, and authorized by a vote of the people of the said City of Holly Springs, at a special election held for the purpose.

[Corporate seal.] In testimony whereof, the said City of Holly Springs has executed this bond by the mayor of said city, under the order of said city's Board of Mayor and Aldermen, signing his name thereto, and by the treasurer of said city, under the order thereof, attesting the same, and affixing thereto the said seal of the said City of Holly Springs.

[illegible] of unauthorized acts by municipalities—[illegible] validation. See Brown v. Mayor, 63 [illegible]; Burroughs on Public Securities, 278; [illegible] v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S., 687, [illegible] v. Baldwin, 111 U. S., 1, [illegible] v. Cooke, 107 U. S. 549, bk. [illegible] Supervisors v. Brown, 112 [illegible], 704; Bissell v. Jeffersonville, [illegible] How.), 287, bk. 16, 664; Thompson [illegible] (3 Wall.), 327, bk. 18, 177; [illegible] v. Morgan, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.), 619 bk. [illegible]

[illegible] on municipal bonds—effect of. See [illegible] v. Hackett, 68 U. S. (1 Wall.), 80, [illegible] supra.

This done at the City of Holly Springs, Marshall County, State of Mississippi, this first day of January, A. D. 1872.

Henry A. Cooper,
Mayor of the City of Holly Springs.
Lewis Beehler,
Treasurer of the City of Holly Springs."

The questions in the case arise on a demurrer to the declaration, the facts alleged in which are as follows: The defendant is a municipal corporation created by the Legislature of the State of Mississippi. By the Constitution of Mississippi, adopted December 1, 1869, and still in force, it is provided as follows, by article 12, section 14: "The Legislature shall not authorize any county, city or town to become a stockholder in, or to lend its credit to, any company, association or corporation, unless two thirds of the qualified voters of such county, city or town, at a special election, or regular election, to be held therein, shall assent thereto." In the fall of 1871 the inhabitants of the City of Holly Springs were desirous that the city should subscribe for stock in the Selma, Marion and Memphis Railroad Company, whose road was to be constructed through or near the city. The Mayor and Aldermen, in conformity to the wishes of the inhabitants, on the ——— day of ———, 1871, ordered a special election to be held, in pursuance of the Constitution, on the 30th day [123] of December, 1871, to ascertain whether two thirds of the qualified voters of the city would assent to a subscription by it to $75,000 of the capital stock of said company, and to issue the bonds of the city in payment of the subscription, "having to run" to the 1st of January, 1887, and bearing interest at 8 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually. Due notice was given of the election, and it was held on the 30th of December, 1871, under the direction and supervision of the Mayor and Aldermen; and, at the election, largely more than two thirds of all the qualified voters of the city voted in favor of the subscription and the issuing of the bonds, and assented thereto, and thereby authorized and directed the Mayor and Aldermen to make the subscription, and to issue and deliver the bonds. After the election, to wit: on the 1st of January, 1872, the defendant, in pursuance of the vote, subscribed for $75,000 of the capital stock of the company, and agreed and undertook to issue its bonds in payment thereof as soon as the same could be prepared, and received the regular and proper certificates therefor, which it still holds and has never surrendered or offered to surrender. By an Act of the Legislature of Mississippi, approved March 16, 1872 (Laws of 1872, chap. 75, p. 313), entitled "An Act to Facilitate the Construction of the Selma, Marion and Memphis Railroad," it was provided (§ 4): "that all subscriptions to the capital stock of the said Selma, Marion and Memphis Railroad Company, made by any county, city or town in this State, which were not made in violation of the Constitution of this State, are hereby legalized, ratified and confirmed." By another Act of that Legislature, approved April 19, 1872 (Laws of 1872, ch. 102, p. 120), it was provided (§ 1): "that any county through which any railroad will pass, incorporated city or town along the line of any railroad, or contiguous thereto, may subscribe to the capital stock of said company in any sum;" and (§ 2): "that no such subscription shall be made until the question has been submitted to the legal voters of such county or counties, city or cities, incorporated town or towns, in which the subscription is proposed to be made;" and (§ 3): that if it shall appear that two thirds of the legal voters of such county, city or town have voted for subscription, the subscription shall be made and bonds not having more than twenty years to run to maturity be issued to the company therefor. On the 26th of April, 1872, the defendant, in payment of the subscription, executed and delivered to the company its coupon bonds, under its corporate seal, to the amount of $75,000, bearing date January 1, 1872, and payable January 1, 1887, with interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and in the form before set forth, with coupons for the semi-annual interest attached, of the following form:

"City of Holly Springs,
Marshall County, Mississippi,
January 1, 1872.

$—— The City of Holly Springs acknowledges to owe the sum of ——— dollars, payable to bearer on the first day of ———, 18—, at the office of the Holly Springs Saving and Insurance Company, Holly Springs, Mississippi, for six months' interest on bond No. (No. of bond).

Lewis Beehler,
Treasurer of the City of Holly Springs."

After the issuing and delivery of the bonds to the company, the defendant, for several years continued to levy and collect taxes for the payment of the interest accruing on the bonds, and took up the coupons as they fell due, and voted the stock so subscribed, in the election of directors of the company, and in all stockholders' meetings of the company. On the 1st of January, 1875, the plaintiff became the bona fide holder for value, in due course of trade, and without any notice or knowledge of any illegality in the bonds, or want of power to issue them, of 43 of the bonds, and is the owner of 568 of the coupons, identifying sufficiently the bonds and coupons.

The demurrer sets forth, as causes of demurrer, that the declaration does not show that there was any power to order the election, or to hold it, or to subscribe for the stock, or to issue the bonds and coupons.

The court sustained the demurrer, and judgment was given for the defendant. The plaintiff has brought a writ of error.

It is not claimed that there was any statute in existence which authorized at the time the action of the Mayor and Aldermen of the city in ordering what is called the "special election" to be held, or which authorized at the time the holding of any election, general or special, on the question of a subscription to the stock of the company. Under the provision of the Constitution of Mississippi before cited, it is clear that the authority of the Legislature is necessary to enable the county, city or town to become a stockholder in, or lend its credit to a corporation. The Act of March 16, 1872, relied on as the validating Act, was passed after the so called election took place, and after the making of the subscription, but before the issuing of the bonds.

It is contended for the plaintiff in error, that the Constitution contemplated that the v [illegible] be taken in advance of the granting by the Legislature of authority to subscribe. But, however that may be, it is manifest, we think, that the provision of the Constitution confers no authority to subscribe for stock. The Legislature must authorize the subscription, either by a statute, passed in advance, providing for an election, and for obtaining the assent of the required two thirds of the qualified voters, to be followed by a subscription; or by a proper statute of distinct ratification and authorization, passed after there has been such assent of two thirds of the qualified voters, at an election, as the Constitution requires. The provision is inhibitory on the Legislature, and not permissive or enabling to the city.

Whether the voting which the declaration [illegible] took place was the holding of such an election as the Constitution contemplated (for the assent is to be given at an election to be held, and not otherwise), is a question not necessary to be [illegible]. Because we are of opinion that the Act relied on as a validating or ratifying Act has no such effect. It provides: "That all subscriptions to the capital stock of the" company in question, "made by any county, city or town in this State, which were not made in violation of the Constitution of this State, are hereby legalized, ratified and confirmed." It is urged, that the qualifying words "which were not made in violation of the Constitution of this State" were unnecessary, because the Legislature could not make valid any act done in violation of the Constitution; and it is sought to have the provision construed as if it read that all subscriptions, made after such a voting as took place in this case, are legalized, ratified and confirmed. But this assumes that the Legislature regarded such voting as being the holding of such a special election as the Constitution requires. If the Legislature had distinctly in words, designated and identified such voting and adopted it as being such an election and as evidencing the assent required by the Constitution, it might be held that there was an intention manifested to ratify this particular voting and assent and subscription, still leaving it even to be determined whether, on the whole, the Constitution had been complied with, and the Legislature had, in fact and in law, authorized the subscription. Such a designation and identification of a voting at an election, described as resulting in an approval by the constitutional two thirds of the qualified voters, [illegible] by an authority to Grenada County, [illegible] to be based on such approval, to subscribe for stock in the Vicksburg and Nashville Railroad Company, is found in the Act of the Legislature of Mississippi, approved January 27, [illegible] Laws 1872, chap. 71, p. 290, § 4), seven [illegible] before the Act in question was approved. [illegible] the Act involved in Grenada Co. v. Brown [illegible] 112 U. S., 261 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 704], [illegible] this court held that it was a valid confirmatory Act. But no such view can be taken of the Act in this case. The intention of the Legislature to confirm and ratify the subscription in question cannot be ascertained, with certainty, from the language of the Act, which is too [illegible] to form the basis of so important an authority as that sought to be deduced from it. [illegible] State v. Stoll, 17 Wall., 425, 436 [illegible] L. ed., 650, 655], if the Legislature intended to do what is claimed, "it was bound to do it openly, intelligibly, and in language not to be misunderstood," and "as a doubtful or obscure declaration would not be justifiable, so it is not to be imputed."

Even a bona fide holder of a municipal bond is bound to show legislative authority in the issuing body to create the bond. Recitals on the face of the bond or Acts in pais, operating by way of estoppel, may cure irregularities in the execution of a statutory power, but they cannot create it. If, as in the present case, legislative authority was wanting, the bond has no validity.

The general Act of April 19, 1872, is referred to in the declaration. But it does not avail in this case; for, although the bonds were issued after its passage, the subscription took place before, and the Act applies only to future elections and subscriptions and authorizes only bonds bearing interest at 7 per cent per annum.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk. Sup. Court, U. S.

DANIEL CHAPMAN, Appt.,

v.

JOSEPH W. BREWER, Assignee of BENJAMIN C. HOYT, a Bankrupt.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 158-173.)

Bankruptcy—assignment relates back to commencement of proceedings—prior levy under attachment issued by state court—sale enjoined.

*1. Where, under the Bankruptcy Act of March 2, 1867, a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy was commenced in the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan, before an attachment on land of the debtor, issued by a State Court of Michigan, was levied on the land, the assignment in bankruptcy, though made after the attachment, related back and vested title to the land in the assignee as of the commencement of the proceeding; and, where the attachment was levied within four months before the commencement of the proceeding, it was dissolved by the making of the assignment.

2. The proceeding in this case was held to have been commenced before the attachment was levied.

3. The District Court which made the adjudication having had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and the bankrupt having voluntarily appeared, and the adjudication having been correct in form, it is conclusive of the fact decreed, and cannot be attacked collaterally in a suit brought by the assignee against a person claiming an adverse interest in property of the bankrupt.

4. The assignment in bankruptcy was made after a levy on the land under an execution on a judgment obtained in a suit in a State Court of Michigan, brought after the proceeding in bankruptcy was commenced: Held, that the assignee, being in possession of the land, could maintain a suit in equity in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan, to remove the cloud on his title, and that that court could, under the exception in section 720 of the Revised Statutes, restrain by injunction a sale under the levy and a further levy.

[No. 206.]

Submitted Mar. 19, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan.

* Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

The history and facts of the case appear in opinion of the court.

Mr. H. F. Severens, for appellant:

An action to remove a cloud cannot be sustained when it is apparent that the facts set up in the pleadings, if true, would not legally affect the title of the complainant. Nor will a bill be sustained when the matters relied upon as the basis for removing the cloud are of record and not in pais.

Farnham v. Campbell, 34 N. Y., 480; Marsh v. Brooklyn, 59 N. Y., 280; Ward v. Dewey, 16 N. Y., 519.

The general doctrine is well settled that the Federal Courts have no authority, in cases not within their appellate jurisdiction, to issue injunctions to judgments in state courts, or in any manner to interfere with their jurisdiction or proceedings.

Story, Const., §§ 375, 376; Driggs v. Wolcott, 4 Cranch, 179; Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Pet. 400; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How., 624; Williams v. Benedict, 8 How., 107; Peale v. Phipps, 14 How., 368; Pulliam v. Osborne, 17 How., 471 (58 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed., 154); Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How., 583 (61 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed., 1028); Freeman v. Howe, 24 How., 450 (65 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed., 749); Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall., 334 (70 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed., 257); Johnson v. Bishop, 8 N. B. Reg., 533.

The Circuit Court it seems sustained the issuing of the writ of injunction under that section of the Bankrupt Act which provides that the Circuit Courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the District Courts "of all suits at law and in equity brought by an assignee in bankruptcy against any person claiming an adverse interest * * * touching any property or rights of the bankrupt transferable to or vested in such assignee."

Upon this point the court erred, and the order of the Circuit Court of the United States in this case, perpetually enjoining the sheriff of Berrien County from enforcing the execution issued by the state court of that county, finds no warrant in the Act referred to, and is opposed to the current of recognized authority.

Peck v. Jenness (supra); Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall., 551 (88 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed., 481); Doe v. Childress, 21 Wall., 642 (88 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed., 549); Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S., 521 (Bk. 23, L. ed., 403); Burbank v. Bigelow, 92 U. S., 179 (Bk. 23, L. ed., 542); Norton v. Switzer, 93 U. S., 355 (Bk. 23, L. ed., 903); Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S., 734 (Bk. 24, L. ed., 136); Davis v. Friedlander, 104 U. S., 570 (Bk. 26, L. ed., 818); Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S., 467 (Bk. 26, L. ed., 949); Johnson v. Bishop, 8 N. B. Reg., 533.

If the assignee wishes to contest these matters he should have made himself a party to the proceedings in the state court.

Bankrupt Act, § 14; Peck v. Jenness (supra); Doe v. Childress (supra); Eyster v. Gaff (supra); Hill v. Harding, 107 U. S., 631 (Bk. 27, L. ed., 493).

The bill is not framed to present or contest the substantial question as to the defendant's lien. It ignores altogether the attachment, and is not therefore adapted to make a contest on its validity under the bankrupt law. The allegations and the proof are not harmonious.

In substance and legal effect the adjudication in bankruptcy must be construed to have reference to the last petition and not to the former, under which nothing was done.

The caption of the order was no part of it.

Jackson v. Ashton, 8 Pet., 148.

This would make a variance from the bill and would make the initiation of the proceedings subsequent to the attachment of the plaintiff, and present a question not competent to be litigated on such pleading as the complainant's bill.

Morse v. Palmer, 13 Mich., 367; Piatt v. Vattier, 9 Pet., 405; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet., 177; Story, Eq. Pl., § 23.

Messrs. John W. Stone and J. Kleinhaus for appellee:

The suit being authorized the court as an incident to its jurisdiction could grant the injunction.

The aim and policy of the statute cannot be effectually carried out in any other way.

In re Christy, 3 How., 292; In re Mallory, Sawy., 88; In re Oil Co., 6 Blatchf., 521; Marlson v. Heaney, 1 Dill., 497; Pennington v. Lonenstein, 1 Bk. Reg., 570; Pennington v. Sale, Bk. Reg., 572; Jones v. Leach, 1 Bk. Reg., 59 U. S. v. Bancroft, 6 Benedict, 392; In re Clari 9 Blatchf., 372.

The bankruptcy court having first acquire jurisdiction over the bankrupt's assets, the could not be levied on by process from the sta court.

Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Pet., 400; Peck v. Jennes 7 How., 612; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How., 583 (U. S., bk. 15, L. ed., 1028); Freeman v. Hou 24 How., 450 (65 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed., 749 Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S., 176 (Bk. 28, ed., 390).

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opi ion of the court:

On the 10th of October, 1873, John Whitt sey, a creditor of Benjamin C. Hoyt and Eno C. Hoyt, copartners under the name of B. Hoyt & Son, filed a petition in bankruptcy, the District Court of the United States for t Western District of Michigan, praying that t said two persons, "partners as aforesaid," mig be declared bankrupts. The petition contain the prescribed allegations, and set forth, as t demand of the petitioner, a promissory n made by the partnership, in its firm name, his order. It alleged as one act of bankrupt that the firm had "fraudulently stopped pa ment" of its commercial paper "within a pe od of fourteen days," omitting to add "and r resumed payment within said period." It leged, as a second act of bankruptcy, that t firm had "suspended and not resumed pa ment" of its commercial paper "within a pe od of fourteen days."

Before anything was done on this petition cept to file it, and on the 12th of January, 18 Daniel Chapman procured to be issued by Circuit Court of the County of Berrien, in State of Michigan, an attachment against lands and personal property of the said perso as such copartners, for the sum of $4,895.44, a suit brought by him, in that court, agai them, to recover a money demand, which tachment the sheriff, on that day, levied on tain real estate in that county. Enoch C. H died on the 25th of February, 1874.

On the 5th of March, 1874, a petition, indorsed "Amended petition," was filed by Whitney in the bankruptcy court, containing the same averments as the first petition, with the addition of the words so omitted in the first petition. In the body of the petition there was no mention of its being an amended petition, nor did it allude to the first petition, or to the death of Enoch C. Hoyt and its prayer was the same as that of the first petition. It was verified March 3, 1874.

On the 14th of April, 1874, an order was made in the suit in the State Court, entering the default of Benjamin C. Hoyt, for want of an appearance, on proof of personal service on him of the attachment and of the filing of the declaration; and, on the 16th of April, 1874, an order was made, on affidavit, suggesting the death of Enoch C. Hoyt since the issuing of the attachment, and ordering that the action proceed against the surviving defendant, Benjamin C. Hoyt.

On the 3d of May, 1874, an order was made by the bankruptcy court, stated in it to be made on the appearance and consent of "solicitors for the alleged bankrupts," reciting that it had been shown that Enoch C. Hoyt had "departed this life since the commencement of the proceeding in said matter," and ordering that all proceedings should stand against Benjamin C. Hoyt, survivor of himself and Enoch C. Hoyt, and that they might be prosecuted against him with the effect as if Enoch C. Hoyt had not died, and that the individual property of Enoch C. Hoyt be surrendered by the marshal to his proper representatives. On the same day, Benjamin C. Hoyt filed a denial of bankruptcy, signed by his attorneys, as follows: "And now the said Benjamin C. Hoyt appears and denies that he has committed the act of bankruptcy set forth in said petition, and avers that he should not be declared bankrupt for any cause in said petition alleged, and he demands that the same be inquired of by a jury."

On the 8th of May, 1874, in the suit in the State Court, a judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, against Benjamin C. Hoyt, for $[illegible] 15, and costs; and, on the same day, an execution was issued thereon, under which, on that day, the sheriff levied on the same real estate which he had levied on under the attachment.

On the 1st of June, 1874, an adjudication was made by the bankruptcy court, in these words:

Adjudication of Bankruptcy on Creditor's Petition.

Western District of Michigan, ss:

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan. In Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Benjamin C. Hoyt, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on the 10th day of October, A. D. 1873. At Grand Rapids, in said District, on the first day of June, A. D. 1874. Before Hon. Solomon L. Withey, district judge.

This matter came on to be heard at Grand Rapids in said court, and the respondent having withdrawn his denial and demand for a jury and having, by his attorneys, Hughes, O'Brien & Smiley, consented thereto.

And thereupon, and upon consideration of the proofs in said matter, it was found that the facts set forth in said petition were true, and it is therefore adjudged, that Benjamin C. Hoyt became bankrupt, within the true intent and meaning of the Act entitled 'An Act to Establish a Uniform System of Bankruptcy Throughout the United States,' approved March 2, 1867, before the filing of the said petition, and he is therefore declared and adjudged a bankrupt accordingly. And it is further ordered that the said bankrupt shall, within five days after this order, make and deliver, or transmit by mail, postpaid, to the marshal, as messenger, a schedule of his creditors, and inventory of his estate, in the form and verified in the manner required of the petitioning debtor by the said Act.

Witness the Hon. Solomon L. Withey, judge of the said District Court, and the seal thereof, at Grand Rapids, in said district, on the 1st day of June, A. D. 1874.

[SEAL.] Isaac H. Parrish,
Clerk of District Court for said District."

In the certificate made by the clerk of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan, certifying the copies of the bankruptcy papers, he certifies: "that the foregoing is a true copy of the petition for adjudication filed October 10, 1873, copy of amended petition, order continuing proceedings, denial of bankruptcy by B. C. Hoyt, and adjudication of bankruptcy, on file in the proceedings of said court in said entitled matter." This is mentioned because, in the adjudication, the petition is referred to as filed October 19, 1873. [162]

On the 16th of December, 1873, an alias execution was issued in the suit in the State Court, which the sheriff, on that day, levied on real estate in Berrien County other than that before levied on by him.

On the 1st of October, 1874, the register in bankruptcy executed to Joseph W. Brewer an assignment in these words:

"In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan. In Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Benjamin C. Hoyt, Bankrupt.

Western District of Michigan, ss:

Know all men by these presents that Joseph W. Brewer, of the Village of St. Joseph, in the County of Berrien, and State of Michigan, in said district, has been duly appointed assignee in said matter: Now, therefore, I, J. Davidson Burns, register in bankruptcy in said district, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the 14th section of an Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Establish a Uniform System of Bankruptcy Throughout the United States,' approved March 2, 1867, do hereby convey and assign to the said Joseph W. Brewer, assignee as aforesaid, all the estate, real and personal, of the said Benjamin C. Hoyt, bankrupt aforesaid, including all the property of whatever kind, of which he was possessed, or in which he was interested or entitled to have, on the tenth day of October, A. D. 1873, with all his deeds, books and papers relating thereto, excepting such property as is exempted from the operation of this assignment by the provisions of said fourteenth section of said Act; to have and to hold all the foregoing premises to the said Joseph W. Brewer and his heirs forever, in trust, nevertheless, for the use and purposes, with the powers, and subject to the conditions and limitations, set forth in said Act.

[163] In witness thereof, I, the said register, have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of said court to be affixed, this first day of October, A. D. 1874. J. Davidson Burns, [SEAL.] Register in Bankruptcy."

On the 27th of January, 1876, Brewer filed a bill in equity, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan, against Chapman (the judgment creditor), and the sheriff who had levied under the first execution, and the deputy sheriff who had levied under the second execution, setting forth the filing of the first petition in bankruptcy, and its contents; averring "that the usual order to show cause was thereupon made by said District Court, and a certified copy thereof duly served on said Benjamin C. and Enoch C. Hoyt, who subsequently, and in due time, appeared in said bankruptcy matter;" and alleging the death of Enoch C. Hoyt, the making of the order of March 2, 1874, the adjudication of bankruptcy, the appointment of, and assignment to, the assignee, the facts in regard to Chapman's judgment, executions and levies, and threats by the officers to sell the real estate levied on. The bill makes no mention of the amended petition in bankruptcy or of the attachment. It states that the executions are outstanding; that the real estate so levied on was the separate property of Benjamin C. Hoyt at the date of filing the petition; that the plaintiff, as assignee, is the owner, and in possession, of all of it, except certain specified lots; and that said levies constitute a cloud on his title, and embarrass and hinder him in disposing of the property, and notices of the levies have been recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county. The prayer of the bill is, that the levies be decreed void as against the plaintiff, as assignee, and the defendants be decreed to release to the plaintiff, as assignee, all their right and title and interest, acquired under the levies, in and to the real estate he is so in possession of, and, on their failure to do so, the decree be ordered to have the effect of said release, and he have leave to record the same in the office of said register of deeds, and the defendants be enjoined from selling or interfering with the real estate the plaintiff is so in possession of. The bill also prays for such other and further relief as shall be equitable and just.

[164]

The answer denies the validity of the petition set forth in the bill, and denies that Benjamin C. Hoyt was adjudicated a bankrupt on the footing of that petition, or on any petition of which he had notice, and denies the validity of the adjudication. It sets up the attachment levy, and admits the existence of most of the material facts alleged in the bill, and that the property was the separate property of Benjamin C. Hoyt, but denies that the plaintiff is entitled to any equitable relief. A replication was filed and proofs were taken, establishing the facts above set forth, and that Brewer had acted as assignee since October 3, 1874, and had had the management and custody and possession of the property, and paid taxes on it, since October 10, 1874, and that it was worth about $10,000.

The Circuit Court made a decree, on April 15, 1880, adjudging that Benjamin C. Hoyt, "at the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against him, namely: on the 10th day of October, 1873, was the owner in fee of the" lands described in the bill as those of which th plaintiff was in possession; that the plaintiff suc ceeded to the interest which said Hoyt had i those lands on the 10th of October, 1873, an was and is the owner in fee and in the actus possession of them; that each of said executio levies was and is a cloud on the title of th plaintiff, as assignee, to said lands, and was an is void as against him; that the defendants exe cute to the plaintiff a release of their interest i said lands under said levies, and, on their fai ure to do so, the decree should have all the forc and effect of such release, and might be record ed in the office of the register of deeds of sai county; and that an injunction issue restrai ing the defendants from selling, disposing o or interfering with said lands, under said levie and from making any new or further levies o any of said lands, under said judgment. A injunction to that effect was issued and serve January 3, 1881. Chapman has appealed t this court.

The principal question considered by the Ci cuit Court, as appears from its opinion, accon panying the record, was, whether the judgme and levies in the suit in the State Court bein prior to the appointment of the assignee in banl ruptcy, although that suit was not begun till af er the first petition in bankruptcy was filed, t Circuit Court had authority to enjoin a sale the lands on the executions.

The appellant takes the points, that nothin appears to have been done under the first pe tion in bankruptcy; that no order appears have been made, or notice given, thereon; th the second petition was a new petition, and do not profess to be, and was not, an amend petition, and was not filed under any order a thorizing it as an amendment; and that the a judication recites the date of filing of the pe tion as October 19, instead of October 10. T questions presented here by the appellant ar (1) Whether the alleged cloud on the plaintif title was a proper ground for equitable jurisdi tion; (2) Whether the Circuit Court had a thority to interfere with the proceedings of t State Court; (3) Whether the assignee shou not have made himself a party to the proce ings in the State Court, or have interven therein; (4) Whether the bill and the proof c respond, and whether the bill is adapted to c test the validity of such lien as arose by virt of the attachment.

All the bankruptcy proceedings, except t appointment of the assignee, and the assig ment to him, and all the proceedings in the s in the State Court, except the issuing and le of the second execution, took place before t enactment of the Revised Statutes, on the 2 of June, 1874. The Revised Statutes purp to re-enact the statutes in force on December 1873. At the latter date none of the proce ings in bankruptcy had taken place save filing of the first petition, and the State Co proceedings had not been begun.

The Bankruptcy Act in force on Decembe 1873, was the Act of March 2, 1867, chap. 1 14 Stat. at L., 517, the 14th section of wh provided that the assignment to an assignee bankruptcy "shall relate back to the commen ment of said proceedings in bankruptcy, a thereupon, by operation of law, the title to such property and estate, both real and pers [illegible] shall vest in said assignee, although the same [illegible] then attached on mesne process as the property of the debtor, and shall dissolve any such attachment made within four months next preceding the commencement of said proceedings." The provision of section 5044 of the Revised Statutes is, that the assignment "shall relate back to the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and by operation of law shall vest the title to all such property and estate, both real and personal, in the assignee, although the same is then attached on mesne process as the property of the debtor, and shall dissolve any such attachment made within four months next preceding the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings." Under these provisions, if the bankruptcy proceedings were commenced October 19, 1873, they were begun before the State Court attachment was made, and the assignment, when made, related back to October 19, 1873, and vested title in the assignee as of that date, and overreached and defeated all liens under the attachment. Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S., 403 (Bk. 25, L. ed., 866]; Conner v. Long, 104 Id., 228 [Bk. 26, L. ed., 723]. If the bankruptcy proceedings were not begun till March 3, 1874, the attachment, having been made within four months next preceding that date, was dissolved by the making of the assignment, and the title of the assignee vested as of March 3, 1874, which was before any execution levy. In this view it would not be necessary to notice any of the objections made as to the first petition, or as to the second petition regarded as an amended petition, were it not that the bill is founded on the first petition.

The date of October 19 in the adjudication must be regarded as a clerical or typographical error. The proper date is stated in the bill and admitted in the answer, and is stated in the court's certificate and in the bankruptcy assignment, and in a stipulation signed by the solicitors. Enoch C. Hoyt died February 25, 1874, before the second petition was filed, and the order made by the bankruptcy court, May 2, 1874, states that he had died "since the commencement of the proceeding in said matter;" and it was that fact, in connection, probably, with the fact that no order to show cause had been served on Enoch C. Hoyt, which made it necessary for that order to direct the marshal to surrender to the representatives of Enoch C. Hoyt all his individual property.

It is also objected by the defendant that the petition was filed against the firm, and that the record does not show that the petitioner filed any proof of his claim, or any proof of bankruptcy.

By § 36 of the Act of 1867 (§ 5121 of the Revised Statutes), where two persons, partners in trade, should be adjudged bankrupt, not only was the property of the firm to be taken and administered, but also the separate estate of each partner. When Enoch C. Hoyt died, the partnership estate vested in the survivor, and the proceedings were, by consent of attorneys then appearing for the survivor, ordered to stand against him as survivor and to proceed against him as survivor. He appeared by attorney and consented to an adjudication. By § 43 of the Act of 1867 (§ 5026 of the Revised Statutes), the appearance and consent of the latter were made a waiver of other notice. The adjudication states that, on consideration of the proofs, it was found that the facts set forth in the petition were true. It was not necessary to show in this case what the proofs were. If the District Court had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and the bankrupt voluntarily appeared, and the adjudication was correct in form, it is conclusive of the fact decreed, and can be impeached only by a direct proceeding in a competent court, and can no more be attacked collaterally in a suit like the present than any other judgment. Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall., 398 [88 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed., 520].

The adjudication and the assignment embraced the individual property of Benjamin C. Hoyt; and it is alleged in the bill, and admitted in the answer, that the property levied on by the defendants was his individual property.

These views cover all the objections made to the bankruptcy proceedings, and it must be held that the adjudication was regular and valid, and refers to, and was made on, the first petition, as amended by the second, and on a proceeding commenced when the first petition was filed.

It is objected that the bill makes no mention of the attachment. But the answer sets up the attachment and the levy thereunder. The question as to whether a priority of right was acquired thereby was raised by the pleadings, and the decree makes no reference to the attachment, but annuls the execution levies.

By § 2 of the Act of 1867, the Circuit Court of the District has jurisdiction of all suits in equity brought by an assignee in bankruptcy against any person claiming an adverse interest touching any property of the bankrupt transferable to or vested in the assignee. This provision is re-enacted in § 4979 of the Revised Statutes. By § 720 of the Revised Statutes it is provided, that "the writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States, to stay proceedings in any court of a State, except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy." It is contended for the appellant (1) that a suit in equity will not lie for the relief granted; (2) that, at all events, there was no power to award the injunction. [170]

That the defendant claimed an adverse interest touching the property is clear. The question is, whether the plaintiff can have relief in equity. He was in possession of the land, and, as he says, of the only building there was on it. By statutory provisions in Michigan, commencing with § 29 of the Act of April 23, 1838 (Code of 1838, p. 358), followed by § 1 of the Act of March 28, 1840 (No. 76, p. 127), and the Revised Statutes of 1846 (title 21, chap. 90, § 36, p. 360), and now in force as § 6626 of Howell's Statutes: "Any person having the actual possession, and legal or equitable title to lands, may institute a suit in chancery against any other person setting up a claim thereto in opposition to the title claimed by the complainant, and, if the complainant shall establish his title to such lands, the defendant shall be decreed to release to the complainant all claim thereto." If there should be a sale on the executions, there would be a sheriff's deed; and, by another statute of the State such deed is made prima facie evidence of the regularity of the sale. Act of February 19, 1867, No. 20, § 2, now in force as § 5678 of Howell's Statutes. It is held by the Supreme Court of Michigan that the statute first cited covers a claim to a lien on land, and that a lien which may result in a sale and a deed constitutes such a cloud that equity will afford relief. Scofield v. City of Lansing, 17 Mich., 437, 447, 448. Especially will this be done, if the lien is not void on its face, as the lien here is not, but is a cloud on the plaintiff's title. Therefore, the plaintiff could obtain, under the Michigan statute, and in a court of Michigan, the relief he has had. In such a case, a Circuit Court of the United States, having otherwise jurisdiction in the case, will, as a general rule, administer the same relief in equity which the State Courts can grant. Clark v. Smith, 13 Pet., 195, 203; Case of Broderick's Will 21 Wall., 503, 519, 520 [88 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed., 599, 605]; Van Norden v. Morton, 99 U. S., 378, 380 [Bk. 25, L. ed., 453, 454]; Cummings v. Nat. Bk., 101 Id., 153, 157 [Bk. 25, L. ed., 903, 904]; Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S., 15 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 52]; Reynolds v. Crawfordsville Bk., 112 Id., 405 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 733]. It has general power given to it, irrespective of citizenship, to grant equitable relief, in a suit in equity by an assignee in bankruptcy against any person who claims an adverse interest touching the assigned property.

[171]

We are not disposed, however, to rest the case upon jurisdiction arising from the Michigan statute. We hold that, under the equity jurisdiction conferred by the bankruptcy Act, the Circuit Court had authority to remove this cloud on the plaintiff's title. It was the duty of the assignee to remove it, and to obtain a title which would enable him to sell the land for the benefit of the estate. The claim of the defendants, under the levies, is one which ought not to be enforced. It has no validity as against the rights of the plaintiff; it throws a cloud on his title; he is in possession, and cannot sue at law; and the papers supporting the defendants' claim are not void on their face. Story's Eq. Juris., §§ 700, 705; 3 Pomeroy's Eq. Juris., §§ 1398, 1399, and cases cited; Pettit v. Shepherd, 5 Paige, 493; Carroll v. Safford, 3 How., 463; Ward v. Dewey, 16 N. Y., 519; Mustian v. Jones, 30 Ga., 951; Martin v. Graves, 5 Allen, 601; Stout v. Cook, 37 Ill., 283; Clouston v. Shearer, 99 Mass., 209; Sullivan v. Finnegan, 101 Mass., 447; Anderson v. Talbot, 1 Heisk., 407; Marsh v. Brooklyn, 59 N. Y., 280; O'Hare v. Downing, 130 Mass., 16, 19. In Pettit v. Shepherd, it was held that a court of chancery might interpose to prevent the giving of a conveyance, under pretense of right, which would operate as a cloud upon the title to real estate. In O'Hare v. Downing it is said, that "a court of chancery will restrain by injunction a threatened levy of execution upon real estate which is not legally subject to such a levy, and thus prevent a cloud upon the title, without compelling the owner of the land to wait until the levy has been completed, and then admit himself to be disseised, in order to maintain a writ of entry." Much more will it prevent a sale after a levy.

[172]

But it is contended that the Circuit Court had no authority to award or issue the injunction. The jurisdiction of that court in this case is conferred by the "law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy;" and we think the injunction was authorized by that law. The court of bankruptcy was authorized by § 40 of the Act of 1867 (§ 5024 of the Revised Statutes), where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed, t restrain all persons, by injunction, from inte fering with the debtor's property. The juri diction of suits in equity, given to the Circu Court by § 2 of the Act of 1867 (§ 4979 of th Revised Statutes), was given to it concurrentl with the District Courts. It must be held th Congress, in authorizing a suit in equity, in case like the present, has, in order to make th other relief granted completely effective, a thorized an injunction, as necessarily incident and consequent, to prevent further proceedin under the levies already made and new levi under the judgment. But for the supposed i hibitory force of § 720, a court of equity, granting, on the merits, the other relief he granted, would necessarily have power to awar the injunction. We think the Circuit Court w authorized to award it here, within the exce tion in § 720.

It is urged, that the plaintiff should hav made himself a party to the proceedings in th State Court, and have contested the matter there under the authority given to him by § 14 of th Act of 1867 (§ 5047 of the Revised Statutes), t defend suits pending against the bankrupt the time of the adjudication. As the assigr ment in bankruptcy was not made until Octob 1, 1874, and the judgment and the levy unde the first execution were in May, 1874, we do nc think the assignee was called upon to take an steps in the State Court, after the assignmen to obtain relief. He was entitled to pursue th remedy he did.

The cases of Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S 276 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 145], and Covell v. Heyman 111 Id., 176 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 390], are relied o by the appellant to show that the decree in th case was erroneous. The view urged is that, b virtue of the levy by the sheriff, the State Cou acquired custody, control and jurisdiction the property, which could not be disturbed b the Circuit Court. But the doctrine of tho cases has no application in favor of the appe lant, in a case like the present. In the first ca it was held, that, after property had been a tached by a marshal of the United States, c mesne process from a Circuit Court of the Uni ed States, a third person, claiming its owne ship, could, without reference to citizenshi come into the Circuit Court for redress, by a cillary proceedings. In the second case, it w held, in pursuance of the decision in Freeman v. Howe, 24 How., 450 [65 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed 749], that possession of property by a marsh of the United States, under a writ of executi from a Circuit Court of the United States, cou not be disturbed by virtue of a writ of replev from a State Court, issued by a third perso E converso, as was held in Taylor v. Carryl, How., 583 [61 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed., 1028], pro erty seized by a sheriff, under process of tachment from a State Court, cannot be tak from the sheriff by initial admiralty process suing from a District Court of the United Stat But those were none of them cases where, u der the bankruptcy Act, an assignee in ban ruptcy claimed a paramount title, and resort to regular judicial proceedings to first vaca and declare void the adverse title, and sweep away, and then have such final process in gard to the subject matter of the title as shou be necessary to make the decree effective. An [illegible] v. Hyman, the court, speaking by Mr. [illegible] after explaining the point of [illegible] in Freeman v. Howe, says: "The [illegible] principle protects the possession of property [illegible] held by process issuing from [illegible] against any disturbance under [illegible] of the Courts of the United States, excepting of course, those cases wherein the latter [illegible] jurisdiction for the purpose of enforcing the supremacy of the Constitution and [illegible] of the United States." This exception includes the present case. The bankruptcy proceeding dissolved the state attachment, and the bankruptcy Act conferred on the assignee a [illegible] title, which he was empowered by the Act to enforce, by proper equitable remedies in the circuit court, against the adverse [illegible] by virtue of the suit in the state [illegible].

Decree affirmed.

[illegible] Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] U. S., 351.

[illegible]

[illegible] of JAMES S. WILSON.

([illegible] U. S., Reporter's ed., 417–429.)

[illegible] — infamous crime under the [illegible] Amendment—§ 1022, R. S.—habeas [illegible]—when prisoner entitled to discharge.

[illegible] cannot discharge on habeas corpus a [illegible] imprisoned under the sentence of a Circuit [illegible] Court in a criminal case, unless the sentence [illegible] the jurisdiction of that court, or there [illegible] authority to hold the prisoner under the [illegible].

[illegible] provision of Rev. Stat. § 1022, authorizing [illegible] to be prosecuted either by indictment [illegible] information, does not preclude the prosecution by information of such other offenses as [illegible] enumerated consistently with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

[illegible] of a general conviction and sentence upon two counts, one of which is good, a misuse of the verdict as upon the other count only, [illegible] the inquiry whether the convict had [illegible] why sentence should not be pronounced [illegible], is no ground for discharging him on [illegible].

[illegible] of a judgment of a District Court, [illegible] a person convicted in one State, to imprisonment in a prison in another State, the omission [illegible] that there was no suitable prison in the State in which he was convicted, and that the Attorney-General had designated the prison in the [illegible] State as a suitable place of imprisonment, is [illegible] for discharging the prisoner on habeas corpus.

[illegible] copy of the record of a sentence to [illegible] is sufficient to authorize the detention of the prisoner, without any warrant or mittimus.

[illegible] sentenced to imprisonment for an infamous crime, without having been presented or indicted by a grand jury, as required by the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, is entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus.

[illegible] punishable by imprisonment for a term [illegible] at hard labor is an infamous crime, within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, that "No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury."

[No. 4 Orig.]

[illegible] Dec. 16, 1884. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

[illegible] for a writ of habeas corpus.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

[illegible] by Mr. Justice GRAY.

Messrs. Alfred Russell and Nath'l Wilson, for petitioner.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Asst. Atty-Gen., contra:

There is no definition of the word "infamous" to be found in the statutes, although by the law of several of the States, the word "felony" includes every offense punishable by death, or imprisonment in the state prison. This definition does not obtain in federal jurisprudence, inasmuch as many of the most trifling misdemeanors are punishable by imprisonment in the state prison.

Revised Statutes, § 721, adopting the laws of the several States, applies only to civil cases. It has been repeatedly held that the fact that an offense may or must be punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary does not make it in law infamous. U. S. v. Reid, 12 How. 361; U. S. v. Maxwell, 3 Dill. 275; U. S. v. Coppersmith, 4 Fed. Rep. 198; U.S. v. Wynn, 9 Fed. Rep. 886; U. S. v. Block, 4 Sawy. 211.

The question whether the utterance of forged paper is a felony was exhaustively discussed by Judge Hammond in U. S. v. Coppersmith, supra, and the conclusion reached that it was a mere cheat or misdemeanor. See also, Fox v. State, 5 How. 410. It would naturally follow that it was triable by information, and such was the opinion of Judges Blatchford and Benedict in U. S. v. Yates, 6 Fed. Rep. 861, and of Judge Wheeler in U. S. v. Field, 16 Fed. Rep. 778.

In U. S. v. Wynn, 9 Fed. Rep. 886, Judge Treat took a still more advanced position, and held that no crime is infamous within the meaning of the Constitution, unless expressly made infamous or declared a felony by an Act of Congress. An information for stealing from the mail was here sustained. But see U. S. v. Block, 4 Sawy. 411; U. S. v. Cultus Joe, 15 Int. Rev. Rec. 57.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, presented to this court by a man confined in the House of Correction at Detroit in the State of Michigan, under a sentence to be imprisoned there for fifteen years at hard labor, passed by the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas, upon an information filed by the District Attorney for that district. [418]

The record of the conviction and sentence, a copy of which was annexed to the petition, showed the following case:

The information, which was filed by leave of the court, contained two counts: the first count upon Rev. Stat. § 5430, for unlawfully having in possession, with intent to sell, an obligation engraved and printed after the similitude of securities issued under authority of the United States, to wit: of an interest-bearing coupon bond of the United States; and the second count upon § 5431, for passing, with intent to defraud, a counterfeited interest-bearing coupon bond of the United States; and each count alleging that the bond was in the words and figures of a copy attached to the indictment and made part thereof. That copy was of an instrument purporting to be a bond of the United States Silver Mining Company of Denver City, Colorado, having printed at its head the words "THE UNITED STATES" in large and conspicuous capitals, followed on a lower line by the words "SILVER MINING COMPANY OF DENVER CITY, COLORADO" in much smaller and less distinct type, and bearing the signatures of "R. E. Hullson, Pres't," and "J. H. Mayson, Sec'y," and otherwise numbered and lettered very much like a genuine bond of the United States.

[419] The defendant filed a general demurrer to the information, which was overruled by the court; and he then pleaded not guilty, and was tried by a jury, who returned a general verdict of guilty; and he moved for a new trial, for insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict.

The rest of the record, a certified copy of which was the only paper delivered to the keeper of the house of correction, stated that the defendant was brought to the bar in the custody of the marshal, and his motion for a new trial overruled; "and the said defendant, being now inquired of by the court if he have aught to say why the judgment and sentence of the court should not now be pronounced against him upon the verdict and finding of the jury in this case, finding him guilty of passing a counterfeit United States bond, and saying nothing further than he hath already said; and, the court being now well advised in the premises, it is therefore considered, ordered, adjudged and sentenced that said defendant, James S. Wilson, do pay to the United States a fine of $5,000 for said offense and all the costs of this proceeding, and that the United States have execution therefor, and that he be imprisoned for and during the term of fifteen years at hard labor in the House of Correction at Detroit, Michigan; and that the said marshal of this district convey the said prisoner to the house of correction aforesaid and deliver him to the custody of the keeper thereof; and that the clerk of this court make out for said marshal two copies of this judgment and sentence, duly certified under the seal of this court, one of which the said marshal shall deliver to the keeper of said house of correction, and the other return and file in this court, with the receipt of said keeper thereon."

The offense described in Rev. Stat. § 5430 is punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment at hard labor not more than fifteen years, or by both; and the offense described in § 5431 is punishable by a like fine and imprisonment.

The petitioner alleged in his petition, and contended in argument, that his imprisonment was illegal upon the following grounds:

First. That in excess of the power of the [420] court, and in violation of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, he had been held to answer for an infamous crime, and punished by a fine of $5,000 and imprisonment for the term of fifteen years at hard labor, without presentment or indictment by a grand jury.

Second. That he was held, under a judgment void, and in excess of the power of the court, upon an information for a crime which was not committed, against the provisions of chapter 7 of the title, Crimes, in the Revised Statutes, in which cases informations were expressly authorized, and to which they were impliedly restricted, by § 1022 of those statutes.

Third. That the judgment was void and in excess of the power of the court, because conviction and the sentence were for differ offenses; the conviction being for having possession a bond of a mining company in similitude of a United States bond, and the s tence being for passing a counterfeit Uni States bond.

Fourth. That he was held by the keepe the Detroit House of Correction without thority of law, because the order of the co for his imprisonment did not show that the co had determined two questions of fact wh were made by Rev. Stat. §§ 5541, 5546, co tions precedent to the exercise of its powe sentence to a prison outside the State of Ark sas, namely: 1st, that there was no suit prison in that State; and 2d, that the Attorn General had designated the Detroit House Correction as a suitable penitentiary in anot State.

Fifth. That the keeper had no warrant mittimus authorizing him to hold the prison as required by Rev. Stat. § 1028.

It is well settled by a series of decisions this court, having no jurisdiction of crim cases by writ of error or appeal, cannot charge on habeas corpus a person impriso under the sentence of a circuit or district co in a criminal case, unless the sentence exce the jurisdiction of that court, or there is no thority to hold him under the sentence. parte Watkins, 3 Pet., 193, and 7 Pet., 568; parte Lange, 18 Wall., 163 [85 U. S., bk. 21 ed. 872]; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18 [bk. L. ed. 787]; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371 25, L. ed. 717]; Ex parte Curtis, 106 U. S. [bk. 27, L. ed. 232]; Ex parte Carll, 106 U 521 [bk. 27, L. ed. 288]; Ex parte Yarbro 110 U. S. 651 [bk. 28, L. ed. 274]; Ex p Crouch, 112 U. S. 178 [bk. 28, L. ed. 690]; parte Bigelow, 113 U.S. 328 [bk. 28, L. ed. 10

None of the grounds on which the petiti relies, except the first, require extended cussion.

The provision of Rev. Stat. § 1022, der from the Civil Rights Act of May 31, 1870, c 114, § 8 [16 Stat. at L. 142], authorizing ce offenses to be prosecuted either by indictm or by information, does not preclude the p cution by information of other offenses of su grade as may be so prosecuted consistently the Constitution and laws of the United St

The objection of variance between the viction and the sentence is not sustained b record. The first count is for unlawfully ing in possession, with intent to sell, an ob tion engraved and printed after the simili of securities issued under authority of the ed States, and the copy annexed and refe to in that count is of such an obligation. the verdict and the sentence are general, therefore valid if one count is good. Sayd U. S., 112 U. S., 216 [bk. 28, L. ed., 697]. misrecital of the verdict, in the statemen the intermediate inquiry whether the pris had aught to say why sentence should no pronounced against him, is no more tha irregularity or error, not affecting the juri tion of the court.

The omission of the record to state as i parte Karstendick, 93 U. S. 396 [bk. 23, L 889], that there was no suitable penite within the State, and that the Attorney-Ge [illegible] designated the House of Correction at Detroit as a suitable place of imprisonment outside the State, is even less material.

The certified copy of the record of the sentence to imprisonment in the Detroit House of Correction, if valid upon its face, is sufficient to authorize the keeper to hold the prisoner, without any warrant or mittimus. People v. [illegible], 1 Hill (N. Y.) 154.

But if the crime of which the petitioner was [illegible] was an infamous crime, within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, no court of the United States had jurisdiction to try or punish him, except upon presentment or indictment by a grand jury.

We are therefore necessarily brought to the determination of the question whether the crime of having in possession, with intent to [illegible], an obligation engraved and printed after the similitude of a public security of the United States punishable by fine of not more than $[illegible], or by imprisonment at hard labor not more than fifteen years, or by both, is an infamous crime, within the meaning of this Amendment of the Constitution.

The first provision of this Amendment, which is all that relates to this subject, is in these words: "No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger."

The scope and effect of this, as of many other provisions of the Constitution, are best ascertained by bearing in mind what the law was before.

Mr. William Eden (afterwards Lord Auckland) in his Principles of Penal Law, which passed through three editions in England and at least one in Ireland within six years before the Declaration of Independence, observed, "There are two kinds of infamy; the one founded in the opinion of the people respecting the mode of punishment; the other in the construction of law respecting the future credibility of the delinquent." Eden's Principles of Penal Law, ch. 7, § 5.

At that time it was already established law, that the infamy which disqualified a convict to be a witness depended upon the character of his crime, and not upon the nature of his punishment. Pendock v. Mackinder, Willes, 665; [illegible] Ev. 143, 2 Hawk., chap. 46, § 102; The King v. Priddle, 1 Leach, 4th ed. 442. The disqualification to testify appears to have been limited to those adjudged guilty of treason, [illegible], forgery, and crimes injuriously affecting by falsehood and fraud the administration of justice, such as perjury, subornation of perjury, suppression of testimony by bribery, [illegible] to accuse one of crime, or to procure the absence of a witness; and not to have been extended to cases of private cheats, such as the [illegible] of goods by false pretenses, or the [illegible] of counterfeit coin or forged securities. [illegible] Ev., § 373; Utley v. Merrick, 11 Met., [illegible]; Fox v. Ohio, 5 How, 410, 433, 434.

But the object and the very terms of the provision in the Fifth Amendment show that incompetency to be a witness is not the only [illegible] of its application.

Whether a convict shall be permitted to testify is not governed by a regard to his rights or to his protection, but by the consideration whether the law deems his testimony worthy of credit upon the trial of the rights of others. But whether a man shall be put upon his trial for crime without a presentment or indictment by a grand jury of his fellow citizens depends upon the consequences to himself if he shall be found guilty.

By the law of England, informations by the Attorney-General, without the intervention of a grand jury, were not allowed for capital crimes, nor for any felony, by which was understood any offense which at common law occasioned a total forfeiture of the offender's lands, or goods, or both. 4 Bl. Com., 94, 95, 310. The question whether the prosecution must be by indictment, or might be by information, thus depended upon the consequences to the convict himself. The Fifth Amendment, declaring in what cases a grand jury should be necessary and in effect affirming the rule of the common law upon the same subject, substituting only for capital crimes or felonies, "a capital or otherwise infamous crime," manifestly had in view that rule of the common law, rather than the rule on the very different question of the competency of witnesses.

The leading word "capital" describing the crime by its punishment only, the associated words "or otherwise infamous crime" must, by an elementary rule of construction, include crimes subject to any infamous punishment, even if they should be held to include also [424] crimes infamous in their nature, independently of the punishment affixed to them.

A reference to the history of the proposal and adoption of this provision of the Constitution confirms this conclusion. It had its origin in one of the Amendments, in the nature of a Bill of Rights, recommended by the Convention by which the State of Massachusetts in 1788 ratified the original Constitution, and as so recommended was in this form: "No person shall be tried for any crime, by which he may incur an infamous punishment, or loss of life, until he be first indicted by a grand jury, except in such cases as may arise in the government and regulation of the land and naval forces." Journal Massachusetts Convention 1788 (ed. 1856), 80, 84, 87; 2 Elliot's Debates, 177. As introduced by Mr. Madison in 1789 at the first session of the House of Representatives of the United States, it stood thus: "In all crimes punishable with loss of life or member, presentment or indictment by a grand jury shall be an essential preliminary." Being referred to a committee, of which Mr. Madison was a member, it was reported back in substantially the same form, in which it was afterwards approved by Congress and ratified by the States. 1 Annals of Congress, 435, 760.

Mr. Dane, one of the most learned lawyers of his time, and who as a member of the Continental Congress took a principal part in framing the Ordinance of 1787 for the government of the Northwest Territory, assumes it as unquestionable that, by virtue of the amendment of the Constitution, informations "cannot be used where either capital or infamous punishment is inflicted." 7 Dane Abr., 280. Judge Cooley has expressed a similar opinion. Cooley, Constitutional Law, 291.

The only mention of informations in the first Crimes Act of the United States is in the clause providing that no person "shall be prosecuted, tried or punished for an offense, not capital, nor for any fine or forfeiture under any penal statute, unless the indictment or information for the same shall be found or instituted within two years from the time of committing the offense, or incurring the fine or forfeiture." Act of April 30, 1790, chap. 9, § 32; 1 Stat. at L., 119.

[425] For very many years afterwards, informations were principally, if not exclusively, used for the recovery of fines and forfeitures, such as those imposed by the revenue and embargo laws. Acts of July 31, 1789, chap. 5, § 27, 1 Stat. at L., 43; March 26, 1804, chap. 40, § 3, and March 1, 1809, chap. 24, § 18, 2 Stat. at L., 290, 532; U. S. v. Hill, 1 Brock., 156, 158; U. S. v. Mann, 1 Gall., 3, 177; Walsh v. U. S., 3 Woodb. & Min., 341. Mr. Justice Story, writing in 1833, said: "This process is rarely recurred to in America, and it has never yet been formally put into operation by any positive authority of Congress, under the National Government, in mere cases of misdemeanor, though common enough in civil prosecutions for penalties and forfeitures." Story, Const., § 1780.

The informations which passed without objection in U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall., 496 [84 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed., 728], and U. S. v. Buzzo, 18 Wall., 125 [85 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed., 812], were for violations of the stamp laws, punishable by fine only. And the offense which Mr. Justice Field and Judge Sawyer held in U. S. v. Waller, 1 Sawy., 701, might be prosecuted by information, is there described as "an offense not capital or otherwise infamous," and, as appears by the statement of Judge Deady in U. S. v. Block, 4 Sawy., 211, 213, was the introduction of distilled spirits into Alaska, punishable only by fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment not more than six months. Act of July 27, 1868, chap. 273, § 4; 15 Stat. at L., 241.

Within the last fifteen years, prosecutions by information have greatly increased, and the general current of opinion in the Circuit and District Courts has been towards sustaining them for any crime a conviction of which would not at common law have disqualified the convict to be a witness. U. S. v. Shepard, 1 Abb. U. S., 431; U. S. v. Maxwell, 3 Dill., 275; U. S. v. Block [supra]; U. S. v. Miller, 3 Hughes, 553; U. S. v. Baugh, 4 Hughes, 501; U. S. v. Yates, 6 Fed. Rep., 861; U. S. v. Field, 21 Blatchf., 330; Re Wilson, 18 Fed. Rep., 33.

But, for the reasons above stated, having regard to the object and the terms of the first pro-

[426] vision of the Fifth Amendment, as well as to the history of its proposal and adoption, and to the early understanding and practice under it, this court is of opinion that the competency of the defendant, if convicted, to be a witness in another case is not the true test; and that no person can be held to answer, without presentment or indictment by a grand jury, for any crime for which an infamous punishment may be imposed by the court.

The question is, whether the crime is one for which the statutes authorize the court to award an infamous punishment, not whether the punishment ultimately awarded is an infamous one. When the accused is in danger of being subjected to an infamous punishment if convicted, he has the right to insist that he shall not b put upon his trial, except on the accusation c a grand jury.

Nor can we accede to the proposition whic has been sometimes maintained, that no crim is infamous, within the meaning of the Fift Amendment, that has not been so declared b Congress. See U. S. v. Wynn, 3 McCrary, 26 and 11 Fed. Rep., 57; U. S. v. Petit, 11 Fed Rep., 58; U. S. v. Cross, 1 McArthur, 149. Th purpose of the Amendment was to limit the pow ers of the Legislature, as well as of the pros cuting officers of the United States. We ar not indeed disposed to deny that a crime, to th conviction and punishment of which Congre has superadded a disqualification to hold offic is thereby made infamous. U. S. v. Waddel 112 U. S., 76, 82 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 673]. But th Constitution protecting every one from bein prosecuted, without the intervention of a gran jury, for any crime which is subject by law t an infamous punishment, no declaration of Co gress is needed to secure, or competent to d feat, the constitutional safeguard.

The remaining question to be considered whether imprisonment at hard labor for a ter of years is an infamous punishment.

Infamous punishments cannot be limited those punishments which are cruel or unusua because, by the Seventh Amendment of th Constitution, "cruel and unusual punishments are wholly forbidden, and cannot therefore b lawfully inflicted even in cases of convictio upon indictments duly presented by a gran jury.

By the first Crimes Act of the United State forgery of public securities, or knowingly u tering forged public securities with intent to d fraud, as well as treason, murder, piracy, m tiny, robbery, or rescue of a person convicte of a capital crime, was punishable with deat most other offenses were punished by fine an imprisonment; whipping was part of the pu ishment of stealing or falsifying records, frau ulently acknowledging bail, larceny of goods, receiving stolen goods; disqualification to hol office was part of the punishment of briber and those convicted of perjury or subornatio of perjury, besides being fined and imprisone were to stand in the pillory for one hour, an rendered incapable of testifying in any court the United States. Act of April 30, 1790, cha 9; 1 Stat. at L., 112-117; Mr. Justice Wilson charge to the Grand Jury in 1791, 3 Wils. Work 380, 381.

By that Act no provision was made for in prisonment at hard labor. But the punishme of both fine and imprisonment at hard lab was prescribed by later statutes, as, for instanc by the Act of April 21, 1806, chap. 49, for cou terfeiting coin, or uttering or importing cou terfeit coin; and by the Act of March 5, 182 chap. 65, for perjury, subornation of perjur forgery and counterfeiting, uttering forged s curities or counterfeit money, and other gra crimes. 2 Stat. at L., 404; 4 Stat. at L., 11 Since the punishments of whipping and of stan ing in the pillory were abolished by the Act February 28, 1839, chap. 36, § 5, 5 Stat. at L 322, imprisonment at hard labor has been su stituted for nearly all other ignominious pu ishments not capital. And by the Act of Marc 3, 1825, chap. 65, § 15, re-enacted in Rev. Sta [illegible] sentence of imprisonment at hard [illegible] may be ordered to be executed in a state [illegible] or penitentiary. 4 Stat. at L., 118.

[illegible] punishments shall be considered as in[illegible] may be affected by the changes of pub[illegible] from one age to another. In former [illegible], being put in the stocks was not consid[illegible] infamous. And by the first [illegible] Act of the United States, whipping [illegible] with moderate fines and short terms [illegible] in limiting the criminal juris[illegible] of the District Courts to cases "where [illegible] punishment than whipping, not ex[illegible] thirty stripes, a fine not exceeding one [illegible] dollars, or a term of imprisonment not [illegible] six months, is to be inflicted." Act [illegible] 24, 1789, chap. 20, § 9; 1 Stat. at [illegible] But at the present day either stocks or [illegible] might be thought an infamous pun[illegible].

[illegible] more than a century, imprisonment at [illegible] in the state prison or penitentiary or [illegible] institution has been considered an [illegible] punishment in England and America. [illegible] the punishments "that consist prin[illegible] in their ignominy," Sir William Black[illegible] "hard labor, in the house of cor[illegible] or otherwise," as well as whipping, the [illegible] the stocks. 4 Bl. Com., 377. And [illegible], while treating it as doubtful whether [illegible] in the stocks or in the house of cor[illegible] infamous, says: "Punishments clear[illegible] death, gallows, pillory, brand[illegible], confinement to hard labor, and [illegible]." 1 Dane, Abr., 569, 570.

[illegible] view has been forcibly expressed [illegible] Justice Shaw. Speaking of imprison[illegible] in the state prison, which by the statutes [illegible] was required to be at hard [illegible] said: "Whether we consider the [illegible] 'infamous punishment' in their popular [illegible], or as they are understood by the Con[illegible] and laws, a sentence to the state pris[illegible] for any term of time, must be considered as [illegible] within them. The convict is placed in [illegible] place of punishment, common to the [illegible] state, subject to solitary imprisonment, [illegible] his hair cropped, to be clothed in con[illegible] prison dress, subjected to hard labor [illegible] jury, to hard fare, coarse and meager [illegible] and to severe discipline. Some of these [illegible] in the house of correction is subject [illegible] the house of correction, under that and [illegible] names of workhouse and bridewell, [illegible] the same character of infamy attached [illegible]. Besides, the state prison, for any term [illegible], is now by law substituted for all the [illegible] punishments formerly in use; and, [illegible] is infamous, then there is now no in[illegible] punishment other than capital." Jones [illegible], 6 Gray, 349, 349. In the same case, [illegible] Justice Merrick, while dissenting from the [illegible] of the court upon the question whether un[illegible] the words "the law of the land" in the Con[illegible] of Massachusetts an indictment by a [illegible] jury was essential to a prosecution for a [illegible] punishable by imprisonment in the state [illegible], and taking a position upon that ques[illegible] more consistent with the recent judgment [illegible] the court in Hurtado v. People of California, [illegible] U. S. [illegible] [bk. 28, L. ed., 232], yet con[illegible] with the other judges in holding that such imprisonment at hard labor was an infamous punishment. 8 Gray, 370–372.

Imprisonment at hard labor, compulsory and unpaid, is, in the strongest sense of the words, "involuntary servitude for crime," spoken of in the provision of the Ordinance of 1787, and of the Thirteenth Amendment of the Constitution, by which all other slavery was abolished.

Deciding nothing beyond what is required by the facts of the case before us, our judgment is that a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term of years at hard labor is an infamous crime, within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution; and that the District Court, in holding the petitioner to answer for such a crime, and sentencing him to such imprisonment, without indictment or presentment by a grand jury, exceeded its jurisdiction, and he is therefore entitled to be discharged.

Writ of habeas corpus to issue.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—114 U. S., 430; 115 U. S., 499.

UNITED STATES, Plff., [429]

v.

WILLIAM G. PETIT, alias WM. GEORGE.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 429–430.)

Infamous crime—imprisonment without indictment, etc.—habeas corpus.

1. A person sentenced to imprisonment for an infamous crime, without having been presented or indicted by a grand jury, as required by the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, is entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus.

2. A crime punishable by imprisonment for a term of years at hard labor is an infamous crime, within the provision of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, which declares that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on the presentment or indictment of a grand jury.

[No. 237.]

Submitted Apr. 7, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

ON a certificate of division in opinion between the Judges of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

This case arose upon an information against Petit, brought under the Revised Statutes, section 5457, for the crime of passing a counterfeit half dollar, which offense is punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000, and imprisonment at hard labor not more than ten years.

The defendant having pleaded to the jurisdiction, the Circuit Judge and the District Judge were opposed in opinion upon the questions "(1) whether the United States could pro- [430] ceed by information, instead of indictment, to try a defendant charged, under section 5457 of the Revised Statutes, with the violation thereof; (2) whether the offenses declared in said section are infamous crimes, to be prosecuted solely through indictment, pursuant to Article V. of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States;" whereupon these questions were certified to this court.

Mr. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., for the United States.

No counsel appeared for the defendant.

[430] Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

The first question certified in this case is answered in the negative, and the second in the affirmative, on the authority of Ex parte Wilson, decided at the present Term [ante, 89].

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[218] G. DE ROSSET LAMAR, EXR. of GAZAWAY B. LAMAR, Deceased, Appt.,

v.

MARY J. C. MICOU, Admrx. of MARTHA M. SIMS, Deceased.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 218-223.)

Domicil of infants—guardian appointed in another State—what law governs acts of—judicial notice by Federal Courts of state laws.

*1. A guardian, appointed in a State which is not the domicil of the ward, should not, in accounting in the State of his appointment for his investment of the ward's property, be held, unless in obedience to express statute, to a narrower range of securities than is allowed by the law of the State of the ward's domicil.

2. Infants having a domicil in one State, who after the death of both their parents take up their residence at the home of their paternal grandmother and next of kin in another State, acquire her domicil.

3. The courts of the United States take judicial notice of the law of any State of the Union, whether depending on statutes or on judicial opinions.

4. Lamar v. Micou, bk. 28, confirmed.

[No. 61.]

Petition filed Jan. 20, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

On petition for a rehearing.

For the history and facts of the case, see the opinion of the court and the report of the opinion upon first hearing, 112 U. S., 452. L. ed., bk. 28, 751.

Messrs. S. P. Nash and Geo. C. Holt, for appellee, filed a brief in support of the petition.

Messrs. Edward N. Dickerson and Chas. C. Beaman, Jr., for appellant, opposed.

[219] Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for a rehearing of an appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, upon a bill filed against the executor of a guardian by the administratrix of his ward.

Gazaway B. Lamar was appointed in 1855, by a surrogate's court in New York, guardian of the person and property of Martha M. Sims. The bill alleged that at the time of the appointment the ward resided in New York. The answer alleged that at that time she was temporarily residing there, and was then, as well as in 1861, a citizen of Alabama. The hearing on the merits of the case was had in the Circuit Court upon the pleadings, and upon certain facts stated by the defendant and admitted by the plaintiff, which, so far as they affected the domicil of the ward, were as follows:

William W. Sims, the ward's father, died at Savannah, in the State of Georgia in 1850, leaving two infant daughters, and a widow, who in 1853 married a citizen of New York, and thenceforth resided with him in that State until 1856, when they removed to Connecticut, and resided there until her death in 1859. The two infants lived with their mother and stepfather in New York (where Lamar was appointed in 1855 guardian of both infants) and in Connecticut, from her second marriage until her death, and then went to Georgia, and thenceforth resided with their father's mother and her daughter and only living child, their aunt, at first in Georgia and afterwards in Alabama.

Upon those facts, this court assumed the domicil of William W. Sims to have been in Georgia; and held that the domicil of his children continued to be in that State throughout their residence with their mother and her second husband in New York and Connecticut, and until their return to Georgia upon the death of their mother in 1859, and was thereafter in Georgia or Alabama; that whether the guardian's domicil was in Georgia or in New York, he should not, in accounting for his investments, be held to a narrower range of securities than was allowed by the law of the ward's domicil; and that many of his investments were justified by the law of Georgia or of Alabama; and therefore reversed the decree of the Circuit Court which had held him to account according to the law of New York for the manner in which he had invested the property. 112 U. S. 45[illegible] [bk. 28, L. ed. 751].

The questions so passed upon, though hardly touched by either counsel at the first argument, arose upon the facts admitted, were vital to the determination of the rights of the parties, and could not be overlooked by this court. The importance and comparative novelty of some of the questions induced the court to invite the submission of a full brief in support of the petition for a rehearing. But, upon careful consideration of the petition and brief, the court has seen no ground for changing its opinion, and has not thought it necessary to add anything beyond what has been suggested by examination of the authorities cited for the petitioner.

In Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S., 124 [bk. 27, L. ed. 104], the point decided was that the validity and effect of a bond, executed in New York, to indemnify the obligee therein against his liability upon an appeal bond executed by him in a suit in Louisiana, was to be governed by the law of Louisiana. The decision was based upon the fundamental rule, or, in the words of Chief Justice Marshall, the "principle of universal law"—"that in every forum a contract is governed by the law with a view to which it was made." Wayman v. Southard, 1[illegible]

*Head notes by Mr. Justice GRAY.

NOTE.—Evidence—U. S. Courts take judicial notice of state laws. M'Niel v. Holbrook, 37 U. S. (12 Pet.), 84, bk. 9, 1009, note.

[illegible] 1, 48. And reference was made to two [illegible] English cases of high authority, in which [illegible] of that rule, the effect of a contract [illegible] and of a bottomry bond given [illegible] master, was held to be governed, not [illegible] law of the place where the contract was [illegible] nor by that of the place where it was [illegible] performed, nor yet by the law of the [illegible] which the suit was brought, but by [illegible] law of the country to which the ship be[illegible]. Lloyd v. Guibert, 6 B. & S., 100; S. [illegible] R. 1 Q. B. 115; The Gaetano & Maria, 7 [illegible] 137.

[illegible] Lloyd v. Guibert, Mr. Justice Willes, de[illegible] the judgment of the Court of Exchequer [illegible] said that when "disputes arise, not [illegible] the terms of the contract, but as to their [illegible] to unforeseen questions, which [illegible] accidentally or accidentally in the course [illegible] performance, and which the contract does [illegible] in terms, yet which are within the [illegible] of the relation established thereby," "it [illegible] to consider by what general law [illegible] intended that the transaction should [illegible], or rather to what general law it is [illegible] presume that they have submitted them[illegible] the matter." 6 B. & S., 130; L. R. 1 [illegible] 137. And in The Gaetano & Maria, Lord [illegible] Brett, with whom Lord Coleridge and [illegible] Justice Cotton concurred, pointed out [illegible] the matter before the court was, "not the [illegible] of the construction of a contract, but [illegible] what authority arises out of the fact of a [illegible] having been entered into." 7 P. Div., [illegible] [illegible] question in what securities a guardian [illegible] invest is not one of mere con[illegible] of the contract expressed in the guard[illegible] or implied by his acceptance of the [illegible], but rather of what is, "within [illegible] of the relation established thereby,' [illegible] what authority arises out of the fact of a [illegible] having been entered into." And the [illegible] of Lamar's bond do not point to the [illegible] of New York only, but impose a general [illegible] to "discharge the duty of a guardian [illegible] and minor according to law," as well as [illegible] accounts of the property and of his [illegible] to any court having cognizance [illegible] 12 U. S., 455 [bk. 28, L. ed., 751]. [illegible] view heretofore expressed by this court [illegible] the domicil of the guardian is immaterial, [illegible] that, as a general rule, the management [illegible] of the ward's property are to [illegible] by the law of the domicil of the [illegible] although, so far as the remedy is con[illegible], the accounting must conform to the [illegible] of the place in which the liability of the [illegible] is sought to be enforced, accords with [illegible] of Bar, as well as the passage [illegible] by the petitioner, as in that referred to [illegible] the former opinion; and the only decision [illegible] Scotch court brought to our notice tends [illegible] the same direction, although the Scotch [illegible] treat the question as an open one. [illegible] Law, §§ 87, 106; (Gillespie's [illegible] 357, 389, 426, 445 note; Lamb v. [illegible] 1890, 20 Scotch Ct. of Sess. Cas. [illegible]. Fraser on Parent & Child, 609. [illegible] of Preston v. Melville, 8 Cl. & F., [illegible] Blackwood v. Queen, 8 App. Cas., 82, [illegible] the petitioner, relate only to the place in [illegible] personal property of a deceased person is to be administered, or is subject to probate duty.

The petitioner, while admitting that the statement in the former opinion that the domicil of the father was in Georgia was a natural inference from the facts stated in the record, and that it is probable that the wards never acquired a domicil in any northern State, has now offered affidavits tending to show that the father's domicil, at the time of his death and for six years before, was not in Georgia, but in Florida; and has referred to statutes and decisions in Florida as showing that the law of that State in the matter of investments did not differ from the law of New York. Florida Stat., November 20, 1828, § 35; Thompson's Dig. 207, 208; Moore v. Hamilton, 4 Fla. 112, and Moore v. Felkel, 7 Fla., 44.

But if, against all precedent, this new evidence could be admitted after argument and decision in this court, it would afford no ground for arriving at a different conclusion upon the merits of the case.

If the domicil of the father was in Florida at the time of his death in 1850, then, according to the principles stated in the former opinion, the domicil of his children continued to be in that State until the death of their mother in Connecticut in 1859. In that view of the case, the question would be whether they afterwards acquired a domicil in Georgia by taking up their residence there with their paternal grandmother. Although some books speak only of the father, or, in the case of his death, the mother, as guardian by nature, 1 Bl. Com. 461; 2 Kent, Com. 219, it is clear that the grandfather or grandmother, when the next of kin, is such a guardian. Hargrave, note 66 to Co. Lit. 88 b; Reeve Dom. Rel., 315. See also, Darden v. Wyatt, 15 Ga., 414. In the present case, the infants, when their mother died and they went to the home of their paternal grandmother, were under ten years of age; the grandmother, who appears to have been their only surviving grandparent and their next of kin, and whose only living child an unmarried daughter, resided with her, was the head of the family; and upon the facts agreed it is evident that the removal of the infants after the death of both parents to the home of their grandmother in Georgia was with Lamar's consent. Under these circumstances, there can be no doubt that by taking up their residence with her they acquired her domicil in that State in 1859, if their domicil was not already there. And there being no evidence that any of Lamar's investments had diminished in value before that time, it is immaterial whether the previous domicil of the wards was in Florida or in Georgia, inasmuch as the propriety of his investments was thereafter to be governed by the law of Georgia.

[223]

The law of any State of the Union, whether depending upon statutes or upon judicial opinions, is a matter of which the courts of the United States are bound to take judicial notice, without plea or proof. Owings v. Hull, 9 Pet., 607; Pennington v. Gibson, 16 How., 65; Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How., 227 [61 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 896]. And nothing has now been adduced tending to show that, as applied to the facts admitted by the parties, either the law of Georgia or the law of New York was other than we have held it to be.

The question whether, as matter of fact,

Lamar acted with due care and prudence in making his investments, was argued at the former hearing, and no reason is shown for reopening that question.

Rehearing denied.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—116 U. S., 6.

---

[87] ELECTRIC RAILROAD SIGNAL COMPANY, Composed of FRANK L POPE, STEPHEN C. HENDRICKSON and JAMES D. LINCOLN, Surviving Partners, Appt.,

v.

HALL RAILWAY SIGNAL COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 87-103.)

Patent law—combination—what constitutes infringement of—electric railroad signals.

1. To constitute identity of invention, and therefore infringement, not only must the result obtained be the same, but in case the means used for its attainment is a combination of known elements, the elements combined in both cases must be the same, and combined in the same way, so that each element shall perform the same function; provided, however, that the differences alleged are not merely colorable, according to the rule forbidding the use of known equivalents.

2. In letters patent No. 140536, for an improvement in Circuits for Electric Railroad Signals, insulated sections of the rails, as circuit closers, constitute an essential element in the combination described, and said patent is not infringed by the use of a separate instrument used as a circuit closer placed near the track and depressed by the wheels of passing trains.

3. A patent of a combination to operate signals at many stations along the line of a railroad, with one battery by a metallic circuit, divisible into a number of subsidiary circuits, of unequal size and resistance, and requiring the equalization of the resistances by means of independent and additional devices, is not infringed by a combination for the same purpose which avoids the necessity of subsequent rectification by an original adjustment of equal resistances, and uses the earth as the return part of the circuit.

[No 141.]

Argued Jan. 6, 7, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Chas. E. Perkins, Geo. E. Perkins and F. Chamberlain, for appellants.

Mr. Simeon E. Baldwin, for appellee.

[87] Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity for an injunction to restrain the alleged infringement of letters patent No. 140536 for an improvement in Circuits for Electric Railroad Signals, issued July 1, 1873, to Frank L. Pope, of whom the appellants, who were complainants below, are as-[88] signees. On final hearing the bill was dismissed by a decree now brought here for review by this appeal.

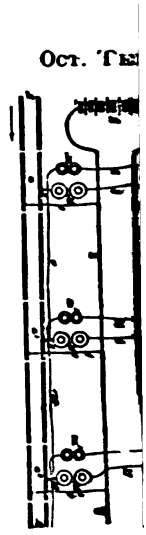
The drawing which accompanies and illustrates the patent is as follows:



The following is the substantial part of the specification, together with the claims:

"My invention consists in a peculiar arrangement of electric circuits, in combination with a battery, and with two or more circuit closers operated by moving trains or otherwise, whereby a series of two or more visual or audible signals, situated at intervals along the line of a railroad, may be operated by currents of electricity derived from a single battery, thereby obviating the inconvenience and expense of employing, as heretofore, one or more separate batteries situated at or near each signal for the purpose of actuating the same.

In the accompanying drawing, A A rep sents a portion of the track of a railroad. intervals of, say a mile, more or less, secti of said track, a, a^1, a^2, are electrically insula from the remainder in a manner well und stood, and therefore requiring no detailed scription. B is a galvanic battery, of any su able construction, and placed in any conveni location near the line of the railroad. Two wi or other conductors, C and Z, are attached to positive and negative poles, respectively, of battery B, and extended to any required tance in a direction parallel or nearly so to line of the railroad. The conductors C an may be placed on poles and should be suita insulated from each other and from the ear The conductors C and Z are virtually prolon tions of the positive and negative poles of battery B. Each of the insulated sections track, a, a^1, a^2, etc., is placed at some point or near which it is desired to erect a signal, a any required number of these may be emplo to meet the requirements of any particular ca M, M^1 and M^2 are the electro magnets, wh actuate or display the respective signals. T said signals may be of any suitable constructi and should be provided with some suita means of retaining them in position or acti after the circuit through the magnets M, or M^2 has been interrupted. m, m^1, and m^2 magnets so arranged as to release, reverse, stop the action of said signals, which ha previously been brought into action by magnets M, M^1, and M^2.

The operation of the apparatus is as f ows: Suppose a train moving along the tra A A from left to right in a direction indica by the arrow. Upon reaching the point a, wheels and axles of the train will form electrical connection between the opposite sulated rails, and a circuit will be formed tween the conductor C and the conductor traversing wires 1 and 2 magnet M, and w 3, and the signal attached to M will con quently be displayed. Upon the arrival of train at a^1 the same operation will be repe ed, and another connection formed betwee and Z, traversing the wires 4 and 5, magn M^1, and wire 6, while at the same time a p tion of the current will traverse the bran wire 7, magnet m, and wire 8. Thus the sig attached to M^1 will be actuated, and simulta

[illegible] the action of the magnet m will release or [illegible] the action of the first mentioned signal. [illegible] reaching the point a^2 the closing of the [illegible] by the train will, in like manner, cause [illegible] signal attached to M^2 to be displayed and [illegible] last displayed by M^1 to be withdrawn. [illegible] manner any required number of such [illegible] may be operated by means of a single [illegible]

[illegible] respective resistances of the several cir[illegible] should be so adjusted that they will be as [illegible] possible equal to each other, as a much [illegible] perfect action of the apparatus will be se[illegible] thereby.

[illegible] a railroad having a double track two sepa[illegible] series of signals, one series for each track, [illegible] be connected with the conductors C and Z [illegible] single battery, if required. If preferable [illegible] may be also operated by means of separate [illegible] and separate conductors.

[illegible] where it is required to operate a large [illegible] of signals, extending along the road [illegible] distance of many miles, the two con[illegible] C and Z may be extended the entire dis[illegible] and a number of batteries attached at [illegible] intervals, may, for instance, from five [illegible] miles apart. The several batteries should [illegible] placed with their positive poles in con[illegible] with the wire C, and their negative [illegible] connection with the wire Z, when they [illegible] virtually form one large battery, and the [illegible] of operation will remain the same as [illegible] hereinbefore described.

[illegible] not desire to confine myself to the use of [illegible] particular form of visual or audible signals, [illegible] the particular devices herein described [illegible] the electric circuit at points from [illegible] a signal is to be operated. Instead of [illegible] being closed automatically by the [illegible] it may be closed by a signalman by [illegible] of a key or switch, or otherwise.

[illegible] as my invention:

[illegible] battery B, in combination with the [illegible] and negative conductors C and Z, two [illegible] electro-magnets, M, M^1, M^2, for actu[illegible] or reversing to be actuated visual or audible [illegible] and two or more circuit closers, a, a^1, a^2, [illegible] at intervals along the line of a railroad, [illegible] and for the purpose specified.

[illegible] battery B, in combination with the [illegible] and negative conductors C and Z, two [illegible] electro-magnets, m, m^1, m^2, for releas[illegible] or reversing visual or audible signals, and [illegible] or more circuit closers, a^1, a^2, placed at in[illegible] along the line of a railroad, substantially [illegible] and for the purpose specified.

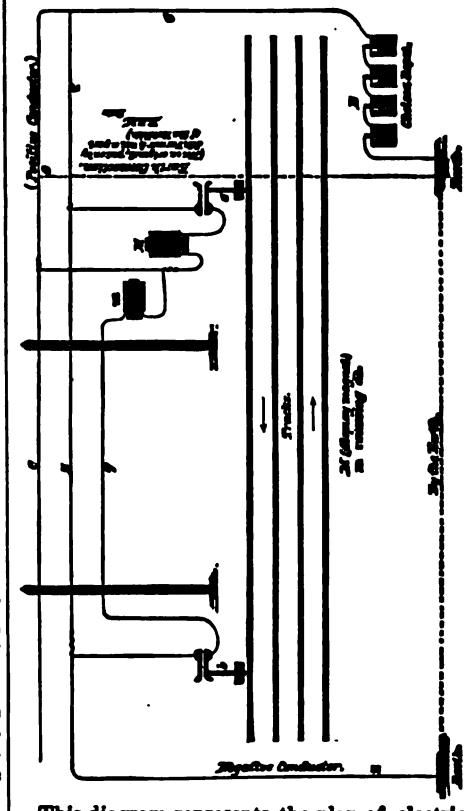
[illegible] combination of the battery B, con[illegible] C and Z, circuit closer a, and electro-[illegible] M, for actuating a visual or audible [illegible] with the circuit closer a^1, wires 5, 7, and [illegible] electro magnet m, for reversing, releas[illegible] or stopping said signal, substantially as [illegible]

[illegible] several defenses set up in the answer, [illegible] relied on were first, that Thomas [illegible] Hall, and not Pope, the patentee, was the [illegible] of the improvement claimed; and, [illegible] that the devices used by the defendants [illegible] not an infringement of the patent.

[illegible] below was based on the first of [illegible] defenses alone, the Circuit Court finding [illegible] Hall was entitled in law to priority of in[illegible] but we have not found it necessary to discuss the questions of fact and law embraced in this issue, as we have concluded to dispose of the case upon the ground that the defendants did not, by the devices used by them, infringe the patent of the complainants.

These devices are illustrated by a drawing, of which the following is a copy: [92]

Exhibit C.



This diagram represents the plan of electric railroad signals, placed and put in practical operation, by the defendants, on the line of the Eastern Railroad near Boston, prior to the bringing of this suit. In comparing it with the drawing annexed to the patent, it is to be remembered that the latter represents a series of double signals in succession on the line of a railroad track, divided into blocks, while Exhibit C represents but one pair of such signals in one such block. To make it correspond with the other, as a representation, it should be imagined as being repeated in several successive blocks, constituting portions of one circuit, closed at fixed points by circuit closers for that purpose. [93]

Mr. Pope, the patentee, drew this diagram and, as a witness on behalf of the complainants, explains it in comparison with the plan described in the patent, with a view to establish their identity. He says:

"I have made a diagram which exhibits the apparatus which I examined, or so much of it as is material to this case, which I annex, and is marked exhibit C.

A battery of perhaps one hundred cells is placed in the station building at Chelsea. One pole of this battery—I think the negative pole—is connected to the earth.

A conductor is attached to the other or positive pole of the battery, consisting of an insulated wire extending along parallel with the track upon poles. This wire which I examined extended toward Boston, the end remote from Chelsea being disconnected, or, as it is termed, open. A second conductor, consisting of another similar wire insulated and attached to the same poles, was arranged parallel to the first one. The second wire was open at Chelsea and connected with the earth at its remote end.

The first mentioned wire I have shown in the diagram, and marked 'positive conductor;' the second wire is marked 'negative conductor.' At a short distance from the station a semaphoric signal is placed, consisting of a red disk balanced upon a lever. This was placed in the cupola of a small building at the side of the track. An electro-magnet was arranged with [94] its armature attached to said lever, so that when brought into action the red disk on the other end of the lever would be moved into a position to render it visible through an opening in the cupola. A latch or detent was placed in a position to fasten the lever after the action of the magnet had ceased, and thus continue the exhibition of the signal. A circuit closer was placed upon the track at a point near the signal, which consisted of a lever so placed as to be depressed by the wheels of a passing train, which movement caused the circuit to be closed by pressing two springs together. When the circuit was thus closed by a passing train a connection was formed between the positive and negative conductors, and the electric current, in passing from one to the other, passed through and operated the magnet by which the signal was displayed. At a point perhaps a mile distant, another signal was arranged in precisely the same manner, in connection with a second circuit closer and the same positive and negative conductors. An additional circuit closer, placed upon the track in the vicinity of this last named signal, was arranged to form a connection from the positive to the negative conductor by the way of a third wire running upon the poles back to the signal first mentioned, where it passed through and operated a second magnet, which lifted the latch or detent and allowed the disk to return to a position concealing it from view. I examined two of these signals and saw many others along the line of road.

I find in this arrangement thus described the combination claimed in the first claim of said patent, consisting of a battery in combination with positive and negative conductors, two or more electro-magnets for operating visual signals and two or more circuit closers placed at intervals along the line of the railroad; also the combination claimed in the second claim of the patent, consisting of a battery in combination with positive and negative conductors, two or more electro-magnets for reversing visual signals, and two or more circuit closers placed at intervals along the line of the railway. I also find the combination claimed in the third claim, of a battery, positive and negative conductors, a circuit closer, and electro-magnet for actuating a signal, with a second circuit closer, wires, and a magnet for reversing said signal."

Mr. Moses G. Farmer, an expert witness o behalf of the complainants, makes the sam comparison, with the result, according to hi opinion, of establishing that the defendar system is essentially the invention described i the patent.

On the other hand Prof. Henry Morton, a expert witness on behalf of the defendant points out two particulars in which the pla as practiced by the defendants and shown i Exhibit C differs from that of the Pope pater so materially that they cannot be considere substantially the same.

The first of these is that, in the patent, insu lated sections of the railroad track, used, whe covered by a locomotive or cars, as a circu closer, are made essential to the combinatior claimed, while they are dispensed with in th Hall system, other and independent circu closers being employed.

The second is thus described by Prof. Mo ton in his testimony:

"I also find a difference between the pla described in the patent and that shown in E hibit C in another regard: in the plan of th patent the conductors C and Z are connecte respectively with the positive and negative pol of the battery, or, as the patent itself state 'are virtually prolongations of the positive an negative poles of the battery.'

In the plan shown in Exhibit C, howeve the conductor C, or positive conductor only, connected with the battery, the other conduc or Z, or, as it is called, negative conductor, ha ing no connection with the battery. In cons quence of this difference of arrangement, the system of the patent, the positive conduct C carries the positive current in one directic away from the battery; and the other, or neg tive conductor Z, brings the positive current the opposite direction, or back to the batter and thereby involves the production of circui of different resistance for each station. In th system represented in Exhibit C, on the oth hand, both the conductors C and Z serve carry the positive current in the same dire tion away from the battery, and should ther fore properly be both called positive condu tors. As a result of this arrangement the cu rent always passes through the same or equal c cuits no matter at which station the connectic is made, simply changing from one to the oth of these equal parallel wires at the station whe the contact is effected.

It is for this reason that in this system equalization of resistance, in the sense involv in the description of the patent, is required."

It is upon these two points that the questi of infringement depends.

In considering them it is important to be in mind that the patent is for a combinati merely, in which all the elements were know and open to public use. No one of them claimed to be the invention of the patent He does not claim them himself as separ inventions. It is simply a new combination old and well-known devices, for the acco plishment of a new and useful result, that claimed to be the invention secured by t patent. And the well-settled principles of l heretofore applied to the construction of pate for combinations merely, must apply and g ern in the present case.

[illegible] of the patented combination was [illegible] accomplishment of a particular result, that [illegible] work electric signals on what was known [illegible] block system, by means of circuits, [illegible] by a single battery instead of many. [illegible] result or idea is not monopolized by [illegible] patent. The thing patented is the particu[illegible] means devised by the inventor by which [illegible] result is attained, leaving it open to any [illegible] inventor to accomplish the same result by [illegible] means. To constitute identity of inven[illegible], and therefore infringement, not only must [illegible] result attained be the same, but in case the [illegible] means used for its attainment is a combination [illegible] elements, the elements combined in [illegible] must be the same, and combined [illegible] way, so that each element shall per[illegible] the same function, provided, however, [illegible] differences alleged are not merely col[illegible] according to the rule forbidding the use [illegible] equivalents.

[illegible] question we have to consider upon [illegible] as to infringement is, whether insu[illegible] sections of the rails, as circuit closers, con[illegible] an essential element in the combinations [illegible] in the patent. And that question we [illegible] to answer in the affirmative.

[illegible] insulated sections of track are shown [illegible] on the drawing which accompa[illegible] specification, and in its descriptive part [illegible] referred to as parts of the arrang[illegible]. It says: "At intervals of, say a mile, [illegible] sections of the said track, a, a^1, a^2, [illegible] insulated from the remainder in [illegible] well understood, and therefore re[illegible] no detailed description." And again: [illegible] of the insulated sections of track, a, a^1, [illegible] is placed at some point at or near which [illegible] to erect a signal, and any required [illegible] of these may be employed to meet the [illegible] of any particular case." And in [illegible] the operation of the apparatus, it [illegible] says: "Upon reaching the point a, the [illegible] and axles of the train will form an [illegible] connection between the opposite in[illegible] rails," etc. "Upon reaching the point a^2, [illegible] of the circuit by the train will in like [illegible] cause the signal attached to M^2 to be [illegible], and the signal last displayed by M^1 [illegible] withdrawn." It is true that the patentee [illegible] says, in the specification: "I do not de[illegible] myself to the use of any partic[illegible] form of visual or audible signals, nor to the [illegible] devices herein described for closing [illegible] circuit at points from which a signal [illegible]," but that he does not thereby [illegible] any intention of dispensing with insu[illegible] sections of the tract, as a necessary part [illegible] of forming and closing the circuit, [illegible] from what immediately follows: "Instead of the circuit being closed automatically [illegible] itself, it may be closed by a signal[illegible] means of a key, or switch, or other[illegible]." This language evidently implies that the [illegible] sections of the track are constant fac[illegible] in the plan, the only alternatives proposed [illegible] not to a substitute for them, [illegible] to another mode of using them in [illegible] the circuit. So in each of the three [illegible] the circuit closers a, a^1, a^2, or one or [illegible] of them, are expressly named as part of [illegible] claimed as the invention of the [illegible]. The use of insulated sections of the railroad track thus repeatedly appears in every part of the specifications as an unchangeable and characteristic feature of the invention, and there is nothing in the state of the art at that date, as disclosed in the evidence, to show that the patentee would have been justified in applying, [98] or that, if he had applied, an application would have been sanctioned by a grant of a patent for a combination as large and undefined as that now claimed by implication and construction, so as to cover every form of a circuit-closer then known or thereafter invented. For that employed by the defendants as part of the Hall system was not only not known and in use at the date of the patent, but was a device invented by Hall himself or one by Snow, for which the latter obtained a patent dated October 21, 1873. It dispenses altogether with the use of insulated sections of the track, and employs instead a separate instrument placed near the track, and worked by means of a lever connected with the track, so that the wheels of locomotives and cars passing on the track depress the outer end, the lever being raised again and held up after the train has passed by means of a spring which holds it in place.

Upon this point, the case seems to fall clearly within the rule declared in Prouty v. Ruggles, 16 Pet., 336; Silsby v. Foote, 14 How., 217; McCormick v. Talcott, 20 How., 402 [61 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 930]; Vance v. Campbell, 1 Black, 427 [66 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 168]; Eames v. Godfrey, 1 Wall., 78 [68 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 547]; Dunbar v. Meyers, 94 U. S. 187 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 84]; Fuller v. Yentzer, 94 U. S. 288 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 103]; Imhaeuser v. Buerk, 101 U. S., 647 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 945]; Gage v. Herring, 107 U. S., 640 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 601]; Seymour v. Osborne, 11 Wall., 516 [78 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 33]; Gould v. Rees, 15 Wall., 194 [82 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 41]; Gill v. Wells, 22 Wall., 1 [89 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 699]; McMurray v. Mallory, 111 U. S., 97 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 365]; Fay v. Cordesman, 109 U. S., 408 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 979].

On the second branch of the issue as to infringement, we think the case is quite as clearly for the defendants. In the patent, the entire circuit, operated by the single battery, and which is closed at intermediate points for the purpose of displaying and concealing the signals, is described as formed by means of two wires or other conductors, C and Z, attached to the positive and negative poles of the battery, extended to any required distance in a direction parallel, or nearly so, to the line of the railroad. These wires may be placed on poles, it is said, and should be suitably insulated from each other and from the earth, and they are declared to be virtually prolongations of the positive and negative [99] poles of the battery. Throughout the two conductors are designated as metallic, and insulated from the earth, and they are embraced under that description in each of the claims. On the other hand, the defendants' plan does not include a metalic circuit, composed of two conductors, as thus described, but uses a circuit composed in part of the earth itself. The material difference in the principle or mode of operation of the two plans, as distinguished in this particular, is indicated by Prof. Morton in the extract from his testimony already quoted. It will become more apparent on further explanation.

The object proposed by the plan of the patent is, to operate with one battery instead of several, along the line of a railroad, an electric circuit of considerable length, divisible into a number of subsidiary circuits, for the display of signals at many stations, by means of circuit closers operated automatically by passing trains, in definite and predetermined succession. It is obvious that the battery must have sufficient power, being placed at one end of the entire circuit, to operate efficiently at the other extremity. The force necessary for that purpose would be much greater than would be needed for the subsidiary circuits, all of which, it will be observed, are different in length; and this difference of force in the battery might be so great, owing to the required length of the whole circuit, as, when expended upon a shorter intermediate circuit, to destroy its capacity for working the signals by overheating. It becomes, therefore, a matter of importance, in some way, to equalize the resistance of these varying circuits. The patent itself contemplates this necessity, and undertakes to make provision for it. It is said in the specification that "the respective resistances of the several circuits should be so adjusted that they will be as nearly as possible equal to each other, as a much more perfect action of the apparatus will be secured thereby." The specification does not point out any particular methods for that purpose, but it is stated in the evidence of experts that such means were well known at the time and in common use; such as by varying the dimensions of the wire on the magnets, or the introduction of resistance coils into the nearer circuits. These devices would be independent of the apparatus [100] described in the patent, and would have to be adjusted to the peculiar situation of each line of signals in practical use.

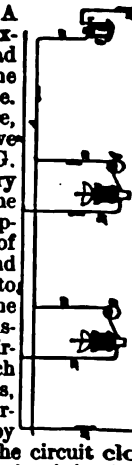
In the Hall system, as used by the defendants, no such necessity exists. According to that plan, there is no necessity of equalizing the resistance of the several sub-circuits, for they are all exactly equal by their construction, as the electric fluid in working the signal at any point, when a sub-circuit has been formed by a circuit closer, nevertheless traverses the whole extent of the large circuit, and returns by means of the connections formed by the earth to the battery. So that, in effect, the Hall plan forms its apparatus, counting the connection through the earth, as though it were a continuous wire, as it might be, by means of three lines of conductors, of which two are combined by connecting wires with the magnets which operate the signals, at points where the circuit is closed for that purpose, carrying the positive electricity throughout the whole distance to the extreme point of the entire circuit, and then returning it by the third line, which is the connection by means of the earth. And, inasmuch as a wire might be used for this purpose, instead of the earth, it would then show three metallic conductors; and Mr. Farmer, the complainant's expert, is quite right in saying, as he does, that the equalization of the resistances in the several sub-circuits, accomplished in the plan of Hall, "is due to the arrangement of the wires wholly, and not at all to the fact that the earth is used as a portion of the conductor."

This arrangement is altogether unlike that of the patent. It introduces into the plan of the defendants new elements, a new combination, and a new result. The two wire conducto are not the same, for, in the patent, one co ducts positive electricity, the other retur the current and completes the circuit, while, the other, both the metallic conductors car the current forward while the earth returns and in this mode the desideratum is obtained securing equality of resistance by making the circuits equal in size.

The device cannot be regarded as a substitu or an equivalent for anything contained in t complainants' patent. It is of itself an ind pendent invention, and, as such, forms the sc subject of a patent granted to Hall and Sno July 13, 1875. To explain more satisfactori the mode of its operation, so as to show that differs substantially from the arrangement the complainants, the descriptive parts of t Hall and Snow patent and the attached dra ings are here given:



"In the drawing, the letters A B designate two wires which extend along the line of a railroad track, or in other words form the line wires of a telegraph line. The wire A connects by a wire, 10, with one—say, the positive—pole of a galvanic battery, G. and the other pole of this battery connects by a wire, 11, with the ground. The battery G is supposed to be situated at one end of the line, and at the opposite end of said line the wire B is made to connect by a wire, 12, with the ground. Along the line are distributed a series of keys or circuit closers, C D, each of which is connected with the line wires, A B, the connection of the circuit closer C being effected by wires 13 and 14, and that of the circuit clos D by wires 15 and 16. If the circuit is clos through the circuit closer C, the current pass from the battery through wire 10, line wire wire 13, circuit closer C, wire 14, line wire and wire 12 to the ground, and through t ground and wire 11 back to the battery. If t circuit is closed through the circuit closer the current from the battery passes throu wires 10, A, 15, circuit closer D, wires 16, and 12 to the ground, and through the grou and wire 11 back to the battery.

"From these two examples it will be seen t whenever the circuit is closed along the line t electric current has to traverse the whole circu and consequently the resistance is the same all cases."

It thus clearly appears that the difference this particular between the invention claim by the complainants and the alleged infrin ment is a difference in the arrangement of t parts and in the principle of the combinatic with different elements performing differe functions; and that the difference is somethi more than the mere substitution of a connecti by means of the earth for one of the conducti wires. The case is, therefore, clearly dist guishable from that of Electric Tel. Co. v. Br 10 C. B., 838, cited and relied on by counsel the appellants as in point, where the substi tion of the earth for a wire as a conductor, [illegible] difference, was held, under the [illegible] patent laws, not to be sufficient to de[illegible] identity between the two competing [illegible] which constituted in that case the in[illegible] alleged, although the patent itself [illegible] for metallic conductors. Were that [illegible] difference between the two plans under [illegible] in the present case, there might [illegible] in view of our own patent laws, [illegible] the patentee had not made a wholly [illegible] circuit a necessary part of his combi[illegible] determined by considerations which [illegible] thought it necessary to bring into [illegible] bearing upon that point. For, as we [illegible] the difference on which we ground [illegible] that the defendants are shown [illegible] infringed the complainants' patent, [illegible] particular, is, not merely that they have [illegible] earth for the return of the current that [illegible] the circuit, instead of a metallic con[illegible] that they have arranged their con[illegible] reference to the battery, the magnets, [illegible] and the earth, upon such a system, [illegible] such relations and connections, that, [illegible] their signals by a single battery the [illegible] equalized as to resistance; while [illegible] the plaintiffs the circuits are of un[illegible] and resistance, requiring for success[illegible] the equalization of the resist[illegible] created by means of independent and [illegible] devices. One plan proceeds upon the [illegible] equal circuits, to be afterwards equal[illegible] the other adopts and embodies the idea of [illegible] the necessity of subsequent rectifi[illegible] by an original adjustment of equal resist[illegible] The difference is inherent in the two [illegible] and is substantial.

[illegible] the ground that, in the two points men[illegible] the defendants' system of signaling is [illegible] not to be an infringement of that de[illegible] in the patent of the appellants, the de[illegible] of the Circuit Court dismissing the bill is [illegible]

[illegible] copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court U. S.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK of XENIA, OHIO, Plf. in Err.,
v.
DANIEL M. STEWART AND MARTHA A. McMILLAN, Admrs. of the Estate of DANIEL McMILLAN, Deceased.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 224-233.)

Business—declarations of an officer or agent of corporation as—insolvency of debtor as, of [illegible]—authority of cashier of bank—[illegible] of debtor's stock and application of proceeds by creditor.

1. The declarations made by an officer or agent of corporation in response to timely inquiries, proper addressed to him and relating to matters under his charge, in respect to which he is authorized in the usual course of business to give information, may be given in evidence against the corporation.

2. It is within the scope of the general authority of a cashier to receive offers for the securities of the bank and to state whether or not the bank owned securities which a customer wanted to buy. His statement to a person who was in treaty to purchase, that the bank was not the owner of a certain security in his manual possession as cashier, was clearly within the line of his duty, and was binding on the bank.

3. A letter, written upon the paper of a bank by its cashier and appearing with reasonable certainty to have referred to its business, is admissible in evidence against the bank.

4. Proof of the insolvency of a debtor is no more competent to show non-payment, than proof of his solvency is competent to show the payment of his debts.

5. A creditor having possession of the property of his debtor as agent, trustee or bailee, cannot, without legal process or the consent of the debtor, dispose of the property and apply the proceeds upon the debt.

6. A bank, having in its possession shares of its own stock which belong to one who is indebted to it, cannot sell such stock and apply the proceeds to the payment of the debt.

[No. 1251.]

Submitted Mar. 9, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio.

The history and facts appear in the Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Woods: [225]

The defendants in error were the plaintiffs in the Circuit Court. They alleged in their petition that the plaintiff in error, The First National Bank of Xenia, Ohio, being in possession of thirty shares of its own capital stock belonging to their intestate, Daniel McMillan, on October 24, 1876, sold them for $4,200 in cash, and unlawfully appropriated the proceeds of the sale to its own use. They therefore demanded judgment against the Bank for $4,200, with interest from October 24, 1876.

The defendant answered that McMillan, the intestate, in April, 1876, was owing it, upon a debt previously contracted, a sum greater than the value of the stock, and, being so indebted, delivered to it the certificates of stock as collateral security therefor, and that on October 24, 1876, the debt being still unsatisfied, the defendant sold the stock at its market value and applied the proceeds as a credit on the debt, leaving a balance due and unpaid.

The plaintiffs replying denied that their intestate delivered the certificates of stock to the Bank as collateral security for such debt, and denied the right of the Bank to receive the certificates as collateral security, or to sell the stock or apply its proceeds to the payment of the debt.

Upon this issue the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, and assessed their damages at $6,035.50 upon which the court rendered the judgment which the present writ of error brings under review.

Mr. John Little, for plaintiff in error:

The declarations of McClure were incompetent, being the mere declarations of an agent concerning a past transaction.

Wharton's Ev., § 415 and note 6; Morse, Bkg., ed. of 1870, pp. 179, 180; 37 Me. 519; 2 Hill, 445; 10 Vesey, 128; 52 Me., 531; Anderson v. R. R. Co., 54 N. Y., 334; 1 Greenl. Ev., § 118; Luby v. R. R. Co, 17 N. Y., 131; First Baptist Church v. B. F. Ins. Co., 28 N. Y., 153; Packet Co. v. Clough, 20 Wall., 540 (87 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 408); Burnside v. R. Co., 47 N. H., 554; C. C. & C. R. R. Co. v. Mara, 26 Ohio St., 185.

Note.—Powers and duties of cashier of bank. See [illegible] v. Watertown Bank, 105 U. S., 217, [illegible] tent isever circu num sign clos in c ob po ci

tr
v
f
)

a few days prior to his de to the Bank the amount c by Hyde, who had deposi
the Bank for collection, and t McMillan's death, Hyde, af ure of the payment of the no the Bank its certificate of dep ount due thereon, and the no ertificate of stock pledged for its p was surrendered by Hyde to the Ban obtained possession of the cert

Thereupon the defendants in error offered the following questions and answ in the deposition of Hyde:

Q. What conversation did you have wi McClure subsequent to this (subsequent to lea said note for collection) with reference certificate (20 shares)?

A. He told me he had full power to transfer at any time on the books and apply it to t payment of the note.

Q. What was said to you by McClure at t time of the payment of the note, in reference this certificate of 20 shares?

A. I desired to purchase it, but there was a understanding that I should hold the certifica of deposit until an administrator was appointe when an arrangement might be made for i purchase.

* * * * * * * *

Q. What statement did McClure make to yo at the time of the payment of the note, as t who was making payment?

A. He said the payment was made fro money which was sent there by McMillan. H told me the money was left there the Wedne day previous.

Q. Was any statement made to you by Mc Clure, with reference to this certificate of stoc after McMillan's death, in reference to Mrs McMillan; if so, what?

A. He told me after McMillan's death tha she preferred to keep the stock.

* * * * * * * *

Q. How long after the talk on Wednesda after McMillan's death till the other talk i which McClure told you Mrs. McMillan wishe to keep the stock?

A. Two months, I presume.

Q. Where did the latter take place?

A. In the Bank; they all took place there."

The ruling of the court in allowing the questions and answers to be read to the jury notwithstanding the objection of the plaintif in error, is now assigned for error. Its conten tion is, that it furnished the money to pay Mc Millan's note for $2,600, held by Hyde, fo which the certificate for twenty shares wa pledged, and that it thereby, on the delivery o
the certificate to it by Hyde, became entitled t the possession thereof as security for the note
The defendants in error insist that the money t take up the note held by Hyde was paid by the intestate, McMillan.

The plaintiff in error complains that upo this issue the statements of McClure its cashier made several days after the alleged payment o the note by McMillan, were admitted to show such payment, and insists that this was error on the ground that the declarations of an agen concerning a past transaction cannot be give in evidence to bind his principal.

the opinion

was found by the
The judgaffirmed unless the committed of the plaintiff in was done.
relates to the declarations of
of the plaintiff in [1

states that on the trial offered testimony tend-estate, Daniel McMil-
the owner of thirty of the Bank standing books, represented by twenty and the other the day just mentioned the payment, six months order of F. A. McClure, of attached the certificate for this note as security for its
the medium of the payee, was the cashier of the plaintiff was discounted by one James and that the remaining ten shares with the plaintiff in error, and safe keeping, and not for any that on Monday morning, Oc-McMillan died, and that on the of that day, McClure, the cashier, heard of the death of McMillan, sold shares of stock to E. H. Munger for and credited that amount to McMillan
the books of the Bank.

The bill of exceptions further stated that the defendants in error introduced evidence tend-

The rule upon this subject has been thus laid down by this court:

"Whatever an agent does or says in reference to the business in which he is at the time employed and within the scope of his authority is law or said by the principal, and may be proved as if the evidence applied personally to the principal." American Fur Co. v. U. S. 2 Pet. 358.

It is because the declaration of an agent is a part of the act and part of the res gesta that it is admissible, and whenever what he did is admitted in evidence, then it is competent to prove what he said about the act while he was doing it. Bank v. Bk. of Columbia, 5 Wheat., 336; Grant's Champagne, 3 Wall., 114 [70 U. S., 18 L. ed. 116]; Cooley v. Norton, 4 Cush. 93; Jenney v. Stewart, 6 Watts, 487; Garth v. Howard, 8 Bing., 451.

Applying these principles, we think the testimony objected to was properly admitted. The transactions of McClure were made, so the record states, at the time that he paid Hyde the amount of the note. They were, therefore, part of the transaction. For Hyde, being the holder of the certificate of stock as collateral security for the note, was entitled to know by whom the payment of the note was made, so as to decide whether to return the certificate to McMillan or turn it over to the Bank, or, if it was left with the Bank, in what capacity the Bank took it, whether for its own security or as agent for McMillan. The declarations of McClure were made to Hyde in explanation of the payment of the money to him, and were, therefore, admissible as part of the act of payment.

The declarations of McClure in reference to the purchase by Hyde of the twenty shares of stock were made at the same time, and as they were offered as tending to show by whom the money to pay the McMillan note was furnished, they were also a part of the transaction, and on the ground admissible.

The plaintiff in error contends that a conversation which took place two months after the payment of the note, between McClure and Hyde, in reference to the purchase by the latter of the twenty shares of stock, was wrongly received in evidence.

But it plainly appears from the record that the second conversation was part of a treaty between McClure and Hyde, commenced on the Saturday after McMillan's death, when the McMillan note was paid for the purchase of the twenty shares of stock by Hyde. It was offered to show by the declarations of its cashier that the Bank did not when the declarations were made claim any general or special property in the stock, but in effect admitted it to be the property of the estate of McMillan.

The declarations made by an officer or agent of a corporation, in response to timely inquiries, properly addressed to him and relating to matters under his charge, in respect to which he is authorized in the usual course of business to give information, may be given in evidence against the corporation. Bk. v. Field, 2 Hill, 445; Brigham v. Adriatic Mills, 116 Mass., 177; Howe v. R. R. Co., 6 Gray, 450; Abb. Tr. Ev. 44.

As cashier, McClure had charge of all the money, securities and valuable papers of the Bank. Field v. Bk., 3 Mason, 505; Bk v. Stewart, 37 Me., 519. It was his duty to surrender securities pledged for the loans of the Bank, upon payment of the loans. Fleckner v. U. S. Bk., 8 Wheat., 360. And, although he might not be authorized to dispose of the securities of the Bank without the order of the directors, yet it was within the scope of his general authority as cashier to receive offers for their purchase, and to state whether or not the Bank owned securities which a customer wanted to buy. This naturally fell within his duty as the executive officer of the Bank and the custodian of its assets. His statement to a person who was in treaty to purchase, that the Bank was not the owner of a certain security in his manual possession as cashier, was clearly within the line of his duty, and was, therefore, binding on the Bank. We think there was no error in admitting in evidence the declarations of McClure.

The bill of exceptions further states that the plaintiffs below offered in evidence the following letter:

"A. Hirling, Prest. F. A. McClure, Cash. [230]
Capital, $120,000.
(Cut of Bank Building)
First National Bank,
Xenia, O., Oct. 16th, 1876.

D. McMillan, Esq.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Mc's letter of 14th to hand, and in reply I enclose the Marshall note canceled. I have the ctf. in my possession, and have some prospect for raising some money on same. Will write again soon; nothing new; all well.

Yours truly, F. A. McClure."

The court allowed the letter to go to the jury in spite of the objection of the plaintiff in error. The defendants in error insisted that the letter was admissible because there was evidence, introduced by the plaintiff in error, tending to prove that in August preceding McMillan's death one Marshall held a note against him, "secured by ten shares of said stock, and that McMillan procured the surrender of the stock, giving mortgage security in lieu thereof, he desiring to use said stock in bank."

The plaintiff in error assigns for error the admission of the letter in evidence, on the ground that it was but a fragment of a correspondence; that there was nothing to show that it was written for the Bank; and that it was only a letter from McClure, and not from him as cashier.

But there is nothing in the record to indicate that there were any other letters that had passed between the parties. The face of the letter shows that it had reference to the Marshal note, and very probably to the ten shares of stock which had been pledged by McMillan as security therefor, and of which he had procured the surrender so that he might use it in Bank. The letter was written upon the paper of the Bank and by the person shown to be its cashier, and it appears with reasonable certainty to have referred to the business of the Bank. The court was therefore right in not excluding it from the jury.

It further appears by the bill of exceptions that the plaintiff in error offered evidence to prove that, for more than a year previous to [231] his death, McMillan had been "hopelessly insolvent," and had experienced "great difficulty in procuring means to meet his interest obligations." The defendants in error objected to this evidence, it was ruled out, and the plaintiff in error now assigns its exclusion as error.

The purpose of the evidence was to prove that McMillan had not furnished the money to pay his note for $2,600 held by Hyde. The evidence offered was inadmissible because too remote and conjectural. The law requires an open and visible connection between the principal and evidentiary facts and the deductions from them, and does not permit a decision to be made on remote inferences. U. S. v. Ross, 92 U. S., 281 [bk. 23, L. ed. 707]; Carter v. Pryke, 1 Peake, 95; Hollingham v. Head, 4 C. B. (N. S.), 888; Jackson v. Smith, 7 Cow., 717; Baird v. Gillett, 47 N. Y., 186; Thompson v. Bowie, 4 Wall., 463 [71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 423]. In the case last cited, where the issue was whether certain promissory notes dated on a particular day were given for money lost at play, testimony was offered to prove that the party giving the notes was on the day of their date intoxicated, and that when intoxicated he had a propensity to game. It was held that the evidence was properly excluded.

The evidence offered in the present case was too weak and vague to contribute to an intelligent decision by the jury of the question in issue, namely: whether McMillan had paid his note. It is common for both solvent and insolvent men to pay some of their debts and to leave some unpaid. Proof of the insolvency of a debtor is no more competent to show nonpayment, than proof of his solvency is competent to show the payment of his debts. These two kinds of proof stand on the same footing. The latter kind has been held to be incompetent. Hilton v. Scarborough, 5 Gray, 422. The insolvency and pecuniary embarrassment of a person may be shown as evidence that he has not paid all his debts; but they do not tend to show that he has not paid a particular debt. We think the evidence of the insolvency of McMillan was properly excluded.

It further appeared that the plaintiff in error, having given evidence tending to show that it had not received from McMillan the money to pay his note for $2,600 held by Hyde, but that it had paid the note out of its own funds, called as a witness one William McGirvey, who, having testified that during the whole of the year 1876 he was teller of the defendant Bank, and that its books showed no payment of his note by McMillan, was asked by counsel for the plaintiff in error the following question:

[232]

"Had you any information, from any source, of any money being received at the Bank, on or about the Wednesday preceding McMillan's death, from McMillan?" Having put the question, counsel for the plaintiff in error stated that they expected the witness to answer it in the negative.

The court excluded the question, and its action is assigned for error.

The inadmissibility of both the question and the answer, had the answer been given, is obvious. The question called for the information which from any source might be in the possession of the witness, and not for his knowledge. An answer detailing the hearsay statements of others, whether verbal or in writing, made at any time or place, would have been responsive. The objection to the question was well taken, and the court was right in excluding it.

Upon the authorities already cited a negative answer to the question would have been too vague and conjectural to be admitted as evidence. It did not appear but that many payments of money might have been made to the Bank without the knowledge of the witness. It was not shown what his duties were, whether to receive or pay out money; it was not shown that he was in the Bank on or about the Wednesday when the payment by McMillan was alleged to have been made; it was not shown that if the payment had been made by draft or certificate of deposit sent to the Bank in a letter, it would have passed through his hands. On the simple statement that he was teller, and engaged in the discharge of his duties as such during the year 1876, we think that his answer that he had no information of any payment made by McMillan does not rise to the dignity of evidence, and was properly excluded.

The plaintiff in error contends, lastly, that upon the pleadings and notwithstanding the verdict it was entitled to judgment. The ground of this contention is, that as it was admitted in the pleadings that McMillan was indebted to the Bank at the time of his death more than the value of his stock, and as the stock was in the possession of the Bank, indorsed by McMillan in blank, the law would make the application of its value to the payment of the indebtedness.

The assignment of error is based on section 5328 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, of 1880 which provides that "when upon the statements in the pleadings one party is entitled by law to judgment in his favor, judgment shall be so rendered by the court, though a verdict has been found against such party."

No motion for judgment, notwithstanding the verdict, appears to have been made in the Circuit Court. If this court could now consider this assignment of error, we think it does not furnish a ground for the reversal of the judgment.

It was settled by the verdict of that jury that the plaintiff in error did not hold the stock of McMillan as security for his indebtedness. The contention of the plaintiff in error, therefore, comes to this, that a creditor, who has possession of the property of his debtor, as his agent, or trustee, or bailee, may without reducing his debt to judgment, and without the process or order of any court, and without the consent and against the will of the debtor, sell or otherwise dispose of the property and apply its proceeds to the payment of his debt. We do not think the law gives a creditor any such right.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

WILLIAM S. THOMSON et al., Trading as THOMSON, LANGDON & Co., Appts.,

v.

GEORGE H. WOOSTER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 104-120.)

Patent law—damages for infringement—practice—decree pro confesso—general nature and effect of—review of authorities—status of defendant on reference under decree pro confesso.

1. A decree pro confesso, under the rules and practice of this court, is not a decree as of course according to the prayer of the bill, nor merely such as the complainant chooses to make it. It is made (or should be made) by the court, according to what appears to be decreed upon the statements of the bill, assumed to be true.

2. Where a decree is taken pro confesso, the allegations of the bill cannot be questioned in subsequent proceedings in the court below or upon appeal. Anything in the allegations themselves tending to show that the decree is erroneous is assignable for error; but facts not found in the allegations of the bill are inadmissible to affect the decree.

3. Evidence questioning the validity of the patent is inadmissible in proceedings before a master, or on appeal, after a decree has been taken pro confesso on a bill for infringement and an account.

4. The fact that the reissue, in this case, was applied for and granted fourteen years after the date of the original patent, would, undoubtedly, had the case been defended and the validity of the reissued patent controverted, been strongly presumptive of unreasonable delay; but it might possibly have been explained, and the court could not say as a matter of law, and certainly the master could not say that it was unsusceptible of explanation.

5. Affidavits presented to the master, or the court upon the grounds of applications to reopen the decree, cannot be considered by this court on appeal.

6. Where the defendant has used the complainant's patented machine he will be held accountable for the profits realized thereby, although it appears that the product was an article of merchandise and the use of a less sum than said profits as allowed by the master.

[No. 112.]

Argued Dec. 1, 2, 1884. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. J. C. Clayton and A. Q. Keasbey, for appellants.

The defense of lack of invention or non-patentability has been considered in this court, although not raised in the court below, by either pleading or argument.

Grant v. Piper, 91 U. S., 87 (bk. 23, L. ed. 254); Stevens v. R. R. Co., 107 U. S., 649 (bk. 27, L. ed. 576).

The decree was merely a decree by default, not a consent decree. It was not a consent decree. As it was held in Pacific R. R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 289 (bk. 25, L. ed. 982), that even a consent decree could be appealed from.

"There can be no doubt that anything appearing upon the record, which would have been ground for a motion in arrest of judgment, is ground for reversal upon a writ of error."

Stacum v. Pomery, 6 Cranch, 221; McAllister v. Kuhn, 96 U. S., 87 (bk. 24, L. ed. 615).

The reissue is invalid for unreasonable delay.

Miller v. Brass Co., 104 U. S., 350 (bk. 26, L. ed. 783); James v. Campbell, 104 U. S., 356 (bk. 26, L. ed. 786); Bantz v. Frantz, 105 U. S., 160 (bk. 26, L. ed. 1013); Mfg. Co. v. Stamping Co., 111 U. S., 319 (bk. 28, L. ed. 442).

All of these cases were decided after the appeal in this cause. They establish a new rule of law, requiring reasonable diligence, and clearly show the complainant's reissue, granted fourteen years and two months after date of original patent, is void as to these defendants.

The bill substantially avers that the original patent was valid and operative.

The statutes providing for a grant of a reissue expressly prescribe "invalidity" or "inoperativeness" as conditions precedent to the grant of a reissue.

Both these conditions precedent were lacking, and therefore the reissue is invalid.

Walker v. Patents, §§ 221-224; Whitely v. Swayne, 4 Fish., 123; Wicks v. Stevens, 2 Ban. & Ard., 318; Giant Powder Co. v. Powder Co., 6 Sawy., 508; Flower v. Rayner, 5 Fed. Rep., 793; Searle v. Bouton, 12 Fed. Rep., 626.

The complainant must affirmatively show distinct profits due to the thing patented; if he fail he cannot recover anything as damages.

Mowry v. Whitney, 14 Wall., 620 (81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 860); Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, 105 U. S., 253 (bk. 26, L. ed. 987); Schillinger v. Gunther, 15 Blatchf., 303; Burdell v. Denig, 92 U. S., 716 (bk. 23, L. ed. 764); Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, 12 Blatchf., 243; S. C., 14 Blatchf., 315; Black v. Munson, 14 Blatchf., 265.

Mr. Frederic H. Betts, for appellee:

No alleged erroneous rulings of the court below can be considered, unless perhaps those plainly apparent upon its face.

Kane v. Wittick, 8 Wend., 219; Sands v. Hildreth, 12 Johns., 493; Henry v. Cuyler, 17 Johns., 469; Colden v. Knickerbacker, 2 Cow., 31; R. R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S., 289 (bk. 25, L. ed. 982).

Nor will an appeal from a decree founded on bill taken pro confesso ordinarily lie.

Murphy v. Ins. Co., 25 Wend., 249; Hart v. Strong, 15 Vt., 377.

No allegation can here be heard against the validity of the complainant's reissued patent.

The original patent may have been valid or operative in part, and yet sufficiently "inoperative" to require reissue.

Wilson v. Coon, 18 Blatchf., 536; Hartshorn v. Eagle Co., 18 Fed. Rep., 90; Giant Co. v. Safety Co., 19 Fed. Rep., 509; Gold & Stock Co. v. Wiley, 17 Fed. Rep., 234.

The rule followed in calculating the savings and profits has had the full approval of this court.

Mowry v. Whitney, 14 Wall., 620 (81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 860); R. R. Co. v. Turrill (Cawood Patent), 94 U.S., 709 (bk. 24, L. ed. 243); Mers v. Conover, 11 Off. Gaz. 1111; Black v. Thorne, 111 U. S., 122 (bk. 28, L. ed. 372).

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellee in this case, who was com- [104]

Patent—damages for infringement. See Stevens, 107 U. S. (1 How.), 567, bk. 13, 534, 576.

plainant below, filed his bill against the appellants, complaining that they infringed certain letters patent for an improved folding guide for sewing machines, granted to one Alexander Douglass, of which the complainant was the assignee. The patent was dated October 5, 1858, was extended for seven years in 1872, and was reissued in December, 1872. [105] The suit was brought on the reissued patent, a copy of which was annexed to the bill, which contained allegations that the invention patented had gone into extensive use, not only on the part of the complainant, but by his licensees; and that many suits had been brought and sustained against infringers. The bill further alleged that the defendants, from the time when the patent was reissued down to the commencement of the suit, wrongfully and without license, made, sold and used, or caused to be made, sold and used, one or more folding guides, each and all containing the said improvement secured to the complainant by the said reissued letters patent, and that the defendants derived great gain and profits from such use, but to what amount the complainant was ignorant, and prayed a disclosure thereof, and an account of profits, and damages, and a perpetual injunction.

The bill of complaint was accompanied with affidavits verifying the principal facts and certain decrees or judgments obtained on the patent against other parties, and Douglass' original application for the patent, made in April, 1856, a copy of which was annexed to the affidavits. These affidavits and documents were exhibited for the purpose of obtaining a preliminary injunction, which was granted on notice.

The defendants appeared to the suit by their solicitor, May 3, 1879, but neglected to file any answer, or to make any defense to the bill, and a rule that the bill be taken pro confesso was entered in regular course June 10, 1879. Thereupon, on the 2d of August, 1879, after due notice and hearing, the court made a decree to the following effect, viz.. 1st. That the letters patent sued on were good and valid in law; 2d. That Douglass was the first and original inventor of the invention described and claimed therein; 3d. That the defendants had infringed the same by making, using and vending to others to be used, without right or license, certain folding guides substantially as described in said letters patent; 4th. That the complainant recover of the defendants the profits which they had derived by reason of such infringement by any [106] manufacture, use, or sale, and any and all damages which the complainant had sustained thereby; and it was referred to a master to take and state an account of said profits, and to assess said damages, with directions to the defendants to produce their books and papers and submit to an oral examination if required. It was also decreed that a perpetual injunction issue to restrain the defendants from making, using or vending any folding guides made as theretofore used by them, containing any of the inventions described and claimed in the patent, and from infringing the patent in any way.

Under this decree the parties went before the master, and the examination was commenced in October, 1879, in the presence of counsel for both parties, and was continued from time to time until November 3, 1880, when arguments were heard upon the matter, and the case w submitted. On November 12 the report w prepared and submitted to the inspection counsel. On the 18th, motion was made by t defendants' counsel, bef r: the master, to op the proofs and for leave to introduce newly d covered evidence. This motion was support by affidavits, but was overruled by the mast and his report was filed December 10, 1880, which it was found and stated that the defe ants had used at various times, from Janu 18, 1877, to the commencement of the su twenty-seven folding guides infringing t complainant's patent, and had folded 1,217,8 yards of goods by their use, and that duri that period there was no means known or us or open to the public to use, for folding su goods in the same, or substantially the sa manner, other than folding them by hand, a that the saving in cost to the defendants using the folding guides was three cents each piece of six yards, making the amount profit which the complainant was entitled recover, $6,089.35; and that during the sa period the complainant depended upon lice fees for his compensation for the use of t patented device, and that the amount of su fees constituted his loss or damage for the u authorized use of his invention; and that, cording to the established fees, the defenda would have been liable to pay for the use of t folding guides used by them during the ye 1877, 1878 and 1879 (the period covered by t infringement), the sum of $1,350, which w the amount of the complainant's damages. T evidence taken by the master was filed with report.

By a supplemental report, filed at the sa time, the master stated the fact of the appli tion made to him to open the proofs on t ground of surprise and newly discovered e dence (as before stated), and that after heari said application upon the affidavits present which were appended to the report, he was u able to discover any just ground therefor.

The defendants did not object to this su plemental report, but on the 10th of Janua 1881, they filed exceptions to the principal port, substantially as follows:

1. That instead of the double guide or fol claimed in the complainant's patent being t only means for folding cloth or strips on ea edge during the period of the infringement (o er than that of folding by hand), the mas should have found that such strips could ha been folded by means of a single guide or fo er, and that the use of such guides was kno and open to the public long before 1877, a that such guides were not embraced in the co plainant's patent.

2. That the amount of profits found by t master was erroneous, because it appeared t folded strips such as those used by the defe ants were an article of merchandise, cut a folded by different parties at a charge of cents for 144 yards.

3. That the profits should not have be found greater than the saving made by the u of the double guide as compared with the u of a single guide, or greater than the amou for which the strips could have been cut a folded by persons doing such business.

4. That the damages found were erroneo

Other exceptions were subsequently filed, but were overruled for being filed out of time.

Before the argument of the exceptions the defendants gave notice of a motion to the court to refer the cause back to the master to take further testimony in reference to the question of profits and damages chargeable against them under the order of reference. In support of this motion further affidavits were presented.

The exceptions to the report and the application to refer the cause back to the master were argued together. The court denied the motion to refer the cause back, overruled the exceptions to the report, and made a decree in favor of the complainant, for the profits, but disallowed the damages. That decree is now brought here by appeal.

The appellants have assigned fourteen reasons or grounds for reversing the decree. The first nine relate to the taking of the account before the master and his report thereon; the last five relate to the validity of the letters patent in which the suit was brought. It will be convenient to consider the last reasons first.

The bill, as we have seen, was taken pro confesso and a decree pro confesso was regularly entered up, declaring that the letters patent were valid, that Douglass was the original inventor of the invention therein described and claimed that the defendants were infringing the patent; and that they must account to the complainant for the profits made by them by such infringement and for the damages he had sustained thereby; and it was referred to a master to take and state an account of such profits and to ascertain said damages.

The defendants are concluded by that decree, as far at least as it is supported by the allegations of the bill, taking the same to be true. Being carefully based on these allegations, and not extending beyond them, it cannot now be questioned by the defendants unless it is shown to be erroneous by other statements contained in the bill itself. A confession of facts properly pleaded dispenses with proof of those facts, and is as effective for the purposes of the suit as if the facts were proved; and a decree pro confesso regards the statements of the bill as confessed.

By the early practice of the Civil Law, failure to appear at the day to which the cause was [illegible] was deemed a confession of the action, but in later times this rule was changed, so that the plaintiff, notwithstanding the contumacy of the defendant, only obtained judgment in accordance with the truth of the case as established by an ex parte examination. Keller, [illegible] Rom. § 69. The original practice of the English Court of Chancery was in accordance with the later Roman law. Hawkins v. Crook, [illegible] Wms. 556. But for at least two centuries [illegible] have been taken pro confesso for contumacy. Ibid. Chief Baron Gilbert says: "Where a man appears by his clerk in court, and after lies in prison, and is brought up [illegible] to court by habeas corpus, and has the bill read to him, and refuses to answer, such [illegible] refusal in court does amount to the confession of the whole bill. Secondly, when a [illegible] appears and departs without answering, and the whole process of the court has been awarded against him after his appearance and departure, to the sequestration; there also the bill is taken pro confesso, because it is presumed to be true when he has appeared and departs in despite of the court and withstands all its process without answering." Forum Romanum, 86. Lord Hardwicke likened a decree pro confesso to a judgment by nil dicit at common law, and to judgment for plaintiff on demurrer to the defendant's plea. Davis v. Davis, 2 Atk. 21. It was said in Hawkins v. Crook (qua supra), and quoted in 2 Eq. Cas. Abr., 179, that "the method in equity of taking a bill pro confesso is consonant to the rule and practice of the courts at law, where, if the defendant makes default by nil dicit, judgment is immediately given in debt, or in all cases where the thing demanded is certain; but where the matter sued for consists in damages, a judgment interlocutory is given; after which a writ of inquiry goes to ascertain the damages, and then the judgment follows." The strict analogy of this proceeding in actions of law to a general decree pro confesso in equity in favor of the complainant, with a reference to a master to take a necessary account, or to assess unliquidated damages, is obvious and striking. [111]

A carefully prepared history of the practice and effect of taking bills pro confesso is given in Williams v. Corwin, Hopk. Ch., 471, by Hoffman, master, in a report made to Chancellor Sanford, of New York, in which the conclusion come to (and adopted by the Chancellor), as to the effect of taking a bill pro confesso, was that "when the allegations of a bill are distinct and positive, and the bill is taken as confessed, such allegations are taken as true without proofs," and a decree will be made accordingly; but "where the allegations of a bill are indefinite, or the demand of the complainant is in its nature uncertain, the certainty requisite to a proper decree must be afforded by proofs. The bill, when confessed by the default of the defendant, is taken to be true in all matters alleged with sufficient certainty; but in respect to matters not alleged with due certainty, or subjects which from their nature and the course of the court require an examination of details, the obligation to furnish proofs rests on the complainant."

We may properly say, therefore, that to take a bill pro confesso is to order it to stand as if its statements were confessed to be true; and that a decree pro confesso is a decree based on such statements, assumed to be true (1 Smith's Ch. Pr., 158), and such a decree is as binding and conclusive as any decree rendered in the most solemn manner. "It cannot be impeached collaterally, but only upon a bill of review, or [a bill] to set it aside for fraud." 1 Dan. Ch. Pr., 696, 1st ed.; Ogilvie v. Hearne, 18 Ves., 463.* [112]

Such being the general nature and effect of an order taking a bill pro confesso, and of a decree pro confesso regularly made thereon, we

*Reference is made to the 1st edition of Daniell (pub. 1837), as being, with the 2d edition of Smith's Practice (published the same year), the most authoritative work on English Chancery Practice in use in March, 1842, when our Equity Rules were adopted. Supplemented by the General Orders made by Lords Cottenham and Langdale in August, 1841 (many of which were closely copied in our own Rules), they exhibit that "present practice of the High Court of Chancery in England," which by our 90th Rule was adopted as the standard of equity practice in cases where the Rules prescribed by this court, or by the Circuit Court, do are prepared to understand the full force of our rules of practice on the subject. Those rules, of course, are to govern so far as they apply; but the effect and meaning of the terms which they employ are necessarily to be sought in the books of authority to which we have referred.

By our rules a decree pro confesso may be had if the defendant, on being served with process, fails to appear within the time required; or if, having appeared, he fails to plead, demur or answer to the bill within the time limited for that purpose; or if he fails to answer after a former plea, demurrer or answer is overruled or declared insufficient. The 12th Rule in Equity prescribes the time when the subpœna shall be made returnable, and directs that "at the bottom of the subpœna shall be placed a memorandum, that the defendant is to enter his appearance in the suit in the clerk's office on or before the day at which the writ is returnable; otherwise, the bill may be taken pro confesso." The 18th Rule requires the defendant to file his plea, demurrer or answer, unless he gets an enlargement of the time, on the rule day next [113] succeeding that of entering his appearance; and in default thereof the plaintiff may, at his election, enter an order (as of course) in the order book, that the bill be taken pro confesso; and thereupon the cause shall be proceeded in ex parte, and the matter of the bill may be decreed by the court at any time after the expiration of thirty days from the entry of said order, if the same can be done without an answer, and is proper to be decreed; or the plaintiff, if he requires any discovery or answer to enable him to obtain a proper decree, shall be entitled to process of attachment against the defendant to compel an answer, etc. And the 19th Rule declares that the decree rendered upon a bill taken pro confesso shall be deemed absolute, unless the court shall at the same term set aside the same, or enlarge the time for filing the answer, upon cause shown upon motion and affidavit of the defendant.

It is thus seen that by our practice, a decree pro confesso is not a decree as of course according to the prayer of the bill, nor merely such as the complainant chooses to take it; but that it is made (or should be made) by the court, according to what is proper to be decreed upon the statements of the bill, assumed to be true. This gives it the greater solemnity, and accords with the English practice, as well as that of New York. Chancellor Kent, quoting Lord Eldon, says: "Where the bill is thus taken pro confesso, and the cause is set down for hearing, the course (says Lord Eldon, in Geary v. Sheridan, 8 Ves. 192) is for the court to hear the pleadings, and itself to pronounce the decree, and not to permit the plaintiff to take, at his own discretion, such a decree as he could abide by, as in the case of default by the defendan at the hearing." Rose v. Woodruff, 4 Johns Ch. 547, 548. Our rules do not require th cause to be set down for hearing at a regula term, but, after the entry of the order to tak the bill pro confesso, the 18th Rule declares tha thereupon the cause shall be proceeded in e parte, and the matter of the bill may be decree by the court at any time after the expiration o thirty days from the entry of such order, if i can be done without answer, and is proper to b decreed. This language shows that the matte of the bill ought at least to be opened and ex plained to the court when the decree is applie for, so that the court may see that the decre is a proper one. The binding character of th decree, as declared in Rule 19, renders it prope that this degree of precaution should be taken

We have been more particular in examinin this subject because of the attempt made by th defendants, on this appeal, to overthrow the de cree by matters outside of the bill, which wa regularly taken pro confesso. From the autho ities cited, and the express language of our ow Rules in Equity, it seems clear that the defenc ants, after the entry of the decree pro confess and whilst it stood unrevoked, were absolutel barred and precluded from alleging anythin in derogation of, or in opposition to, the sai decree, and that they are equally barred an precluded from questioning its correctness he on appeal, unless on the face of the bill it ap pears manifest that it was erroneous and in properly granted. The attempt, on the hea ing before the master, to show that the reissue patent was for a different invention from th described in the original patent, or to sho that there was such unreasonable delay in ap plying for it as to render it void under the r cent decisions of this court, was entirely ina missible because repugnant to the decree. Th defendants could not be allowed to question th validity of the patent which the decree had d clared valid. The fact that the reissue was ap plied for and granted fourteen years after th date of the original patent would, undoubtedl had the cause been defended and the validity the reissued patent been controverted, have bec strongly presumptive of unreasonable dela but it might possibly have been explained, an the court could not say as matter of law, an certainly, under the decree of the court, th master could not say, that it was unsusceptib of explanation. And on this appeal it is surel irregular to question the allegations of the bil If anything appears in those allegations ther selves going to show that the decree was err neous, of course it is assignable for error; b any attempt to introduce facts not embraced those allegations, for the purpose of counte vailing the decree, is manifestly improper. Th introduction of the original patent, pending th appeal, was clearly irregular.

The appellants have called attention to o matter in the allegations of the bill on whic they rely for the purpose of showing that, matter of law, the reissued patent must be voi It is stated in their 10th assignment of error, follows:

"10th. For that, on the face of the bill ar the patent, the reissued patent in suit was ill gally granted, and therefore void, and the cou should have so held; and this court is no not apply. The 2d edition of Mr. Daniell's work, published by Mr. Headlam in 1846, was much modified by the extensive changes introduced by the English Orders of May 8th, 1845; and the 3d edition, by the still more radical changes introduced by the Orders of April, 1850, the Statute of 15 and 16 Vict. chap. 86, and the General Orders afterwards made under the authority of that statute. Of course, the subsequent editions of Daniell are still further removed from the standard adopted by this court in 1842; but as they contain a view of the later decisions bearing upon so much of the old system as remains, they have, on that account, a value of their own, provided one is not misled by the new portions.

[illegible] to be held, because the bill avers that during the fourteen years of the original term of the patent the validity of said letters patent was established in numerous suits in the Circuit Courts of the United States, and that all persons [illegible] took licenses and paid therefor, as well as many others not sued, thereby averring, in substance, that the original letters patent was valid and operative.

Therefore, appellants ask this court to hold that the original letters patent having been valid and operative, as averred by complainant, for over fourteen years, no reissue thereafter could be legally obtained, because invalidity or inoperativeness are conditions precedent to the grant of a reissue."

The answer to this assignment is obvious. The suits brought on the original patent may have been for infringements committed against particular parts of the invention, or modes of using it and putting it into operation, as to which the specification was clear, full and sufficient, whilst, at the same time, there may have been certain other parts of the invention, or modes of using it and putting it into operation, as to which the specification was defective or insufficient, and which were not noticed until the application for reissue was made; or, in the original patent the patentee may have claimed more than he had a right to claim as new—a mistake which might be corrected at any time. At all events, the court cannot say, as mere matter of law, that this might not have been the case.

We think that the objection to the decree going to the validity of the patent and the whole cause of action cannot be sustained.

We are then brought to the proceedings in taking the account. The errors assigned on that part of the case are based on the exceptions made to the master's report, which have already been noticed. They resolve themselves into two principal grounds of objection: First, that the master allowed the complainant all the profits made by the defendants by the use of a patented machine in folding cloths and [illegible] as compared with doing the same thing by hand, whereas he should only have allowed as profits of using the complainant's patented machine as compared with a single folder, which the defendants allege was open to the public before their infringement commenced. Secondly that the master, in allowing profits, took no account of the fact that folded strips, such as those used by the defendants, were an article of merchandise, cut and folded by different parties at a charge of only 25 cents for 144 yards, or about one sixth of a cent per yard, whereas the defendants were charged with a profit of one half of a cent per yard.

As to the first of these objections, it is to be observed, first, that no evidence was produced before the master to show that, during the period of the infringement, there was open to the public the use of any machine for folding a single edge, which was adapted to the work done by the defendants. The only evidence offered for that purpose was the letters patent granted to A. P. Chapin, February 19, 1856, and the letters patent granted to J. S. McCurdy, dated February 28, 1856. No evidence was introduced to show that the folding guides described in those patents were adapted to the folding of strips for corsets, which was the work required by the defendants, and for which they used the complainant's invention. On the contrary, it was proved by the positive testimony of the complainant (and not contradicted), that the Chapin device could not be used for folding strips of materials on one or both edges for use upon corsets," for reasons fully detailed in the testimony; and that "the McCurdy device is a binder calculated and adapted to fold selvage-edged goods, such as ribbon and braid, and will fold the strip passing through it in the center only," "and cannot be used for folding raw-edged strips of cloth, either on one or both edges." [117] The complainant also testified that there was no other way known to him (and he testified that he had large experience on the subject) to do work like that done by the defendants, except by hand, or in the use of another patent owned by him, namely, the Robjohn patent, dated April 19, 1864 (which was produced in evidence), which consisted of a folding guide, folding one edge in combination with a device for pressing said fold to an edge, and then passing said folded strip through a narrower folder, folding the other edge, and pressing said fold by a pressing device. No evidence was adduced by the defendants to contradict this testimony.

It is proper to remark here that the affidavits presented to the master, and those afterwards presented to the court, as grounds of the respective applications to reopen the proofs, cannot be looked into on this hearing. They form no part of the evidence taken before the master on the reference; and no error is assigned (even if error could be assigned) to the refusal of the court to refer the case back to the master for the purpose of taking further testimony.

The second objection to the report is, that the master, in estimating the profits chargeable to the defendants, did not take into account the fact that folded strips, such as those used by the defendants, were an article of merchandise, cut and folded by different parties at a charge of only 25 cents for 144 yards. To this objection it may be observed, that the evidence before the master did not show by what process such folded strips were made, nor whether they were not really made by infringing the complainant's patent. As the proof stood before the master, they must have been made by the use of the complainant's machine, for there was no other known machine by which they could have been made at any such cost. And if made by the use of complainant's machine, the inference must be that the persons making them were infringing the complainant's patent, for they are not named in the list of those to whom the complainant had granted licenses, which list was presented before the master at the defendants' request. If made by such infringement they can hardly be set up against the complainant to reduce the amount of profits [118] made by the defendants. There is something singular about this part of the case. If folded strips, suitable for the defendants' purpose, could have been procured in the market by them at such a low price as is pretended, why did they not procure them in that way after being enjoined against using the complainant's machine, instead of making them by the disadvantageous method of using a single folder and

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

[illegible] that equity should give the government a remedy if those proofs are founded in [illegible] and perjury.

[No. 895.]

[illegible] Jan. 7, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

[illegible] from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of California.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., for appellant.

Mr. L. D. Latimer, for appellee:

The decision of the officers of the land department upon the facts whether the preemptor, Minor, had settled upon and inhabited and improved the land, was a judicial decision upon the testimony before them and is conclusive and final as between the United States and him.

[illegible] v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall., 652 (86 U. S. [illegible] L. ed. 222); Shepley v. Cowen, 91 U. S. 340 [illegible] L. ed. 427; see also, Marques v. Frisbie, [illegible] 476 (bk. 25, L. ed. 801); Moore v. [illegible] 96 U. S., 533 (bk. 24, L. ed. 850), [illegible] v. Conlan, 104 U. S., 425 (bk. 26, L. ed., [illegible] v. Perry, 6 Sawy., 79; Vance v. [illegible] 101 U. S., 519 (bk. 25, L. ed. 931.)

The particular acts of fraud charged in the [illegible] not such as will authorize a court of [illegible] to set aside or disturb the judgment and [illegible] of the land officers.

[illegible] v. Flint, 4 Sawy., 42; U. S. v. Throckmorton, [illegible] U. S. 61 (bk. 25, L. ed. 93); Smelt[illegible] v. Kemp, 104 U. S., 640 (bk. 26, L. ed. [illegible] v. Burbank (supra).

[illegible] of equity have no jurisdiction of matters of forfeiture, unless specially conferred by [illegible] Simms v. Cady, 2 Curt., 200. Section [illegible] of the Revised Statutes does not confer it. The bill comes too late and the claim is stale. [illegible] Pound, 367, note; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr., 1585; [illegible] v. Brown, 99 Mass., 213; Plymouth v. [illegible] Allen, 438; Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall., [illegible] bk. 17, L. ed. 838); Stearns v. [illegible] Haw., 819; 1 Story, Eq. Jur., § 64 a; 2 [illegible] Eq. Jur., § 1521 a.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of California, dismissing the bill of the United States on demurrer.

The object of the bill was to set aside and [illegible] a patent issued by the United States to Minor on January 5, 1876, for the northwest quarter of section 18, township 6, north range [illegible] of the Humboldt Meridian. The bill as [illegible] filed made in substance the following [illegible]

[illegible] and Minor, on the 23d day of October, [illegible] filed the declaratory statement in the [illegible] necessary to give him a right of preemption to the land, alleging that he had made [illegible] on it March 20th of that year; and [illegible] 1875, he made the usual affidavit [illegible] had so settled on the land in March of [illegible] year, that he had improved it, [illegible] on it, and continued to reside on [illegible] the time of said settlement, and had [illegible] about one acre of it. He also made [illegible] as the law required, that he had not so settled upon and improved the land with any agreement or contract with any person by which the title he might acquire would inure to the benefit of the latter. He also made oath that he was not the owner of 320 acres of land in any State or Territory in the United States. These affidavits being received by the register and receiver as true, he paid the money necessary to perfect his right, received of them the usual certificate called a patent certificate, on which there was issued to him at the General Land Office in due time the patent which is now assailed. [235]

The bill then charges that all these statements, made under oath before the land officers, were false and fraudulent. That defendant had never made the settlement, nor cultivation, nor improvements mentioned; that he had never resided on the land, but during all the time had lived and had his home in a village about twelve miles distant; and that he had not made these proofs of settlement to appropriate the land to his own use, but with intent to sell the same to some person unknown to the plaintiff.

It is also charged that defendant produced, in corroboration of his own statement, the affidavit of a witness, one Joseph Ohuitt, who testified to the settlement, improvement and residence of defendant, all of which was false and fraudulent. It is then alleged that by these false affidavits the land officers, supposing them to be true, were deceived and misled into allowing said preemption claim and issuing said patent, to the great injury of the United States.

A demurrer to this bill having been sustained, plaintiff was allowed to file an amendment, by which it is set out that one Richard Spence entered upon the west half of the quarter section in question on the first day of April, 1872, with the intention of preempting the same as soon as the lands were surveyed and open to preemption, and that on the 22d day of October, 1874, the approved plat of said surveys was duly filed in the land office at Humboldt, and on the 3d day of December thereafter Spence made his declaratory statement for the west half of that quarter section and the west half of the southwest quarter of the same section. It is further alleged that Spence, having complied with the terms authorizing his preemption by actual residence, improvement and cultivation, and having commuted his preemption right for a homestead right, and perfected his cultivation and improvement by a five years' residence, and paid the fees of the officers, made application on the 5th day of April, 1880, for his patent, to which he was legally entitled; but it was found that Minor's patent covered half his claim, to wit: the west half of the northwest quarter of the section. [236]

The title having passed from the United States to Minor for the entire quarter section, no patent could be issued to Spence, who was and still is equitably entitled to a part of it.

To this bill, as amended, the Circuit Court again sustained a demurrer and dismissed it, and from that decree this appeal is taken.

The Circuit and District Judges have certified a division of opinion on eight propositions of law, which they believe to arise out of this demurrer, as follows:

I. Whether the frauds and perjury alleged in the bill as the equitable grounds for vacating the patent in question are frauds extrinsic and collateral to the matter tried and determined in the land office upon which the patent issued and constitute such frauds as entitle the complainant to relief in a court of equity.

II. Whether perjury and false testimony in a proceeding before the land office, such as alleged in the said amended bill, by means of which a patent to a portion of the public land is fraudulently and wrongfully secured, is such a fraud as will require a court of equity to vacate the patent on that ground alone.

III. Whether the decision and determination of the questions involved, on false and perjured testimony, as set forth in the said amended bill, and the issue of a patent thereon, are not conclusive as against the United States on a bill filed to vacate the patent so issued.

IV. When the United States files a bill to vacate a patent on the ground that it was fraudulently obtained upon false testimony, as alleged in said amended bill, whether it is necessary to offer in the bill to return the purchase money paid for the land by the patentee.

V. Whether a court of equity will enforce the penalties and forfeitures imposed by section 2262 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, for obtaining a patent to land upon false affidavits.

[237] VI. Whether the remedy at law provided by said section and an indictment for perjury are not the only remedies for the wrong alleged in the amended bill.

VII. The bill of complaint having been originally filed in this case on June 19, 1883, more than seven years and five months after the issue of the patent, whether the claim to vacate the patent on the ground of fraud is stale, and whether the bill ought to be dismissed on that ground.

VIII. Whether the demurrer to the said amended bill should be sustained.

[238] As regards the last of these questions, it does not present any such well defined point of law as can be certified to this court for an answer. It merely presents the whole case without showing a distinct point in regard to which the judges were opposed in opinion. U. S. v. Waddell, 112 U. S., 76 [bk. 28, L. ed. 673]. But, as it must be answered by the action of the court in affirming or reversing the decree, this is immaterial.

With regard to the fourth, fifth and sixth questions, we have no difficulty in holding that neither the provisions of section 2262 of the Revised Statutes, nor the liability to indictment, nor the actual indictment and conviction of the defrauding party for perjury in such case as this, in any manner supersedes or debars the United States of the remedy by bill in chancery to vacate the patent obtained by such fraudulent practices. On the contrary, the provision of the section above mentioned, that the person who makes the false oath in the premises shall forfeit any money he may have paid for the land answers in the negative the fourth question, namely: is the United States bound to offer in the bill, in a case like this, to return the purchase money? The statute declares it is forfeited, and though the party may lose the land, he also loses his money as a penalty of his perjury.

The seventh question, with regard to laches in bringing the suit, we answer by saying, th in the present case there is no such laches show as will justify the court in dismissing the bil Waiving for the present the general prop sition that time does not run against the Go ernment, from the effect of which we see n escape in the short period of seven years and half, it is pretty clear on the face of the bill, th the first discovery of the fraud was made whe Spence, on applying for his patent under th homestead law, made it known that he had bee residing on, improving and cultivating a pa of the land included in Minor's patent durin the time Minor swore he was doing the sam thing. Of course lapse of time as a defense a suit for relief for these frauds did not begin run until the fraud was discovered.

The first three questions may be considere together. If an individual or a corporation ha been induced to part with the title to land, any other property, by such a fraud as that s out in this bill, there would seem to be no di ficulty in recovering it back by appropriate j dicial proceedings. If it was a sale and co veyance of land induced by fraudulent misre resentation of facts which had no existence, which the grantor relied and had a right rely, and which were essential elements of th consideration, there would be no hesitation a court of equity giving relief; and where th title remained in the possession of the fraud lent grantee, the court would surely annul th whole transaction, and require a reconveyan of the land to the grantor. The case present to us by the bill is one of unmitigated fra and imposition, consummated by means of re resentations on which alone the sale was mad every one of which was false. The law a the rules governing these preemption sales quired in every instance the settlement and re dence for a given time on the land, the actu cultivation of a part of it, and building a hou on it. It required that the claimant should this with a purpose of acquiring real own ship for himself and not for another, nor wi a purpose to sell to another.

In the case as presented by this bill none these things were done, though the land office were made to believe they were done by t false representation of the defendant. It w a case where all the requirements of the la were set at naught, evaded and defied by o stupendous falsehood, which included all t requirements on which the right to secure t land rested. There can be no question of t fraud and its misleading effect on the office of the Government, and, in a transaction tween individuals, it makes a clear case for lief.

Is there anything in the circumstance th these misrepresentations were supported by p jury, that the defendant made oath to his fal hoods and procured a false affidavit of a witn to corroborate himself, which should deprive t injured party of relief? It would seem rath to add to the force of the reasons for such lief that fraud and falsehood were re-enforc by perjury.

Is there any reason to be found in the re tion of the Government to such a case as th which will deprive it of the same right to lief as an individual would have? On the co trary, there are reasons why the Government [illegible] case of cases should not be held to the same diligence in guarding against fraud as a [illegible] owner of real estate. The Government [illegible] millions and millions of acres of land, [illegible] are by law open to preemption, homestead and public and private sale. The right [illegible] to these lands are to be obtained [illegible] Government only in accordance with [illegible] of law. For the more convenient [illegible] of the sale of these lands, and the [illegible] by individuals of the inchoate [illegible] preemption and homestead, and their [illegible] in the issuing of a title, called a [illegible] there is established in each land district [illegible] which are two officers, and no more, [illegible] register and receiver. These districts [illegible] include twenty thousand square miles or [illegible] all parts of which the lands of the Government subject to sale, preemption and homestead are found. These officers do not, they [illegible] visit these lands. They have maps [illegible] the location of the government lands [illegible] subdivision into townships, sections [illegible] parts of sections, and when a person desires to acquire a claim to any of them, he goes [illegible] them and makes the necessary statements, affidavits and claims, of all which they [illegible] memoranda and copies, which are forwarded to the General Land Office at Washington.

[illegible] the truth of these statements they are [illegible] to rely on the oaths of the parties [illegible] claims, and such ex parte affidavits as [illegible] may produce.

[illegible] cases out of ten, perhaps in a much [illegible] percentage, the proceedings are wholly [illegible]. In the absence of any contesting [illegible] for a right to purchase or secure the [illegible] the party applying has it all his own way. [illegible] makes his own statement, sworn to before [illegible] officers, and he produces affidavits. If [illegible] affidavits meet the requirements of the [illegible] the claimant succeeds, and what is required [illegible] well known that it is reduced to a formula. It is not possible for the officers of the government, except in a few rare instances, to know anything of the truth or falsehood of the statements. In the cases where there is [illegible] contesting claimant there is no adversary [illegible] whatever. The United States is [illegible] it opposes no resistance to the establishment of the claim, and makes no issue on the statement of the claimant.

[illegible], therefore, he succeeds by misrepresentation, by fraudulent practices, aided by perjury, there would seem to be more reason [illegible] the United States, as the owner of land of which it has been defrauded by these means, should have remedy against that fraud—all the remedy which the courts can give—than in the case of a private owner of a few acres of land in which a like fraud has been practiced.

[illegible] suit brought by the United States against [illegible] to set aside a patent for land on the ground of fraud in procuring its issue, this [illegible] "It may be admitted, as stated by [illegible], that if, upon any state of facts, the [illegible] might have been lawfully issued, the [illegible] will presume, as against collateral attack, [illegible] facts existed; but that presumption [illegible] place in a suit by the United States directly attacking the patent and seeking its cancellation for fraud in the conduct of those officers. Moffat v. U. S., 112 U. S., 24 [bk. 28, L. ed. 623].

The principle is equally applicable when those officers, though wholly innocent, were imposed upon and deceived by the fraud and false swearing of the party to whom the patent was issued.

The learned judge whose opinion prevailed in the Circuit Court and is found in the record, has been misled by confounding the present case with that of U. S. v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61 [bk. 25, L. ed. 93], and Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514 [bk. 25, L. ed. 929], and thus applying principles to this which do not belong to it.

In Throckmorton's Case, it is true, a part of the relief sought was to set aside a patent for land issued by the United States. But the patent was issued on the confirmation of a Mexican grant after proceedings prescribed by the Act of Congress on that subject. These proceedings were judicial. They commenced before a board of commissioners. There were pleadings and parties, and the claimant was plaintiff, and the United States was the defendant. Both parties were represented by counsel, the United States having in all such cases her regular District Attorney to represent her. [242] Witnesses were examined in the usual way, by depositions, subject to cross-examinations, and not by ex parte affidavits. From this tribunal there was a right of appeal to the District Court, and from that court to the Supreme Court of the United States by either party. There was nothing wanting to make such a proceeding, in the highest sense, a judicial one, and to give to its final judgment or decree all the respect, the verity, the conclusiveness, which belong to such a final decree between the parties. The patent could only issue on this final decree of confirmation of the Spanish or Mexican grant, and was, in effect, but the execution of that decree.

It was to such a case as this that the ruling in Throckmorton's Case was applied. The court said in that case, which was a bill to set aside the decree of confirmation: "The genuineness and validity of the concession from Micheltorena, produced by complainant, was the single question pending before the board of commissioners and the District Court for four years. It was the thing, and the only thing, that was controverted, and it was essential to the decree. To overrule the demurrer to this bill would be to retry, twenty years after the decision of those tribunals, the very matter which they tried, on the ground of fraud in the document on which the decree was made. If we can do this now, some other court may be called on twenty years hence to retry the same matter on another allegation of fraudulent combination in this suit to defeat the ends of justice; and so the number of suits would be without limit and litigation endless about the single question of the validity of this document."

It needs no other remarks than those we have already made, as to the nature of the proceeding before the land officers, to show how inappropriate this language is to such a proceeding. Here no one question was in issue. No issue at all was taken. No adversary proceeding was had. No contest was made. The officers.

acting on such evidence as the claimant presented, were bound by it and by the law, to issue a patent. They had no means of controverting its truth, and the Government had no attorney to inquire into it. Surely the doctrine applicable to the conclusive character of the [243] solemn judgments of courts, with full jurisdiction over the parties and the subject-matter, made after appearance, pleadings and contest by parties on both sides, cannot be properly applied to the proceedings in the land office in such cases.

So, also, as regards the case of Vance v. Burbank [supra], the language of the court in regard to the conclusiveness of the decision of the land office must be considered with reference to the case before it. That was not a case by the grantor, the United States, to set aside the patent, but by a party, or the heirs of a party, who had contested the right of the grantee before all the officers of the Land Department up to the Secretary of the Interior, and been defeated, and where the whole question depended on disputed facts, the evidence of which was submitted by the contestants to those officers. In such a case, where there was full hearing, rehearing, and issues made and tried, the observation of the court, "that the decision of the proper officers of the department is in the nature of a judicial determination of the matter in dispute," is well founded.

It has been often said by this court that the land officers are a special tribunal of a quasi judicial character, and their decision on the facts before them is conclusive. And we are not now controverting the principle that where a contest between individuals, for the right to a patent for public lands, has been brought before these officers, and both parties have been represented and had a fair hearing, those parties are concluded as to all the facts thus in issue by the decision of the officers.

But in proceedings like the present, wholly ex parte, no contest, no adversary proceedings, no reason to suspect fraud, but where the patent is the result of nothing but fraud and perjury, it is enough to hold that it conveys the legal title, and it would be going quite too far to say that it cannot be assailed by a proceeding in equity and set aside as void, if the fraud is proved and there are no innocent holders for [244] value. We have steadily held that, though in the absence of fraud the facts were concluded by the action of the Land Department, a misconstruction of the law, by which alone the successful party obtained a patent, might be corrected in equity; much more when there was fraud and imposition.

If, by the case as made by the bill, Spence's claim had covered all the land patented to Minor, it would present the question, whether the United States could bring this suit for Spence's benefit. The Government, in that case, would certainly have no interest in the land when recovered, as it must go to Spence without any further compensation. And it may become a grave question, in some future case of this character, how far the officers of the Government can be permitted, when it has no interest in the property or in the subject of the litigation, to use its name to set aside its own patent, for which it has received full compensation, for the benefit of a rival claimant. The question, however, does not arise here, for half the lan covered by the patent would revert to th United States if it was vacated, and, as betwee the United States and Minor it was one tran action evidenced by one muniment of title, th question does not arise; certainly not on d murrer to this bill.

The result of these considerations is, that th first and second questions are answered in th affirmative; the third, fourth, sixth and se enth in the negative; and the fifth is immat rial.

The decree of the Circuit Court is reverse and the case remanded for further proceedin not inconsistent with this opinion.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

FARMINGTON VILLAGE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
EBEN F. PILLSBURY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed. 138-146.)

Jurisdiction; collusive assignment of coupons confer—construction of the Act of 1875—t law prior to 1875.

1. Under the Act of March 3, 1875, the holders promissory notes or of foreign or domestic bills exchange, who are citizens of a State in which t decisions of the courts have been adverse to the interests, cannot, by collusive transfers to citize of other States, create a case apparently cognizab in the Courts of the United States, and have it pro ecuted by their assignees in those tribunals for the benefit.

2. The holders of interest coupons on municip bonds transferred them, to the amount of $7,922, the defendant in error, the consideration being note for $500 and an agreement to pay over the ba ance of fifty per cent of the net amount when co lected. Held, that a suit on said coupons brougl in the Circuit Court of the United States, should dismissed for want of jurisdiction, the case bein within the Act of 1875.

[No. 199.]

Argued Mar. 16, 17, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 188

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the Unit States for the District of Maine.

This action was brought in the court belo by the defendant in error to recover the amou alleged to be due on certain interest coupons bonds issued by the defendant.

A jury having been waived, the trial by t court resulted in a division in opinion betwe the judges. The opinion of the presiding jud being in favor of the plaintiff, judgment w rendered for him for $10,408.35, with cost whereupon, the defendant sued out this wr of error.

The facts of the case are stated by the cou

Messrs. William L. Putnam and Th H. Haskell, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Charles F. Libby and T. B. Re for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the op ion of the court:

This was a suit upon coupons for semi-a

NOTE.—Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts of the Unit States—suits upon municipal bonds and coupon Act of 1875. The principal cases in the Supre Court on this point are cited in the opinion in t above case of Farmington v. Pillsbury. See a note to McDonald v. Smalley, 26 U. S. (1 Pet.), 620, 7, 287.

[illegible] interest on the bonds of the Farmington Village Corporation, and among the defenses [illegible] was one to the effect that the plaintiff was not a bona fide holder of the coupons in [illegible] but that they were placed in his hands [illegible] for the purpose of bringing a suit in the [illegible] Court of the United States. The case was tried by the court without the intervention of a jury and comes here with a special finding of facts, and a certificate of division of [illegible] between the judges holding the court [illegible] certain questions arising at the trial. Among the questions certified was this: "Whether the plaintiff can maintain an action [illegible] upon the coupons declared upon, [illegible] instruments to which they were attached not being assigned to him, but having [illegible] to, and always held by, citizens of [illegible]."

The facts applicable to this question, which [illegible] the special findings, are these:

The bonds from which the coupons were cut were issued by Farmington Village under a [illegible] passed by the Legislature of [illegible] authorizing the village corporation to [illegible] money to aid in the extension of the road [illegible] Androscoggin Railroad Company to some [illegible] within or near the limits of the Village. The bonds were issued by the assessors and [illegible] of the Village to a committee of [illegible] who were authorized to sell and dispose of them for the purpose mentioned in the [illegible]. Before the committee received any of [illegible] bonds from the assessors and treasurer, and [illegible] July 1, 1870, which was the date of the [illegible] James Burnham and eleven others, all [illegible] owners of property subject to taxation [illegible] taxpayers in the Village Corporation, filed [illegible] a bill in equity in the Supreme Judicial Court [illegible] State of Maine, in Franklin County, [illegible] the railroad company, the assessors and [illegible], and committee of the Village, to enjoin them from issuing the bonds, on the [illegible] of a want of authority of law for that [illegible]. This suit was entered at the July [illegible] of the court, and held under advisement until the 3d of August, 1872, when it was dismissed without prejudice. After [illegible] the 13th of August, 1872, other taxpayers filed another bill of the same general [illegible] against the same defendants and the [illegible] Corporation to obtain substantially the same relief. To this bill the Village Corporation [illegible] an answer and the railroad company a [illegible] answer. The case was heard by the [illegible] at the July Term, 1873, and kept under advisement until August 27, 1878, when a decree was rendered sustaining the bill and granting the injunction prayed for. The opinion of [illegible] is reported in 70 Me., 515, and is to [illegible] that the statute authorizing the Village [illegible] to aid the extension of the railroad was unconstitutional and void. This opinion was concurred in by only four of the eight [illegible] composing the court at the time of the [illegible]. One judge who sat in the cause died [illegible] opinion was in his hands for examination, and his death made the four judges a majority of the court at the time of the decree.

Notwithstanding the pendency of the original suit, the bonds were put out and, with the [illegible] of a few only, were bought by citizens of Farmington and members of the Village Corporation. The coupons in suit were collected from various holders of the bonds, all residents of Farmington and citizens of the State of Maine, about May, 1880, and transferred to the plaintiff, a citizen of Massachusetts, separate from the bonds. The plaintiff gave his note and agreement for these coupons to the agent of the holders who had taken them to dispose of, as follows:

"$500. Boston, May 5, 1880.

For value received I promise to pay to P. Dyer five hundred dollars in two years with interest. E. F. Pillsbury."

"Boston, May 5, 1880.

Whereas, I have this day bought of P. Dyer, of Farmington, coupons of the Farmington Village Corporation to the amount of $7,922, and given him my note for the same; as a further consideration for said coupons, I agree that, if I succeed in collecting the full amount of said coupons, I will pay him fifty per cent of the net amount collected above said five hundred dollars, and pay him as soon as I collect the money from said corporation.

E. F. Pillsbury."

This suit was begun July 1, 1880. [141]

By the original Judiciary Act of September 24, 1789, chap. 20, 1 Stat. at L., 73, it was provided (§ 11) that no District or Circuit Court should "have cognizance of any suit to recover the contents of any promissory note or other chose in action in favor of an assignee, unless a suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover the said contents if no assignment had been made, except in cases of foreign bills of exchange." The same Act provided (§ 12) for the removal of suits from a State Court to the Circuit Court by a defendant, and he was required to file his petition for such a removal at the time of entering his appearance in the State Court.

By the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, § 1, 18 Stat. at L., 470, § 11 of the Act of 1789 was [142] changed so as to provide that the Circuit and District Courts should not have cognizance of any suit founded on contract in favor of an assignee, unless a suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover thereon if no assignment had been made, except in cases of promissory notes negotiable by the law merchant and bills of exchange. By the same Act, sections 2 and 3, removals could be effected by either party, when the necessary citizenship existed, if a petition was filed therefor, in the State Court, before or at the term at which the cause could be first tried, and before the trial thereof. This last Act also contained this provision (§ 5): "If, in any suit commenced in a Circuit Court or removed from a State Court * * * it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Circuit Court, at any time after such suit has been brought or removed thereto, that such suit does not really and substantially involve a suit or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of said Circuit Court, or that the parties to said suit have been improperly or collusively made or joined, either as plaintiffs or defendants, for the purpose of creating a case cognizable or removable under this Act, the said Circuit Court shall proceed no further therein, but shall dismiss the suit or remand it to the State Court from which it was removed, as justice may require, and shall make such order as to costs as shall be just, but the order of the Circuit Court, dismissing or remanding said cause to the State Court, shall be reviewable by the Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal, as the case may be."

Under the Act of 1789, the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, in suits by assignees of choses in action, was confined within narrow limits, and there was comparatively little danger of collusion to create a case of that character cognizable by those courts, because, if the owner of the claim could sue in his own name, there would ordinarily be no motive for transferring it to another to bring the action. In that Act promissory notes and inland bills of exchange, the form of negotiable securities most used in the transaction of ordinary business by citizens of the United States, were included in the prohibition of suits by assignees.

[143] The subject of colorable transfers to create a case for the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States was presented for the most part in suits for the recovery of real property, when a conveyance had been made by a citizen of the State in which the suit must be brought to a citizen of another State. At a very early day it was held in this class of cases that the citizenship of the parties could not be put in issue on the merits, but that it must be brought forward at an earlier stage in the proceedings by a plea in abatement, in the nature of a plea to the jurisdiction, and that a plea to the merits was a waiver of such a plea to the jurisdiction. De Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet., 498; Evans v. Gee, 11 Pet., 83; Sims v. Hundly, 6 How., 1; Smith v. Kernochen, 7 How., 216; Jones v. League, 18 How., 81 [59 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 264]; De Sobry v. Nicholson, 3 Wall., 423 [70 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 264]. And upon the question of transfer it was uniformly held that, if the transaction was real and actually conveyed to the assignee or grantee all the title and interest of the assignor or grantor in the thing assigned or granted, it was a matter of no importance that the assignee or the grantee could sue in the Courts of the United States when his assignor or grantor could not. A suit by such an assignee or grantee would present, in reality, a controversy between the plaintiff on the record and the defendants. McDonald v. Smalley, 1 Pet., 620; Smith v. Kernochen, supra; Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall., 288 [73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 827]. But it was equally well settled that if the transfer was fictitious, the assignor or grantor continuing to be the real party in interest, and the plaintiff on record but a nominal or colorable party, his name being used only for the purpose of jurisdiction, the suit would be essentially a controversy between the assignor or grantor and the defendant, notwithstanding the formal assignment or conveyance, and that the jurisdiction of the court would be determined by their citizenship rather than that of the nominal plaintiff. Maxwell v. Levy, 2 Dall., 381; S. C. 4 Dall., 330, decided by Mr. Justice Iredell and Peters, J., in the Pennsylvania Circuit in 1797. Smith v. Kernochen, supra; Barney v. Baltimore, supra.

Such was the condition of the law when the [144] Act of 1875 was passed, which allowed suits to be brought by the assignees of promissory notes negotiable by the law merchant, as well as of foreign and domestic bills of exchange, if the necessary citizenship of the parties ex isted. This opened wide the door for fraud upon the jurisdiction of the court by collusiv transfers, so as to make colorable parties an create cases cognizable by the Courts of th United States. To protect the courts as wel as parties against such frauds upon their juris diction, it was made the duty of a court, at an time when it satisfactorily appeared that a sui did not "really and substantially involve a dis pute or controversy" properly within its juris diction, or that the parties "had been impro erly or collusively made or joined * * * fo the purpose of creating a case cognizable" un der that Act, "to proceed no further therein, but to dismiss the suit or remand it to the Stat Court from which it had been removed. This as was said in Williams v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 211 [bk. 26, L. ed. 720], "imposed the duty o the court, on its own motion, without waitin for the parties, to stop all further proceedin and dismiss the suit the moment a fraud on i jurisdiction was discovered." The old rul established by the decisions, which required a objections to the citizenship of the parties, un less shown on the face of the record to be take by plea in abatement before pleading to th merits, was changed, and the courts were give full authority to protect themselves against th false pretenses of apparent parties. This is salutary provision which ought not to be ne lected. It was intended to promote the en of justice, and is equivalent to an express enac ment by Congress that the Circuit Courts sha not have jurisdiction of suits which do n really and substantially involve a dispute controversy of which they have cognizanc nor of suits in which the parties have been in properly or collusively made or joined for t purpose of creating a case cognizable under t Act It does not, any more than did the A of 1789, prevent the courts from taking juri diction of suits by an assignee when the assig ment is not fictitious, and actually conveys a the interest of the assignor in the thing assigne so that the suit when begun involves really an substantially a dispute or controversy in fav of the assignee for himself and on his own a count against the defendant; but it does positive language provide that, if the assig ment is collusive and for the purpose of enablin the assignee to sue in the Courts of the Unit States for the benefit of the assignor, when t assignor himself could not bring the action, t court shall not proceed in the case. In this r spect it goes further than the rulings of t courts under the Act of 1789. Under its pr visions the holders of promissory notes or foreign or domestic bills of exchange, who a citizens of a State in which the decisions of t courts have been adverse to their interests, ca not by collusive transfers to citizens of oth States create a case apparently cognizable the Courts of the United States, and have prosecuted by their assignees in those tribuna for their benefit, in the hope of securing an a judication in that jurisdiction more favorab to their interests. The Courts of the Unit States were not created under the Constituti for any such purpose. Except in certain spe fied cases they have no jurisdiction of contr versies between citizens of the same State.

We are clearly of opinion that this case fa

[illegible] the prohibitions of the statute. The [illegible] which the coupons now in suit were [illegible] were all bought as early as 1871 or [illegible] citizens of the State of Maine, who held [illegible] the bonds themselves when this suit [illegible]. Their purchases were made while [illegible] pending in the courts of the State to [illegible] validity of the bonds. On the 27th of [illegible], the highest court of the State [illegible] effect that the bonds were inopera[illegible], for want of constitutional power [illegible] Village Corporation to issue them. Almost [illegible] after this decision these coupons, to [illegible] of $7,922, were collected from va[illegible] holders of bonds, all residents of the Vil[illegible] of Farmington and citizens of Maine, and [illegible], separate from the bonds, to the [illegible] plaintiff, a citizen of Massachusetts, [illegible] arrangement by which the plaintiff [illegible] the agent of the holders of the coupons [illegible] promissory note for $500, [illegible] two years from date, with interest, [illegible] "as a further consideration for said [illegible]" that if he succeeded in collecting the [illegible] thereof he would pay the agent, [illegible] the money was got from the corpora[illegible] per cent of the net amount collected [illegible] $500. This suit, begun July 1, 1880, [illegible] of the plaintiff, is the result of that [illegible]. It is a suit for the benefit of the [illegible] of the bonds. They are to receive from [illegible] one half of the net proceeds of the [illegible] they have created by their transfer of the [illegible] gathered together for that purpose. [illegible] their own in reality, though they [illegible] that the plaintiff may retain one [illegible] what he collects for the use of his name [illegible] trouble in collecting. It is true the [illegible] is called a purchase in the papers [illegible] executed, and that the plaintiff gave [illegible] for $500, but the time for payment was [illegible] for two years, when it was, no doubt, [illegible] the result of the suit would be known. [illegible] money was paid, and as the note was not [illegible], it is clear the parties intended to [illegible] the control of the whole matter in their [illegible] hands, so that if the plaintiff failed to re[illegible] the money he could be released from his [illegible] to pay. In the language of Mr. Justice [illegible] speaking for the court in Detroit v. Dean, [illegible] 341 [bk. 27, L. ed. 302], applied to [illegible] of this case, the transfer of the coupons [illegible] "A mere contrivance, a pretense, the re[illegible] of a collusive arrangement to create" in [illegible] of this plaintiff "a fictitious ground of [illegible] jurisdiction," so as to get a re-examina[illegible] jurisdiction of the question decided [illegible] to the owners of the coupons by the [illegible] judicial tribunal of the State. Hawes [illegible], 104 U. S., 459 [bk. 26, L. ed. 832], [illegible] v. Manning, 106 U. S., 586 [bk. 27, L. [illegible]; Barnards Township v. Stebbins, 109 U. [illegible] [bk. 27, L. ed. 956].

We therefore say, in answer to the first [illegible] certified, that the plaintiff cannot [illegible] the action in the Circuit Court upon [illegible] declared upon.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is conse[illegible], and the cause remanded, with [illegible] to dismiss the suit for want of juris[illegible] and without prejudice.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

B. W. MOWER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
NATHAN FLETCHER. [127]

B. W. MOWER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
NATHAN FLETCHER AND JOHN D. BICKNELL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 127, 128.)

Judgments—when final.

A judgment is final for purposes of a writ of error to this court, which terminates the litigation between the parties on the merits of the case, so that if there should be an affirmance here, the court below would have nothing to do but to execute the judgment it had already rendered.

[Nos. 372, 373.]

Submitted Mar. 23, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

The case is sufficiently stated by the court.

On motion to dismiss.

Messrs. J. K. Redington and M. D. Brainerd, for defendants in error, in support of motions.

Mr. W. J. Johnston, for plaintiff in error, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

These motions are made on the ground that the judgments for the review of which the writs of error were sued out are not final judgments. [128] The judgment in each case is that the judgment of the state district court "Be, and the same is hereby reversed with costs, with directions to the Superior Court of Los Angeles County to enter judgment upon the findings for the plaintiff as prayed for in his complaint."

That judgment is final for the purposes of a writ of error to this court, which terminates the litigation between the parties on the merits of the case, so that, if there should be an affirmance here, the court below would have nothing to do but to execute the judgment it had already rendered. Bostwick v. Brinkerhoff, 106 U. S. 3 [bk. 27, L. ed. 73], and the numerous cases there cited. The judgments in these cases are of that character. The litigation is ended, and the rights of the parties on the merits have been fully determined. Nothing remains to be done but to require the inferior court to perform the ministerial act of entering the judgments in that court which have been ordered. This is but carrying the judgment of the Supreme Court, which has been rendered, into execution. Nothing is left to the judicial discretion of the court below. The cases relied on in support of the motions to dismiss were all judgments or decrees of reversal, with leave for further proceedings in the inferior court. Such judgments are not final, because something yet remains to be done to complete the litigation.

The motion in each of the cases is overruled.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

NOTE.—Appeal and error; what is a final decree or judgment for purpose of. See Gibbons v. Ogden, 19 U. S. (6 Wheat.), 448, bk. 5, 302, note.

[133] DETROIT CITY RAILWAY COMPANY,
Plff. in Errr.,
v.
JACOB GUTHARD.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 133-137.)

Jurisdiction—review of the judgments of state courts—federal question.

1. The jurisdiction of this court for the review of a judgment of the highest court of a State depends on the decision by that court, of one or more of the questions specified in § 709, R. S., and in the way there mentioned.
2. To give this court jurisdiction it must appear affirmatively on the face of the record, not only that a federal question was raised and presented to the highest court of the State for decision, but that it was decided, or that its decision was necessary to the judgment or decree rendered in the case.

[No. 928.]

Submitted Mar. 2, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

On motion to dismiss.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See, also, 51 Mich., 180.

Mr. Henry M. Duffield for defendant in error in support of motion.

Messrs. Geo. F. Edmunds, John C. Donnelly and F. A. Baker, for plaintiff in error, contra.

[134] Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a motion to dismiss a writ of error to the Supreme Court of Michigan on the ground that the record does not show that any federal question is involved. The case is this:

The Detroit City Railway Company was organized in May, 1863, under a general law of Michigan to provide for the construction of train railways, passed February 13, 1855, to operate a street railway in Detroit. Article 15, § 1, of the Constitution of the State, which went into effect January 1, 1851, is as follows:

"Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act, except for municipal purposes. All laws passed pursuant to this section may be amended, altered or repealed."

Sections 22 and 31 of the law under which the Railway Company was incorporated are as follows:

"Section 22. Each and every railway company formed under this Act shall pay to the Treasurer of the State of Michigan an annual tax at the rate of one half of one per cent on the whole amount of capital paid in upon the capital stock of said company, which said tax shall be estimated upon the last preceding report of said company, and shall be paid to the said treasurer on the first Monday of July in each year, and shall be in lieu of all other taxes upon all the property of said company."

"Section 31. The Legislature may at any time alter, amend, or repeal this Act; but such alteration, amendment or repeal shall not operate as an alteration or amendment of the corporate rights of companies formed under it, unless specially named in the Act so altering or amending this Act, nor shall the dissolution of any such company take away or impair any remedy given for or against said corporation, its stockholders or officers or any liability which shall have been previously incurred."

Section 22 of this Act was repealed March 13, 1882. In the repealing Act the Detroit City Railway Company was not specially named.

On the 14th of March, 1882, a general tax law was enacted. This law provided that all property within the jurisdiction of the State not expressly exempt should be subject to taxation and that all corporate property, except when some other provision is made by law, should be assessed to the corporation as to a natural person in the name of the corporation.

Under the authority of this last law, the City of Detroit assessed a tax on the property of the Railway Company, and Guthard, the receiver of taxes for the city, on failure of the Company to comply with his demand for payment, in the regular course of his proceeding for the collection, levied upon sixty-one horses to sell at public auction and make the money. The Company thereupon brought an action of replevin for the recovery of the horses. Upon the trial of this action the only question in dispute was as to the validity of the tax. The Supreme Court of the State, on writ of error, decided that the tax was valid, and gave judgment accordingly. To reverse that judgment this writ of error was brought.

The rule which governs our jurisdiction in this class of cases is thus stated by Mr. Justice Miller for the court in Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co., 1 Wall., 143 [68 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 576]: "The court must be able to see clearly, from the whole record, that a certain provision of the Constitution or Act of Congress was relied on by the party who brings the writ of error, and that the right thus claimed by him was denied." In Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet., 398, one of the propositions "established, after a careful review of the cases, was, "that it is not sufficient to show that a question might have arisen or been applicable to the case, unless it is further shown, on the record, that it did arise, and was applied by the State Court in the case." And, at the last term, in Choutea v. Gibson, 111 U. S., 200 [bk. 28, L. ed. 400], it was said: "From the beginning it has been held that, to give us jurisdiction in this class of cases, it must appear affirmatively on the face of the record, not only that a federal question was raised and presented to the highest court of the State for decision, but that it was decided or that its decision was necessary to the judgment or decree rendered in the case." Murdoch v. Memphis, 20 Wall., 590, 636 [87 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 429, 444].

The reason of this rule is obvious. Our jurisdiction for the review of a judgment of the highest court of a State depends on the decision by that court of one or more of the questions specified in section 709 of the Revised Statutes and in the way there mentioned. If there has been no such decision in the suit, there can be no re-examination of the judgment here. It is what was actually decided that we are to con-

NOTE.—Jurisdiction—review of federal questions arising in state courts. See Matthews v. Zane, 8 U. S. (4 Cranch), 382, bk. 2, 654, note; Martin v. Hunter, 14 U. S. (1 Wheat.), 304, bk. 4, 97, note; Williams v. Norris, 25 U. S. (12 Wheat.), 117, bk. 6, 571, note.

[illegible] not what might have been decided; and [illegible] jurisdiction must appear affirmatively [illegible] the face of the record before we can proceed, [illegible] must show either in express terms or [illegible] implication, not only the question, but [illegible] decision. It is not enough to find by searching [illegible] judgment that the requisite question [illegible] have been raised and presented for decision. It must appear that it was actually [illegible] and actually decided. Brown v. Colorado, [illegible] U. S., 97 [bk. 27, L. ed. 133].

[illegible] remains only to apply this well established [illegible] the facts as they appear in this record. The claim now is that, under the operation of [illegible] 22 and 31 of the incorporating Act, the [illegible] entered into a contract with this corporation not to subject it to taxation otherwise than [illegible] the way provided in section 22, unless it did [illegible] by a statute in which the Company should be [illegible] named. The record certainly does [illegible] show that any such claim was made in the [illegible] Courts, or that such a question was [illegible] or presented for decision, or that it was [illegible]. Nothing of the kind appears, either [illegible] the pleadings or the findings of fact on which [illegible] the case was heard in the Supreme Court. The apparent question presented for decision [illegible] whether the State had changed the mode of [illegible] by what was done, not whether it was [illegible] by the Constitution of the United [illegible] from doing so without specifying that the [illegible] of section 22, and the provisions of the [illegible] law of 1882, were to operate on this [illegible] Company, and referring to it by [illegible]. No judge, in deciding the case as it [illegible] up on the record, would be likely to suppose that, if he gave judgment for the receiver [illegible], he would deny the Company any "right, title, privilege or immunity specially set up or claimed" under the Constitution of the United States. It is true that such a [illegible] might have been set up and claimed, and [illegible] court below had certified in proper form [illegible] it was, and that it was denied, we could [illegible] jurisdiction. The court has, however, not only not made such a certificate, but it [illegible] expressly refused to do so upon application [illegible] made for that purpose. All this appears affirmatively in the motion papers.

We are referred to the opinion of the court [illegible], which is found in the transcript, as [illegible] a decision of the federal question involved. The Constitution of Michigan requires that the opinion of the Supreme Court [illegible] be in writing, signed by the judges concurring therein, and filed by the clerk. From [illegible] opinion in this case it appears that the point [illegible], and on which the judgment rested, [illegible] that the term "corporate rights" as used [illegible] 31 did not include incidental privileges and immunities, such as a special standard of taxation. No reference whatever is [illegible] any question of charter contract.

In the whole we are satisfied we have no [illegible] in the case, and the motion to dis[illegible] is granted.

[illegible] copy. Test:

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] U. S., [illegible]; [illegible] U. S., [illegible].

BENJAMIN BUTTERWORTH, Commissioner of Patents, Appt.,

v.

SAMUEL HILL et al.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 128-133.)

Jurisdiction—commissioner of patents—where liable to suit—service of process—waiver of objection to jurisdiction.

1. Section 739, R. S., providing that no civil suit shall be brought before the Circuit or District Courts of the United States against an inhabitant of the United States, by any original process, in any other district than that in which he is an inhabitant, or in which he may be found at the time of serving the writ, applies to suits brought under § 4915, concerning the issue of patents.

2. The Commissioner of Patents being by law located in the Patent Office, his official residence is at Washington.

3. The written acceptance at Washington by the Commissioner of Patents of the service of a subpœna, issued by a district court situated elsewhere, "to have the same effect as if duly served by a proper officer," merely admits the service with the same effect it would have if made by an officer in the District of Columbia. No appearance is thereby entered in the cause.

4. A letter written by the Commissioner at Washington acknowledging the receipt of the bill, returning the subpœna, "service accepted," and stating that he declines to appear, does not amount to a waiver of the objection to the jurisdiction.

[No. 1044.]

Argued Mar. 9, 1885. Decided Mar. 30, 1885, nunc pro tunc as of Mar. 9, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Vermont.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., and F. T. Brown, for appellant.

Messrs. Wm. Edgar Simonds and Kittredge Haskins, for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree on a bill in equity filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Vermont against the Commissioner of Patents, under section 4915 of the Revised Statutes. That section is as follows:

"Section 4915. Whenever a patent on application is refused, either by the Commissioner of Patents or by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia upon appeal from the Commissioner, the applicant may have remedy by bill in equity; and the court having cognizance thereof, on notice to adverse parties and other due proceedings had, may adjudge that such applicant is entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for his invention as specified in his claim, or for any part thereof, as the facts in the case may appear. And such adjudication, if it be in favor of the right of the applicant, shall authorize the Commissioner to issue such patent on the applicant filing in the Patent Office a copy of the adjudication, and otherwise complying with the requirements of law. In all cases where there is no opposing party, a copy of the bill shall be served on the Commissioner; and all the expenses of the proceeding shall be paid by the applicant, whether the final decision is in his favor or not."

On filing of the bill, a subpœna was issued commanding the "Commissioner of Patents of the United States of America" to appear before the court in Vermont and answer. On the 18th of October, 1883, the Commissioner made the following indorsement on the writ:

"Washington, D. C., October 18th, 1883.

I hereby accept service of the within subpœna, to have the same effect as if duly served on me by a proper officer, and I do hereby acknowledge the receipt of a copy thereof.

E. M. Marble,
Com'r of Patents.

(Office of Com'r of Patents. Received Oct. 18, 1883.)"

And afterwards, and on said 23d day of October, A. D. 1883, a letter from the Commissioner of Patents was filed, which said letter is in the words and figures following:

"Department of the Interior,
United States Patent Office,
Washington, D. C., October 18, 1883.

Sir: I am in receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, enclosing copy of a bill of complaint entitled Hill & Prentice et al. v. The Commissioner of Patents of the United States of America, in the United States Circuit Court for the District of Vermont, praying that said court [131] direct the Commissioner of Patents to issue a patent to the assignees of Hill & Prentice for the invention disclosed and claimed in their application filed in this office March 30, 1880, for an improvement in milk coolers; also a subpœna to appear and answer to said bill on the 5th proximo and a certified copy of said subpœna. I herewith return the subpœna, service accepted, and have to inform you that I shall not appear in defense in said bill.

Very respectfully,
E. M. Marble, Commissioner.

Mr. W. E. Simonds, Hartford, Conn."

No other service of process was made on the Commissioner, and he made no other appearance in the cause than such as may be implied from his acceptance of service and his letter as above. In due course of proceeding a decree was entered adjudging that "Samuel Hill and Benjamin B. Prentice, as inventors, and the Vermont Machine Company, as assignee of said inventors, are entitled to have issued to them letters patent * * * as prayed for in the petition and bill of complaint." No one was made defendant to the bill except the Commissioner of Patents, and Hill, Prentice and the Machine Company, the complainants, were all citizens of Vermont. Benjamin Butterworth, the Commissioner of Patents, took this appeal, and the only question presented under it for our consideration is whether the Circuit Court of the District of Vermont had jurisdiction so as to bind the Commissioner by the decree which was rendered.

It is contended that the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has exclusive jurisdiction of suits against the Commissioner brought under this section of the Revised Statutes. In the view we take of this case, however, that question need not be decided. By section 739 of the Revised Statutes, as well as by the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, § 1, 18 Stat. at L., 470, it is provided in substance that, with some exceptions which do not apply to this case, "No civil suit shall be brought before either of said courts (the Circuit or District Courts of the United States) against an inhabitant of th United States, by any original process, in an other district than that of which he is an i habitant, or in which he may be found at th time of serving the writ." We entertain n doubt that this statute applies to suits brougl under section 4915. The applicant is to hav his remedy under that section by bill in equit and by the adjudication "of the court havin cognizance thereof, on notice to adverse parti and other due proceedings had." A bill in equit implies a suit in equity, with process and pa ties. The prayer for process is one of the con ponent parts of the structure of a bill, and i purpose is to compel the defendant to appe and abide the determination of the court on th subject matter of the proceeding. Story's E Pl. § 44.

The bill in this case was filed against the Con missioner alone, and it does not appear that h was an inhabitant of the district of Vermon The Patent Office is in the Department of th Interior (Rev. Stat., § 475), which is one of th Executive Departments of the Government the seat of government in the District of Co umbia. Rev. Stat., § 437. The Commission of Patents is by law located in the Patent Offic Rev. Stat., § 476. His official residence therefore at Washington, in the District Columbia.

The subpœna in this case was delivered him in the District of Columbia, and his accep ance of service was made there. That is a parent from the face of his indorsement ar the letter which was written afterwards, ar filed in the cause, undoubtedly as proof of delivery of a copy of the bill which the law r quired should be served on him. Both the i dorsement and the letter purport to have be written at Washington, and the letter in th Patent Office. Unless, therefore, the acceptan of service as indorsed on the writ is to be treat as a voluntary appearance by the Commission in the court in Vermont, without objection the jurisdiction, the case stands as it would the process had been actually served on him the District of Columbia by some compete officer. The Circuit Court was of opinion th by his acceptance of service the Commission waived all objection to the jurisdiction and co sented to be sued away from the seat of gover ment and from his residence. In this we thi there was error. The fair meaning of the i dorsement on the writ is that the Commission admits the service with the same effect it wou have if made by an officer in the District of C lumbia. No appearance is thereby entered the cause. Service of the subpœna in the D trict is acknowledged, but nothing more. the letter which followed the indorsement service, both counsel and the court were i formed that the Commissioner declined to a pear. The parties proceeded, therefore, at th own risk and without the consent of the c fendant to the jurisdiction of the court. Su being the case, we are of opinion that the cou was without jurisdiction and had no authori to enter the decree which has been appeal from. The Act of Congress exempts a defer ant from suit in any district of which he is n an inhabitant, or in which he is not found the time of the service of the writ. It is an e emption which he may waive, but unless waiv [illegible] and not answer and will not be bound by [illegible] which may be done against him in [illegible]. What is here said of course does [illegible] apply to cases where the suit is brought [illegible] service is made under sections 736, 737, [illegible] of the Revised Statutes.

[illegible] considering any of the other ques[illegible] which have been presented in the argu[illegible], or which might be suggested under the [illegible] the decree of the Circuit Court [illegible] the cause, with instructions to dis[illegible] without prejudice for want of juris[illegible].

[illegible] Test:

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible]SAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILWAY COMPANY, Ptff. in Err.,

v.

[illegible] MILLER, Auditor of the STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

([illegible] Reporter's ed., 176–189.)

[illegible] law—impairing obligation of con[illegible]—exemption of property of, [illegible], a personal privilege which does [illegible] purchaser—rights of corporations [illegible] determined.

[illegible] from taxation of the property of [illegible] and Ohio Railroad Company, granted [illegible] the Legislature of West Virginia, of [illegible] incorporating said company, was a [illegible] to the corporation, which did not [illegible] purchaser of the property under fore[illegible].

[illegible] Act of the Legislature of West Virginia, [illegible] amended February 20, 1877, re[illegible] under trust deeds and mortgages [illegible] of the property of railroad or [illegible] improvement companies, provides [illegible] such sale and conveyance, the old [illegible] be dissolved, and that the purchaser [illegible] corporation and shall succeed "to all [illegible] rights and privileges * * * as [illegible] had * * * by the first com[illegible] such sale." Under this Act the new [illegible] any exemption or immunity from [illegible] belonged to the old company; the [illegible] all grants of corporate powers, [illegible] franchises and immunities sub[illegible] existing at the time of its creation. [illegible] from taxation is not a franchise. [illegible], bk. 24, affirmed.

[illegible]—franchises—power to mort[illegible] from taxation. See M. & L. R. R. [illegible], 123 U. S., 608, bk. 28, 837, note.

[illegible] can be made in favor of the ex[illegible] power to delegate or mortgage those [illegible] which do not pertain to the use of par[illegible] property. A grant of authority to a rail[illegible] company to mortgage its property and fran[illegible] only to such franchises as per[illegible] of the railroad; it would not enable [illegible] to mortgage the franchise of being [illegible] taxation in connection with its tan[illegible] property. Meeuwets on Corporations, § 924, [illegible] the above case of Chesapeake [illegible] v. Miller.

[illegible] Mayor v. Norwich, etc., R. R. Co., [illegible] Mayor v. Johnson, 53 Ala., 237; Coe [illegible] R. R. Co., 10 Ohio St., 372; Eldridge [illegible], Bank of Middlebury v. Edger[illegible] Cook v. Detroit, etc., R. R. Co., 43 [illegible] Pierce v. Emery, 32 N. H., 484, cited by [illegible] to power of corporations to transfer [illegible].

[illegible] from taxation, not implied. Tucker v. [illegible] U. S. (22 Wall.), bk. 22, 805, note.

4. The rights of a corporation are determined by the law in force when it came into being.

[No. 203.]

Argued Mar. 18, 19, 1885. Decided Apr. 6, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia.

The bill in this case was filed in the Circuit Court of Ohio County, West Virginia, by the plaintiff in error, for an injunction to restrain the collection of certain taxes alleged to be illegal. The court found for the complainant and entered a decree in accordance with the prayer of the bill.

This decree having been reversed, on appeal, by the court below, the complainant sued out this writ of error.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Geo. F. Edmunds, Willliam J. Robertson, William H. Hogeman and James H. Ferguson, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Cornelius C. Watts, Atty-Gen. of West Virginia, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court: [177]

This writ of error brings into review a final decree of the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia dismissing the bill of complaint filed by the plaintiff in error, the error assigned being that that court gave effect to a statute of the State alleged to be void, on the ground that it impaired the obligation of a contract between the plaintiff in error and the State of West Virginia.

The statute thus drawn in question is an Act of the Legislature of West Virginia, passed March 7, 1879, subjecting the property of the plaintiff in error in that State to taxation.

The contract alleged to be thus broken by the State is one of exemption from taxation, contained in the 7th section of an Act of the Legislature of West Virginia, passed March 1, 1866, entitled "An Act to Incorporate the Covington and Ohio Railroad Company," and is in the following words:

"7. The rate of charge by said company for passengers and freight transported on the main line and branches of said railroad shall never exceed the highest allowed by law to other railroads in the State, and no discrimination shall be made in such charges against any connecting railroad or canal company chartered by the State, and no taxation upon the property of the said company shall be imposed by the State until the profits of said company shall amount to ten per cent on the capital of the company." [178]

The plaintiff in error, complainant below, alleging that it was entitled to the benefit of this exemption by way of contract with the State, and that no profits had been made by it upon its capital, prayed for an injunction to restrain the appellee, the auditor of West Virginia, from proceeding under the Act of March 7, 1879, to assess and collect any tax upon its property within the State.

The plaintiff in error became a party to the contract contained in the Act of March 1, 1866, to incorporate the Covington and Ohio Railroad Company, in the following manner: This Act was similar in its terms to one passed about the same date by the General Assembly of the State of Virginia. Both had in view the completion of a railroad from Covington, in Virginia, to some point on the Ohio River, the construction of which had been undertaken by the State of Virginia as a public work by its own means, but which was suspended, after an expenditure of several millions of dollars, in consequence of the breaking out of the civil war in 1861. A portion of it was within the territory that became West Virginia, and thenceforward that part of the work fell within the jurisdiction and ownership of the new State. To provide for its completion was the object of the Act of March 1, 1866, to incorporate the Covington and Ohio Railroad Company. That Act did not, by its terms, create a corporation, but authorized a future organization under it. It ceded to the company, when constituted and certified as thereinafter provided, "all the rights, interest and privileges, of whatsoever kind, in and to the Covington and Ohio Railroad and appurtenances thereunto belonging, now the property of the State of West Virginia, upon condition that it shall within six months after its incorporation, as provided in the 10th section of the Act, commence, and within six years complete, equip and operate a railroad," etc., as therein described; and a failure to comply with this condition operated to forfeit the title to the road, which should then revert to the State.

The Act also appointed commissioners on the part of the State to act in conjunction with [179] others appointed by the State of Virginia, whose duty it was to offer the benefits of the charter "for the acceptance of capitalists, so as to secure the speediest and best construction, equipment and operation of said railroad." "To this end," it added, "they are empowered to make a contract with any parties who shall give the best terms and the most satisfactory assurances of capacity and responsibility, and to introduce into said contract any additional stipulations for the benefit of the State and in furtherance of the purposes herein declared and not inconsistent with this Act, which contract shall be, to all intents and purposes, as much a part of this charter as if the same had been herein included at the time of the passage of this Act." The certificate of these commissioners of the due execution of such a contract, and the organization of the company, should operate to confer upon said company all the benefits of this charter, subject only to the provisions of the Code of Virginia for the government of internal improvement companies, so far as not inconsistent with that Act.

On February 26, 1867, the Legislature of West Virginia passed an Act to provide for the completion of a line or lines of railroad from the waters of the Chesapeake to the Ohio River, which authorized the consolidation of the Covington and Ohio Railroad Company, when organized under the Act of March 1, 1866, with one or more of several other railroad companies, including the West Virginia Central Railway Company; the consolidated company to be known as the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, and to be vested with "All the rights, privileges, franchises and property which may have been vested in either company prior to the Act of consolidation." It was also thereby provided that the Virginia Central Railroad Company and the West Virginia Central Railway Company, or either them, "may contract with the Covington a Ohio Railroad Commissioners for the constru tion of the railroad from Covington to the Oh River, and in the event such contract be mad the said Virginia Central Railroad Compan or the West Virginia Central Railway Co pany, shall be known as the Chesapeake a Ohio Railroad Company, and shall be entitl to all the benefits of the charter of the Covin ton and Ohio Railroad, and to all the righ interests and privileges which by this Act a conferred upon the Chesapeake and Ohio Ra road Company when organized."

Accordingly, on August 31, 1868, the Co missioners of Virginia and of West Virginia e tered into a contract with the Virginia Centr Railroad Company by which the Chesapea and Ohio Railroad Company was formed a under which it was organized, and the sa was approved, ratified and confirmed by an A of the Legislature of West Virginia, "Confir ing and amending the charter of the Chesapea and Ohio Railroad Company, passed Janua 26, 1870." Among other things, it was the in provided that the Company might borr such sums of money, at a rate of interest n exceeding eight per cent per annum, as mig be necessary, in addition to the funds arisi from stock subscriptions, for the completion the road, and should have power to execute lien on its property and resources to secure t payment of the principal and interest of su loans; and the Chesapeake and Ohio Railro Company was thereby declared to be entitl to all the benefits of the charter of the Covin ton and Ohio Railroad, and to all the righ interests, benefits and privileges, and be subj to all the duties and responsibilities provid and declared in the said contract and in t statutes therein referred to.

In pursuance of these powers, the Chesapea and Ohio Railroad Company completed t contemplated line of railroad and put the sa in operation, not indeed, strictly within t time limited in the charter, but the forfeitu thereby incurred was released by an Act of t Legislature of West Virginia passed Februa 20, 1877.

In the meantime, to raise the funds necessa to complete the construction and equipment the road, a large amount of bonds had been sued by the Company, secured by several dee of trust, the particulars of which are fully out in the bill; and default in the payment interest having occurred, due proceedings the foreclosure and sale of the property e braced in the deeds of trust were prosecuted final decrees in the courts of Virginia and W Virginia; so that, in the latter, all of the railro and other property situate in that State w brought to sale under a decree of the Circ Court of the County of Kanawha, in West V ginia, rendered on December 18, 1877, a were sold and conveyed to the purchasers, w in pursuance of the statute then in force ap cable thereto, became a corporation under t name of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railw Company, the plaintiff in error in these p ceedings.

The statute under which these proceedi took place was an Act of the Legislature West Virginia passed February 18, 1871, rel ing to sales made under deeds of trust or mortgages by railroads or other internal improvement companies in that State, as amended by an Act passed February 20, 1877, extending its provisions to judicial sales.

It was provided by these Acts that "if a sale be made under a deed of trust or mortgage executed by a railroad or other internal improvement company in this State, on all its works and property, and there be a conveyance pursuant thereto, such sale and conveyance shall pass to the purchaser at the sale, not only the works and property of the company, as they were at the time of making the deed of trust or mortgage, but any works which the company may after that time and before the sale, have constructed, and all other property of which it may be possessed at the time of the sale, other than debts due to it. Upon such conveyance to the purchaser, the said company shall ipso facto be dissolved. And the said purchaser shall forthwith be a corporation by any name which may be set forth in said conveyance, or in any writing signed by him or them, and recorded in the recorder's office of any county wherein the property so sold, or any part thereof, is situated, or where said conveyance is recorded. . .

"The corporation created by or in consequence of such sale and conveyance shall succeed to all such franchises, rights and privileges and perform all such duties as would have been had, or should have been performed by the first company, but for such sale and conveyance save only that the corporation so created shall not be entitled to debts due to the first company, and shall not be liable for any debts of, or claims against, the said first company which may not be expressly assumed in the contract of purchase; and that the whole profits of the business done by such corporation shall belong to the said purchaser and his assigns. His interest in the corporation shall be personal estate, and he, or his assigns, may create as many shares of stock therein as he or they may think proper, not exceeding, together, the amount of stock in the first company at the time of the sale, and assign the same in a book kept for that purpose. The said shares shall thereupon be on the footing of shares in joint stock companies generally, except only that the first meeting of the stockholders shall be held at such day and at such place as shall be fixed by the said purchaser, of which notice shall be published for four successive weeks in a newspaper published in each county in the State where said corporation may do business."

These provisions are copied from the Code of Virginia of 1860, chap. 61, §§ 26, 29 and 31. The circumstance is material to the case, as urged by the plaintiff in error, in view of the provision of the first section of the Act of the Legislature of West Virginia of March 1, 1866, incorporating the Covington and Ohio Railroad Company, which provided for its future organization as a corporation, "according to the provisions of the Code of Virginia, second edition, for the government of incorporated companies." It remains to be added that the Legislature of West Virginia passed an Act on January 8, 1879, to amend section 7 of the Act to incorporate the Covington and Ohio Railroad Company, so as to exempt from it altogether the clause containing the exemption from taxation. Chap. 5, West Va. Acts, 1879.

That the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, by virtue of its organization as a corporation under the Act of March 1, 1866, became entitled to the exemption from taxation secured by the 7th section of that Act, and that as a matter of contract, is not denied or disputed. Whether the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company succeeded to that right and immunity, is the question to be determined.

It is quite clear that, as a contract originally entered into between the State of West Virginia and the stockholders who organized the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, under the Act of March 1, 1866, it was personal to that Corporation, and intended to benefit those who should be induced to subscribe to its stock. Every circumstance that is referred to for the the purpose of proving its nature as a contract, such as, that the State had already sunk a large amount of money in an incomplete and therefore unprofitable public work, that it was very desirous to induce private capitalists to finish its construction, and to that end was willing to cede to them the property itself, and the franchises of a railroad connected with it; and, by way of further inducement, to exonerate the property in their hands from all burdens of taxation until the investment yielded a profit equal to ten per cent upon the capital invested; also prove that the only persons in contemplation as beneficiaries of these privileges and immunities were those who were willing to risk their money in an enterprise the future success of which could only be regarded as doubtful. The contract was not for the benefit of those who should become creditors of the Company, further than the fact that the property of the Company was itself exempted from the charge of taxation would enhance its credit by securing to mortgage bondholders a lien which could not be subordinated by the State. It was not made with the creditors of the Company, nor was it conferred as a franchise inhering in the property itself, so as to pass by way of incumbrance or assignment to mortgagees or purchasers. The language of the clause which contains the exemption is explicit. It is, that "No taxation upon the property of the said Company shall be imposed by the State until the profits of the said Company shall amount to ten per cent on the capital of the Company." But one company is spoken of, and that is the company to be incorporated under the Act. The property to be exempt is the property of that company and of no other, and while it continues to be the property of that company and no longer. And the exemption is to cease when the profits of that particular company have reached the limit designated, and that limit is measured by a ratable proportion fixed with reference to the capital to be subscribed to form that company and no other. And there are no words of assignability attached, either expressly or by any implication, to this immunity. The reasons for considering such an exemption to be a privilege pertaining to the corporation, and not inhering in the property, and passing to an assignee, were fully stated by Mr. Justice Field in delivering the opinion of the court in the case of Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U.

[183]

[184]

S., 217 [bk. 23, L. ed. 860], and have been uniformly applied to similar cases subsequently. Wilson v. Gaines, 103 U. S. 417 [bk. 26, L. ed. 401]; Louisville & Nashville R R. Co. v. Palmes, 109 U. S. 244 [bk. 27, L. ed. 922]; Memphis & Little Rock R. R. Co. v. R. R. Comrs., 112 U. S., 609 [bk. 28, L. ed. 837]; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. R. R. Comrs., 118 U.S. 465, [bk. 28, L. ed. 1055]. And the circumstances of the case distinguish it from that of Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall., 244 [83 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 826].

There is no claim made that the exemption passed to the trustees in the trust deeds or mortgages given to secure the payment of the bonds of the Company; and none can be made that it passed to the purchasers by the judicial sale made under the decree for foreclosure and sale, by force of the statute declaring what such a sale should pass. The language of the Act upon this subject is, that "such sale and conveyance shall pass to the purchaser at the sale, not only the works and property of the company, as they were at the time of making the deed of trust or mortgage, but any works which the company may, after that time and before the sale, have constructed and all other property of which it may be possessed at the time of the sale, other than debts due to it." So far, nothing is said of what rights, privileges, franchises and immunities shall vest in the purchaser in respect to the property, the title to which is thus conveyed. The Act, however, proceeds to say, that "upon such conveyance to the purchaser, the said company shall ipso facto be dissolved." From this it necessarily follows that all privileges, which by the terms of its charter were personal to it, ceased with its dissolution. But the statute adds: "And the said purchaser shall forthwith be a corporation by any name which may be set forth in said conveyance, or in any writing signed by him or them and recorded in the recorder's office of any county wherein the property, so sold or any part thereof, is situated, or where said conveyance is recorded." Thus is formed a new [185] corporate body, succeeding to the title of the property sold and conveyed to it, but deriving its existence from this law and not from the original Act of incorporation, which constituted the charter of its predecessor, and with such powers, rights, privileges, franchises and immunities only as are conferred upon it by the law which has brought it into being.

These are defined in the next succeeding section. So far as material to the question its language is: "The corporation created by or in consequence of such sale and conveyance shall succeed to all such franchises, rights and privileges, and perform all such duties as would have been had, or should have been performed by the first company, but for such sale and conveyance," etc.

It is earnestly contended, on behalf of the plaintiff in error, that by virtue of this language, it is entitled to enjoy the property formerly belonging to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, its predecessor, precisely as though it had been incorporated under the charter of that company, and therefore with the exemption from taxation which was conceded to that company. But, broad, general and comprehensive as the language is, we cannot, in reference to the subject-matter now i hand, apply it with that force and meaning The words used are, it will be observed, "fran chises, rights and privileges," * * * "a would have been had," * * * "by the firs company, but for such sale," etc. There is n express reference to a grant of any exemptio or immunity; nothing is said in relation to th subject of taxation. The words actually use do not necessarily embrace a grant of such a exemption. As was said, on this point, in Mor gan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 217-223 [bk. 23, L. ed 860, 862]: "Much confusion of thought ha arisen in this case and in similar cases from a taching a vague and undefined meaning to th term 'franchise.' It is often used as synony mous with rights, privileges and immunitie though of a personal and temporary characte so that, if any one of these exists, it is loosel termed a 'franchise,' and is supposed to pas upon a transfer of the franchises of the con pany. But the term must always be consic ered in connection with the corporation or pro erty to which it is alleged to appertain. Th franchises of a railroad corporation are righ or privileges which are essential to the oper tions of the corporation, and without which i road and works would be of little value; suc as the franchise to run cars, to take tolls, to a propriate earth and gravel for the bed of i road, or water for its engines, and the lik They are positive rights or privileges, witho the possession of which the road of the con pany could not be successfully worked. In munity from taxation is not one of them. Th former may be conveyed to a purchaser of th road as a part of the property of the compan the latter is personal and incapable of transf without express statutory direction."

Here, there is no such express statutory d rection. Nor is there an equivalent implicatic by necessary construction. There is nothing the language itself, nor the context, nor the su ject-matter of the legislation, nor the situatic and relation of the parties to be affected, whic indicates that a grant of an exemption from ta ation to a particular railroad corporation, or a class of such, was in the contemplation of th Legislature. The subject-matter of this legisl tion was not the original construction of ra roads, but the operation of railroads alrea constructed. The State was not in the attitu of a contractor, soliciting subscriptions of ca ital, in the formation of companies to unde take the risk of public improvements, for th benefit of the State, with the hazard of loss a perhaps financial ruin to the first promote and offering exemptions from taxation as a co sideration, by way of contract, for the acce ance of its proposals. It was legislating in r erence to enterprises already undertaken, pro cuted and completed by companies original thus incorporated, and who, by reason of i solvency, had been stripped of their proper by creditors and sentenced by the law to d solution; and the purpose of the statute w simply to provide suitable means of incorpor ing the purchasers, to facilitate their use of th property, in operating it for the benefit of th public, as designed from the beginning. The purchasers had not bought the immunity no demanded either from the State or the pri possessor. The contract of the creditors wou [illegible] not, on failure of payment of the stipulated debt, by subjecting to sale the property [illegible] for its payment, with such rights, [illegible] and privileges only as were necessary for its beneficial use and enjoyment. The [illegible] from taxation, as we have already [illegible] not necessarily included in that description. The debtor corporation, and its creditors combined, could not confer upon the purchaser any rights which were not assignable; [illegible] as no consideration moved to the State for [illegible] of the grant, there is no motive for [illegible] by mere construction and implication, [illegible] the words of the law have failed to express. That certainly is not a reasonable interpretation for which no sufficient reason can be assigned.

We conclude, therefore, that the Act from [illegible] plaintiff in error derives its corporate existence and powers in West Virginia does [illegible] a renewal of the grant by exemption from taxation, which, in the 7th section of the Act of March 1, 1866, applied to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company.

[illegible] otherwise, so that we should be compelled to hold that the language of the Act of West Virginia of February 18, 1871, as amended by that of February 20, 1877, had the effect of a grant to the plaintiff in error of the exemption of taxation vested by the 7th section of the Act of March 1, 1866 in the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, nevertheless we are [illegible] compelled also to hold on distinct grounds that the exemption thus conferred did not [illegible] effect as a contract, protected from [illegible] by the Constitution of the United States. [illegible] the supposition now made, it would still [illegible] that all the rights of the plaintiff in error as a Corporation, other than the title to [illegible] property it acquired by the judicial sale, [illegible] their origin in and depended upon the Acts of 1871, 1877, under and by which it was [illegible] a Corporation. It can, in no sense, be [illegible] as the identical corporate body of [illegible] it became the successor, merely discharged by a process of insolvency from further liability for past debts, which is the view [illegible] upon us in argument by counsel for [illegible] in error. The language of the statutes [illegible] contradicts this assumption. The [illegible] in terms is dissolved. The purchasers are as explicitly declared to become a [illegible], and its corporate powers are conferred by reference to those which had been [illegible] to their predecessors. The language of [illegible] the reason involved in its provisions [illegible] the precedents of cases heretofore decided [illegible] forecloses further controversy on [illegible] Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S., 319 [bk. [illegible] ed. 337]; R. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S., 499 [illegible] ed. [illegible]]; R. R. Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S., [illegible] L. ed. 185]; R. R. Co. v. Palmes, [illegible] U. S. 344 [bk. 27, L. ed. 922].

[illegible] being the case, all grants of corporate [illegible], rights, privileges, franchises and immunities are taken subject to existing laws, remaining unrepealed. At the time the plaintiff [illegible] became a Corporation, chap. 53, § 8, of the Code of West Virginia of 1868, which took effect April 1, 1869, was in force, and has never been repealed. It enacted, among other things, as follows: "And the right is hereby reserved to the Legislature to alter any charter or certificate of incorporation hereafter granted to a joint stock company, and to alter or repeal any law applicable to such company." The Constitution of the State of West Virginia of 1863, art. 11, § 5, also provides as follows:

"5. The Legislature shall pass general laws whereby any number of persons associated for mining, manufacturing, insuring, or other purpose useful to the public, excepting banks of circulation and the construction of works of internal improvement, may become a corporation, on complying with the terms and conditions thereby described; and no special Act incorporating or granting peculiar privileges to any joint stock company or association, not having in view the issuing of bills to circulate as money or the construction of some work of internal improvement, shall be passed. No company or association, authorized by this section, shall issue bills to circulate as money. No charter of incorporation shall be granted under such general laws, unless the right be reserved to alter or amend such charter at the pleasure of the Legislature, to be declared by general laws. No Act to incorporate any bank of circulation or internal improvement company, or to confer additional privileges on the same, shall be passed, unless public notice of the intended application for such Act be given under such regulations as shall be prescribed by law." [189]

The incorporation of the plaintiff in error comes within the provisions, both of the Constitution and of the Code of 1868. Its charter is the law of 1871 as amended by that of 1877. Its certificate of incorporation is the conveyance to it, by the name it has chosen, as a purchaser at the judicial sale, or set forth in some writing signed by such purchaser, and recorded as required. It is a charter granted under a general law, which the Constitution declares to be subject to legislative alteration and amendment. The laws subjecting its property to taxation, and which form the subject of the present controversy, are but the exercise of that legislative discretion, which, as it became the law of the contract itself, cannot be complained of as a breach of the contract.

The conclusion is not weakened by the suggestion that the rights of the plaintiff in error originate in the provisions of the Code of Virginia, referred to in the Act of March 1, 1866, incorporating the Covington and Ohio Railroad Company, and of which the Acts of 1871, 1877 are re-enactments. For even then they would not antedate the provision of the Constitution of 1863, nor avoid the effect of the reasoning of this court in case of St. Louis, I. M. and S. R. Co. v. R. R. Comrs. 118 U. S., 465 [bk. 28, L. ed. 1055]. The rights of the plaintiff in error, as a Corporation, are determined by the law in force when it came into being, although there is no ground on which it can be contended that there was any legislative contract in the Act of March 1, 1866, for the further creation of any corporation in favor of possible purchasers at judicial sales under decrees of foreclosure of deeds of trust or mortgages.

In either view the result is the same, and for the reasons given the decree of the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—114 U. S., 396.

CHARLES R. BISSELL, Appt.,

[252] v.

SIMON H. FOSS et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 252-262.)

Mining partnerships—bill against copartners to enforce claim for share of benefit of purchase of interest of other copartners.

1. There is no relation of trust or confidence between mining partners which is violated by the sale and assignment by one partner, of his share in the property and business, to a stranger or to one of the associates, without consulting the other.
2. A mining partner or cotenant is not entitled to share in the purchase by his copartner or cotenants of the share of another, in the absence of an express contract that the purchase should be for the benefit of all.
3. It does not lie in the mouth of one who seeks to share in the fruits of a contract, to complain that it was fraudulently procured.

[No. 103.]

Argued Mar. 11, 12, 1885. Decided Apr. 6, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado.

The history and facts appear in the Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Woods:

[253] This was a suit in equity. The facts as they appeared by the pleadings and evidence were as follows: In January, 1878, two miners named Davidson and Van Boxall located a mining claim near Leadville, Colorado, which they called the Winnemuck. In March following they jointly conveyed to the appellant Bissell and to the appellees Foss and Hunter, each a one-fourth interest in the property in consideration of their agreement to furnish money to sink a shaft to the ores on the claim. These parties worked the mine as mining partners until July, 1878, when Davidson and Boxall, with the consent of their associates, sold their one fourth to three persons, Rawlings, Handley and Robertson, called in the record "The Missourians," who with Bissell, Foss and Hunter continued the working of the mine.

Tabor and Reische, who owned and worked a mine adjoining the Winnemuck, on an alleged title not necessary to state, claimed the ore from the Winnemuck mine, and instituted, from time to time, attachment proceedings by which they seized the ore as it was taken from the mine. The associates who were working the Winnemuck mine procured the release of the ore by giving forthcoming bonds, with one Halleck as security, who signed the bonds on condition that the money arising from the sale of the ore should be placed and kept in bank as an indemnity to him until the ownership of the ore could be settled. On this understanding the proceeds of the sale of the ore were deposited in the Miners' Exchange Bank of Leadville.

In August or September, 1878, the owners of the Winnemuck—Bissell, Foss, Hunter, and the Missourians—having received, from the sale of ore, money more than sufficient to indemnify Halleck, with the surplus bought and paid for an interest in the New Discovery Lode. About October 1, 1878, they had on deposit to their credit in the bank $16,000, and Halleck was bound for them to the amount of $12,000.

In the latter part of September the Missourians offered for sale their one-fourth interest i the mines. Bissell and Foss were anxious le the interest of the Missourians should fall int the hands of Tabor and Reische, who migh thereby gain some advantage in their suits the pending. They had a conversation in refe ence to the purchase of the interest of the Mi sourians. They differ in their account of th conversation. It is thus detailed by Bissell:

"Along about the 30th day of September Mr Foss came to my room and stated that the Mi sourians, as we termed them, were wanting t sell their quarter interest in the propert and had offered it for $30,000, and he said tha he thought we had better go in and buy it. said to him that it was all well enough to bu it if they wanted to sell, but that I was conf dent that I could get it at better figures. I said 'I am almost certain, Mr. Foss, that I can bu it for less; let me manage it and I think I ca buy it for $15,000,' and went on to say what would say to them concerning all the troubl and suits in the case. He said, 'Very well, i you can get it for that, so much the better.' I was an agreement and understanding betwee us that if we could get it for $15,000 we wer to take it."

He further stated in reference to the same in terview—

"We sat down there and made figures to se if we could pay for it out of the money belong ing to the company in bank; and the result o our figuring was that we couldn't do it to th full extent; that we could pay a portion of i from that money; and the balance outside, eac of us raise our share."

In answer to the question who were to hav the interests in the quarter to be purchased o the Missourians, he said: "They were to go be tween us three, Trimble and Hunter, Foss an myself. Mr. Trimble and Hunter's were inte ests together; they owned jointly that quarte interest, so I was informed by Mr. Trimble an Mr. Hunter."

Foss gave the following account of his inte views with Bissell in reference to their projec to buy out the Missourians:

"I met Dr. Bissell over Tribe & Jeffrey' store, in Leadville, and we talked the purchas over. I told him that the boys wanted to ge out bad, and I thought they would sell prett reasonable; but that as I was working abou there managing the mine, he could do bette than I could. I said he had mentioned to u one night on the street, $30,000 as a price, bu that we wouldn't agree to for a moment. W wondered how we could do about the mone for the purchase. If we could use the compan money we thought we must use a little, mor than our joint interest. Bissell was to see th boys in regard to it."

In answer to the question "What was sai about the price?" he replied: "We talked th amount; $20,000 was spoken of. He thougl that was too high and more than we shoul give. I thought so, too; but $30,000 was th price fixed by them. That I wouldn't think c for a moment. We figured it over, but I don remember the exact figures, and we conclude that at $15,000 we could pay for it, in case w could draw out the money in the Exchang Bank. Dr. Bissell thought it could be bougl for less than $10,000. There was no prop [illegible] made for any definite price; but if we [illegible] buy the property we were to buy it together. He was to see what was the best he [illegible] to with it."

He was then asked to state "whether there was up to the time you concluded the trade with Handley, any agreement with Dr. Bissell as to what he should buy that property for [illegible]" to which he replied, "No, sir."

After these conversations between Bissell and Foss, Foss and Hunter, early in October, 1878, [illegible] of the Missourians for $15,000 their [illegible] in the Wisconsinuck and New Discovery [illegible] and in the money of the associates on [illegible] in the Exchange Bank. The purchase was made in the name of Foss; but it was agreed between him and Hunter that Hunter was to have two thirds and Foss one third of the claim. The money to pay for the share was advanced by Hunter, Foss agreeing to repay Hunter the one third. In order to induce the Missourians to sell at $15,000, Hunter [illegible] to them that he was willing to sell his [illegible] to Foss for that sum, and actually made a [illegible] sale and conveyance to Foss at that price.

Bissell was not informed of the negotiations for the sale and purchase while they were going on, and Foss requested Handley, the one of the Missourians with whom he treated for the purchase, not to tell Bissell of the sale.

After the purchase was completed Foss denied the right of Bissell to a one-third share of the interest sold by the Missourians.

Matters thus remained until November 16, 1878, when the Tabor party on the one side, and Foss, Bissell and Hunter on the other, joined in a conveyance of their interests to B. M. Hughes, as trustee, to hold seventy-three out of one hundred equal shares for the Tabor party, and twenty-seven for Bissell, Foss and Hunter; and by agreement the mines were to be worked and the moneys made deposited in the First National Bank of Denver, one of the appellees, and subject to the two parties in the proportions above stated. On April 2, 1879, there was a deposit in the bank to the credit of Foss, Bissell and Hunter, $32,502.58. It was in reference to the division of this fund that this litigation arose.

If there had been no purchase of the interest of the Missourians, Bissell, Foss and Hunter would each have owned three twelfths of this fund. But Bissell, insisting that he was entitled to a one third of the one-fourth interest [illegible] of the Missourians, claimed four twelfths. Foss and Hunter, insisting that Bissell had no interest in the share purchased of the Missourians, contended that he was only entitled to have twelfths of the fund and they [illegible] nine twelfths.

Thereupon Foss and Hunter, on April 26, 1879, brought the present suit in equity against the First National Bank of Denver as the depositary and against Bissell as the adverse claimant, to recover nine twelfths of the fund. The bank answered the bill and at the same time filed a cross-bill in which it alleged that it was merely a stakeholder claiming no interest in the fund, and praying that Foss, Hunter and Bissell might be required to interplead. Bissell answered both the original and cross-bill, claiming four twelfths of the fund.

The sum in dispute between the parties seems to have increased after the filing of the original bill, and before final decree amounted to $36,454.35. This sum, by agreement of the parties, was deposited in the registry of the court, and they stipulated that the decision of the court should settle their rights, not only to the fund claimed in the original bill, but to the whole amount in the registry of the court. [257]

On final hearing the circuit court decreed "that Foss and Hunter were entitled to the $36,454.35 in controversy in the registry of the court, and that it be paid to them." From this decree Bissell appealed.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, L. C. Rockwell and H. M. Teller, for appellant:

"Tenants in common are placed in a confidential relation to each other as to the joint property; and the same duties are imposed as if a joint trust were created by contract between them, or the act of a third person."

Tisdale v. Tisdale, 2 Sneed, 597.

Cases are numerous and the doctrine is undisputed that if one of several tenants in common purchase an outstanding title it will inure to the benefit of all.

Lloyd v. Lynch, 28 Pa. St., 419; Jones v. Stanton, 11 Mo., 433; Weaver v. Wibel, 25 Pa. St., 270; Picot v. Page, 26 Mo., 398; VanHorne v. Fonda, 5 Johns. Ch., 406; Downer v. Smith, 38 Vt., 464; Halsey v. Blood, 29 Pa. St., 319. See also Freem. Co-Ten. & Par. § 151; King v. Wise, 43 Cal., 628; Clark v. Cantwell, 3 Head., 202; Gibson v. Winslow, 46 Pa. St., 380; Brittin v. Handy, 10 Ark., 381.

"An agent or trustee undertaking a special business for another, cannot, on the subject of the trust, act for his own benefit to the injury of his principal."

Dodd v. Wakeman, 26 N. J. Eq., 484; Parkist v. Alexander, 1 Johns. Ch., 396; Condit v. Blackwell, 7 C. E. Green, 486; Story, Eq., § 315.

Under the celebrated classification of fraud by Lord Hardwicke in Chesterfield v. Janssen, 1 Atk., 301; 2 Ves., 125; 1 Lead. Cas., in Eq., 428, this case, aside from the agreement and promise, falls within the third class—fraud presumed from the circumstances and condition of the parties contracting.

In this class of frauds the general rule is that relief will be afforded in equity in all transactions, in the language of Lord Kingsdowne (Smith v. Kay, 7 H. of L. Cas., 750), "in which influence has been acquired and abused; in which confidence has been reposed and betrayed."

See also Bispham's Eq., § 232, p., 292; 1 Pom., Eq. § 155; Story, Eq. Jur., 258, 259, 1265; Perry, Trusts, § 170; Fox v. Macreath, 1 L. C. in Eq., part 1, 4th Am. ed., 260, 261 note; Keech v. Sandford, 1 L. C. in Eq., part 1, 4th Am. ed., 48, 62-63; Henricks v. Nunn, 46 Tex., 141; 2 White & Tudor's L. C. in Eq., part 1, 549; Morey v. Herrick, 18 Pa. St., 123; Stewart v. Brown, 2 S. & R., 461; Brown v. Dysinger, 1 Rawle, 408; Kisler v. Kisler, 2 Watts, 323; Thompson's Lessee v. White, 1 Dall., 424.

Messrs. David P. Dyer and James O. Broadhead, for appellees:

The opinion of the court below (4 Fed. Rep., 694) is supported by abundant authority.

Holmes v. Holmes, 44 Ill., 168; Remington v. Campbell, 60 Ill., 516; Goodwin v. Richardson, 11 Mass., 469; Wheatley v. Calhoun 12 Leigh, 264; Livermore v. Aldrich, 5 Cush., 431; Olcott v Bynum, 17 Wall., 51 (84 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 570); 4 Kent, Com., 337.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

[257] It is clear that the appellant had no claim to the fund in controversy unless he had some title, legal or equitable, to the property which produced it. But he was not a party to the purchase of the property by Foss and Hunter. The Missourians, who owned the property, never bargained with Bissell to sell him any interest in their share, and never conveyed to him any interest in it. They contracted with Foss and Hunter only. Bissell never paid any part of the purchase money. It was paid exclusively by Foss and Hunter. His title, if he has any, is not based on any contract of purchase made with the Missourians nor on any contract or understanding between him and Hunter. He bases his claim on the conversation and agreement between himself and Foss. This agreement, as stated by Bissell, was that Bissell and Foss should buy out the Missourians, for the benefit of themselves and Hunter, and divide the share equally between the three, and that each should pay one third of the purchase money. According to Bissell's own version the arrangement was based on the expectation that a large part of the purchase money could be paid out of the deposit of the parties in the bank. But the evidence shows that the money which they were at liberty to draw from the bank would pay less than one third of the price at which the purchase was made. Foss testifies that all his individual resources consisted of a small grocery store not paying much, and that he "was just living in the hope of beating Tabor."

Looking at all the testimony it is impossible to reach the conclusion—unless we disregard altogether the evidence of Foss and rely entirely on that of Bissell—that there was any well defined agreement between them to buy out the Missourians at a specified price, or that the two had available resources to make the purchase.

[258] Nothing but an arrangement left at loose ends can be deduced from the evidence. But if the agreement had been clear and definite it could bind neither Foss nor Bissell until Hunter was consulted and agreed to it. If Hunter declined, the matter was at an end and there was no obligation on either Foss or Bissell to purchase for themselves or for themselves and Hunter.

The record shows—and counsel for Bissell contend—that Foss told Hunter about the arrangement in reference to the purchase, between himself and Bissell. There is no proof that Hunter assented to the arrangement made between Foss and Bissell. It is clear that he did not assent, for he made a different arrangement with Foss, by which he was to purchase and pay for two thirds of the share of the Missourians, and Foss the other third, and by which he was to advance all the money to make the purchase, leaving the funds of the associates on deposit in the Miners' Exchange Bank untouched. It is plain, therefore, that the project of Foss and Bissell for the purchase for the joint benefit of themselves and Hunter, of the share of the Missourians fell through. could not be carried out without the assent Hunter, and he did not assent.

To show the fraudulent conduct of Foss a Hunter stress is laid, by counsel for the app lant, on the fact that they deceived the Missou ans by the pretense that Hunter was willing sell and that he did actually sell his one fou to Foss for $15,000, and thus induced them sell at the same price. But as the Missouri were the only persons injured by this strateg if any one was injured, and they do not co plain, we do not see how it concerns the app lant. The device by which Foss and Hun made the purchase at $15,000 did not add to detract from the rights of the appellant. A as he is seeking to get the benefit of the contr thus fraudulently made, as he alleges, it does lie in his mouth to complain of a fraud of whi he is seeking to share the fruits.

Bissell had no ground upon which he co base any contract right to an interest in purchase made by Foss for himself and Hunt He paid no money on the purchase and could not have been compelled to pay a either by the Missourians with whom he h no contract, or by Foss, who, after Hunter h declined to acquiesce in the arrangement tween Bissell and himself, could not have manded of Bissell that he and Foss should b for themselves. And if Foss had actua bought for himself and Bissell he could have compelled the latter to pay his h of the purchase money, for Bissell had ne agreed to such a purchase. The agreem could not bind Foss unless it also bound Biss Bissell, therefore, did not by reason of his agr ment with Foss, acquire any interest in share purchased by Foss and Hunter of Missourians.

But the appellant insists that there wa mutual agreement between Bissell and Foss t if either made the purchase it should be the benefit of all; that this agreement, althou not amounting to a contract which could specifically enforced if it had been made w a stranger, created between parties who s tained to each other the confidential trust re tions which existed between these parties constructive trust which would be enforced equity.

The contention is that these three part were in such relations to each other that one bought a share in the common prope and business it inured in equity to the ben of all, subject to the payment, by each of associates, of his share of the purchase mon The relations from which this result springs stated to be those, first, of joint tenants, a second, of partners; and that, by reason of th relations, Foss and Hunter became trustees themselves and Bissell in purchasing the sh of the Missourians.

It is true that one or two or more tenants common, holding by a common title, can purchase an outstanding title or incumbra upon the joint estate for his own benefit. S a purchase inures to the benefit of all, beca there is an obligation between them result from their joint claim and community of in est, that one of them shall not affect the cl to the prejudice of the others. Rothwell Dewees, 2 Black, 613 [67 U. S., bk. 17, L.

[illegible] Van Horn v. Fonda, 5 Johns. Ch., 388; [illegible] v. Lynch, 28 Pa. St., 419; Downer v. [illegible], 28 Vt., 464.

But this rule cannot apply to Hunter and Foss. They purchased no outstanding title or [illegible], to the prejudice of the other tenant in common. They did what any tenant in common with entire good faith might do, namely, purchased the interest of some of their co-[illegible] without consulting the others. The title which they purchased of the Missourians was not antagonistic or hostile to the title of Bissell. Their purchase did not in any degree [illegible] to injure or damage his interest. His share was just as valuable after as before the purchase and his rights were the same. In such a [illegible] no trust or confidence is violated.

Nor do we think that the relations of the parties as partners prohibited Foss and Hunter from making the purchase in question for their own benefit to the exclusion of Bissell. The association of Bissell, Foss, Hunter and the Missourians was not an ordinary partnership. It was what is known as a mining partnership, which is a partnership sub modo only, and is thus described by Mr. Justice Field in Kahn v. [illegible] Co., 103 U. S., 641 [bk. 26, L. ed., 266].

"Mining partnerships, as distinct associations with different rights and liabilities attaching to their members from those attaching to members of ordinary trading partnerships, exist in all mining communities; indeed, without them successful mining would be attended with difficulties and embarrassments much greater than at present." He then quotes a passage from the opinion in Skillman v. Lachman, [illegible] Cal., [illegible], to the effect that a mining partnership is governed by many of the rules relating to ordinary partnerships, but also by some rules peculiar to itself, one of which is that one person may convey his interest in the mine and business without dissolving the partnership, and then proceeds as follows: "The same doctrine is asserted in numerous other cases, not only in that court but in the courts of England. Associations for working mines are generally composed of a greater number of persons than ordinary trading partnerships; and it was early seen that the continuous working of a mine, which is essential to its successful development, would be impossible, or at least attended with great difficulties, if an association was to be dissolved by the death or bankruptcy of one of its members or of the assignment of his interest. A different rule from that which governs the relations of members of a trading partnership to each other was therefore recognized as applicable to the relations to each other of members of a mining association. The delectus personae, which is essential to constitute an ordinary partnership, has no place in these mining associations. Duryea v. Burt, 28 Cal., 569; Setzer v. Putnam, 30 Cal., 490; Taylor v. Castle, [illegible] Cal., [illegible]."

This case settles two propositions: First, that the members of a mining association have no right to object to the admission of a stranger into the association who buys the share of one of the associates; and second, that the sale and assignment by one of the associates, of his interest, does not dissolve the mining partnership. It follows from these propositions, that one member of a mining partnership has the right, without consulting his associates, to sell his interest in the partnership to a stranger, and that such a sale injures no right or property of the other associates. Much less does a purchase by one associate, of the share of another, inflict any wrong upon the other members of the partnership. There is no relation of trust or confidence between mining partners which is violated by the sale and assignment by one partner, to a stranger or to one of the associates, of his share in the property and business of the association.

It results as a conclusion from these premises that Bissell has suffered no wrong at the hands of either Hunter or Foss on the ground that they were his tenants in common or partners, by reason of any contract made between the latter in reference to the purchase of the share of the Missourians in their joint enterprise. There has been no violation of any trust and confidence arising from the relations existing between Bissell, Foss and Hunter.

The appellant, it is therefore clear, cannot demand any part of the two-thirds interest purchased by Hunter in the share of the Missourians. If he is entitled to participate in any way in the purchase made by Foss and Hunter it can only be in the one-third interest purchased by Foss. But this demand cannot be based on any contract between Bissell and Foss, for the contract arrangement between them was conditioned upon the consent of Hunter, and Hunter did not consent. It was also an element of the agreement that the money of the associates on deposit in the bank should be sufficient and should be available to pay a large part of the money required for the purchase of the share of the Missourians. But this condition also failed. He was therefore bound by no contract with Bissell to make the purchase. [262]

The only question which remains is, Was Foss bound, when he learned that the arrangement he had made with Bissell for the purchase of the share of the Missourians could not be carried out, to inform Bissell of the fact, and give him a chance to join in the purchase made by him and Hunter? It cannot be denied that under the circumstances there was an obligation on Foss to inform Bissell of the failure of their plan before making another with a third person. But it was not a legal obligation capable of enforcing in foro externo, but only a natural obligation to be disposed of in foro conscientiæ. Story, Eq. Jur., § 2. It was one of those obligations which was binding on the honor and conscience of the party, but one not the subject of a suit and not to be enforced in a court of either law or equity.

We are of opinion that the decree of the Circuit Court was right. It is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice Bradley and Mr. Justice Matthews dissented.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[394]

SILAS S. HUNTLEY, Appt.,
v.
THOMAS S. HUNTLEY, EXR. of CHARLES C. HUNTLEY, Deceased, ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 394-401.)

Statute of Frauds—executed contract not within—application of indebtedness on purchase by debtor for benefit of creditor.

* C. bought an undivided one-third interest in a stage company, intending that S. should have one half of one third, and, before the purchase, informed S. of such intention. At the time there was an unsettled account between C. and S., in respect of services rendered by S. to C. and of certain business in which they were both interested. After the purchase, C. agreed verbally with S. that S. should have the one sixth at the price S. had paid for it, any amount due by C. to S. to be applied towards payment for the one sixth, the ownership of it by S. to commence at once. Afterwards the four owners of the property, of whom S. and C. were two, executed a paper under seal, in which the interests of the four were defined, S. and C. being stated to be the owners of one third; and all, including C., thereafter recognized S. as owning one sixth, subject, as between S. and C., to the liability of S. to reimburse C. what he had paid for such one sixth: Held,

(1) The contract was executed, and S. was put in possession, and the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. II., chap. 3, § 17) did not apply;

(2) S. was entitled to have credit on his purchase of the one sixth, for what C. owed him on the accounts aforesaid; and C. was entitled to recover from S. the residue of what he had paid for the one sixth.

[No. 201.]

Argued Mar. 17, 18, 1885. Decided Apr. 6, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Enoch Totten and William F. Mattingly, for appellant.

Messrs. J. Hubley Ashton, W. D. Davidge and Nath'l Wilson, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

For several years prior to June 27, 1874, the [305] appellee Charles C. Huntley was engaged on numerous routes in the West and Northwest in the business of transporting the mails of the United States, and passengers. On some of those routes S. S. Huntley was interested with him, while on others he was his general manager and agent, with unrestricted authority to conduct the business as in his judgment was best for his principal. Among the companies in which C. C. Huntley had an interest were the Northwest Stage Company—engaged in transporting mails and passengers on routes in the State of Oregon and in the Territories of Utah, Idaho and Washington—and the Oregon and California Stage Company, which was engaged in like business on the route from Oraville, California, to Portland, Oregon. In the former company Bradley Barlow and James W. Parker each had an undivided interest of one third, while C. C. Huntley and Adam E. Smith had each an undivided interest of one sixth; in the latter, Barlow, C. C. Huntley, Parker and one Sanderson had each an undivided interest of one fourth.

* Head notes by Mr. Justice HARLAN.

On the 27th day of June, 1874, Parker, bill of sale, transferred to C. C. Huntley his terest in the property and assets of both th companies. The consideration paid was $75,0 for which the vendee executed his seve promissory notes to Barlow, who indorsed th to Parker.

On the 22d day of December, 1874, the f lowing instrument of writing was executed the parties thereto:

"Know all men by these presents that wher Bradley Barlow is the owner of one half of stock, property and effects of what was known the Northwest Stage Company, and S. S. and C. Huntley are the owners of one third of said prop ty, and Adam E. Smith is the owner of one sixth said property, and each of the said parties share spectively in the above proportions in all the m routes lately operated by said company, and are share in the future on all those routes in the abo proportions in the ownership, profits, losses and penses appertaining thereto or incident to the taining said mail routes, and it is agreed betwe us that the said Barlow shall have full power a authority to collect the pay on said routes duri the present contract term for the benefit of said parties herein named in the proportions each party hereinbefore stated, and that full pow of attorney in all cases shall be made and delive to the said Barlow to collect all mail pay on routes now owned or hereinafter acquired by aforesaid parties, or either of them, in the territo embraced by the service of the late Northw Stage Company.

"In witness whereof we have hereunto set hands and seals this 22d day of December, A. 1874.

Bradley Barlow,	[Seal.
C. C. Huntley,	[Seal.
S. S. Huntley,	[Seal.
Adam E. Smith.	[Seal.

"In the presence of—
J. L. Sanderson."

Shortly after the execution of that paper, C. Huntley, for $30,000, sold to Barlow half of the interest in the Northwest Sta Company which the former had purchased fr Parker.

The present suit was instituted by S. Huntley on the 14th day of December, 18 against C. C. Huntley, Barlow and Smi The bill alleges, among other things, t plaintiff and defendants were the owners of stock, property and effects of the Northw Stage Company, and that their respective terests are distinctly set forth and agreed up in the beforementioned writing of Decem 22, 1874; that Barlow had purchased Smit interest, and, under the authority given hi had collected all the mail pay earned by t company for its contract term ending June 1878, but had not made a final settlement, respect of such collections, with those int ested with him; that he had also sold t property of the company for $75,000, but h not fully accounted therefor; that C. C. Hu ley denied that plaintiff had any interest in t property or in its proceeds, and, unless strained, would collect and appropriate to own use all the proceeds and profits arisi from the one-third interest which origina stood in the name of C. C. and S. S. Huntl one half of which—that is, one sixth of the tire property—belonged to plaintiff. The pra of the bill was for an ascertainment of amount in Barlow's hands, in respect of said one-sixth interest, and that plaintiff h a decree for such sums as may be justly d him.

C. C. Huntley, in his answer, denies t

[illegible] ever acquired any interest in the pur-[illegible] from Parker, or that the paper of Decem-[illegible] 22, 1874, of the signing of which he had [illegible] recollection, was intended to be anything [illegible] than a declaration or admission of the [illegible] that Barlow was authorized to receive [illegible] money that might become due to the com-[illegible] from time to time. He says: "I did not [illegible] paper writing intend to admit, nor have [illegible] admitted, nor do I now admit, but, on [illegible] contrary, deny that the said plaintiff was, [illegible] or was to be, an equal owner with me in [illegible] and one-third interest in said Northwest [illegible] Company, its property, profits, assets, [illegible], except in the event of the repayment to [illegible] of the said sum of $45,000, so expended in [illegible] purchase of said shares as aforesaid, with [illegible] thereon; and, although no agreement [illegible] that effect was ever entered into, I have al-[illegible] been, and am now, willing that the said [illegible] shall have all the profit that has been [illegible] or derived in respect of one-sixth interest [illegible] Northwest Stage Company, and said [illegible] interest in said Oregon and Califor-[illegible] Stage Company, since the 1st day of July, [illegible] provided there be first repaid to me the [illegible] price of said purchase, to wit: the said [illegible] of $45,000, with interest from June 27, [illegible]."

[illegible] the decree of the court below, in special [illegible] it was adjudged that plaintiff recover of [illegible] Barlow one sixth of the property [illegible] money in his hands, of the Northwest Stage [illegible] and the latter was enjoined from [illegible] to C. C. Huntley any part thereof. The [illegible] was referred to an auditor to ascertain the [illegible] of plaintiff's interest, and to state all [illegible] and necessary accounts. Upon appeal [illegible] general term that decree was reversed [illegible].

While there is some conflict in the testimony [illegible] the circumstances attending the purchase [illegible] C. C. Huntley of Parker's interest in these [illegible], we are of opinion, upon a careful [illegible] of the evidence:

[illegible] That the purchase by C. C. Huntley was [illegible] to an understanding between him and [illegible], that the latter should have one half of [illegible] Parker interest in the Northwest Stage [illegible], and with the purpose on the part of [illegible] Huntley that S. S. Huntley should have [illegible] other half;

[illegible] That before such purchase, S. S. Huntley [illegible] informed by C. C. Huntley of the latter's [illegible] to let him have one half of that in-[illegible];

[illegible] That at the time of such purchase there [illegible] no unsettled account between C. C. Hunt-[illegible] and S. S. Huntley in respect as well of ser-[illegible] rendered by the latter as agent and gene-[illegible] manager for the former, as of mail contracts [illegible] in which they were jointly inter-[illegible], other than those relating to routes not [illegible] by the Northwest Stage Company or [illegible] companies with which Barlow was con-[illegible];

[illegible] That C. C. Huntley, in execution of his [illegible] purposes with reference to S. S. Hunt-[illegible] actually agreed with the latter, while they [illegible] together in the west in the summer or fall [illegible] 1874 after the purchase from Parker, that [illegible] should have one half of the original Parker [illegible] in the two companies—that is, the re-[illegible] maining one-sixth interest in the Northwest Stage Company, and one eighth interest in the other company—at the price which C. C. Huntley had paid for them; the amount, if any, due to S. S. Huntley, on account of the beforementioned services and contracts, to be applied in payment as far as it would go for the interests so transferred to him;

5. That the ownership of those interests by S. S. Huntley was not to be deferred until a settlement of accounts between him and C. C. Huntley was had, but was to take effect as of July 1, 1874, when the new contract term of those companies commenced; [399]

6. That the writing of December 22, 1874, was executed because of the then contemplated absence of C. C. Huntley in Europe for the benefit of his health, and to show the interest which S. S. Huntley had previously acquired and then, under the agreement with C. C. Huntley, actually had in the property and business of the Northwest Stage Company;

7. That thereafter all parties concerned in the affairs of that company, including C. C. Huntley, recognized and treated S. S. Huntley as the owner of one-sixth interest in its property and assets, subject, however, so far as C. C. Huntley was concerned, to the liability of S. S. Huntley to reimburse him for the amount which that interest had cost.

In behalf of the appellee Huntley it is contended, that the verbal agreement, upon which appellant relies as the foundation for his claim, is void under the 17th section of the Statute of 29 Car. II., chap. 3, which is in force in the District of Columbia, and which provides that "no contract for the sale of any goods, wares and merchandise for the price of ten pounds sterling or upward shall be allowed to be good, except the buyer shall accept part of the goods sold, and actually receive the same, or give something in earnest to bind the bargain, or in part payment, or that some note or memorandum in writing, of said bargain, be made and signed by the parties, to be charged by such contract, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized." Kelty's Eng. Stat., 242; Thomp. Dig., 221.

The argument in support of this proposition is that the Northwest Stage Company was a species of partnership with joint stock divided into transferable shares, which could be disposed of by the owner without the consent of his partners; that such shares were substantially like stock in corporations or regular joint stock companies; and that the alleged verbal sale of an interest in that company was void under the foregoing statute, because, as is claimed, the words "goods, wares and merchandise," as therein used, properly embrace not merely palpable personal property having an intrinsic value, but also stock in chartered corporations, shares or interests in joint stock companies, or private partnerships having the incidents of such companies—notes, checks, bonds, and other evidences of value. [400]

Without determining whether this statute governs the rights of the parties, or whether this interpretation of its provisions is sustained by the weight of authority, or whether the writing of December 22, 1874, is not itself a sufficient memorandum in writing of the sale in question, it is enough to say that the contract between

C. C. Huntley and S. S. Huntley was so far executed that the rights and obligations of the parties cannot be affected by the statute. To the extent that it was possible or necessary in respect of property of this character, the vendee was placed in possession of that which he purchased. This is shown by the evidence of several witnesses, and is established by the paper of December 22, 1874, which declares that S. S. and C. C. Huntley are the owners of one third of the stock, property and effects of the Northwest Stage Company, and as such and to that extent are to share in all the mail routes then lately operated by that company, and to share, in the future, in the profits, losses, and expenses appertaining thereto. There is some evidence tending to show that when this paper was executed C. C. Huntley was in poor health, but it falls short of proving that he was incapable, in law, of becoming a party to such an instrument; nor does his answer assert any such incapacity as a ground of defense. Besides, that writing is in accordance with the understanding reached between him and S. S. Huntley prior to its execution.

The decrees, in general and in special term, are, in our judgment, erroneous; the former, because it denied all relief to the plaintiff; and the latter, because it proceeded upon the ground that the evidence showed that S. S. Huntley had fully paid for the interest sold and transferred to him by C. C. Huntley. The case should go to an auditor, to ascertain the amount, if any, fairly and justly due S. S. Huntley from C. C. Huntley at the time of his purchase from C. C. Huntley, such amount to be applied in payment of S. S. Huntley's indebtedness to C. C. Huntley, on account of the purchase from the latter of one half of the Parker interest in [401] the Northwest Stage Company. And if C. C. Huntley was not indebted to S. S. Huntley at that date then the former will be entitled to be reimbursed out of the funds in the hands of Barlow, for all that he paid for the one-sixth part sold to S. S. Huntley, with interest thereon from the time of the purchase from Parker; the balance, if any, to go to S. S. Huntley. Such further decree should be rendered after the report of the auditor as the facts thus disclosed will justify or require.

The decree below is reversed, with directions for such proceedings as will be consistent with this opinion. Reversed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

CITY OF LITCHFIELD, Appt.,

v.

[190] GEORGE WILLIAM BALLOU ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 190-195.)

Municipal bond—issue of, in excess of constitutional limit—liability of municipality for purchase money expended upon public works—jurisdiction.

1. Where the Constitution of a State provides that no city, etc., "shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose" beyond a certain per centum of its taxable property, the prohibition is as effectual against the implied as the express promise, and is as binding in equity a law.

2. The holders of the bonds, and agents of city, are particeps criminis in the act of viola the constitutional prohibition, and equity wil more raise a resulting trust in favor of the hol than the law will raise an implied assumpsit money had and received.

3. The purchasers of bonds issued in exces the constitutional limit have no lien upon pu works upon which the purchase money is all to have been expended if other funds have been expended upon such works.

4. Where the complainant seeks to recover money he let the municipality have he must ole identify it or the fund or other property w represents it in such a manner that it can be claimed and delivered without taking other p erty with it or injuring other persons or interfe with other rights.

5. A decree which does not attempt to restor specific money of the complainant, but which i a sum equal in amount to the bonds and inte being a decree to pay as on an implied cont cannot be sustained.

6. A bill which sets up a cause of action on w there is an adequate remedy at law fails for v of equitable jurisdiction.

[No. 1180.]

Submitted Jan. 9, 1885. Decided Apr. 6, 1

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of United States for the Southern Distri Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appea the opinion of the court.

See also Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. 278 (bk. 26, L. ed. 138).

Messrs. John M. Palmer and B. S. wards, for appellant.

Mr. D. T. Littler, for appellees:

The doctrine of equity is that money property received by a party under such cumstances as are set forth in the bill in case has an implied trust character imp upon it by mere operation of law, indepen of the intention of the parties, and, as such, be enforced upon the conscience of the par

2 Story, Eq., § 1254; Chapman v. Dou Co. 107 U. S., 348 (bk. 27, L. ed. 378); Pi tal v. SanFrancisco, 21 Cal., 363; Argen Same, 16 Cal., 282; Parkersburg v. Brown, U. S., 487, (bk. 27, L. ed. 238); Marsh v. ton Co., 10 Wall., 676 (77 U. S., bk. 19 ed. 1040); Bridge Co. v. Utica, Chic. L. N. A 4, 1883.

Whether a city is under a legal obliga to make restitution of the money obta without authority of law—that is, to refun the proper party or parties such sums as v actually received by its authorized agent officers upon the sale of the bonds—is n question arising in the present action whic only for the recovery of the stipulated int upon such bonds. Upon this point it is proper at this time or in this form of actio express an opinion.

Buchanan v. Litchfield,, 102 U. S., 293 26, L. ed. 141).

It cannot be doubted that a sound policy be promoted by restoring the parties in all cases to their position. It leaves no inducer for either party to contravene the law. corporation is compelled to return just wh has received. The other party gets no r than he has parted with. It is believed not a solitary case can be found which st opposed to this salutary rule.

Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y., 1. See also [illegible] 24 N. Y., 290; Paul v. Kenosha, [illegible] Wis. [illegible]; Nelson v. Mayor, 63 N. Y., [illegible]; [illegible] v. Talmage, 14 N. Y., 217.

By Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal from a decree in chancery [illegible] the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Illinois.

The suit was commenced by a bill brought [illegible] against the City of Litchfield. Complainant alleges that he is the owner of bonds [illegible] by the City of Litchfield to a very considerable amount. That the money received by the City for the sale to him of these bonds was used in the construction of a system of waterworks for the City, of which the City is now the owner. He alleges that one Buchanan, who was the owner of some of these bonds, brought suit on them in the same court and was [illegible] in his action in the Circuit Court and in the Supreme Court of the United States, in which courts held the bonds void.

He now alleges that though the bonds are void the City is liable to him for the money it received of him, and as by the use of that money the waterworks were constructed, he sues for a decree against the City for the amount, and, if it is not paid within a reasonable time to be fixed by the court, that the waterworks of the City be sold to satisfy the [illegible]. The bill also charges that he was induced to purchase the bonds, by the false statements of the officers, agents and attorneys of the City that the bonds were valid. Other [illegible] came into the litigation and answers were filed. The answer of the City denies any [illegible] representations as to the character of the [illegible] bonds, that all the money received for them went into the waterworks, but part of it was used for other purposes, and avers that a large part of the sum paid for the waterworks came from other sources than the sale of these bonds, and it cannot now be ascertained how much of that money went into the works.

[illegible] came to issue and some testimony was taken, the substance of which is that much of the money for which the bonds were sold was used to pay the contractors who built the waterworks, while a very considerable proportion of the cost of these works was paid for out of taxation and other [illegible] than the bonds.

There is no evidence of any false or fraudulent representations by the authorized agents of the City.

The bonds were held void in the case of [illegible] v. Litchfield, 102 U. S., 278 [bk. 26, [illegible]], because they were issued in violation of the following provision of the Constitution of Illinois:

"Article IX.

"Section 12. No county, city, township, school district or other municipal corporation shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding five per centum on the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the last assessment for state and county taxes previous to the incurring of such indebtedness."

It was made to appear as a fact in that case, that at the time the bonds were issued the City had a pre-existing indebtedness exceeding five per cent of the value of its taxable property, as ascertained by its last assessment for state and county taxes.

The bill in this case is based upon the fact that the bonds are for that reason void, and it makes the record of the proceedings in that suit an exhibit in this. But the complainant insists that though the bonds are void the City is bound, ex æquo et bono, to return the money it received for them. It therefore prays for a decree against the City for the amount of the money so received.

There are two objections to this proposition: 1. If the City is liable for this money an action at law is the appropriate remedy. The action for money had and received to plaintiff's use is the usual and adequate remedy in such cases where the claim is well founded, and the judgment at law would be the exact equivalent of what is prayed for in this bill, namely: a decree for the amount against the City, to be paid within the time fixed by it for ulterior proceedings.

In this view the present bill fails for want of equitable jurisdiction.

2. But there is no more reason for a recovery on the implied contract to repay the money than on the express contract found in the bonds.

The language of the Constitution is that no city, etc., "shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding five per centum on the value of its taxable property." It shall not become indebted, shall not incur any pecuniary liability; it shall not do this in any manner, neither by bonds, nor notes, nor by express or implied promises. Nor shall it be done for any purpose, no matter how urgent, how useful, how unanimous the wish. There stands the existing indebtedness to a given amount in relation to the sources of payment as an impassible obstacle to the creation of any further debt in any manner or for any purpose whatever. [193]

If this prohibition is worth anything it is as effectual against the implied as the express promise, and is as binding in a court of chancery as a court of law.

Counsel for appellee in their brief, recognizing the difficulty here pointed out, present their view of the case in the following language:

"The theory of relief assumed by the bill is that notwithstanding the bonds were wholly invalid, and no suit at law could be successfully maintained either upon the bonds or upon any contract as such growing out of the bonds; yet, as the City of Litchfield is in possession of the money received for the bonds, or, which is the same thing, its equivalent in property identified as having been procured with this money, and having repudiated and disclaimed its liability in respect of the bonds, it must, upon well-established equitable principles, restore to the complainants what it actually received, or at least so much of what it received as is shown now to be in its possession and in its power to restore."

If such be the theory of the bill the decree of the court is quite unwarranted by it. The money received by the City from Ballou has long passed out of his possession and cannot be restored to complainant. Neither the specific money nor any other money is to be found in the safe of the City or anywhere else under its control. And the decree of the court, so far from attempting to restore the specific money, declares that there is due from the City of Litchfield to complainants a sum of money—not that original money—but a sum equal in amount to the bonds and interest on them from the day of their issue. Is this a decree to return the identical money or property received, or is it a decree to pay as on an implied contract the sum received, with interest for its use?

As regards the waterworks, into which it is [194] said the money was transmuted, if the theory of counsel is correct the waterworks should have been delivered up to plaintiff as representing their money, as property which they have purchased, and which, since the contract has been declared void, is their property, as representing their money. In this view the restoration to complainants of the property which represents their money puts an end to obligations on both sides growing out of the transaction. The complainants, having recovered what was theirs, have no further claim on the City. The latter having discharged its trust by returning what complainant has elected to claim as his own, is no longer liable for the money or any part of it.

But here also the decree departs from what is now asserted to be the principle of the bill. Having decreed an indebtedness where none can exist, and declared that complainant has a lien on, not the ownership of, the waterworks, it directs a sale of the waterworks for the payment of this debt and the satisfaction of this lien.

If this be a mode of pursuing and reclaiming specific property into which money has been transmuted, it is a new mode. If the theory of appellees' counsel be true, there is no lien on the property. There is no debt to be secured by a lien. That theory discards the idea of a debt, and pursues the money into the property, and seeks the property, not as the property of the City to be sold to pay a debt, but as the property of complainant into which his money, not the City's, has been invested, for the reason that there was no debt created by the transaction.

The money received on the bonds having been expended, with other funds raised by taxation, in erecting the waterworks of the City, to impose the amount thereof as a lien upon these public works would be equally a violation of the constitutional prohibition, as to raise against the City an implied assumpsit for money had and received. The holders of the bonds and agents of the City are participes criminis in the act of violating that prohibition, and equity will no more raise a resulting trust in favor of the bondholders than the law will raise an implied assumpsit against a public policy so strongly declared.

[195] But there is a reason why even this cannot be done.

Leaving out of view the question of tracing complainant's money into these works, it is very certain that there is other money besides theirs in the same property. The land on which these works are constructed was bought and paid for before the bonds were issued or voted. The streets through which the pipes are laid is public property into which no money of the complainants entered. Much, also, of tl expense of construction was paid by taxatic or other resources of the City. How mucl cannot be known with certainty, becaus though the officers of the City testify that o the books a separate waterworks account wa kept, there is no evidence that the funds whic went to build these works are traceable b those books to their source in any instance.

If the complainants are after the money the let the City have they must clearly identify th money or the fund or other property which represents that money in such a manner that i can be reclaimed and delivered without taking other property with it or injuring other persons or interfering with others' rights.

It is the consciousness that this cannot be done which caused the court and counsel to resort to the idea of a debt and a lien which cannot be sustained. A lien of a person on his own property, which is and has always been his, in favor of himself, is a novelty which only the necessities of this case could suggest.

Another objection to this assertion of a righ to the property is that the bondholders, each o whom must hold a part of whatever equity ther is to the property, are numerous and scattered and the relative amount of the interest of eac in this property could hardly be correctly ascer tained. The property itself cannot be divided its value consists in its unity as a system of water works for the City. Without the land and th use of the streets the value of the remainder o the plant is gone. In these, complainants ca have no equity.

The decree of the court is reversed and the cas remanded, with directions to dismiss the bill.

I am requested to say that Mr. Justice Har lan dissents from the judgment and opinion o the court.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S

Ex Parte:
In the Matter of ELLIS G. HUGHES, Pet tioner.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 147-149.)

Mandamus—discretion of inferior courts no controlled by.

A writ of mandamus does not lie to compel the judge of an inferior court to authorize the with drawal of money from the registry of the court where said court has expressly adjudged that the litigation is not ended and has ordered that said money shall remain in the custody of the court until the final disposition of the cause.

[No 8. Orig.]

Argued, Mar. 31, 1885. Decided, Apr. 6, 1885.

PETITION for a writ of mandamus.

The history and facts of the case appea in the opinion of the court.

Mr. John H. Mitchell, for petitioner.

Mr. J. N. Dolph, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opin ion of the court:

This is an application for a writ of manda mus requiring Matthew P. Deady, Judge o the District Court of the United States for th District of Oregon, to "forthwith sign an execute, by signing or countersigning any an [illegible] such orders, matters and things as may be [illegible] or necessary to enable your petitioner [illegible] G. Hughes, an attorney at law practicing [illegible] circuit and district courts of the United [illegible] for such district) to withdraw from the [illegible] of said court the sum of five hun[illegible] dollars belonging to him." The petition [illegible] which is sworn to by the petitioner, [illegible] that on and prior to May 3, 1882, there [illegible] pending in the Circuit Court of the United [illegible] for the District of Oregon a suit in equity [illegible] foreclosure of a mortgage in which [illegible] Ford, manager, was plaintiff, and H. [illegible] and W. B. McCallister, defendants, [illegible] that the plaintiff therein "recovered in said [illegible] a certain decree as against the defendants, [illegible] and a certain order of sale, wherein and [illegible] it was ordered, adjudged and decreed [illegible] the defendants * * * should pay to the [illegible] a certain sum of money, and interest [illegible] specified, and also the costs and dis[illegible] in the suit to be taxed, 'including [illegible] on the full amount due from the [illegible] * * * to the complainant as an [illegible] fee to the attorney of the complain[illegible] and that in default of such payment being [illegible] certain lands in said decree and order of [illegible] said described, be sold."

The petition further states "that your peti[illegible] as the attorney of the plaintiff, by ex[illegible] agreement and by the express terms and [illegible] of said decree and order of sale, was [illegible] and unconditional owner of the [illegible] recovered therein and thereby as [illegible] of the suit." It is then stated that a sale [illegible] mortgaged property was made under the [illegible] and "the amount due your petitioner [illegible] and decree and order of sale, as and for [illegible] fee, * * * having been regularly [illegible] and determined, the said purchaser [illegible] paid to the clerk of the circuit [illegible] * * * as and for and in payment of the [illegible] of your petitioner for his attorney's fee, [illegible] the full amount so as aforesaid ascertained [illegible] determined to be due to your petitioner [illegible]." The petition then states that upon [illegible] of the money it was deposited in [illegible] of the court, and that, although de[illegible] the district judge holding the circuit [illegible] refused to sign an order for its pay[illegible] in full to him, but that the sum of $500, [illegible] was retained, although it was then [illegible] the depository of the court and "absolutely [illegible] unconditionally the property of your peti[illegible]."

[illegible] of the various orders and decrees [illegible] the rights of the petitioner depend [illegible] attached to the petition; but upon the [illegible] statements of the petitioner as to [illegible] and effect, a rule was entered on [illegible] judge to show cause why the writ [illegible] should not be issued. To this rule a [illegible] has been made from which it appears [illegible] that it has never been adjudged [illegible] petitioner was the owner of the money [illegible]. On the contrary it does appear that [illegible] of December, 1884, the petitioner [illegible] the money in court, being $1,039.42, [illegible] by the clerk," and thereupon [illegible] ordered "that there be paid to said [illegible] the petitioner) out of said funds the [illegible] of $[illegible]," but the court declined to [illegible] disposition of the rest of the fund until the plaintiff had notice of the application and could be heard thereon. The amount so ordered to be paid was afterwards received from the registry of the court by the petitioner. The application for the rest of the fund was subsequently heard, the plaintiff in the suit appearing to resist, and upon full consideration it was expressly adjudged by the court that the litigation in the case was not ended, and that "neither by the terms of the decree nor the right and justice of the case was he [petitioner] entitled to the same [the money] until he had earned it by prosecuting said suit to a final decree as to all the defendants therein." The application for the remainder of the money was consequently denied, and the fund was left "in the registry of the court to be disposed of or applied hereafter as the rights of the parties and justice of the case may require." Certainly upon this return the petitioner is not entitled to the writ he asks.

The rule heretofore granted is discharged, with costs.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Ex Parte:

In the Matter of DAYTON S. MORGAN AND C. ASHLEY SMITH, Petitioners. [174]

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 174-176.)

Mandamus—discretion of inferior courts not controlled by.

1. A writ of mandamus may be used to require an inferior court to decide a matter within its jurisdiction and pending before it for determination, but not to control the decision.

2. The judgment of an inferior court upon a motion to amend its original judgment in a cause cannot be reviewed by mandamus.

[No. 10. Orig.]

Argued Mar. 30, 31, 1885. Decided Apr. 6, 1885.

NOTE.—Mandamus—control of inferior tribunal—discretion—classification.

Three distinct classes of cases arise: 1. Where the decision by the lower tribunal of the question to do or not to do a certain act in itself involves discretion. 2. Where the method of doing the act alone involves a question of discretion, or, the duty to act being clear, the performance of this act requires the exercise of discretion. 3. Where the act is purely ministerial, involving no question of discretion at any stage.

In the first class of cases a mandamus will never be granted. Ex parte Morgan, supra; and cases cited.

In the second class of cases the writ will issue, to compel action but not to control the method of action or its discretion. For instance, a lower court may, in a proper case, be ordered to render a judgment, but it will be left to its discretion as to what judgment it will render. Ex parte Bradstreet, 32 U. S. (7 Pet.), 634; East Boston Ferry Co. v. Boston, 101 Mass., 486; People v. Common Council of Troy, 78 N. Y., 33; People v. Auditors of Elmira, 82 N. Y., 80; Commonwealth v. Henry, 49 Pa. St., 530.

In the third class of cases mandamus will, in a proper case, be granted. Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S., 531, bk. 23, 623.

For definition of ministerial act in this connection, see Mississippi v. Johnson, 71 U. S. (4 Wall.), 498, bk. 18, 440; approved in Gaines v. Thompson, 74 U. S. (7 Wall.), 347, bk. 18.

For full citation of authorities see M'Cluny v. Silliman, 15 U. S. (2 Wh.), 369, note.

As to the use of the writ of injunction in related cases, see Mississippi v. Johnson, 71 U. S. (4 Wall.), 475, XVIII., 437, note.

ON petition for a writ of mandamus.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Edward Robey, for petitioners.

Messrs. W. H. Calkins, A. L. Osborn and A. C. Harris, for respondents, contra.

[174]

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an application for a writ of mandamus requiring the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana to amend a judgment entered January 20, 1883, in a cause wherein the relators were plaintiffs and Frederick Eggers defendant, "so as to conform to the complaint in said cause, and to the finding or verdict of the court rendered upon the trial of said cause."

The suit was ejectment to recover the possession of "all of the north part of lot 2, in sec. 36, T. 38, N. R. 10 W. of the second principal meridian, which lies west of the track of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad and north of a line parallel with the north line of said lot 2, and 753 feet south therefrom."

The judgment entry, which includes the only finding in the case, is as follows:

"And the court, having heard the evidence and being fully advised, finds for the plaintiffs, and orders and adjudges that they are entitled to and shall have and recover of defendant the possession of so much of said lot two (2) as lies south of the south line of lot number one (1), as indicated by a fence constructed and maintained by the defendant as and on said south line, said fence running from the state line easterly to Lake Michigan, and assessing the damages at $1 and costs taxed at $—, which the plaintiffs shall recover of defendant. All of which is finally ordered, adjudged and decreed."

[175]

After this entry the petitioner moved the court to amend and reform the judgment so that it would "conform to the complaint in said court and to the finding or verdict"; but the court, on full consideration, decided that the finding and judgment were not separate and distinct, and that the meaning was clear. The entry was to be construed as finding and adjudging that the plaintiffs were only entitled to recover the possession of so much of the premises sued for as lies south of the fence indicated. For this reason the motion was denied.

It is an elementary rule that a writ of mandamus may be used to require an inferior court to decide a matter within its jurisdiction and pending before it for judicial determination, but not to control the decision. Ex parte Flippin, 94 U. S., 350 [bk. 24, L. ed., 195]; Ex parte R. Co., 101 U. S., 720 [bk. 25, L. ed., 875]; Ex parte Burtis, 103 U. S., 238 [bk. 26, L. ed., 392]. Here a judgment has been rendered and entered of record by the circuit court in a suit within its jurisdiction. The judgment is the act of the court. It is recorded ordinarily by the clerk as the ministerial officer of the court, but his recording is, in legal effect, the act of the court, and subject to its judicial control. The clerk records the judgments of the court, but does not thereby render the judgments. If there is error in the judgment as rendered, it cannot be corrected by mandamus, but resort must be had to a writ of error or an appeal. Ex parte Loring, 94 U. S., 418 [bk. 24, L. ed. 165]; Ex parte Perry, 102 U. S., 183 [bk. 26, L. ed., 43].

If a clerk in performing the ministerial a of recording a judgment has committed an e ror, the court may on motion at the proper tin correct it, or it may do so in a proper case upo its own suggestion without waiting for the pa ties. Here the plaintiffs, believing that th judgment as recorded did not conform to th finding, moved the court to amend it in th particular. This motion the court entertaine but, being of the opinion that the judgme had been correctly recorded, refused the amen ment which was asked. In this the court acte judicially, and its judgment on the motion ca no more be reviewed by mandamus than th which was originally entered in the cause.

The writ is denied with costs.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Cited.—116 U. S., 402.

EAST ALABAMA RAILWAY COMPAN

Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN DOE, ex dem. DANIEL W. VISSCHE ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 340-355.)

Railroads—sale of right of way void if pu chaser has not the franchise—ejectment—esto pel.

*Various owners of lands in Alabama granted to railroad corporation of that State "and its assign in 1860, a right of way through the lands to mal and run a railroad, the corporation having a fra chise to do so and to take tolls; and it obtained a lil right, as to other land, by statutory proceeding. graded a part of the line. V., a judgment credit of the corporation, in 1867 levied an execution c the right of way, and it was sold to V., and the she iff deeded it to him, and he took possession of t road-bed. In 1870 he contracted with another ra road corporation to complete the grading of t line of road for so much per mile, and, on bei paid, to transfer to it all his title to the franchis right of way and property of the old corporatio He completed the work, and was not paid in fu but gave possession of the road in 1871 to the co poration, and its franchises and road and propert passed in 1880 to another corporation, the defen ant, against whom V. brought an action of ejec ment to recover the road-bed: Held,

(1) The right of way could not be sold on exec tion or otherwise to a purchaser who did not ow the franchise.

(2) There was nothing in the contract to est the defendant from disputing the right of V. to r cover in ejectment, on the strength of his title.

(3) V could not recover.

[No. 207.]

Submitted Mar. 20, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 188

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the Uni ed States for the Middle District of Al bama.

The history and facts appear in the opinic of the court.

Messrs. Edward Patterson and Harr C. Semple, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Samuel P. Rice and John Chilton, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opi ion of the court:

* Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

In November, 1880, the defendants in error brought an action of ejectment in the Circuit Court of Chambers County, Alabama, against the East Alabama Railway Company, to recover premises described in the complaint as follows: "A certain tract or parcel of land, being the railroad bed of the railroad formerly known and called the East Alabama and Cincinnati Railroad, from Lafayette to the county line of Lee County, together with all the land contiguous to said road-bed, on each side thereof, to the distance of seventy-five feet from the center thereof, said railroad being now known and called as the East Alabama Railway, with the appurtenances situate in the County of Chambers aforesaid." Lafayette is in Chambers County, and Lee County lies south of Chambers. The suit was duly removed by the company into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Alabama. It was tried before a jury in December, 1881, on a stipulation that the Company had been in adverse possession of the premises for more than [illegible] years before the bringing of the suit, and had made permanent and valuable improvements by building a railroad thereon; and on the issue of not guilty. The jury found for the defendants "for all the property described in the complaint," and assessed their damages at [illegible], and there was a judgment according. The Company brings a writ of error.

The bill of exceptions sets forth all the evidence in the cause. The following are all the facts which it is needful to state: The Lafayette Railroad Company was incorporated by the Legislature of Alabama February 7, 1848, to construct a railroad from Lafayette to intersect or connect with the Montgomery and West Point Railroad at some suitable point between Chehaw and West Point. By an amendatory Act of April 9, 1854, the Company was authorized to extend its road beyond Lafayette in the direction of the Tennessee River, and to connect the same with any railroad built, or being built, or to be built, so as to connect with some point on the Tennessee River. By an amendatory Act of January [illegible], its name was changed to the Opelika and Oxford Railroad Company, and it was authorized to connect its road with the Alabama and Tennessee River Railroad at or near Oxford, Calhoun County. The companies were successively organized. In 1861 one Richards was president. The Opelika and Oxford Company acquired the right of way through the land of all the proprietors of the soil from a point on the Montgomery and West Point Railroad about three miles northerly from Opelika, Lee County, to Lafayette, by deeds from all the proprietors (save in one case). The deeds, [illegible] in the description of the land through which the road was to pass, were all in the form of the following one:

Mary F. McLemore to Opelika and Oxford R. R. Co.

Alabama, Chambers County:

"This indenture, made this 31st day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty, between Mary McLemore, of Chambers County, of the one part, and the Opelika and Oxford R. R. Company, of the other part, witnesseth: That the said Mary F. McLemore, for and in consideration of the sum of one dollar to her in hand paid, at and before the sealing and delivery of these presents, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, doth give, grant, bargain and sell unto the said railroad company and their successors and assigns, the right of way over which to pass at all times by themselves, directors, officers, agents, hirelings and servants, in any manner they may thing proper, and particularly for the purpose of running, erecting and establishing thereon a railroad with requisite number of tracks; and to this end the limit of said right of way shall extend in width fifty feet on each side of the slope stake of the right of way of the said railroad when completed, and to extend in length through the whole tract of land owned and claimed by said Mary F. McLemore, and known as the north half of section 22, township 22, of range 26, situated, lying and being in Chambers County, adjoining lands of James F. Dowdell, Evan G. Richards and Nolan J. Wright, and running in such direction through said tract of land as the said Opelika and Oxford Railroad Company, by their engineers, shall think best suited for the purpose of locating and establishing their works; and connected with the said right of way, the said company shall have the right to cut down and remove all such trees, underwood and growth and timber on each side of said road as would, by falling on or striking the same, injure the rails or other parts of said road, together with all and singular the rights, members and appurtenances to the said strip, tract or parcel of land being, belonging or in anywise appertaining, and more especially the right of way over the same; to have and to hold the same unto the said Opelika and Oxford R.R. Company, their successors and assigns, to their own proper use, benefit and behoof forever, in fee simple; upon condition, and it is expressly understood, that should the said railroad contemplated as aforesaid be not established on and along said strip, parcel or tract of land described in the above and foregoing indenture, then said indenture is to be wholly null and void and of no effect; and the Mary F. McLemore her heirs and assigns, will warrant and defend the title thereof unto the Opelika and Oxford Railroad Company, their successors and assigns, against the claims of all persons whatsoever. In witness whereof the said Mary F. McLemore hath hereunto set her hand and seal the day and year first above written.

"Mary F. McLemore."

[343]

As to the excepted case, which related to a section of land one mile square in Chambers County, through which the road-bed sued for runs, in that county, the Company caused the same character of rights and right of way through that section of land as was conveyed by the deeds referred to to be condemned for its use under statute authority, and the sum assessed was finally paid to the owner. In 1860 the Company employed engineers who laid out and staked off the full right of way conveyed through all of the lands and cut out the width through woods; and it made contracts with contractors for the grading and culverting of a railroad along the right of way, who built for it a great deal of such grading and culverting; and all the work done was done on the right of way thus staked out, but no other work was done on it except such culverting and grading, and this was not continuous through the whole line in Chambers County sued for, but there were several intervals where no work of grading and culverting was done; and the Company was in the undisturbed possession of the whole of the right of way.

[344]

The Company became embarrassed for want of means during the war, and ceased, before July, 1861, to do any work on the line, leaving it incomplete as to grading and culverting, and no work was done by it afterwards on the line. Richards, as late as 1863, removed, at a small expense to himself individually, some logs which had lodged in one of the culverts, to save the culvert and grading from injury; and he looked over the work from time to time. No meeting of the directors or stockholders was held after July, 1861, and no corporate act was done by either after that date. The Company was without means to prosecute the building of the road any further.

One Lockett and the firm of D. W. & J. G. Visscher were contractors, to whom the Company was indebted for work on the line. Lockett recovered one judgment and the Visschers another against the Company, October 26, 1866, in a court of the State, by service of process on Richards, as president, the former for $14,457.21, and the latter for $12,383.83. An execution was issued on each judgment to the sheriff of Chambers County, November 7, 1866, and levied on that day, according to the return on each writ, on a house and lot, [345] and also on "the right of way to the Opelika and Oxford Railroad, so far as the right of way has been obtained, and all the appurtenances belonging to said Railroad Company, from Lafayette to the edge of Lee County, and also the surveying instruments belonging to said Company." The plaintiff's attorney stopped proceedings on those executions on the 12th of April, 1867. A second execution was issued on each judgment to said sheriff, May 8, 1867, and levied on that day, under the Lockett execution, according to the return thereon, on a house and lot, and also on "the right of way to the Opelika and Oxford Railroad, so far as the right of way has been obtained, to the edge of Lee County, and also all the surveying instruments belonging to said Company"; and under the other execution, according to the return thereon, on the same property, omitting the words "the right of way has been obtained, to." After a sale the sheriff executed the following deed to the purchasers:

"This indenture, made and entered into this 3d day of June, 1867, between R. J. Kellam, sheriff of the County of Chambers, in the State of Alabama, of the one part, and D. W. & J. G. Visscher and A. L. Woodward, of the other part, witnesseth: That whereas on the 26th day of October, 1866, a judgment was duly rendered in the Circuit Court for the County of Chambers, in the State aforesaid, at the fall term of the said Court, for the sum of $12,383 and costs, in favor of Abner M. Lockett, and one in favor of D. W. & J. G. Visscher for $14,457.21, and against the Opelika and Oxford Railroad Company, on which said judgments there was issued by the clerk of the Circuit Court for said county, on the 8th day of May, 1867, certain writs of fieri facias in fav of said Abner M. Lockett and D. W. & J. G Visscher and against the said Railroad Com pany, directed to any sheriff of the State of Alabama, whereby such sheriff was directe to levy of the estate, &c., of said Railroad Com pany, and make the said sum of $26,751.0 besides costs, and which said writ was, on the 8 day of May, 1867, placed in the hands of the sai R. J. Kellam, as sheriff of said County of Chambers, for the purpose of its levy and ex cution; and whereas said R. J. Kellam, as she iff as aforesaid, after the said writ had com into his hands and while the same was in fu force, did, on the 8th day of May, 1867, lev the same on the following tract or lot of land as the property of the said Railroad Company to wit: the right of way to Opelika and Oxfor Railroad Company, so far as the right of wa has been obtained, from Lafayette to the lin of Lee County; and all the appurtenance fro Lafayette to the line of Lee County, lying an being in said County of Chambers; and when as the said R. J. Kellam, as sheriff as aforesaid after having duly advertised the said tract o land or railroad-bed for sale in the mode pr scribed by law, did, in accordance with sai advertisement, on the 3d day of June, 1867, a the court house, in the Town of Lafayette proceed to sell the same under and by virtu of said writ of fieri facias, and the said D. W & J. G. Visscher and A. L. Woodward, havin bid for the said land or railroad-bed, then an there selling as aforesaid, the sum of $500 and it being the highest and best bid that coul then and there be got for the same, he, the sai sheriff, did therefore sell and cry off th tract of land or railroad-bed, to the said D. W & J. G. Visscher and A. L. Woodward. Now therefore, in consideration of the premises, th said party of the first part, as sheriff of the sai County of Chambers, has and does hereby ba gain and sell, aliene and convey unto said D. W & J. G. Visscher and A. L. Woodward, th said tract of land or railroad-bed, to wit: th right to the Opelika and Oxford Railroad, s far as the right of way has been obtained, fro Lafayette to the edge of Lee County, and a the appurtenances belonging to said road fro Lafayette to the line of Lee County, to hav and to hold the aforesaid premises and land together with all and singular [its] appurte nances thereunto belonging, to the said Opelik and Oxford Railroad Company and to thei heirs and assigns, forever. And said party o the first part, as sheriff as aforesaid, does co enant with the said party of the second pa that he, as sheriff as aforesaid, will warrant th title of said ——— to said party of the secon part so far only as he by virtue of his office authorized to do; but it is expressly understoo that said R. J. Kellam, sheriff, is in no ever to be individually liable for anything herei contained.

"In testimony whereof, the said party of th first part has signed, sealed and delivered th deed on the day it bears date.

"Robert J. Kellam,

"Sheriff of Chambers County, Alabama."

After the sheriff's sale Richards abandoned turned over to the purchasers the line of cu verting or grading as far as he could do s

[illegible] he exercised no further authority over [illegible] and the Opelika and Oxford Railroad Company made no further claim to it. On the 6th of April, 1870, D. W. and J. G. Visscher entered into a written contract with the Eufaula, Opelika, Oxford and Guntersville Railroad Company, which was signed on behalf of that company by one Pennington, as its president, and was recognized and acted on by it. Its name was afterwards changed to the East Alabama and Cincinnati Railroad Company. The two companies were one and the same corporation, chartered by Alabama to build a road from Eufaula to Guntersville via Opelika and Oxford. In the fall, before the contract was entered into, D. W. Visscher was informed by Pennington to see him as to whether Pennington's company could not arrange to [illegible] for its line Visscher's grading and right of way from said junction to Lafayette. Pennington told Visscher he could build by the side of Visscher's line, but would like to [illegible] it; and they agreed that the Visschers should go to work completing the grading, and the Pennington's company would furnish the money to pay for the work as it progressed. The work was begun with the verbal understanding that the written contract should be [illegible], and it went on till that contract was [illegible], and then under the contract till the Visschers completed it to Lafayette, over the [illegible] of way or line described in the deeds [illegible] and the company accepted it as done according to the contract, about May 3, 1871. By the terms of the contract it was agreed that the Visschers should "form, prepare and [illegible] the clearing and grubbing, grading, [illegible], trestlework, cattle-guards, road and [illegible] crossings, tracklaying, including switches, [illegible] and turnouts, three warehouses, three [illegible], with fixtures complete, including the furnishing of materials and all other things requisite and necessary to complete the road ready for the running of trains, except the rolling materials which go into the superstructure of the road," from Opelika, or two miles north thereof, as the Company should [illegible] and designate, for a distance of twenty miles, to a point beyond Lafayette. The contract specified the terms of compensation, and provided that on the completion of the twenty miles and the payment of the amount of the [illegible] D. W. Visscher should transfer to the company "all right and title vested in him to [illegible], right of way or other property belonging to or pertaining to the said road, under the old organization known as the Opelika and Oxford R. R." The Visschers were [illegible] and the full amount due to them for the work done under the contract, and claimed that [illegible] was due to them more than $100,000.

[illegible] a decree of sale made in a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage made by the East Alabama and Cincinnati Railroad Company, [illegible] Livingston and Richard Irving, Jr., [illegible] and received from the proper officer [illegible] the 28th of April, 1880, a deed of the "entire [illegible] property of, or belonging to, the East Alabama and Cincinnati Railroad Company, [illegible] for railway purposes, and all and singular the entire railroad of said Company, extending from Eufaula, Alabama, to Guntersville, Alabama, being about two hundred and twenty miles in length, at present unfinished, its entire franchises and privileges held and acquired, together with the right of way, road-bed, road, * * * and all its ways and rights of way," etc. The plaintiff in error became a corporation, under the laws of Alabama, on the 28th of May, 1880, and on the 13th of July, 1880, Livingston and Irvin conveyed to it the property so deeded to them by the same description.

At the trial, the plaintiffs offered in evidence transcripts of the proceedings as to the said judgments, executions, levies, sale and sheriff's deed. The defendant objected to each of them "as illegal and irrelevant evidence, and also because they tended to show the sale under execution and conveyance by the sheriff, of an easement alone, not the subject of an ejectment." [349] The court overruled each of the objections and allowed each of the transcripts to be read in evidence, and the defendant excepted separately to each of the rulings.

After the close of the testimony the court charged the jury that if they believed from the evidence that the Company before named entered into the written contract with the Visschers, and under that contract was let into the possession by them of the route described in the deeds from McLemore and others, and failed to perform its part of the contract, and the Visschers did perform it so far as permitted by the Corporation to do so, and the Corporation failed to make the full payments due to the Visschers under the contract, the Corporation and all persons claiming under it were estopped from setting up any title in the premises sued for adverse to the Visschers, and their possession under the contract was not adverse.

The court also charged the jury that the property conveyed by the deed of the sheriff was the subject of levy and sale under execution, and that the objection made by the defendant that it was only an easement and not the subject of a levy and sale under execution, was not well founded.

To each of these charges the defendant excepted. There were exceptions to other instructions, and to refusals to charge in accordance with requests made by the defendant; but the questions which we regard as decisive of the case are raised by those already mentioned.

The right which the Opelika and Oxford Company obtained under the deeds from McLemore and others (and the right obtained by condemnation is set forth as of the same character) was described in the deeds as "the right of way over which to pass at all times, by themselves, directors, officers, agents, hirelings and servants, in any manner they may think proper, and particularly for the purpose of running, erecting and establishing thereon a railroad with requisite number of tracks"; and it was provided that "to this end the limit of said right of way shall extend in width fifty feet on each side of the slope stake of the right of way of the said railroad when completed, and [350] to extend in length through the whole tract of land owned and claimed" by the grantor, describing it, "and running in such direction through said tract of land" as the Company, by its engineers, should think best suited for the purpose of locating and establishing its works. The grantor conveyed this to the Company and its successors and assigns. The deed also provided that, "connected with the said right of way, the said Company shall have the right to cut down and remove all such trees, underwood and growth and timber on each side of said road as would, by falling on or striking the same, injure the rails or other parts of said road, together with all and singular the rights, members and appurtenances to the said strip, tract or parcel of land being, belonging or in any wise appertaining, and more especially the right of way over the same." The habendum was to have and to hold the same to the Company its successors and assigns, to its "own proper use, benefit and behoof forever, in fee simple." Then followed the further provision that should the contemplated railroad not be located and established on and along the strip, parcel or tract of land described in the deed, the deed should be wholly null and void and of no effect.

The right granted was merely a right of way for a railroad. It was granted to an existing corporation which had a franchise. The grant to the "assigns" of the Corporation cannot be construed as extending to any assigns except one who should be the assignee of its franchise to establish and run a railroad. Nor did the mention of rights, members and appurtenances belonging and appertaining to the strip of land, or the use of the words "forever, in fee simple," enlarge what was otherwise the limited character of the grant. No fee in the land was conveyed, nor any estate which was capable of being sold on execution on a judgment at law, or separate from the franchise to make and own and run a railroad. The Corporation could not have made a voluntary conveyance of the right of way, severed from its franchise. What it acquired is merely an easement in the land, to enable it to discharge its function of making and maintaining a public highway, the fee of the soil remaining in the grantor. By the terms [351] of the charter of the Lafayette Branch Company it was given the power to purchase, hold, lease, sell and convey real, personal and mixed property, so far as should be necessary for the purposes mentioned in the Act, namely: to construct and operate the specific railroad authorized therein, with power to "lay and collect toll from all persons, property, merchandise or other commodities transported thereon." By the terms of its charter, therefore, in connection with the terms of the deeds of the right of way, that right was indissolubly linked to the franchise, and to the purpose of the existence of the Corporation, and to its public functions, so long as they should exist. It would violate not only the expressed intention of the grantors in the deeds, but the manifest purpose of the Legislature of Alabama, to permit a private person to seize and appropriate the right of way by the purchase of anything at a judicial sale apart from the franchise on which the right of way was dependent. The sheriff's deed purported to convey, in words, "the said tract of land or railroad-bed, to wit: the right of the Opelika and Oxford Railroad, so far as the right of way has been obtained, from Lafayette to the edge of Lee County, and all the appurtenances belonging to said road from Lafayette to the line of Lee County." If the deed undertook to convey any land or soil or road-bed, it conveyed with it the right of way. The deed in reciting the levy, states that it was made "o the following tract or lot of land, as the prop erty of the said Railroad Company, to wit: th right of way," etc., and states that that wa what was sold. It was not lawful for the pu chasers to have a deed of the right of way, an if they obtained a deed of anything the righ of way was included, or else they received nc thing beyond, perhaps, a right to carry awa from the land what the Company had put u on it.

The bill of exceptions states that a like righ of way through the lands of the proprietors o the soil was obtained by deed, in Lee County from a point about two miles north of Opelik to the south line of Chambers County; and th under executions issued to Lee County on th same judgments, there were levies made on th right of way of the Company so far as the sam had been obtained by it up the line of Chambe County, and a sale by the sheriff of Lee Count of what was so levied on, to the same perso who bought at the sale in Chambers County But at the sale in Lee County a different pu chaser might have bought the right of wa and there would then have been a division the ownership of the line of the road create as a unit and intended to remain such, resul ing in a different control, with no franchise t collect toll. No such thing could be done.

The policy of the State of Alabama on th subject is indicated by the provisions of h Constitution of 1865 (Art. 1, § 25), of 186 (Art. 1, § 25) and of 1875 (Art. 1, § 24 "That private property shall not be taken applied for public use unless just compens tion be made therefor; nor shall private pro erty be taken for private use or for the use corporations other than municipal witho the consent of the owner; Provided, howeve That laws may be made securing to persons corporations the right of way over the lands other persons or corporations; * * * but ju compensation shall in such cases be first made the owner." In R. R. Co. v. Burkett, 42 Ala 83, it was held that under this provision a ra road company acquired no absolute title to lan in fee simple, but only a right to use for i purposes. Nor is a right of way such as ma be thus secured, or such as was granted t deed in the present case, within the meaning the provision of the Code of Alabama, that ex cutions may be levied on real property which the defendant "has a vested legal int est, in possession, reversion or remainde whether he has the entire estate or is entitl to it in common with others." Code of 185 § 2455; Code of 1867, § 2871; Code of 1876, 3209.

We are not referred to any decision of the S preme Court of Alabama made before the righ involved in this suit arose or before this su was brought, determining the questions he involved. Two unreported cases are cited the defendants in error—Tennessee & Coosa R. Co. v. East Ala. R. Co., decided at Dece ber Term, 1883; and Hooper v. Columbus Western Railway Co., decided at Decemb Term, 1884. To these cases, if they were point, the doctrine always held by this cou and so emphatically repeated in Burgess Seligman, 107 U. S. 20 [bk. 27, L. ed. 35 would be applicable, namely: that the courts of the United States, in the administration of state laws in cases between citizens of different States, "have an independent jurisdiction coordinate with, and not subordinate to, that of the State Courts, and are bound to exercise their own judgment as to the meaning and effect of those laws"; and that when contracts and transactions have been entered into and rights have accrued thereon, in the absence of any authoritative decision by the state courts, the courts of the United States "properly claim the right to adopt their own interpretation of the law applicable to the case, although a different interpretation may be adopted by the state courts after such rights have accrued."

But the cases cited are not in point. In the first case a railroad corporation having a franchise and claiming the legal title and ownership of rights of way and of a line of railroad which was being operated by the defendant, another railroad corporation, brought ejectment to recover the property. The defendant corporation had a junior franchise and claimed to have purchased the entire property sued for, under a title emanating from the plaintiff. It was held that the plaintiff could recover. In the second case an individual having a legal title to strip the land through which a railroad company had been permitted by him to construct his road was held to be entitled to recover the land in ejectment, from the company, which had failed to pay him for the right of way.

This court decided in Gue v. Tidewater Canal Co., 24 How., 257 [65 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 635], that a corporate franchise to take tolls on a canal could not be seized and sold under a fieri facias unless authorized by a statute of the State which granted the Act of incorporation and that neither the lands nor the works essential to the enjoyment of the franchise could be separated from it and sold under such a writ so as to destroy or impair the value of the franchise. This decision was put on the ground that the franchise or right to take toll on boats going through the canal would not pass to the purchaser under the execution on a judgment at law against the corporation because it was an incorporeal hereditament, and, upon the settled principles of the common law, could not be seized on a fieri facias; and was made in a case where the corporation owned in fee the real estate, toll-houses, canal locks and wharf canal, all of which were necessary for the uses and working of the canal. But, in the view we have taken, as before stated, of the facts of this case, it is not necessary to discuss the general question as to the right to levy an execution at law on property owned by a railroad company in fee.

It is contended for the plaintiffs that the defendant is estopped from denying that they were seized in fee of the property sued for, on the ground that Richards, after the sheriff's sale, abandoned or turned over to the Visschers the line of culverting and grading, as far as he could do so—that is, he exercised no further authority over it, and the Opelika and Oxford Company made no further claim to it; that the Visschers then made the written contract with the new Railroad Company to construct the superstructure of the road, except as to the iron materials, for the twenty miles from, in, or two miles north of Opelika to a point beyond Lafayette, for a specified compensation; and that the contract provided that, on the completion of the twenty miles and the payment of the amount agreed, Visscher should transfer to the company "all right and title vested in him to all franchises, right of way or other property belonging to or pertaining to the said road under the old organization known as the Opelika and Oxford R. R." The bill of exceptions states that the defendant offered evidence tending to show that the East Alabama and Cincinnati Railroad Company was in possession of the property sued for from the time the Visschers ceased their work on it, as well as of the remainder of its line of railroad, till assignees in bankruptcy took possession of it, from whom it passed to purchasers of them, and then a receiver in the foreclosure suit took possession of it and held it till it was sold to the persons who conveyed it to the defendant. The Visschers appear not to have been in possession from the time they ceased work. They yielded possession, but not under any provision in the contract. As to the new work done by the Visschers they became merely creditors, out of possession, with such rights as the law gave them, but certainly with no right to eject the Company or its successors or grantees. They were to construct twenty miles of road for $14,750 per mile. When all was done and paid for they were to transfer what right they had to the road under the Opelika and Oxford organization. But they yielded up possession of that with the new work. As to what they obtained by the sheriff's sale and deed they acquired nothing thereby formerly belonging to the Opelika and Oxford Company, under the name of right of way, granted to or acquired by that company, which was capable of being conveyed by them; and as to anything else, their right did not lie in ejectment. Whether they were vendors or creditors in respect to what they so agreed to transfer, it is not necessary or proper to determine in this suit. There was nothing in what occurred between the parties or in the contract or in the transactions under it, which estopped the defendant from disposing the right of the plaintiffs to recover in ejectment on the strength of their title. [355]

It follows, from these views, that the Circuit Court erred in its first and third charges to the jury; and, as this conclusion goes to show that the plaintiffs had no title on which they could recover in ejectment, it becomes unnecessary to consider any of the other questions raised by the defendant. The judgment is reversed, and the case is remanded to the Circuit Court with a direction to grant a new trial.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[247]

BARTLETT DOE, Appt.,

v.

HENRY C. HYDE, Assignee in Bankruptcy of the CITY BANK OF SAVINGS, LOAN AND DISCOUNT.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 247-252.)

Bankruptcy—suit by creditor against assignee to recover proceeds of a security—two years' limitation.

* D., a creditor of a bankrupt, holding two securities therefor after being cited in a proceeding commenced against him by the assignee in bankruptcy, by petition, to obtain the delivery of the two securities, as being unlawfully in his possession, delivered up one of them to the assignee, in July, 1871. In November, 1872, the assignee sued D. to recover the other security, and in 1877 it was decided in that suit that D. was entitled to hold it. There being a deficiency on the debt, and the assignee having collected the security delivered to him, D., in 1879, sued the assignee to have its proceeds applied on the debt. Held, that the right of action accrued to D. in July, 1871, and was barred by the two years' limitation prescribed in section 2 of the bankruptcy Act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat., 518), and section 5,057 of the Revised Statutes.

[248]

[No. 218.]

Submitted Mar. 31, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of California.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. W. W. Cope, for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

[248] Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal by Bartlett Doe, the plaintiff in a suit in equity brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of California, from a decree of the Circuit Court for that District affirming the decree of the District Court, dismissing the bill on demurrer. The defendant is Henry C. Hyde, assignee in bankruptcy of the City Bank of Savings, Loan and Discount, a California corporation, which was adjudicated a bankrupt by the District Court in December, 1870. The case made by the bill is this: In December, 1869, Doe lent to the bank $10,000, on its promissory note at two years, secured by the assignment of six promissory notes and six accompanying mortgages of real estate, made by other parties, amounting to $20,550. By an instrument executed by the parties at the time, it was agreed that the bank should be at liberty to substitute other securities of equal value with any of the assigned notes and mortgages, in their place, at any time before the maturing of the $10,000 note. In April, 1870, four of the six collateral notes and mortgages, amounting to $10,550, were, by consent, given up, and three other promissory notes and three like mortgages, made by other parties, amounting to $3,900, were substituted. In February, 1871, the assignee in bankruptcy presented to the District Court a petition alleging that Doe had unlawfully possessed himself of the five notes and five mortgages which he then held, amounting to $13,900, and praying that he be cited to show cause why he should not be ordered to deliver them up to the assignee. After Doe had bee so cited, the assignee demanded from him th delivery of the three notes and the three mor gages so substituted in April, 1870, and Do "believing him to be entitled to the custod thereof, delivered the same to him." Befor the assignee collected any moneys on them Do appeared to the petition, and in July, 1871, file an answer setting forth the indebtedness of th bank to him and how it was secured and th facts attending the substitution of securiti before mentioned, and averring that he was e titled to the possession of those which he ha so delivered to the assignee, and to the money collected or which might be collected on them In November, 1872, the assignee filed a bill i equity, in the District Court, against Doe, t obtain a decree for the delivery up of the tw remaining notes and mortgages, amounting $10,000, on the ground that the bank had n right to transfer them to Doe. Doe answere the bill, setting forth the transactions betwee the bank and himself respecting the loan an the securities transferred for securing it, an particularly the facts attending such substitu tion of securities; and averring that the assign had collected the money due on the securiti so delivered to him, and that he, Doe, was e titled to have them applied on the debt of th bank to him. In 1876 an interlocutory decr was made in that suit, to the effect that the a signee was entitled only to the surplus whic should remain after applying the two notes an the two mortgages to the payment of th $10,000 note, of December, 1869, and that an a counting should be had as to the amounts se erally due on that note and on those securitie The accounting was had, and on January 2 1877, the District Court decreed that on Jan ary 1, 1877, there was a balance due to Doe $7,096.82, after applying the securities retain by him. The assignee appealed to the Circu Court, but the appeal was dismissed for wa of prosecution, before July 2, 1877. Th amount of the deficiency remains due to Do The assignee collected the three notes and thr mortgages which Doe delivered to him, colle ing on one, June 19, 1872, $1,301.07; on a other, May 19, 1875, $500; and on the thir June 19, 1872, $293.80, the assignee giving th debtor an acquittance of the remainder. Aft the decree was rendered in the equity suit b gun in November, 1872, and after the appe therefrom was dismissed, and after Doe had s certained it would be necessary to resort to th three notes and three mortgages he had deli ered to the assignee, for the payment of th amount due to him from the bank, he deman ed from the assignee the delivery of those s curities or the payment of the moneys therel secured, which the assignee refused.

The bill in the present suit was filed Febr ary 25, 1879. Its prayer is for a decree th Doe is the beneficial owner of the securiti which he delivered to the assignee, and of th moneys represented by them, and is entitled have them applied on the indebtedness of th bank to him, and that the assignee pay over th proceeds, with interest, to Doe. The demurr sets forth various causes of demurrer, an among them, that eight years had elapsed, b fore the bill was filed, after Doe delivered the assignee the securities in question, and th

* Head note by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

[illegible] right of action to recover them or their proceeds was barred by § 2 of the Bankruptcy Act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. at L., 518), and by § [illegible] of the Revised Statutes of the United States. The limitation referred to is that no suit at law or in equity shall in any case be maintainable by or against an assignee in bankruptcy, or by or against any person claiming a adverse interest touching any property or rights of property, of the bankrupt, transferable to or vested in the assignee, in any court whatsoever, unless the same be brought within two years from the time the cause of action accrued, for or against the assignee.

The contention of the appellant is that the necessity for resorting to the securities which were delivered to the assignee was not determined until the decree of the District Court, assuming the amount of the deficiency, became final by the dismissal of the appeal to the Circuit Court, and that the cause of action did not accrue until that time, which was within two years before the filing of this bill. It does not definitely appear when the appeal was taken or when it was dismissed, except that those events occurred between January 29, 1877, and [illegible] 1877. But this is unimportant, because it is quite clear, on the averments of the bill, that the suit was barred.

In the proceeding instituted in the District Court by the assignee, in February, 1871, the petition alleged that Doe had unlawfully possessed himself of all the collateral notes and mortgages, five of each, which he then held, and prayed for an order that he deliver all of them up to the assignee. The bill in this suit says that after Doe had been cited to appear to the petition, the assignee applied to him for, and demanded the delivery to him, as assignee, of the three notes and three mortgages in question, and that Doe, "believing him to be entitled to the custody thereof, delivered the same to him." As the bill alleges that the answer of Doe to the petition was filed before the assignee received any of the moneys on those securities, it is inferred that that answer was filed after the securities were delivered by Doe. Nothing further is alleged to have been done on the petition. The three notes and the three mortgages selected from the whole number, though the petition covered all, having been delivered to the assignee, he allowed the matter to rest from July, 1871, till November, 1872, when he brought the equity suit in respect only of the three notes and two mortgages which had not been delivered to him. The averment of the bill in the suit is that, on a demand by the assignee on Doe for the delivery to him of the five notes and three mortgages, Doe delivered them to him. It is not averred that the delivery was accompanied by any expressed qualification or condition, or any agreement or arrangement or reservation made between the parties. The delivery followed the claim which the assignee had made in the petition, that the securities were unlawfully in the possession of Doe, and was made after Doe had been cited to appear to the petition. The statement in the bill that Doe delivering the assignee to be entitled to the custody of the securities, delivered them to him, is only the statement of what Doe now remembers as to the uncommunicated motives which induced him to deliver the securities. The assignee obtained the securities directly from Doe, under an assertion of title; and, if Doe desired to make available the claim set up in regard to them in July, 1871, in his answer to the petition, it became then his duty to procure a judicial decision of the matter, the assignee having accomplished the object of his proceeding. But the litigation dropped, and was not renewed, respecting those securities. The allegation of Doe, in his answer to the bill filed by the assignee in November, 1872, in regard to the securities retained by Doe, that Doe was entitled to have the assignee apply on the debt to Doe the securities which Doe had delivered to the assignee, amounted to nothing, [252] because such a claim could not be litigated in that suit. It was not a set-off or counterclaim to any relief sought by the assignee in that suit. The cause of action in regard to the securities delivered to the assignee by Doe accrued to Doe at the time of such delivery. It did not depend upon or arise from the existence or ascertainment of any deficiency of the other securities to meet the debt. If Doe was entitled at all to have the securities which were delivered to the assignee applied to his debt, he was, on the showing of the bill, as much entitled to have them so applied as to have the other securities so applied, and as much entitled to their possession for that purpose as to the possession of the other securities. His right of action to that effect accrued, therefore, when the assignee came into the possession of the securities, on their delivery to him by Doe.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOHN V. WEAVER ET AL., Appts., [244]
v.
SPENCER FIELD ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 244-247.)

Mortgages—foreclosure—plaintiff not the owner of notes.

*In a suit to foreclose a mortgage on land in Louisiana, given to secure the payment of negotiable promissory notes to their holder, it was held, on the facts, that the plaintiff was never the owner of the notes as against the mortgagor or those holding the land under him by deeds in which they assumed the payment of the notes and mortgage.

[No. 936.]

Submitted Jan. 6, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. J. D. Rouse and Wm. Grant, for appellants.

Mr. R. H. Marr, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court: [245]

This is a suit in equity, brought by Daniel Weaver in April, 1881, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana, against Spencer Field, Sr., Spencer Field, Jr., and Frederick T. Field. The bill prays that the defendants be decreed in solido to pay to the plaintiff the amount of three promissory notes, made by Spencer Field, Sr., to his own order, and indorsed by him, dated November 1, 1873, one for $2,000 at one year, one for $1,500 at two years, and one for $1,500 at three years, with interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum from maturity; and that certain land covered by a mortgage, of even date with the notes, given by Field, Sr., to one Williams, to secure the payment of the notes to their holder, be sold, and the notes be paid out of the proceeds. The other two Fields are made parties as having successively become grantees of the land, and assumed, each in the deed to himself, which he executed, the payment of the notes and the mortgage. Weaver having died in July, 1881, the suit was revived in the names of the appellants, as his heirs, in February, 1882.

*Head note by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

The bill avers that Weaver is the holder and owner of the notes. The answer of the three defendants, filed in June, 1882, avers that Weaver never was the owner of the notes, and never the holder of them for value or in good faith; that the notes and mortgage were made by Field, Sr., for the sole purpose of enabling him to raise money for his own purposes by the sale, or discount, or other use, of the notes; that the mortgage was made in favor of Williams or any future holder, in order to facilitate the use of the notes; that Field, Sr., was not indebted to Williams; that Williams gave no consideration for the notes, and was merely the nominal mortgagee, without interest; that the notes were never the property of Williams, nor did he ever have them in his possession with the knowledge or consent of Field, Sr.; that from the date of the notes, they remained in the possession of Field, Sr., until he used them and delivered them to one Folger, as security for a loan; that when such loan was paid, Folger returned the notes to Field, Sr., who retained them in his possession until on or about June 8, 1874, when he deposited them with Weaver, to be used, if practicable, to raise money for the uses and purposes of Field, Sr.; that after the notes had so been deposited, and while they were in the possession and custody of Weaver, Weaver caused Williams to pledge the notes to him, Weaver, as security for the note of Williams for some $2,000; that Williams had no power to make such pledge, and the same was a mere nullity for the reason that Williams did not have the notes in his possession, and they did not belong to him, at the time the pledge was made; that the notes at that time belonged to Field, Sr., and were in the custody and possession of Weaver, to whom the facts with respect to the ownership and the possession of the notes were necessarily known at the time the pledge was made; that Field, Sr., did not, at any time after the notes were so returned to him by Folger, negotiate them or issue or deliver them to any person for value; that by reason of the premises, the notes and mortgage were extinguished and became of no effect; and that Weaver never had, nor have any persons deriving title from him, any right or cause of action against the defendants, or any one of them, on the notes or the mortgage.

[246]

There was a replication, and proofs were taken, Field, Sr., and Williams being witnesses for the defendants. The bill was dismissed l a decree which states that the court consider that, by the undisputed evidence of Field, Sr and Williams, and the circumstances of t case, it was shown that the notes in suit, aft being issued and delivered to Folger, were tak up by and came into the possession and ow ership of the maker, and were thus, under t laws of Louisiana, extinguished by confusio that Weaver had notice of all this; and that, the extinguishment of the notes, the mortga fell.

Without reference to the ground stated the Circuit Court as that on which it dismiss the bill, we are of opinion that the dismissal w proper. The matters of fact averred in the a swer, as above set forth, are established by t evidence. It is shown that Weaver never quired any title to the notes as owner or holder of them as security for any indebtedn from Field, Sr., to him; and that he receiv them from Field, Sr., as agent, to raise or vance money on, for or to Field, Sr., and failed do so, and retained them tortiously and witho the assent of Field, Sr. When Weaver first, February, 1878, took legal proceedings to force the mortgage, Field, Sr., in the petit in the suit he brought against Weaver in Mar 1878, more than three years before Weaver di to restrain Weaver's proceedings, denied t Weaver held or owned the notes, and alleg in substance, the same facts set up in the swer in the present suit. We have carefu considered the argument on the facts made the part of the appellants, but do not deem extended opinion upon them necessary. T property in the hands of the grantees bound only to the extent it was bound in hands of the mortgagor, and only to resp to a lawful holder of the notes.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U

FRANCES DODGE ET AL., Appts.,

v.

THOMAS KNOWLES.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 430-436.)

Husband and wife—what sufficient to bind a rate estate of wife for provisions.

*Neither the liability for provisions supplied dwelling-house where a husband and wife and t children are living together, nor a promissory

NOTE.—Married women—separate property how charged.

To create a charge against the separate prop of a married woman it is not sufficient that cre given on the faith of it. The wife must cont with relation to it. Manhattan B. & M. Co Thompson, 58 N. Y., 80; Hudson v. Davis, 43 256; West v. Laraway, 28 Mich., 464.

That repairs were made upon a married wom house with her consent, upon her husband's quest, is not necessarily sufficient to charge her her promise to pay may be inferred by the from the facts. Bickford v. Dane, 58 N. H., 18

Compare also Morse v. Mason, 108 Mass., Krouskop v. Shontz, 51 Wis., 204; Lovell v. iams, 125 Mass., 439; Speck v. Gurnee, 25 Hun Allen v. Graham, 12 Phila., 176; Lee v. Winsto Ala., 403; Sargeant v. French, 54 Vt., 284.

*Head note by Mr. Justice GRAY.

given by the husband, describing himself as trustee for the wife, in payment for such supplies, can be recovered in equity upon the wife's separate estate without clear proof that she contracted the debt as her own behalf or intended to bind her separate estate for its payment.

[No. 156.]

Submitted Jan. 9, 1885. Ordered for reargument Jan. 17, 1885. Resubmitted Mar. 2, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See also the opinion of the court on motion to set aside this judgment and dismiss appeal, post 296.

Mr. J. Holdsworth Gordon, for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal by the children and heirs at law of Frances I. Dodge, a married woman, from a decree ordering her real estate to be sold for the payment of debts alleged to have been due from her to the appellee, upon a bill filed by him in behalf of himself and other creditors who might come in, against the trustee in his own right and as trustee and executor of the wife, and against her children and other persons interested in the real estate.

The following facts were undisputed: By an antenuptial settlement executed on January 2, 1867, Mrs. Dodge (then Frances I. Chapman) conveyed all her real estate to Mr. Dodge in trust to hold the same for her sole and separate use and benefit during her life, and so that the same and the rents and profits thereof should not be liable for his debts, "or in any way subject to his control or contracts, except so far as is consistent with the provisions of the contract"; and to permit her, by herself or her attorney appointed by writing under her hand, to collect and receive the rents and profits from time to time accruing, and to dispose of the same as she might see fit for her own separate use and benefit; and if she should, by writing under her own hand and seal and attested by two witnesses, direct the leasing or absolute sale of the real estate or any part thereof, then the trustee should lease or sell and convey the same accordingly, and collect the proceeds of any sale and invest them in his name as her trustee in such manner as she might approve and require, "and hold the said investments, when made, for the same uses, trusts and purposes, and with the like power and authority and subject to the like limitations as aforementioned declared of and concerning the said trust subject"; and it was provided that the wife, notwithstanding her coverture, might by will devise and dispose of the estate or any part thereof as she might see fit, and the trustee should hold and dispose of the same accordingly, and further provisions were made for the disposition of the estate in case she should make no will.

In January 26, 1876, the wife died, leaving two children, and a will by which, by virtue of the power of appointment reserved to her in the marriage settlement, she devised all her real estate to her husband in trust for the use and benefit of two of her children, and appointed him executor, and made no provision for the payment of debts.

The plaintiff was a retail grocer, and at different times from 1870 to 1875 delivered groceries at the dwelling-house where the husband and wife and their children resided together, and received from the husband, in payment therefor or in renewal of other similar notes, promissory notes signed by him in this form: "F. Dodge, trustee for Fannie I. Dodge," payable to the plaintiff or order. At the time of the wife's death the plaintiff held four such notes payable at various periods not more than four months after date, for sums amounting in all to $2,171.61, and interest, and had delivered groceries to the amount of $120.10 for which no note had been given.

The personal property left by Mrs. Dodge was exhausted by a distribution made by her executor among her creditors, under a decree of the probate court by which the plaintiff received a dividend of $117 upon his claim.

It was further alleged in the bill, and denied in the answer of the children, that at the time of the giving of the four notes, and for several years before, Mrs. Dodge was indebted to the plaintiff in a large sum of money for groceries furnished to her on the credit of her sole and separate estate, for the maintenance of herself and her children and her husband, he being insolvent and entirely without property; and that she caused him for her to make and deliver the notes to the plaintiff; "all which said indebtedness said Frances I. Dodge declared was chargeable to her sole and separate estate, upon the faith of which it was incurred, it having been represented to the plaintiff that her intention to fully secure the same by a proper conveyance in trust had been from time before her death prevented by her physical condition;" and that at the time of her death there was also due to plaintiff the sum of $120.10 on open account for groceries furnished as aforesaid.

The material parts of the testimony introduced by the plaintiff were as follows:

The plaintiff testified: "The groceries were furnished to Mrs. Fannie I. Dodge. They were furnished to the credit of Mrs. Dodge. The four notes were received in part renewal of other notes and a running grocery account. Mrs. Dodge is also indebted to me in the sum of $120.10 for groceries furnished upon her faith and credit. These groceries were delivered at her dwelling-house. They were ordered by Mr. Dodge and the servants, from time to time. Occasionally Mrs. Dodge was in the store and ordered some. These articles were furnished upon the credit of Mrs. Dodge because I expected Mrs. Dodge to pay me for them. I did not expect Mr. Dodge to pay for them because Mrs. Dodge was looked upon as being worth means, and Mr. Dodge not. Mr. Dodge never offered to pay me this account or any portion of it, or to give his own note for any portion of it. He has handed me money which has been placed to the credit of the account. He has repeatedly told me that Mrs. Dodge had plenty of property to pay her debts, and would. He promised me security from Mrs. Dodge upon her real estate for this indebtedness. I did not get it owing to Mrs. [433] Dodge's death. I did not get a promise from anybody else that I should have real estate security. Mrs. Dodge never personally promised to give me real estate security. I did not see her during the latter part of the transaction." The plaintiff put in evidence a letter written to him on January 10, 1876, by Mr. Dodge, saying: "My wife is dangerously ill, and has been ever since I saw you. Of course I can do nothing yet as to the security promised you. As long as Mrs. Dodge lives, it requires her signature; if she dies, I am still trustee for her heirs, and can then execute a deed to you as such trustee."

The husband testified that he was a clerk in an insurance office, and further testified: "The notes were signed 'F. Dodge, trustee for Fannie I. Dodge,' because I had no property. I had no property to give a note upon; I was bankrupt. They were to be chargeable to her. They would not have been signed by me as trustee unless it was for her and upon her responsibility. I never accompanied the delivery of those notes with the declaration that they were intended to bind her real estate—not that I can remember. These notes were given with the knowledge of my wife, under her general authority. The amounts do not represent any [434] indebtedness contracted by me. The articles furnished by Mr. Knowles were to eat. The family consumed them—my wife's family. Her children and servants comprised that family. These articles were purchased by her, and on her credit. She made the exclusive arrangements for their purchase through me, as trustee. I was an inmate of the family during this time; my salary furnished the marketing, and I gave everything I had to the family. I could not support the whole family. She furnished medicines, wood and coal. I told Mr. Knowles verbally that Mrs. Dodge was ill with paralysis; that she could not be spoken to on business; that when she got well I would get her to give him real estate security if I could. I afterwards wrote him the letter of January 10, 1876. The promise given by me was in connection with the notes held by Mr. Knowles. By signing a note I could not make it binding on real estate. These notes were not intended by me to be binding upon her real estate any more than suit at law would make them so. I only meant that she had real estate enough to secure any debt she was making."

At the hearing upon bill, answers, a general replication and evidence, the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia at special term entered a decree dismissing the bill. Upon appeal to the general term that decree was reversed, and it was adjudged that the plaintiff's claim, as stated in the bill, be a lien upon the real estate included in the marriage settlement. 1 Mackey, 66. The children appealed to this court.

This being an appeal in equity, the facts as well as the law are to be determined by this court. The opinion of the court below and the brief of the appellant deal principally with questions of the manner in which the wife could charge her separate estate, and of the effect of her exercise of the power of appointment as making that estate assets for the payment of her debts. But it is unnecessary to consider either of those questions, because we do not find in the record any satisfactory evidence that the debts sought to be enforced were the wife's debts, or that she intended t charge them upon her separate estate.

The plaintiff's claims are for groceries supplie to a household in which the husband and wi and their children were living together; an upon promissory notes given by the husban describing himself as trustee for the wife, i payment for groceries so supplied. The obl gation to pay for the supplies of the family ordinarily a debt of the husband. Promissor notes given by the husband, though descril ing himself as trustee for the wife, bind hi personally, and do not bind her estate unle he is clearly proved to have had authority give them in her behalf. The terms of th marriage settlement did not authorize the hu band to contract any debts on the wife's a count. The evidence introduced by the plain iff consisted of the testimony of himself and the husband. The plaintiff's testimony wa rather to his own motives and reasons fo charging the goods to the wife, than to any co tract by her; and the husband's testimony wa more to legal conclusions than to specific fact

While the plaintiff testified in general term that the goods were furnished to the wife, an upon her faith and credit, and gave, as his re son for furnishing them upon her credit, th he expected her to pay for them, and did n expect the husband to do so because she wa looked upon as worth means and he was no and stated that the husband promised him s curity from the wife upon her real estate; y the only specific facts to which he testifie bearing upon the question who was his debto were that the groceries were delivered at th dwelling house; that they were ordered by th husband and the servants, and occasionally b the wife; and that the husband had handed hi money which had been placed to the credit the account. He did not testify to any e press contract by the wife, and he admitted th she never promised to give him security on h real estate.

The testimony of the husband was hard more direct. He testified, indeed, that the goo were purchased by the wife and on her cred and that she made the exclusive arrangemen for their purchase through him as trustee; th the notes were to be chargeable to her, an would not have been signed by him as trust unless it was for her and upon her responsibi ty; and that they "were given with her know edge, under her general authority." But he d not define or indicate the nature or extent the general authority to which he referred; did not testify that she ever promised to p for the goods or expressly authorized him promise that she would pay for them; and did testify that he never, so far as he cou remember, accompanied the delivery of th notes with a declaration that they were inten ed to bind her real estate.

Such testimony is wholly insufficient to wa rant a court of equity in decreeing that deb which are prima facie the debts of the husban should be considered as debts of the wife, an made a lien upon her separate estate.

Decree reversed and case remanded, with dire tions to dismiss the bill.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Cited—116 U. S., 144.

NORMAN H. POLLOCK, Appt.,

v.

BRIDGEPORT STEAMBOAT COMPANY, Claimant of the Steamboat LAURA, etc.

(See S. C., "The Laura," Reporter's ed., 411-417.)

Remission, by Secretary of the Treasury, of penalties incurred by a steam vessel—when a bar is set up by informer—practice of granting remissions, too firmly established to be questioned.

1. A remission by the Secretary of the Treasury, under section 5294 of the Revised Statutes, of penalties incurred by a steam vessel for taking on board an unlawful number of passengers, where the remission is applied for before a suit in rem brought for the penalties against the vessel, by an informer, is tried, is effectual to destroy all liability in the suit.

2. The practice of granting remissions of pecuniary penalties and forfeitures, by officers other than the President, sanctioned by statute and acquiescence for nearly a century, as a valid exercise of authority and no invasion of the power of pardon granted by the Constitution to the President, is too long established to be questioned.

[No. 191.]

Argued Jan. 30, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The libel in this case was filed in the District Court, by the appellant, to recover certain penalties amounting to $5,661. The penalties in question having been remitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, the court entered a decree dismissing the libel. This decree having been affirmed, on appeal, by the court below, the libelant appealed to this court.

The case is further stated by the court.

Mr. Henry G. Atwater and Albert A. Ames, for appellant.

Mr. Dennis McMahon, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The statutes regulating the transportation of passengers by steam vessels on such of the waters of the United States as are common highways of commerce or are open to general or unrestrictive navigation—other than public vessels of this country, vessels of other countries, and small-boats propelled in whole or in part by steam—provide that every certificate of inspection granted to steamers carrying passengers, other than ferry-boats, shall show the number of passengers of each class for whom the steamer has accommodations and whom it can carry with prudence and safety; that it shall not be lawful to take on board a greater number of passengers than is stated in the certificate of inspection, and that "for every violation of this provision the master or owner shall be liable, to any person suing for the same, to pay the amount of passage money and ten dollars for each passenger beyond the number allowed." R. S. §§ 4399, 4400, 4464, 4465; Act of Feb. 28, 1871, 16 Stat. at L., 440, 454. These penalties are declared to be a lien upon the offending vessel. § 4469. Another section in the same title provides: "If any vessel propelled in whole or in part by steam be navigated without complying with the terms of this title, the owner shall be liable to the United States in a penalty of $500 for each offense, one half for the use of the informer; for which sum the vessel so navigated shall be liable, and may be seized and proceeded against by way of libel in any District Court of the United States having jurisdiction of the offense."

The libel in this case was filed by the appellant to enforce a lien, in his favor, upon a steam vessel of the class to which the above regulations apply, for penalties amounting to the sum of $5,661, which, it is claimed, accrued to the appellant, as the person suing for them, by reason of the transportation on that vessel at certain specified times, of a larger number of passengers than its certificate of inspection permitted.

Before the trial in the District Court the owner of the vessel, a corporation which had intervened, filed an amended answer, setting up in bar of the further prosecution of the suit, a warrant in due form, by the Secretary of the Treasury, remitting to the appellee "all the right, claim and demand of the United States, and of all others whatsoever, to said forfeiture of passage money and penalties, on payment of costs, if any there be."

The provision of the statute under which this warrant of remission was issued is in these words:

"The Secretary of the Treasury may, upon application therefor, remit or mitigate any fine or penalty provided for in laws relating to steam vessels, or discontinue any prosecution to recover penalties denounced in such laws, excepting the penalty of imprisonment or of removal from office, upon such terms as he, in his discretion, shall think proper; and all rights granted to informers by such laws shall be held subject to the Secretary's power of remission, except in cases where the claims of any informer to the share of any penalty shall have been determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, prior to the application for the remission of the penalty; and the Secretary shall have authority to ascertain the facts upon all such applications, in such manner and under such regulations as he may deem proper." Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5294. [413]

The costs having been taxed and paid into court, the libel was, by order of the court, dismissed. Pollock v. Steamboat Laura, 5 Fed. Rep., 133. Upon appeal to the Circuit Court, the decree was affirmed, that court concurring with the District Court in holding that the remission by the Secretary of the Treasury discharged all liability for the penalties. The Laura, 19 Blatchf., 562.

The warrant of remission, it is contended by the libelant, is without legal effect and should have been disregarded, because the statute upon which it rests is in conflict with the clause of the Constitution investing the President with power "to grant reprieves and pardons for all offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment." The argument advanced in support of this position, briefly stated, is that the power of the President to grant pardons includes the power to remit fines, penalties and forfeitures imposed for the commission of offenses against, or for the violation of the laws of, the United States; that such power is in its nature exclusive; and that its exercise, in whatever form, by any subordinate officer of the government, is an encroachment upon the constitutional prerogative of the President.

*Dissent by Mr. Justice HARLAN.

It is not necessary to question the soundness of some of these propositions. It may be conceded that, except in cases of impeachment and where fines are imposed by a co-ordinate department of the government for contempt of its authority, the President, under the general unqualified grant of power to pardon offenses against the United States, may remit fines, pen-[414] alties and forfeitures of every description arising under the laws of Congress; and, equally, that his constitutional power in these respects cannot be interrupted, abridged or limited by any legislative enactment. But is that power exclusive, in the sense that no other officer can remit forfeitures or penalties incurred for the violation of the laws of the United States? This question cannot be answered in the affirmative without adjudging that the practice in reference to remissions by the Secretary of the Treasury and other officers, which has been observed and acquiesced in for nearly a century, is forbidden by the Constitution. That practice commenced very shortly after the adoption of that instrument, and was perhaps suggested by legislation in England, which, without interfering with, abridging or restricting the power of pardon belonging to the Crown, invested certain subordinate officers with authority to remit penalties and forfeitures arising from violations of the revenue and customs laws of that country. Stat. 27 Geo. III., chap. 32. See also Stat. 51 Geo. III., chap. 96, and 54 Geo. III., chap. 171.

By an Act passed March 3, 1797, 1 Stat. at L., 506, the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to mitigate or remit any fine, penalty, forfeiture or disability arising from any law providing for the laying, levying or collecting duties or taxes, or any law concerning the registering and recording of ships or vessels, or the enrolling or licensing ships or vessels employed in the coasting trade or fisheries, or regulating the same, if in his opinion the same was incurred without willful negligence, or fraudulent intention by the person or persons subject to the same. He was also authorized to direct a prosecution instituted for the recovery thereof to cease and be discontinued upon such terms and conditions as he deemed reasonable and just. This Act expired by limitation at a designated time. But by an Act passed February 11, 1800, it was revived to continue in force without limitation as to time. 2 Stat. at L., 7, chap. 6. From the adoption of the Constitution to the present moment, Congress has asserted its right by statute to invest the Secretary of the Treasury and other officers of the executive branch of the government with power to remit fines, penalties and forfeitures [415] imposed for the violation of the laws of the United States.* And in none of the cases in this court or in the Circuit and District Courts of the United States, involving the operation or effect of such warrants of remission, was it ever suggested or intimated that the legislation was an encroachment upon the President's power of pardon—so far at least as it invested the Secretary of the Treasury, or other officers, with authority to remit pecuniary penalties and forfeitures. Indeed, the case of U. S. v. Morris, 10 Wheat., 246, may be regarded as a direct adjudication in favor of the validity of that part of the Act of 1797, brought forward in all of the subsequent statutes upon the same subject, which confers upon the Secretary the power to remit fines, penalties and forfeitures.

In that case—which involved the right to a share in a forfeiture declared by statute—the question related to the power of the Secretary under that Act, after final sentence of condemnation and judgment for the forfeiture accruing under the revenue laws, to remit the forfeiture. The court held that the power could be exercised under that Act at any time before the money was actually paid over to the collector for distribution. It was said: "The authority of the Secretary to remit at any time before condemnation of the property seized is not denied on the part of the plaintiff [the officer claiming the forfeiture]; and it cannot be maintained that Congress has not the power to vest in this officer authority to remit after condemnation; and the only inquiry would seem to be whether this has been done by the Act referred to." Evidently the court and the eminent counsel who appeared in that case accepted it as a proposition not open to discussion, that the power of the President to pardon for offenses did not preclude Congress from giving the Secretary of the Treasury authority to remit penalties and forfeitures. Touching the objection now raised as to the constitutionality of the legislation in question, it is sufficient to say, as was said in an early case, that the practice and acquiescence under it, "commencing with the organization of the judicial system, affords an irresistible answer and has indeed fixed the construction. It is a contemporary interpretation of the most forcible nature. This practical exposition is too strong and obstinate to be shaken or controlled. Of course the question is at rest and ought not now to be disturbed." Stuart v. Laird, 1 Cranch, 308. The same principle was announced in the recent case of Lithographic Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S., 53 [bk. 28, L. ed. 349], where a question arose as to the constitutionality of certain statutory provisions reproduced from some of the earliest statutes enacted by Congress. The court said "The construction placed upon the Constitution by the first Act of 1790 and the Act of 1802, by the men who were contemporary with its formation, many of whom were members of the convention which framed it, is of itself entitled to very great weight; and when it is remembered that the rights thus established have not been disputed during a period of nearly a century, it is conclusive." See also Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How., 315; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat., 304; Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat., 264.

It is however insisted that if the statute in question is constitutional it cannot be construed as giving the Secretary of the Treasury the power to remit a penalty after a suit for its recovery has been instituted by a private person. In support of this position we are referred to numerous authorities, which, it is claimed, hold that the test of what may be done under the power of pardon granted by our Constitution is what the King of England could do, by virtue of his pardoning power, at the time of the separation from that country: and that he could not grant a pardon to the injury of a subject, and therefore, could not remit a penalty after suit by a private person to recover it. It is quite true, as declared in United States v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 160, that, since the power to pardon "had been exercised from time immemorial by the executive of that nation whose language is our language, and to whose judicial institutions ours have a close resemblance, we adopt their principles respecting the operation and effect of a pardon." But that principle has no possible application to the present case, for the statute under which the libelant proceeds and without which he would have no standing in court, declares, in terms, that "all rights granted to informers"—and the libelant is plainly of the class intended to be described—shall be held subject to the Secretary's power of remission, except in cases where the claims of any informer to the share of any penalty shall have been determined by a court of competent jurisdiction prior to the application for the remission of the penalty." If the libelant had, by virtue of his suit, an inchoate interest in such penalties, that interest was acquired subject to the power of the Secretary to destroy it by a remission applied for before the right is ascertained and established by the judgment of the proper court.

*1 Stat. at L., 122, chap. 12; Id., 275, chap. 35; 2 Id., 454, chap. 8, § 6; Id., 502, chap. 66, § 14; Id., 510, chap. 5, § 12; Id., 701, chap. 49, § 4; 3 Id., 92, chap. 1, § 14; Id., 617, chap. 14, § 3; Id., 739, chap. 21, § 35; 9 Id., 593, chap. 21, § 3; 11 Id., 95, chap. 159, § 10; 12 Id., 257, chap. 3, § 8; Id., 271, chap. 10, § 3; Id., 405, chap. 81, § 4; Id., 737, chap. 76, § 1; 13 Id., 198, chap. 164, § 8; 14 Id., 160, chap. 184, § 63; 15 Id., 242, chap. 273, § 8; 16 Id., 179, chap. 185, § 9; 17 Id., 325, chap. 335, § 316; 18 Id., 140, chap. 391, § 18; R. S. §§ 2858, 3001, 3078, 3115, 3220, 3412, 3461, 5292-5294.

The decree below is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

STATE NATIONAL BANK OF BOSTON, Appl.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 401-410.)

Fraud—Liability of United States.

1. Where, by the connivance of a clerk in the office of an assistant treasurer of the United States, a person wrongfully obtains from that office money belonging to the United States, and, to replace it, pays to the clerk money which he obtains by fraud from a bank, the clerk having no knowledge of the means by which the latter money was obtained, the United States are not liable to refund the money to the bank.

[illegible] distinguished from U. S. v. State Bk., 96 U. S. 30 (bk. 24, L. ed. 647).

[No. 229.]

Argued Apr. 2, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mssrs. Geo. O. Shattuck and W. A. Munson for appellant:

It must be held in this case, as in that of U. S. v. State Bk., 96 U. S., 30 (bk. 24, L. ed. 647), that Hartwell "was privy to the entire fraud from the beginning to the end, and was a participant in its consummation."

This case is stronger than that in 96 U. S. because it is found in this case that Hartwell did actually know that the draft came from the claimant's cashier and that he was to be "hurt" by the refusal to let the funds go out of the subtreasury after the count.

As against the claimant, Hartwell's fraud was much grosser than in the former case. Although he had promised to return the money, and knew that Carter was relying on the funds to be returned to repay all the parties any moneys he should obtain, and was acting on such reliance, he and the chief clerk, Whittle, had decided not to let the money go out of the subtreasury.

Hartwell and Carter were acting together for a fraudulent purpose, and the knowledge and acts of each were the knowledge and acts of the other. Whether each actually knew all the details known to the other was of no consequence.

Lincoln v. Claflin, 7 Wall., 132 (74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 106); Moore v. Tracy, 7 Wend., 229; Skinner v. Merchants' Bk., 4 Allen, 290; Boas v. Tate, 48 Ind., 60; Page v. Parker, 43 N.H., 363; Tappan v. Powers, 2 Hall (N. Y.), 277.

A party coming late into a conspiracy is even responsible for the prior acts of the conspirators.

Den v. Johnson, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 88.

Hartwell requested Carter to obtain the funds to tide over the count, and solemnly promised to return them as soon as the count was over. It was clearly his intention that Carter should act upon his assurances in dealing with the parties from whom the funds came, and when the draft of the State Bank was offered to him, he had notice that the State Bank had acted upon Carter's representations that he was to have the funds. Any one for whom false representations were intended, and who was acting upon them, has a right of action.

Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad., 114; Langridge v. Levy, 2 Mees. & W., 519; S. C., 4 Mees. & W., 337; Gerhard v. Bates, 2 El. & B., 476; Peek v. Gurney, L. R. 6 H. L., 377.

The same rule applies to a case of fraudulent concealment.

The United States is not in the position of a holder in good faith and for value. When their agent took the money from Carter, it had been and was distinctly stated for what it was delivered, i. e., to be used as a counter and then returned. It was wrongfully withheld, and in violation of the agreement under which it was originally received. It was and is therefore held to the claimant's use.

Mr. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., for appellee.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court: [401]

The appellant brought this action in the Court of Claims to recover from the United States the sum of $125,000, with interest from March 1, 1867. The petition having been dismissed, the question upon this appeal is as to the liability of the United States to any judgment in behalf of the appellant.

The facts found by the Court of Claims, and upon which the correctness of the judgment below must depend, are as follows:

The appellant in February and March, 1867, was a national banking association, having its place of business in the city of Boston, Massachusetts; and there was in that city a firm of brokers under the style of Mellen, Ward & Co., the junior member of which was Edward Carter.

[402]

At the same time George D. Whittle was the chief clerk in the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in Boston, having its general management, and Julius F. Hartwell was disbursing clerk or paying teller.

Prior to the 28th day of February, 1867, Mellen, Ward & Co., acting through Carter, succeeded in inducing Hartwell to take out of the sub-treasury at various times and to place in Carter's hands, large amounts of money belonging to the United States until, first and last, the sums so abstracted aggregated a million to a million and a quarter dollars. This money was used by Mellen, Ward & Co. in stock speculations. About the middle of February, 1867, the amount so obtained by Carter being then very large, Hartwell informed him that in the use of the public money they were guilty of a crime. This, it is found by the court below, was the first information Carter had of the criminal character of these transactions.

Between the middle of February and the 1st of March, 1867, several conversations were held between Carter and Hartwell, in which the former expressed his purpose to make the latter's money right for the examination of the sub-treasury, which was expected to take place on the 1st of March, upon Hartwell's solemn assurance that he would let him have the money out of the sub-treasury again on the 2d of March, after the examination should be over, when Carter would repay the parties the moneys he had obtained, and, selling all the stocks and securities his firm held, replace as much as possible of the money in the sub-treasury so as to reduce the loss to the smallest possible amount. Carter promised Hartwell that he would return all the money before the 1st of April, not again to come out of the sub-treasury. During the period within which those conversations between Carter and Hartwell occurred, the latter knew in a general way the extent of the resources of Mellen, Ward & Co., and how they were using the money he had let Carter have.

[403]

On the 28th of February Carter returned to Hartwell all the money the latter had let him have except the sum of $157,000, which the former promised to return to him the next morning. Among the funds so returned were United States gold certificates to the amount of $580,000. On the afternoon of the same day Hartwell made known to Whittle that he had been loaning to Carter the funds of the Government, and that all had been returned except about $150,000. He told Whittle that the money had been paid out to Carter from time to time to assist in stock speculations; that it was paid back again to tide over the monthly examination; that he had promised Carter that the money should be repaid to him the following day; and had told him that he would ask Whittle's consent that the money go back to him again. Whittle told Hartwell that it was an impossibility to let the money go back to Carter, and that any deficiency must be paid in before 10 o'clock the next morning.

About 9 o'clock A. M. of the 1st of March Hartwell called on Carter at Mellen, Ward & Co.'s office and asked him if he had that money. Carter told him he did not then have it but could give it to him before 10 o'clock and asked Hartwell if he could not take a draft on New York, stating to him that Mellen, Ward & Co. would have a very large amount of New York funds to dispose of as soon as Hartwell returned to them the gold certificates aforesaid. Hartwell said he would take the New York funds, and the interview then ended. It does not appear that up to this time Carter had any knowledge or intimation of Hartwell's disclosures to Whittle; nor does it appear that Carter informed Hartwell as to how he intended or expected to get the draft on New York. At the close of this interview Hartwell returned from Mellen, Ward & Co.'s office to the sub-treasury.

About half past nine o'clock of the same morning Carter went to the banking-house of plaintiff and obtained from Charles H. Smith, its cashier, his draft, as cashier, on the Manhattan Company, New York, in favor of Mellen, Ward & Co., for $125,000, which draft was in the words and figures following, to wit:

"The State National Bank of Boston,
Boston, March 1, 1867

Pay to the order of Mellen, Ward & Co., one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

No. 215. C. H. Smith, Cashier.

To the cashier of the Manhattan Company New York."

The facts and circumstances connected with his obtaining that draft were as follows: Carter asked Smith for the Bank's draft on New York for $125,000, promising to give him immediately, in return, Mellen, Ward & Co.'s draft on New York for the same amount, with $100,000 in United States gold certificates attached, or else the Adams Express Company's receipt for that amount in gold. Upon the faith of this promise Smith drew and delivered to Carter the draft aforesaid. In this interview between Smith and Carter nothing was said by the latter about there being any deficiency in the sub-treasury for which he was responsible; nor that he desired to use the draft to help make good a deficiency there; nor what his purpose was in obtaining it; nor does it appear that Smith had, at any time before or during this interview, any knowledge or intimation of the transactions between Carter and Hartwell. Within fifteen or twenty minutes after Carter received from Smith the draft for $125,000, the former, at the office of Mellen, Ward & Co., delivered it, together with $32,000 in currency, to Hartwell. The latter paid Carter nothing for the draft; it was passed to him by Carter to make good that deficiency; and Carter supposed it would not be wanted for that purpose over an hour. Neither before nor at the time Hartwell received from Carter the draft for $125,000 did the former know anything of the means by which the latter obtained it from Smith.

Immediately after Hartwell received that draft and the $32,000 in currency from Carter he took both to the sub-treasury and delivered them to Whittle, who objected to receiving the [illegible] because the rules of the government required the sub-treasury to receive nothing but gold, silver, legal-tender notes, or national bank notes; and besides, he had an impression that, in some form or other, the plaintiff's cashier was involved in the stock speculation which Hartwell had the day before told him of Mellen, Ward & Co.'s being engaged in; for Hartwell had then, after Whittle's refusal to let the money go out again, mentioned, among others, the name of Smith as one who was going to be [illegible]. Whittle then directed Hartwell to go out and collect the currency. Hartwell tried at several banks to raise the currency on the draft for $125,000, but could not find sufficient amount in any one bank. He then went to the Eagle National Bank of Boston, and obtained from it, in exchange for that draft, three of its drafts on New York, one for $75,000, and two of $25,000 each, with the idea that currency might be obtained in smaller amounts at different banks, but the hour was so late then—it being about ten o'clock—that he took the three drafts directly to Whittle at the sub-treasury, saying to him that he had obtained them from a cashier of the Eagle National Bank, in exchange for the draft for $125,000, and that was the most he could do. The Government examiners were at that time at work in the sub-treasury upon their monthly examination of the public funds. Whittle then went out from the sub-treasury with the three drafts of the Eagle National Bank, and sold them to the Second National Bank of Boston, and returned to the sub-treasury with the proceeds of the sale, $25,000 in currency, which he turned over, along with the $32,000 aforesaid, to the examiners. These sums made up Hartwell's deficiency and balanced the cash account of the sub-treasury. No part of the $157,000 which those two sums made up was ever returned to Hartwell or Carter, or Mellen, Ward & Co., or the bank.

Neither when the draft for $125,000 was given by Hartwell to Whittle nor when it was exchanged by the former for the drafts of the Eagle National Bank, did Whittle have any knowledge or notice of the consideration or money with which that draft had been obtained from the cashier of the appellant; but he had an impression that Carter had procured it.

About fifteen or twenty minutes after Smith received the draft for $125,000 to Carter, as mentioned stated, Smith went to Mellen, Ward & Co.'s office to inquire the reason why Carter had not brought to him the gold certificates as he had agreed to do. Carter was then absent from the office, and his partner Mellen told Smith that Carter was out about the matter at that time, and, as soon as he brought the certificates, he would take them to Smith. Immediately after this, Mellen, Ward & Co. sent to Smith the draft on New York for $125,000, but did not send with it any gold certificates nor a receipt of the Adams Express Company. After waiting perhaps fifteen minutes, Smith went again to know why the certificates or the receipt had not been brought to him, and then for the first time learned that Carter was at the sub-treasury and in trouble.

After all the foregoing transactions occurred, the bank voluntarily paid to the Eagle National Bank the draft for $125,000 which Carter obtained from Smith; and the three drafts of that bank were duly paid on presentation in New York. The aforesaid draft of Mellen, Ward & Co. for $125,000 was never paid, nor was it presented to the drawee for payment.

At the time Smith let Carter have the draft for $125,000 Smith was, as cashier, under bond to the plaintiff, with sureties, in the sum of $30,000, and after the plaintiff paid the draft it made demand upon him and his sureties, and these sureties, without being sued, paid to the plaintiff, within ninety days after the 1st of March, 1867, the full amount of their bond, and took a receipt therefor in terms such as the following:

"State National Bank, Boston, received of —— —— the amount due from them as sureties on the bond of Charles H. Smith, late cashier of said Bank, by reason of the defalcation of said Smith, resulting from an unauthorized draft made by the said Smith upon the Manhattan Co., New York, for the sum of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($125,000), which was applied to his own use.

"If the said Smith shall hereafter pay to the State National Bank the said sum of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, the Bank will return to the sureties the amounts by them severally paid; or if he shall pay so much thereof that the Bank shall be in the receipt—including the payments made by the sureties—of a surplus beyond one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, the Bank will return and distribute such surplus to the sureties in proportion to the sums by them severally paid. [407]

"But this receipt is not to be construed or understood as an admission or recognition of any obligation on the part of the Bank to take any measures to make up said defalcation, nor as the assertion of any claim by the said Bank upon any funds, property or means whereby the said defalcation or any part thereof can be made good, nor as any admission by the said Bank that any such funds, property, or means are in existence."

The present case differs materially from U. S. v. State Bank, 96 U. S., 33 [bk. 24, L. ed. 647]. Our judgment there proceeded upon the ground that the gold certificates deposited in the sub-treasury by Smith, the cashier of the State National Bank of Boston, were known by Hartwell, at the time he received them, to be the property of that Bank, and not of Mellen, Ward & Co. The deposit was made by Smith, in the presence of Carter; and, although the receipt for the certificates was out to Mellen, Ward & Co. or order, it was immediately indorsed by Carter, in the name of his firm, to Smith as cashier. The cancellation of the certificates and their transmission to the Treasurer of the United States at Washington was therefore in derogation of the rights of the bank. It was adjudged that money or property of an innocent person, which had gotten into the coffers of the nation by means of fraud to which its agent was a party, could not be held by the Government against the claim of the wronged and injured party.

There is no room in the present case for the application of that principle. Apart from his responsibility for the crime committed in using the money of the United States, Carter, representing Mellen, Ward & Co., was under a legal obligation to replace the amount abstracted from the sub-treasury. Of his purpose to do so Hartwell was informed. But he had no reason to believe that Carter would bring him money or securities which belonged to some one else and which he could not rightfully deliver in discharge of his indebtedness to the Government. When the draft of $125,000 was delivered by Carter to Hartwell, the latter was unaware of the means by which the former had obtained it from Smith, the cashier of appellant. It was, on its face, the property of Mellen, Ward & Co. Upon its receipt by Hartwell for the United States, the Government acquired the same rights in reference to it that any private citizen receiving it in the course of business would have acquired. That the Bank, by its cashier, made and delivered the draft to Carter upon the faith of his promise to give immediately, in return, Mellen, Ward & Co.'s draft on New York for the same amount, with $100,000 in United States gold certificates attached, or else the receipt of the Adams Express Company for that amount in gold, is a circumstance that does not affect the legal rights of the United States, to whom the draft was passed without knowledge. by its agent, of the condition upon which Mellen, Ward & Co. had received it from the Bank's cashier. Nor do we deem of any significance the fact that Hartwell promised to return to Carter the money which the latter should place in the sub-treasury for the purpose of concealing from the officer supervising the examination of its books the criminal transactions in question. Carter knew that that promise could not be kept without subjecting both himself and Hartwell to criminal prosecution; and it was no violation of his legal rights for the agents of the Government. after receiving from him the draft for $125,000, without any knowledge of the circumstances under which he had obtained it, to dispose of it and place the proceeds in the sub-treasury. After these proceeds reached the sub-treasury they could not be used or withdrawn except in the mode prescribed by law. The essential difference, therefore, between U. S. v. State Bank, ubi supra, and this case is, that in the former the agents of the Government appropriated to its use the property of an innocent person, knowing at the time that it belonged to that person and not to the Government; while in the present case they received, in the discharge of a debt due the Government, a draft belonging to the debtor, without any knowledge or notice that the debtor had obtained it upon conditions which had not been complied with, or by means of fraudulent representations.

[410]

We perceive no ground to question the correctness of the judgment below, and it is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[355] THE STEAMSHIP BELGENLAND, Her Tackle, Apparel, etc., SAMUEL JACKSON, Master, and THE SOCIETE ANONYME DE NAVIGATION BELGE AMERICAINE, Claimants, Appts.

v.

THEODORE JENSEN, MASTER OF THE NORWEGIAN BARQUE LUNA.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 355-373.)

Jurisdiction in admiralty in cases arising the high seas between foreigners of differe nationalities—discretion—review of autho ties—negligence in cases of collision—du of steamers.

1. The Admiralty Courts of the United Sta have jurisdiction of collisions occurring on the hi seas between vessels owned by foreigners of diffe ent nationalities.

2. The courts will use a discretion about assumi jurisdiction of controversies between foreigners cases arising beyond the territorial jurisdiction the country to which the courts belong; yet wha such controversies are communis juris spec grounds should appear to induce the court to de its aid to a foreign suitor when it has jurisdicti of the ship or party charged.

3. Upon appeal, the action of the court of first stance in assuming jurisdiction can only be qu tioned on the ground that its discretion has be exercised on wrong principles, or so unjustly as justify the court of appeal in holding that it h been exercised wrongly.

4. Where the parties are not only foreigners b belong to different nations, and the injury or a vage service takes place on the high seas, the seems to be no good reason why the party injur or doing the service should ever be denied justi in our courts.

5. The general maritime law, as understood an administered in the courts of the country in whi the litigation is prosecuted, should be applied cases between parties or ships of different natio alities arising on the high seas not within the ju risdiction of any nation.

6. When the facts found furnish conclusive pro of negligence it may be regarded as properly four amongst the conclusions of law as a legal inferen from those facts.

7. The facts found in this case show that the co lision occurred by the negligence of those havin charge of the steamship Belgenland in not seein the barque and in not taking the proper preca tions due to such a night and such a sea, by redu ing speed and keeping a sufficient lookout.

[No 169.]

Argued Jan. 16, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 188

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of t United States for the Eastern District Pennsylvania.

The history and facts of the case fully appe in the opinion of the court. For the opinio of this court on certain questions of practi which arose in this case, see bk. 27, 685, 686.

Messrs. Morton P. Henry and Henry E Edmunds, for appellants.

Messrs. J. Langdon Ward and Henr Flanders, for appellee:

The question of jurisdiction is well settled. The Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall., 435 (76 U. S bk. 19, L. ed. 772); Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How 611 (61 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 1038).

Under the circumstances the fact of a col sion is evidence of great negligence somewhe The New Orleans, 8 Ben., 102; The Lie Major, Id., 333; The Cella, 3 Ben., 168.

If the night was thick her speed of elev knots against wind and sea was too great. it was clear the steamer failed to see the ba as soon as she should have seen her, for wa of a proper lookout.

NOTE.—Admiralty jurisdiction—to what places co fined. Allen v. Newberry, 62 U. S. (21 How.), bk. 111, note.

Collision—rights of steam and sailing vessels w reference to each other. See St. John v. Paine, 51 S. (10 How.), 557, note.

The Jena, 6 Ben., 345; The Hansa, 5 Ben., [illegible]; The Colorado, 91 U. S., 692 (bk. 23, L. ed. [illegible]); The Adriatic, 13 Wall., 475 (80 U. S., bk. [illegible] L. ed. [illegible]).

The steamer's lookout was insufficient. Such steamships should have two besides the chief of the deck.

Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How., 570 (62 U. S., [illegible] L. ed. 219).

The steamer's side-lights were not visible, the barque was not apprised of her course and therefore any change of course on the part of the barque would have been wrong.

The Rose, 2 Asp. Mar. L. C., 182; 29 L. T. [illegible]; The James Watt, 2 W. Rob., 270; The Reformation, 1 Mar. L. C. O. S., 413; 9 L. T. N. S., [illegible]; The Bougainville, L. R. 5 P. C., [illegible]; The Great Eastern, 2 Mar. L. C. O. S., 97; [illegible] N. S., 5.

The final porting of the barque's helm in extremis was no negligence if wrong.

The Carroll, 8 Wall., 302 (75 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. [illegible]).

Rules of navigation do not apply to a vessel required to keep her course after the approach of a peril that the collision is inevitable.

The Genesee, 19 Wall., 41 (86 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. [illegible]); The Nichols, 7 Wall., 656 (74 U. S., bk. [illegible] L. ed. 157); The Johnson, 9 Wall., 146 (76 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 610); The Dexter, 23 Wall., [illegible] U. S., bk. 23, L. ed. 84).

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This case grows out of a collision which took place on the high seas between the Norwegian barque Luna and the Belgian steamship Belgenland, in which the former was run down and sunk. Part of the crew of The Luna, including the master, were rescued by The Belgenland and brought to Philadelphia. The master immediately libeled the steamship on behalf of the owners of The Luna and her cargo, and of surviving crew, in a cause civil and maritime.

The libel stated in substance that the barque Luna, of [illegible] tons, was on a voyage from Porto Rico to Queenstown or Falmouth, with a cargo of sugar, and when in latitude 44° 33′ and longitude 21° 43′, was met by the steamship Belgenland, and on, between one and two in the morning, and was run down and sunk by her; only five of her crew escaping; that the lights of the steamship was observed right ahead [illegible] a mile or more off; that the barque kept her course, as was her duty to do; and that the steamship took no measures to avoid her but [illegible] at full speed until she struck The Luna; and that the collision was altogether the fault of those in charge of the steamship.

The master of the Belgenland appeared for his owners, and filed an answer denying that The Luna at the time of the collision was sailing on the course alleged, and averred that she was crossing the bows of the steamship, and must have changed her course, and that this was the cause of the collision; that The Luna was not discovered until the instant of the collision, when it was too late to alter the course of the steamship; and that the reason why the barque was not seen before was that she was enveloped in a shower of rain and mist; and that the steamship was plunging into a heavy head sea, throwing water over her turtle deck forward.

The proctor of The Belgenland at the time of filing his answer excepted to the jurisdiction of the court, and stated for cause that the alleged collision took place between foreign vessels on the high seas and not within the jurisdiction of the United States; that The Belgenland was a Belgian vessel, belonging to the port of Antwerp, in the Kingdom of Belgium, running a regular line between Antwerp and the ports of New York and Philadelphia; and that the barque Luna was a Norwegian vessel, and that no American citizen was interested in the barque or her cargo.

The district court decided in favor of the libelant and rendered a decree for the various parties interested, to the aggregate amount of $50,278.23. An appeal was taken to the circuit court, which found the following facts, to wit:

"1. Between one and two o'clock on the morning of September 3, 1879, in mid ocean, a collision occurred between the Norwegian barque Luna on her voyage from Humacao, in Porto Rico, to Queenstown or Falmouth, and the steamship Belgenland on a voyage from Antwerp to Philadelphia, which resulted in the sinking of the barque, in the total loss of the vessel and her cargo and in the drowning of five of her crew. [358]

2. The wind was between S. W. and W. S. W., and there was not much sea but a heavy swell. The barque was running free, heading S. E. by E. half E., having the wind on her starboard quarter. All her square sails were set except her main royal, and she carried also her fore, main and mizzen stay-sails and inner jib. Her yards were braced a little, her main sheet was down but the weather-clew was up. She was making about seven and one half knots. Her watch on deck consisted of the first mate and three men; an able seaman was on the lookout on the top-gallant forecastle, and a capable helmsman was at the wheel.

She carried a red light on her port side and a green light on her starboard side, properly set and burning brightly, which could be seen, on a dark night and with a clear atmosphere, at least two miles. The character and location of these lights conformed to the regulations of the barque's nationality, which are the same as those of the British Board of Trade. About 1.45 o'clock the lookout sighted the white mast-head light of a steamer right ahead, distant, as he thought, about a mile, and reported it at once to the mate, who cautioned the man at the wheel to "keep her steady and be very careful," and the barque held her course.

No side-lights on the steamer were seen from the barque, but as the vessels approached each other the white light of the steamer gradually drew a little on the port bow of the barque for three or four minutes. The mate of the barque seeing the steamer's sails and that she was heading directly for the barque, was close aboard of her, and reasonably apprehending that a collision was inevitable, ordered the barque's helm hard a-port. In a few seconds the steamer's starboard light came into view, and in another instant she struck the barque on her port side, cutting her in two obliquely from the after part of her fore rigging to the fore part of the main rigging. [359]

3. The Belgenland was steering N. W. by W. half W. by compass, and making about eleven knots. Her second officer had charge of the deck, and his watch was composed of ten able seamen, two quartermasters, the second boatswain and the fourth officer. One able seaman was stationed on the lee or starboard side of the bridge, as a lookout. The second officer was on the bridge. The fourth officer was stationed at the after or standard compass, which was near the mizzen-mast, but at the time was on the bridge, having come there to report a cast of the log. A quartermaster was at the wheel. The rest of the watch was underneath the turtle-back or top-gallant forecastle.

The steamer was 416 feet long and about 38 feet beam. The bridge was 150 or 180 feet from her bow, and was six or seven feet higher than the top of the turtle-back, which was about 25 feet above the water.

The steamer had her fore, main and mizzen try-sails, fore stay-sails and jib set and drawing, and probably her jigger also. She heeled to starboard from ten to fifteen degrees.

4. The only lookout on the steamer was on the bridge. None was on the turtle-back, although it would have been entirely safe to station one there, for the alleged reason that the vessel was plunging into a head sea and taking so much water over her bows that he would have been of no use there.

5. The barque was not seen by those in charge of the steamer until just at the instant of the collision, when the second officer saw her head sails just across the steamer's bow, the lookout in the lee side of the bridge saw her after-sails and stern.

6. The moon was up, but was obscured by clouds. There was no fog, but occasional rain with mist, and the wind was blowing from the S. W. to W. S. W.

7. Objects could be seen at the distance of from five hundred yards to a mile. The mast-head light of the steamer was sighted and at once reported by the lookout on the barque, at the distance of about a mile; the port light of [360] the barque was seen by a steerage passenger on the steamer, looking out of his room just under the bridge, and reported to his roommates long enough before the collision to enable the second steerage steward, who heard the report, to go up the companion ladder, cross the deck and reach the steamer's rail; after the collision the mizzen-mast of the barque was all of her above water, and this was distinctly seen from the steamer when she was at the distance of five hundred yards from it.

8. The damages caused by the collision were assessed at $50,248.23. Upon these facts the court below deduced the following conclusions:

1. That the vessels were approaching each other from opposite directions, upon lines so close to each other as to involve the necessity of a deflection by one or the other of them to avoid a collision.

2. That the lookout on the barque saw the steamer when she was nearly a mile distant, and she was held steadily on her course, and that she thereby fulfilled her legal obligation. Even if her helm was ported it was at a time and under circumstances which did not involve any culpability on her part.

3. That it was the duty of the steamer to keep out of the way of the barque, and, to that en so to change her course as to preclude all dang of collision.

4. That the barque could and ought to ha been seen by the steamer when they were suf ciently distant from each other to enable t steamer to give the barque enough sea-room avert any risk of collision. In this failure observe the barque the steamer was negligen

5. No satisfactory or sufficient reason is fu nished by the respondent's evidence for th failure of observation. If it resulted from t inattention of the steamer's lookout, or becau their vision was intercepted by her fore tr sail, she was clearly culpable. If it is exp cable by the condition of the atmosphere— matter by what cause it was produced—it w the steamer's duty to reduce her speed and place a lookout on her turtle-back. An om sion to observe these precautions was neg gence.

But considering the proof that the barq held her course and that the steamer mig have seen her by proper vigilance, when suf ble precaution against collision might ha been taken, a mere speculative explanation the steamer's presumptive culpability cannot accepted as sufficient.

A decree was thereupon entered affirmi the decree of the district court in favor of t libelants for the sum of $50,748.23, with int est from March 25th, 1861, amounting $51,954.14, and costs.

A reargument was had on the question jurisdiction, and the court held and decided th Admiralty Courts of the United States ha jurisdiction of collisions occurring on the hi seas between vessels owned by foreigners different nationalities; and overruled the plea the jurisdiction. The case is now before us appeal from the decree of the circuit court.

The first question to be considered is that the jurisdiction of the district court to he and determine the cause.

It is unnecessary here, and would be out place, to examine the question which has often engaged the attention of the common-la courts, whether and in what cases the cou of one country should take cognizance of co troversies arising in a foreign country or places outside of the jurisdiction of any count It is very fully discussed in Mostyn v. Fabrig and the notes thereto, in 1 Smith, Lead. Ca 765; and an instructive analysis of the law w be found in the elaborate arguments of coun in the case of the San Francisco Vigilant Co mittee (Malony v. Dows, 8 Abb. Pr., 316), argu before Judge Daly in New York, 1859. W shall content ourselves with inquiring what ru is followed by courts of admiralty in deali with maritime causes arising between foreig ers and others on the high seas.

This question is not a new one in these cour Sir William Scott had occasion to pass upon in 1799. An American ship was taken by t French on a voyage from Philadelphia to Lo don, and afterwards rescued by her crew, c ried to England and libeled for salvage; a the court entertained jurisdiction. The cre however, though engaged in the American sh were British-born subjects, and weight w given to this circumstance in the disposition the case. The judge, however, made the f [illegible] remarks: "But it is asked, If they were American seamen would this court hold plea of their demands? It may be time enough to answer the question whenever the fact occurs. In the meantime I will say, without scruple, that I see no inconvenience that would arise if a British court of justice was to hold plea in such a case; or, conversely, if American courts were to hold pleas of this nature respecting the rights of British seamen on such occasions; for salvage is a question of jus gentium, and essentially different from the question of a seaman's contract, which is a creature of the municipal institutions of the country, to be applied and construed and explained by its own municipal rules. There might be good reason, therefore, for this court to decline to interfere in such cases and to remit them to their own domestic forum; but this is a general claim, upon the general ground of quantum meruit, to be governed by a sound discretion, acting on sound principles; and I can see no reason why the country should be afraid to trust to the equity of the courts of another on such a question, of such a nature, so to be determined. The Two Friends, 1 Rob., 271, 278.

The law has become settled very much in accord with these views. That was a case of salvage, but the same principles would seem to apply to the case of destroying or injuring a ship as to that of saving it. Both, when acted on on the high seas, between persons of different nationalities, come within the domain of the same law of nations, or communis juris, and are prima facie proper subjects of inquiry in any court of admiralty which first obtains jurisdiction of the rescued or offending ship at the termination in justice of the meritorious or guilty portion.

The same question of jurisdiction arose in another salvage case which came before this court in 1804, Mason v. The Blaireau, 2 Cranch, 240. There a French ship was saved by a British ship and brought into a port of the United States and the question of jurisdiction was raised by Mr. Martin, of Maryland, who, however did not press the point, and referred to the observations of Sir William Scott in The Two Friends. Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for the court, disposed of the question as follows: "A doubt has been suggested," said he "respecting the jurisdiction of the court; and upon reference to the authorities the point does not appear to have been ever settled. These doubts seem rather founded on the idea that upon principles of general policy this court ought not to take cognizance of a case entirely between foreigners than from any positive incapacity to act. On weighing the considerations drawn from public convenience those in favor of the jurisdiction appear much to over-balance those against it, and it is the opinion of this court that whatever doubts may exist in a case where the jurisdiction may be objected to there ought to be none where the parties assent to it." In that case the objection had not been taken in the first instance, as it was in the present. But we do not see how that circumstance can affect the jurisdiction of the court, however much it may influence the discretion in taking jurisdiction.

Many circumstances often exist which render inexpedient for the court to take jurisdiction of controversies between foreigners in cases not arising in the country of the forum; as, where they are governed by the laws of the country to which the parties belong and there is no difficulty in a resort to its courts; or, where they have agreed to resort to no other tribunals. The cases of foreign seamen suing for wages or because of ill-treatment are often in this category; and the consent of their consul or minister is frequently required before the court will proceed to entertain jurisdiction—not on the ground that it has not jurisdiction, but that, from motives of convenience, or international comity, it will use its discretion whether to exercise jurisdiction or not; and where the voyage is ended, [364] or the seamen have been dismissed or treated with great cruelty, it will entertain jurisdiction even against the protest of the consul. This branch of the subject will be found discussed in the following cases: Thompson v. Catharina, 1 Peter's Adm., 104; Willendson v. The Försöket, Id., 197; Weiberg v. St. Oloff, 2 Id., 428; The Golubchick, 1 W. Rob., 143; The Nina, L. R. 2 Adm. & Eccl., 44; S. C. on appeal, L. R. 2 P. C., 38; The Leon XIII., 8 Prob. Div., 121; The Havana, 1 Spr., 402; The Becherdass Ambaidass, 1 Low., 569; The Pawashick, 2 Id., 142.

Of course, if any treaty stipulations exist between the United States and the country to which a foreign ship belongs, with regard to the right of the consul of that country to adjudge controversies arising between the master and crew, or other matters occurring on the ship exclusively subject to the foreign law, such stipulations should be fairly and faithfully observed. The Elwine Kreplin, 9 Blatchf., 438, reversing S. C., 4 Ben., 413. See S. C. on application for mandamus, Ex parte Newman, 14 Wall., 152 [81 U. S., bk 20, L. ed. 877]. Many public engagements of this kind have been entered into between our government and foreign States. See Treaties and Conventions, ed. 1871, Index p. 1288.

In the absence of such treaty stipulations, however, the case of foreign seamen is undoubtedly a special one when they sue for wages under a contract which is generally strict in its character and framed according to the laws of the country to which the ship belongs; framed also with a view to secure, in accordance with those laws, the rights and interests of the shipowners as well as those of master and crew, as well when the ship is abroad as when she is at home. Nor is this special character of the case entirely absent when foreign seamen sue the master of their ship for ill-treatment. On general principles of comity, admiralty courts of other countries will not interfere between the parties in such cases unless there is special reason for doing so, and will require the foreign consul to be notified, and, though not absolutely bound by, will always pay due respect to, his wishes as to taking jurisdiction.

Not alone, however, in cases of complaints made by foreign seamen, but in other cases also [365] where the subjects of a particular nation invoke the aid of our tribunals to adjudicate between them and their fellow-subjects as to matters of contract or tort solely affecting themselves and determinable by their own laws, such tribunals will exercise their discretion whether to take cognizance of such matters or not. A salvage case of this kind came before the United States District Court of New York in 1848. The master and crew of a British ship found another British ship near the English coast apparently abandoned (though another vessel was in sight) and took off a portion of her cargo, brought it to New York and libeled it for salvage. The British consul and some owners of the cargo intervened and protested against the jurisdiction, and Judge Betts discharged the case, delivered the property to the owners upon security given, and left the salvors to pursue their remedy in the English courts. One Hundred and Ninety-four Shawls, 1 Abb. Adm., 317.

So, in a question of ownership of a foreign vessel, agitated between the subjects of the nation to which the vessel belonged, the English admiralty, upon objection being made to its jurisdiction, refused to interfere, the consul of such foreign nation having declined to give his consent to the proceedings. The Agincourt, 2 Prob. Div., 239. But in another case, where there had been an adjudication of the ownership under a mortgage in the foreign country, and the consul of that country requested the English court to take jurisdiction of the case upon a libel filed by the mortgagee, whom the owners had dispossessed, the court took jurisdiction accordingly. The Evangelistria, 2 Prob. Div., 241, note.

But, although the courts will use a discretion about assuming jurisdiction of controversies between foreigners in cases arising beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the country to which the courts belong, yet where such controversies are communis juris—that is, where they arise under the common law of nations—special grounds should appear to induce the court to deny its aid to a foreign suitor when it has jurisdiction of the ship or party charged. The existence of jurisdiction in all such cases is beyond dispute; the only question will be whether it is expedient to exercise it. See 2 Parsons on Ship. & Adm., 226, and cases cited in notes. In the case of The Jerusalem, 2 Gall., 191, decided by Mr. Justice Story, jurisdiction was exercised in the case of a bottomry bond, although the contract was made between subjects of the Sublime Porte, and it did not appear that it was intended that the vessel should come to the United States. In this case Justice Story examined the subject very fully and came to the conclusion that wherever there is a maritime lien on the ship an admiralty court can take jurisdiction on the principle of the civil law—that in proceedings in rem the proper forum is the locus rei sitæ. He added: "With reference, therefore, to what may be deemed the public law of Europe, a proceeding in rem may well be maintained in our courts where the property of a foreigner is within our jurisdiction. Nor am I able to perceive how the exercise of such judicial authority clashes with any principles of public policy." That, as we have seen, was a case of bottomry, and Justice Story, in answer to the objection that the contract might have been entered into in reference to the foreign law, after showing that such law might be proven here, said: "In respect to maritime contracts there is still less reason to decline the jurisdiction, for in almost all civilized countries these are in general substantially governed by t same rules."

[367]

Justice Story's decision in this case was ferred to by Dr. Lushington with strong app bation, in the case of The Golubchick, 1 W. Ro 143, decided in 1840, and was adopted as thority for his taking jurisdiction in that ca

In 1889 a case of collision on the high s between two foreign ships of different countr (the very case now under consideration) ca before the English Admiralty. The Joha Friederich, 1 W. Rob., 35. A Danish ship w sunk by a Bremen ship, and on the latter bel libeled, the respondents entered a protest agai the jurisdiction of the court. But jurisdicti was retained by Dr. Lushington, who, amon other things, remarked: "An alien friend is titled to sue [in our courts] on the same fo ing as a British-born subject; and, if the f eigner in this case had been resident here a the cause of action had originated infra cor comitatus, no objection could have been take Reference being made to the observations Lord Stowell in cases of seamen's wages, judge said: "All questions of collisions questions communis juris; but in cases mariners' wages, whoever engages voluntar to serve on board a foreign ship necessarily dertakes to be bound by the law of the coun to which such ship belongs, and the legality his claim must be tried by such law. One the most important distinctions, therefore, specting cases where both parties are forei ers is whether the case be communis juris not. * * * If these parties must wait until vessel that has done the injury returned to own country their remedy might be altoget lost, for she might never return; and if she there is no part of the world to which t might not be sent for their redress."

In the subsequent case of The Griefswal Swab., 430, decided by the same judge, in 18 which arose out of a collision between a Bri barque and a Persian ship, in the Dardanel Dr. Lushington said: "In cases of collisio has been the practice of this country, and far as I know, of the European States and the United States of America, to allow a pa alleging grievance by a collision to proceed rem against the ship wherever found, and practice, it is manifest, is most conducive justice, because in very many cases a rem in personam would be impracticable."

The subject has frequently been before own admiralty courts of original jurisdicti and there has been but one opinion expres namely: that they have jurisdiction in s cases and that they will exercise it un special circumstances exist to show that jus would be better subserved by declining it. was exercised in two cases of collision com before Mr. Justice Blatchford, whilst dist judge of the Southern District of New Y The Jupiter, 1 Ben., 536, and The Steam Russia, 3 Ben., 471. In the former case law was taken very much for granted; in latter it was tersely and accurately expoun with a reference to the principal authori Other cases might be referred to, but it is necessary to cite them. The general doct on the subject is recognized in the case of Maggie Hammond, 9 Wall., 435, 457 [76 U

[illegible] L. ed. 772, 780]; and is accurately stated [illegible] Justice Taney in his dissenting opinion [illegible] v. Carryl, 20 How., 611 [61 U. S., bk. [illegible] ed., 1068].

[illegible] assumption of jurisdiction in such [illegible] depends so largely on the discretion of the [illegible] of first instance, it is necessary to inquire [illegible] an appellate court should undertake to [illegible] his action. We are not without author[illegible] of a very high character on this point. In [illegible] case in England—that of The Leon [illegible] Prob. Div., 121—the subject was dis[illegible] in the court of appeal. That was the [illegible] of a Spanish vessel libeled for the wages of [illegible] British seamen who had shipped on [illegible] of her and the Spanish consul at Liver[illegible] protested against the jurisdiction of the [illegible] court on the ground that the ship[illegible] articles were a Spanish contract, to be [illegible] by Spanish law, and any controversy [illegible] thereon could only be settled before a [illegible] court or consul. Sir Robert Philli[illegible] held that the seamen were to be regarded [illegible] that case as Spanish subjects, and under [illegible] circumstances he considered the protest a [illegible] and dismissed the suit. The court [illegible] held that the judge below was right [illegible] regarding the libelants as Spanish subjects; [illegible] the question of reviewing his exercise of [illegible] in refusing to take jurisdiction of the [illegible] M. R., said: "It is then said that [illegible] judge has exercised his discretion [illegible] What, then, is the rule as regards this [illegible] in the court of appeal? The plaintiffs [illegible] show that the judge has exercised his [illegible] on wrong principles, or that he has [illegible] absolutely differently from the view [illegible] the court of appeal holds, that they are [illegible] in saying he has exercised it wrongly. [illegible] that any wrong principle has been [illegible] by the learned judge or anything done [illegible] exercise of his discretion so unjust or [illegible] to entitle us to overrule his discre[illegible]."

[illegible] to us to be a very sound view of [illegible] and acting on this principle we [illegible] nothing in the course taken by the [illegible] court in assuming jurisdiction of the [illegible] case, which calls for animadversion. [illegible] where the parties are not only foreign[illegible] belong to different nations, and the [illegible] or salvage service takes place on the high [illegible] there seems to be no good reason why the [illegible] or doing the service should ever [illegible] justice in our courts. Neither party [illegible] peculiar claim to be judged by the [illegible] law of his own country, since the [illegible] one communis juris and [illegible] be more impartially and satisfac[illegible] by the court of a third nation [illegible] jurisdiction of the res or parties than it [illegible] by the courts of either of the nations [illegible] the litigants belong. As Judge Deady [illegible] said, in a case before him in the [illegible] of Oregon: "The parties cannot be re[illegible] to a home forum, for, being subjects of [illegible] governments, there is no such tribunal. [illegible] which is common to them both by [illegible] is any court of admiralty within [illegible] of whose process they may both be [illegible] Bernhard v. Greene, 3 Sawy., 230, 235. [illegible] the law which should be applied in [illegible] between parties or ships of different nationalities, arising on the high seas, not within the jurisdiction of any nation, there can be no doubt that it must be the general maritime law as understood and administered in the courts of the country in which the litigation is prosecuted. The rule is laid down in many cases; amongst others the following: The Johann Friederich, 1 W. Rob., 35; The Dumfries, 1 Swab., 63; The Zollverein, Id., 96; The Griefwald, Id., 430; The Wild Ranger, Lush., 553; The Belle, 1 Ben., 320; The Scotia, 14 Wall., 171 [81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 822]; The Scotland, 105 U. S., 24, 29 [bk. 26, L. ed. 1001, 1003]; The Leon, 6 Prob. Div., 148. In the case last cited, which was that of a British ship run down by The Leon, a Spanish ship, the question was specifically raised by the respondents (the owners of The Leon), who set up in defense that if there was any negligence in her navigation her master and crew, and not her owners, were liable by the Spanish law. This defense was overruled, and the general maritime law as understood and administered in England was held to govern the case; by which law the owners were held responsible. The same rule was followed by this court in The Scotland, and was applied to the collision of a British with an American ship on the high seas, although it is true we applied to that [370] case the rule of limited liability established by the Act of Congress, regarding that Act as declarative of the general maritime law to be administered by our courts.

The rule requiring the application of the general maritime law to such cases has some qualifications which, though not affecting the present case, should always be borne in mind. One of these qualifications is that the persons in charge of either ship will not be open to blame for following the sailing regulations and rules of navigation prescribed by their own government for their direction on the high seas; because they are bound to obey such regulations. The Scotia, 14 Wall., 170, 184 [81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 822, 824]. Another qualification is that if the maritime law as administered by both nations to which the respective ships belong be the same in both in respect to any matter of liability or obligation, such law, if shown to the court, should be followed in that matter in respect to which they so agree, though it differ from the maritime law as understood in the country of the forum; for, as respects the parties concerned, it is the maritime law which they mutually acknowledge. The Scotland [supra].

The first of these qualifications can rarely be called into requisition at the present day, since for more than twenty years past all the principal maritime nations of the world (at least those whose vessels navigate the Atlantic Ocean) have concurred in adopting a uniform set of rules and regulations for the government of vessels on the high seas. These rules and regulations have become international, and virtually a part of the maritime law. The Scotia [supra]. They will be presumed to be binding upon foreign as well as domestic ships unless the contrary is made to appear.*

*The International Rules of 1863 (Abbott on Ship., 11th ed., App. CCCLXIX; 13 Rev. Stat., 58) were revised by an Order of Council in England, in August, 1879, to take effect from the 1st of September, 1880, and as thus revised have been adopted by most commercial nations. (See 4 Prob. Div., 241-249.)

We are then brought to the question of the merits of the case between the parties as shown by the pleadings and finding of facts. And [371] this does not require any extended discussion. It is shown that the barque had her proper lights burning brightly, visible, on a dark night and with a clear atmosphere, at least two miles; and that, in character and location, they conformed to the regulations of the barque's nationality, which are the same as those of the British Board of Trade (or the International Rules before referred to); that the mast-head light of the steamer was sighted right ahead, distant about a mile; that the barque was kept steady on her course until the steamer was almost upon her and apparently about to run her down; that then the order was given to put the helm hard a-port; that in a few seconds the steamer's starboard light came in view, and in another instant she struck the barque in her port side, cutting her in two obliquely. In all this we see nothing that the people in charge of the barque did which it was not their duty to do by the International Rules. It was their duty to keep her steady on her course, and it was the duty of the steamer to see the barque and to avoid a collision.

On the other side it appears that the steamer, which was a large and powerful one, 416 feet long and 38 feet beam, was coming towards the barque, end on, at about eleven knots an hour; that she had a lookout on the lee side of her bridge (which was over 150 feet from her bow), where the officer in charge of the deck also was; but had no other lookout on duty, the rest of the watch, except the man at the compass and one at the wheel, were underneath the turtle-back, or top-gallant forecastle. No lookout was on the turtle-back, although it would have been entirely safe to station one there. The omission to do so was for the alleged reason that the vessel was plunging into a head sea and taking so much water over her bows that he would have been of no use there. The barque was not seen by those in charge of the steamer until just at the instant of the collision; yet objects could be seen at a distance of from 500 yards to a mile and the port light of the barque was seen by a steerage passenger on the steamer, looking out of his room just under the bridge, and was reported to his roommates long enough before the collision to enable the second steerage stewart, who heard the report, [372] to go up the companion ladder, cross the deck and reach the steamer's rail.

We think that these facts furnished a sufficient ground for the conclusions at which the court arrived, as before rehearsed; the substance of which was that the collision occurred by the negligence of those having charge of the Belgenland, in not seeing the barque and in not taking the proper precautions due to such a night and such a sea, by reducing speed and keeping a sufficient lookout.

It is argued that there is no express finding of negligence or fault as matter of fact, but only as an inference from the facts found. But we think that the facts found furnish conclusive proof of negligence that it may be regarde as properly found amongst the conclusions c law as a legal inference from those facts. U S. v. Pugh, 99 U. S., 265 [bk. 25, L. ed. 322

The counsel of the appellants suppose that th court below found the Belgenland in fault o the mere presumption arising from the fact c collision and the primary duty of the stean ship to avoid it. But this is not a just view c the decision. There was much more in th facts of the case than the existence of such presumption, as the foregoing rehearsal of th facts clearly shows. The ability to see objec at a distance; the fact that the men in charge c the steamer failed to see the barque, whilst a passenger did see her from his room; the fa that there was but one lookout for such a larg steamer; that other lookouts could have bee stationed on the turtle-back; the fact that th speed was not slackened and no precautio taken to get a better view ahead;—these facts, i addition to the presumption arising from th steamer's duty, present a very different ca from that supposed by the appellants. Th decision of the court must be taken as the co lective result from the whole case. It cann be judged from mere isolated expressions i the opinion.

The rule contended for by the appellants that negligence and fault must be proved an not presumed—is undoubtedly a sound one an hardly needs cases to support it. But the ci cuit court evidently did not rest the case c presumption, but upon proof, from which properly deduced negligence on the part of th steamship. At all events this court, upon careful consideration of the facts found, is sa isfied that there was such negligence, and th it was the cause of the catastrophe.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirme with interest to be added to the amount from t date of the same.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

GLOUCESTER FERRY COMPANY, Pl in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVA NIA.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 196-218.)

Constitutional law—interstate commerce; reg lation of taxation of capital stock of fer company engaged in—review of authorities- note.

1. Commerce among the States consists of inte course and traffic between their citizens, and i cludes the transportation of persons and propert and the navigation of public waters for that pu pose, as well as the purchase, sale and exchange c commodities.

2. The power to regulate interstate and foreig commerce vested in Congress is the power to pr

NOTE.—Constitutional law—interstate commerc regulation of—power of Congress—how far exclusi

The power to regulate interstate commerce vest in Congress is the power to prescribe the rules b which it shall be conducted, to determine when shall be free from, and when subject to, duties c other exactions.

When the subjects of commerce are national

They were adopted for both public and private vessels of the United States by Act of Congress approved March 3, 1885. (Public Act No. 100.) They had been adopted for public vessels before. (See Luce's Seamanship, 360, ed. 1884.)

[illegible] the rules by which it shall be governed—that [illegible] the conditions upon which it shall be conducted; [illegible] when it shall be free from, and when [illegible] tolls or other exactions.

[illegible] relevance to the subjects of commerce [illegible] and limited in their nature or sphere [illegible] the States may prescribe regulations [illegible] interference and assumes control.

[illegible] the subjects of commerce are national [illegible] and require uniformity of regulation [illegible] all of the States the power of Congress [illegible].

[illegible] commerce with foreign nations and between the States, which consists in the transportation of persons and property between them, is a [illegible] of national character and requires uniformity of regulation. Congress alone can deal with [illegible] transportation, and its non-action is a declaration that it shall remain free from burdens imposed by state legislation.

[illegible] Freedom of transportation implies exemption [illegible] other than such as are imposed by way of compensation for the use of the property [illegible], or for facilities afforded for its use, or as [illegible] upon the value of the property within the jurisdiction of the State.

[illegible] and landing passengers and freight [illegible] in their transportation. All restraints [illegible] in the form of taxes upon such transportation or upon acts necessary to its completion [illegible] of the exclusive power of Congress.

[illegible] The only state interference with the landing [illegible] of passengers and freight which is [illegible] is confined to such measures as will prevent confusion among the vessels and collision among them, insure their safety and convenience, [illegible] the discharge or receipt of their passengers and freight.

[illegible] A ferry is a means—and a necessary means—of [illegible] intercourse between States bordering [illegible] waters, and it must therefore be conceded [illegible] the imposition by the States of [illegible] or other burdens upon the commerce between them.

[illegible] The capital stock of the Gloucester Ferry [illegible], a New Jersey corporation engaged in [illegible] of persons and property between [illegible] in that State and Philadelphia in Pennsylvania, is not subject to taxation by the State of Pennsylvania.

[illegible] The State can impose a tax on that portion of [illegible] commerce which is involved in the [illegible] of persons and property, whatever [illegible] by which it is carried on.

[No. 185.]

Argued Mar. 13, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania.

The history and facts appear in the Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Field: [197]

In March, 1865, the Gloucester Ferry Company, the plaintiff in error here, was incorporated by the Legislature of New Jersey to establish a steamboat ferry from the town of Gloucester, in that State, to the city of Philadelphia in Pennsylvania, with a capital stock of $50,000, divided into shares of $50 each. During that year it established, and has ever ever since maintained, a ferry between those places, across the river Delaware, leasing or owning steam ferry-boats for that purpose. At each place it has a slip or dock on which passengers and freight are received and landed; the one in Gloucester it owns, the one in Philadelphia it leases. Its entire business consists in ferrying passengers and freight across the river between those places. It has never transacted any other business. It does not own, and has never owned, any property, real or personal, in the city of Philadelphia other than than the lease of the slip or dock mentioned. All its other property consists of certain real estate in the county of Camden, New Jersey, needed for its business, and steamboats engaged in ferriage. These boats are registered at the port of Camden, New Jersey. It has never owned any boats registered at a port of Pennsylvania, and its boats are never allowed to remain in that State except so long as may be necessary to discharge and receive passengers and freight.

In July, 1880, the auditor-general and the treasurer of the State of Pennsylvania stated an account against the Company of taxes on its capital stock, based upon its appraised value, for the years 1865 to 1879, both inclusive, finding the amount of $2,593.96 to be due the Commonwealth. From this finding an appeal was taken to the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, and was there heard upon a case stated, in which it was stipulated that if the court were of opinion that the Company was liable for the tax, judgment against it in favor of the [illegible] and require uniformity of regulation. [illegible] power of Congress is exclusive. In addition to [illegible] case of Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pa., see [illegible] 114 U. S., bk. 28, 247, 249; Gilman v. [illegible], 13 U. S. (9 Wall.), 713, bk. 18, 96; Henderson v. Mayor, 92 U. S., 259, bk. 23, 543; Mobile v. Hunter, 118 U. S., 602, bk. 30, 241; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, post.

---

[illegible] when exercised by Congress, the power [illegible] of all state interference. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 L. Ed. (9 Wh.), 1; Sinnot v. Davenport, 63 U. S. (22 How.), 227, bk. 16, 243; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, bk. 24, L. ed., 547.

[illegible] by Congress amounts to a declaration that [illegible] within its exclusive control shall remain free and unrestricted. In addition to the [illegible] of Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pa., see Welton v. Mo., 91 U. S., 275, bk. 23, 347; Escanaba Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, bk. 27, 442; Henderson v. [illegible], 92 U. S., 259, bk. 23, 543; Brown v. Houston, [illegible]

[illegible] power vested in Congress covers navigation. [illegible] v. Ogden, 22 U. S. (9 Wh.), 1; Passenger [illegible] 7 How. 283.

[illegible] of the largest import. • • • [illegible] power to regulate it embraces all the instruments by which such commerce may be conducted. [illegible] v. Hall, supra.

[illegible] control of the telegraph as an agency [illegible] Pennsylvania Tel. Co. v. West. U. Tel. [illegible] U. S. 1, bk. 24, 708.

[illegible] transportation is essential to commerce, and every [illegible] or burden laid upon it by legislative authority is regulation. H. & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S., 465, bk. 24, 527, and authorities cited.

"Legislation may in a great variety of ways affect commerce and persons engaged in it, without constituting a regulation of it within the meaning of the Constitution." Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U.S., 485, supra; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S., 103, bk. 23, 820; State Tax on R. Gross Receipts, 82 U. S. (15 Wall.), 284, bk. 21, 164; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S., 113, bk. 24, 77.

The power of Congress does not extend to contracts not designed to create impediments to commerce. A contract by an elevator company to handle all grain brought by a railroad company at a certain price is not repugnant to the power of Congress. Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Richmond, 86 U. S. (19 Wall.), 584, bk. 22, 173.

The paramount authority to regulate bridges and other structures that affect the navigation of the navigable waters of the United States is in Congress. Newport & Cin. Bridge Co. v. U. S., 105 U. S., 470, bk. 26, 1143, and authorities cited.

But in the absence of legislation by Congress, the States may authorize and regulate bridges and other obstructions to navigation within their limits. Cardwell v. Bridge Co., 113 U. S., 205, bk. 28, and authorities cited.

Congress may improve harbors and rivers. S. Car. v. Ga., 93 U. S., 4, bk. 23, 782.

The States may also improve the navigable waters within their limits, subject to the control of Congress. Mobile Co. v. Kimball, 102 U. S., 691, bk. 26, 238.

The States may regulate subjects of commerce which Commonwealth should be entered for the above amount; but if the court were of opinion that the Company was not liable, judgment should be entered in its favor.

A Statute of Pennsylvania passed June 7, 1879, "to provide revenue by taxation," in its fourth section enacted as follows: "That every company or association whatever, now or [198] hereafter incorporated by or under any law of this Commonwealth, or now or hereafter incorporated by any other State or Territory of the United States or foreign government, and doing business in this Commonwealth or having capital employed in this Commonwealth in the name of any other company or corporation, association or associations, person or persons, or in any other manner, except foreign insurance companies, banks and savings institutions, shall be subject to and pay into the treasury of the Commonwealth annually a tax to be computed as follows, namely If the dividend or dividends made or declared by such company or association as aforesaid, during any year ending with the first Monday of November, amount to six or more than six per centum upon the par value of its capital stock, then the tax to be at the rate of one half mill upon the capital stock for each one per centum of dividend so made or declared; if no dividend be made or declared, or if the dividend or dividends made or declared do not amount to six per centum upon the par value of said capital stock, then the tax to be at the rate of three mills upon each dollar of a valuation of the said capital stock," made in accordance with the provisions of another section of the Act.

It was under the authority of this Act that the taxes in question were stated against the Company by the auditor-general and the state treasurer

The court of common pleas held that the taxes could not be lawfully levied, for there was no other business carried on by the Company in Pennsylvania except the landing and receiving of passengers and freight, which is a part of the commerce of the country and protected by the Constitution from the impositio of burdens by state legislation. It therefor gave judgment in favor of the Company. Th case being carried on a writ of error to the Su preme Court of the State, the judgment wa reversed and judgment ordered in favor of th Commonwealth for the amount mentioned To review this latter judgment the case i brought here.

Messrs. John G. Johnson, Morton P Henry, Geo. M. Dallas, M. E. Olmstead an Samuel Dickson, for plaintiff in error:

The business in which the plaintiff in erro was engaged was interstate transportation o freight and passengers, and was therefore wit in the protection of the Constitution of th United States.

Guy v. Baltimore, 100 U. S., 434 (bk. 25, L ed. 743).

A foreign corporation has the same right a an individual to conduct everywhere the bus ness of interstate transportation.

Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall., 168 (75 U. S., bk 19, L. ed. 357); Pensacola Tel. Co. v. W. U Tel. Co., 96 U. S., 12 (bk. 24, L. ed. 711); Doy v. Ins. Co., 94 U. S., 544 (bk. 24, L. ed. 152 Tel. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S., 460 (bk. 26, L ed. 1067).

It is not competent for the State to tax direc ly, either the transportation or the goods of pe sons in transit.

State Freight Tax, 15 Wall., 232 (82 U. S bk. 21, L. ed. 146); State Tax on Railway Gro Receipts, 15 Wall., 284 (82 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed 164); Passenger Cases, 7 How., 283; Crandal v. Nevada, 6 Wall., 35 (73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed 745); Henderson v. Mayor of N. Y., 92 U. S 259 (bk. 23, L. ed. 543); Guy v. Baltimore, su pra; R. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S., 465 (bk. 24 L. ed. 527); Cook v. Pennsylvania, 97 U. S 566 (bk. 24, L. ed. 1015); Sweatt v. R. R. Co., Cliff., 339; Tel. Co. v. Texas, supra; Welton v Missouri, 91 U. S., 275 (bk. 23, L. ed. 347 Car Co. v. Nolan, 22 Fed. Rep., 279; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall., 138 (75 U. S., bk 19, L. ed. 886); Cannon v. New Orleans, 2 Wall., 577 (87 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 417).

---

are local and limited in their nature or sphere of operation until Congress intervenes. In addition to the above case of Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pa., see Welton v. Mo., supra, 347; Brown v. Houston, supra; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 53 U. S. (12 How.), 299; Pound v. Turck, 95 U. S., 459, bk. 24, 525; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 70 U. S. (3 Wall.), 713, bk. 18, 92; Wilson v. Blackbird Creek M. Co., 27 U. S. (2 Pet.), 245; Escanaba Co. v. Chicago, supra, Miller v. Mayor, etc., 109 U. S., 385, bk. 27, 971; Cardwell v. Am. Bridge Co., supra.

The power of Congress to regulate navigation does not interfere with the power of the States to protect and regulate the fisheries within their limits. McCready v. Va., 94 U. S., 391, bk. 24, 248; Smith v. Md., 59 U. S. (18 How.), 71, bk. 15, 269; Green v. The Helen, 1 Fed. Rep., 916.

The power of Congress does not interfere with the police powers of the States. H. & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, supra; Webber v. Va., 103 U. S., 344, bk. 26, 565.

A statute which prevents the introduction of all Texas, Mexican and Indian cattle into the State during eight months in the year, and which makes no distinction between those which are diseased and such as are not, is void, not being a proper exercise of the police power. H. & St. J. R. Co. v. Huser, supra.

The States cannot so exercise the police power as to work a practical assumption of the power vested in Congress. H. & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, supra.

The internal commerce of a State is not within the power of Congress. The Daniel Ball v. U. S., 77 U S. (10 Wall.), 557, bk. 19, L. ed., 999; U. S. v. DeWit 76 U. S. (9 Wall.), 41, bk. 19., L. ed., 593; Veazie v Moore, 55 U. S. (14 How.), 568.

Taxation of a chattel used in interstate commerc is not necessarily a regulation of such commerc within the meaning of the Constitution. Wiggin Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S., 365, bk. 27, 41 Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S., 273, bk. 25, 412.

A license tax on persons dealing in merchandise no the growth, produce or manufacture of the Stat conflicts with the power of Congress. Tiernan v Rinker, 102 U. S., 123, bk. 26, 103; Cook v. Pa., 97 U S., 566, bk. 24, 1015; Guy v. Baltimore, 100 U. S., 43 bk. 25, 743, and authorities cited and reviewed.

"No State can, consistently with the Federal Con stitution, impose upon the products of other State brought therein for sale or use, or upon citizens be cause engaged in the sale therein, or the transpor tation thereto of the products of other States, mor onerous public burdens or taxes than it impose upon the like products of its own territory." Gu v. Baltimore, supra. See also Moran v. New Or leans, 112 U. S., 69, bk. 28, 653, and authorities cite Reasonable charges for the use of property or fo additional facilities, whether imposed as a tax o otherwise, do not interfere with the power of Con gress. See the above case of Gloucester Ferry Co v. Pa., and authorities cited in the opinion of th court.

See, generally, Gibbons v. Ogden, 22 U. S. (9 Wh. 1, note; Brown v. Md., 25 U. S. (12 Wh.), 419, note.

Commercial intercourse is guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. It cannot be [illegible] by any State of the Union. All individuals and corporations are entitled to do everything which is necessary to facilitate this intercourse. They do not derive their rights thus to facilitate it from any of the States, and are therefore not subject to a tax because they exercise it.

[illegible] v. [illegible] Co., 61 Ind., 520; Ex parte [illegible], 2 [illegible], 269; Council Bluffs v. R. R. [illegible], 45 Iowa, [illegible]; Coal Co. v. Carrigan, 89 N. [illegible]; Hays v. Steamship Co., 17 How., 597 (58 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 254); Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat., 1; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat., 419.

Have Robert Snodgrass, Deputy Attorney of Pennsylvania, and Lewis C. Cassidy, Attorney of Pennsylvania, for defendant in error.

The right of a State to impose a tax upon the capital stock of foreign railroad, canal, express and other corporations, graduated by the extent to which their franchises are exercised within the State, cannot at this day be successfully controverted.

[illegible] v. R. R. Co., 18 Wall., 206 (85 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 868).

"A public ferry is a public highway of a special description, and its termini must be in places where the public have rights, as towns or villes, or highways leading to towns or villes."

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420.

The business of ferriage is not "commerce," within the meaning of the Federal Constitution, so as to cause that it must be free from state or municipal authority and control.

A ferry may be an instrument of commerce. It is as much so, and perhaps in the same sense, as a bridge, but in any case it is at most no more than a local aid or instrument, which Congress has never undertaken to regulate or control.

The distinction was forcibly recognized by Mr. Justice Field, in County of Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S., 702 (bk. 26, L. ed. 241).

That the power to establish and regulate ferries as well as other local aids to commerce rests in the State Legislatures and not in Congress is well settled.

[illegible] v. Taylor's Ex., 1 Black., 603 (66 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 191); People v. Babcock, 11 Wend., [illegible]; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat., 1; [illegible] v. Freeholders of Hudson, 3 Zab., 206; [illegible] v. Gregoria, 16 How., 524; Ferry Co. v. R. R. Lewis, 107 U. S., 365 (bk. 27, L. ed. [illegible]).

Ferries are established by the legislative authority of the several States. Without such authority no one, although he may own both banks of a navigable river, has the right to establish the ferry.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420; Burk v. Miller, 3 Mo., 470; Trustees v. Johnson, 13 Ill., 27.

As a geographical fact, as each ferriage of persons and property is made across the entire stream, this Company is "doing business in this commonwealth," and is manifestly within the class of corporations intended to be taxed by our act. But it is not merely within the taxing jurisdiction; it is plainly within the taxing power of the State. It is a foreign corporation, not strictly engaged in interstate commerce, and it it sufficient to say that never, since the decision of Bk. of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet., 519, has it been denied that where a State can restrict or control the business of a corporation when transacted within her limits, she can tax such business so far as it is done within her jurisdiction or can exclude the corporation altogether if she so desires.

See also St. Louis v. Ferry Co., 11 Wall., 423 (78 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 192.)

It is moreover to be observed that the tax here sought to be imposed is not a tax upon the specific property of the corporation in which its capital may be invested. It is not an attempt to tax the ferry-boats of this Company, nor is it an effort to tax a corporation in proportion to the number of ferry-boats it owns. The tax is not imposed either directly or indirectly upon them; it is not measured in amount by their numbers; it is the same whether the Company owns few or many of them, and is unaffected by the frequency of their use. It therefore clashes with none of the following decisions which form part of the judicial argument against its validity:

Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall., 577 (87 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 417); Transportation Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S., 273 (bk. 25, L. ed. 412); Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall., 471 (83 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 303); Hays v. Steamship Co., 17 How., 596 (58 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 254); Hoyt v. Commissioners, 23 N. Y., 227; Passenger Cases, 7 How., 283; Almy v. People, 24 How., 169 (65 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 644); Crandell v. Nevada, 6 Wall., 35 (73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 745).

It is rather a tax upon the capital stock of the corporation, "not in separate parcels, as representing distinct properties, but as a homogeneous unit, partaking of the nature of personalty," and taxable where its corporate functions are exercised or its business done.

If the business of ferriage is commerce, as defined by Chief Justice Marshall, we concede that any tax laid upon such business which comes within the ruling of the Passenger Cases or the State Freight Tax Cases or the many other cases involving the same principle, is an interference with commerce, and, for that reason, unconstitutional.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court: [202]

The Supreme Court of the State, in giving its decision, stated that the single question presented for consideration was whether the Company did business within the State of Pennsylvania during the period for which the taxes were imposed; and it held that it did do business there because it landed and received passengers and freight at its wharf in Philadelphia, observing that its whole income was derived from the transportation of freight and passengers from its wharf at Gloucester to its wharf at Philadelphia, and from its wharf at Philadelphia to its wharf at Gloucester; that at each of these points its main business—namely, the receipt and landing of freight and passengers—was transacted; that for such business it was dependent as much upon the one place as upon [203] the other; that, as it could hold the wharf at Gloucester, which it owned in fee, only by purchase by virtue of the statutory will of the Legislature of New Jersey, so it could hold by lease the one in Philadelphia only by the implied consent of the Legislature of the Commonwealth; and that therefore it "was dependent equally, not only for its business, but its power to do that business, upon both States, and might therefore be taxed by both." 98 Pa. St., 105, 116.

As to the first reason thus expressed, it may be answered that the business of landing and receiving passengers and freight at the wharf in Philadelphia is a necessary incident to—indeed, is a part of—their transportation across the Delaware River from New Jersey. Without it that transportation would be impossible. Transportation implies the taking up of persons or property at some point and putting them down at another. A tax, therefore, upon such receiving and landing of passengers and freight is a tax upon their transportation; that is, upon the commerce between the two States involved in such transportation.

It matters not that the transportation is made in ferry-boats which pass between the States every hour of the day. The means of transportation of persons and freight between the States does not change the character of the business as one of commerce, nor does the time within which the distance between the States may be traversed. Commerce among the States consists of intercourse and traffic between their citizens, and includes the transportation of persons and property and the navigation of public waters for that purpose as well as the purchase, sale and exchange of commodities. The power to regulate that commerce, as well as commerce with foreign nations, vested in Congress is the power to prescribe the rules by which it shall be governed—that is, the conditions upon which it shall be conducted; to determ[illegible] when it shall be free, and when subject to, duties or other exactions. The power also embraces within its control all the instrumentalities by which that commerce may be carried on and the means by which it may be aided and encouraged. The subjects, therefore, upon which the power may be exerted are of infinite variety. While with reference to some of them which are local and limited in their nature or sphere of operation, the States may prescribe regulations until Congress intervenes and assumes control of them; yet, when they are national in their character and require uniformity of regulation affecting alike all the States, the power of Congress is exclusive. Necessarily that power alone can prescribe regulations which are to govern the whole country. And it needs no argument to show that the commerce with foreign nations and between the States, which consists in the transportation of persons and property between them is a subject of national character and requires uniformity of regulation. Congress alone, therefore, can deal with such transportation; its non-action is a declaration that it shall remain free from burdens imposed by state legislation. Otherwise there would be no protection against conflicting regulations of different States, each legislating in favor of its own citizens and products and against those of other States. It was from apprehension of such conflicting and discriminating state legislation, and to secure uniformity of regulatio that the power to regulate commerce with fo eign nations and among the States was veste in Congress.

[204]

Nor does it make any difference wheth such commerce is carried on by individuals by corporations. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S 275 [bk. 23, L. ed. 347]; Mobile Co. v. Kimbal 102 U. S., 691 [bk. 26, L. ed. 238]. As w said in Paul v. Virginia, at the time of th formation of the Constitution a large part the commerce of the world was carried on b corporations; and the East India Company, t Hudson's Bay Company, the Hamburgh Com pany, the Levant Company, and the Virgini Company were mentioned as among the co porations which, from the extent of their oper tions, had become celebrated throughout th commercial world. 8 Wall., 168 [75 U. S., bk 19, L. ed. 357]. The grant of power is gener in its terms, making no reference to the age cies by which commerce may be carried on. includes commerce by whomsoever conducte whether by individuals or by corporations. A the present day nearly all enterprises of a com mercial character requiring for their succes ful management large expenditures of mone are conducted by corporations. The usu means of transportation on the public wate where expedition is desired are vessels pr pelled by steam; and the ownership of a line such vessels generally requires an expenditu exceeding the resources of single individual Except in rare instances it is only by associate capital furnished by persons united in corpor tions, that the requisite means are provided f such expenditures.

As to the second reason given to the decisio below—that the Company could not lease i wharf in Philadelphia except by the implie consent of the Legislature of the Commo wealth, and thus is dependent upon the Co monwealth to do its business, and therefo can be taxed there—it may be answered that n foreign or interstate commerce can be carrie on with the citizens of a State without the u of a wharf or other place within its limits o which passengers and freight can be lande and received, and the existence of power in State to impose a tax upon the capital of a corporations engaged in foreign or interstat commerce for the use of such places would b inconsistent with and entirely subversive of th power vested in Congress over such commerc Nearly all the lines of steamships and of sai ing vessels between the United States and En land, France, Germany and other countries Europe, and between the United States an South America, are owned by corporation and, if by reason of landing or receiving passe gers and freight at wharves or other places in State, they can be taxed by the State on the capital stock on the ground that they are thereb doing business within her limits the tax which may be imposed may embarrass, imped and even destroy such commerce with the ci zens of the State. If such a tax can be levie at all its amount will rest in the discretion the State. It is idle to say that the interests the State would prevent oppressive taxatio Those engaged in foreign and interstate co merce are not bound to trust to its moderatio in that respect; they require security. And th [illegible] on the power of Congress to prevent [illegible] interference by the State until the act of [illegible]—the transportation of passengers and [illegible] is completed. The only interference [illegible] State with the landing and receiving of [illegible] and freight which is permissible is [illegible] to such measures as will prevent con[illegible] among the vessels, and collision between [illegible] secure the safety and convenience, and [illegible] the discharge or receipt of their passen[illegible] and freight, which fall under the general [illegible] of port regulations, of which we shall [illegible] speak.

[illegible] true that the property of corporations en[illegible] in foreign or interstate commerce, as [illegible] as the property of corporations engaged [illegible] other business, is subject to state taxation, [illegible] always it be within the jurisdiction of [illegible] State. As said by Chief Justice Marshall [illegible] McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat., 429, "All [illegible] over which the sovereign power of a [illegible] extends are objects of taxation; but those [illegible] which it does not extend are, upon the [illegible] principles, exempt from taxation. [illegible] proposition may also be pronounced self-[illegible]."

[illegible] Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., 17 [illegible], 596 [38 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 254], the de[illegible] a corporation of New York, owned [illegible] vessels employed in the transportation of [illegible] and freight between New York and [illegible] Francisco and between New York and [illegible] ports in Oregon, which were registered [illegible] New York. The principal office of the com[illegible] for transacting its business was also in [illegible] York, though for its better management [illegible] were established in Panama and in [illegible] Francisco. It had a naval dock and ship[illegible] at Benicia, in California, for furnishing [illegible] repairing its steamers. On their arrival at [illegible] port of San Francisco they remained only [illegible] enough to land their passengers, mail and [illegible], which was usually done in a day, and [illegible] proceeded to Benicia, where they remained [illegible] repairs and refitting until the commence[illegible] of the next voyage, which was generally [illegible] ten or twelve days. It was held that the [illegible] were not subject to taxation in Califor[illegible] as they were only temporarily there while [illegible] in lawful trade and commerce; that [illegible] was at their home port, where their [illegible] were liable to be taxed for the capital [illegible]. The court, in giving its decision, [illegible] that the ships are "engaged in the business [illegible] commerce of the country, upon the high[illegible] of nations, touching at such ports and [illegible] as their great interests demand, and [illegible] held out to the owners sufficient induce[illegible] by the profits realized or expected to be [illegible]. And so far as respects the ports and [illegible] within the United States they are en[illegible] and cargoes discharged or laden on board [illegible] of any control over them except [illegible] such municipal and sanitary regu[illegible] of the local authorities as are not in[illegible] with the Constitution and laws of [illegible] General Government, to which belongs the [illegible] of commerce with foreign nations [illegible] between the States. Now it is quite ap[illegible] that if the State of California possessed [illegible] authority to impose the tax in question, [illegible] other State in the Union into the ports of [illegible] the vessels entered in the prosecution of their trade and business, might also impose a like tax."

In Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall., 471 [83 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 303], it was held that a vessel registered in New York was not subject to taxation in Alabama, though engaged in commerce as one of a regular line of steamers between Mobile in that State and New Orleans in Louisiana. In rendering the decision it was said "It is the opinion of the court that the State of Alabama had no jurisdiction over this vessel for the purpose of taxation, for the reason that it had not become incorporated into the personal property of that State, but was there temporarily only and that it was engaged in lawful commerce between the States, with its situs at the home port of New York, where it belonged and where its owner was liable to be taxed for its value," referring to the case of Hays v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., as decisive of the case; and adding: "The jurisdiction of this court over the present case, as in the case of Hays v. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company, arises from the facts, first, that the property had not become blended with the business and commerce of Alabama, but remained legally of and as in New York; and, secondly, that the vessel was lawfully engaged in the interstate trade over the public waters. It is in law as if the vessel had never before been within the port of Mobile, but, touching there on a single occasion when engaged in the interstate trade, had been subjected to a tax as personal property of that city. Within the authorities it is an interference with the commerce of the country not permitted to the States." [208]

In St. Louis v. Ferry Co., 11 Wall., 423 [78 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 192], the company was incorporated by Illinois to run a ferry from a place opposite St. Louis to that city across the Mississippi. It had its principal place of business in St. Louis, in which its chief officers resided, and there the business meetings of its directors were held. Its engineers and subordinate officers resided in Illinois, where its real estate was situated. Its ferry-boats when not in use were laid up in Illinois and forbidden to remain at the wharf in St. Louis. It paid a ferry license to St. Louis and a wharfage tax for the use of its wharf there. In addition to these charges the city authorities assessed a tax on the company for the value of the boats as property within the city, all property within it being taxable under a statute of the State. The court held that the tax was illegally levied, as the boats were not property within the city, and said: "Where there is jurisdiction neither as to person nor property the imposition of a tax would be ultra vires and void. If the Legislature of a State should enact that the citizens or property of another State or country should be taxed in the same manner as the persons or property within its own limits and subject to its authority, or in any other manner whatsoever, such a law would be as much a nullity as if in conflict with the most explicit constitutional inhibition. Jurisdiction is as necessary to valid legislative as to valid judicial action."

In R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 15 Wall., 300 [82 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 179], sometimes called Case of State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, which was brought here on a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the State, this court said that "the power of taxation, however vast in its character and searching in its extent, is necessarily limited to subjects within the jurisdiction of the State. These subjects are persons, property and business." This proposition would seem, [209] as stated by Chief Justice Marshall, to be self-evident, and no force of expression could add to its manifest truth.

In the recent case of Pennsylvania v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St., 119, the liability of foreign corporations doing business within that State is elaborately considered by its Supreme Court. The corporation was doing business there, and it was contended on the part of the Commonwealth that the tax should be imposed upon all of the capital stock of the company; while on the other side it was urged that only so much of the stock was intended by the statute to be taxed, as was represented by property of the company invested and used in the State. In giving its decision the court said that it had been repeatedly decided and was settled law that a tax upon the capital stock of a company is a tax upon its property and assets (citing to that effect a large number of decisions); that it was undoubtedly competent for the Legislature to lay a franchise or license tax upon foreign corporations for the privilege of doing business within the State, but that the tax in that case was in no sense a license tax; that the State had never granted a license to the Standard Oil Company to do business there, but merely taxed its property—that is, its capital stock—to the extent that it brought such property within its borders in the transaction of its business; that the position of the Commonwealth—that a foreign corporation entering the State to do business brought its entire capital—was ingenious but unsound; that it was a fundamental principle that in order to be taxed the person must have a domicil in the State, and the State must have a situs therein; that persons and property in transitu could not be taxed; that the domicil of a corporation was in the State of its origin and it could not emigrate to another sovereignty; that the domicil of the Standard Oil Company was in Ohio, and when it sent its agents into the State to transact business it no more entered the State in point of fact than any other foreign corporation, firm or individual who sent an agent there to open an office or branch house, nor brought its capital there constructively; that it would be as reasonable to assume that a business firm in Ohio brought its entire capital there because it sent [210] its agent to establish a branch of its business, as to hold that the Standard Oil Company by employing certain persons in the State to transact a portion of its business thereby brought all its property or capital stock within the jurisdiction of the State; that there was neither reason nor authority for such a proposition; that the company was taxable only to the extent that it brought its property within the State; and that its capital stock, as mentioned in the Act of the Legislature, must be construed to mean so much of the capital stock as was measured by the property actually brought within the State by the company in the transaction of its business. The justice who delivered the opinion of the court added, speaking for himself, that he conceded the power of the Commonwealth to exclude foreign corporations altogether from her borders, or to impose a license tax so heavy a to amount to the same thing; but he denied great and searching as her taxing power is, tha she could tax either persons or property no within her jurisdiction. "A foreign corpora tion," he said, "has no domicil here and ca have none; hence it cannot be said to draw t itself the constructive possession of its propert located elsewhere. There are a large numbe of foreign insurance companies doing busine here under license from the State. Some c them have a very large capital. It is usuall invested at the domicil of the company. If th position of the Commonwealth is correct ab can tax the entire property of the Royal Insu ance Company although the same is locate almost wholly in England, or the assets of th New York Mutual, located in New York."

Under this decision there is no property hel by the Gloucester Ferry Company which ca be the subject of taxation in Pennsylvania ex cept the lease of the wharf in that Stat Whether that wharf is taxed to the owner or t the lessee it matters not, for no question he is involved in such taxation. It is admitted th it could be taxed by the State according to i appraised value. The ferry-boats of the Com pany are registered at the port of Camden i New Jersey, and according to the decisions i Hays v. Steamship Co. and in Morgan v. Parha [supra], they can be taxed only at their home por According to the decision in the Standard C Company case, and by the general law on th subject the Company has no domicil in Pen sylvania, and its capital stock representing i property is held outside of its limits. It is sol ly, therefore, for the business of the Compar in landing and receiving passengers at the wha in Philadelphia that the tax is laid; and th business, as already said, is an essential part the transportation between the States of Ne Jersey and Pennsylvania, which is itself inte state commerce. While it is conceded that th property in a State belonging to a foreign co poration engaged in foreign or interstate com merce may be taxed equally with like proper of a domestic corporation engaged in that bu ness, we are clear that a tax or other burden im posed on the property of either corporation b cause it is used to carry on that commerce, upon the transportation of persons or propert or for the navigation of the public waters ov which the transportation is made, is inval and void as an interference with and an c struction of the power of Congress in the regul tion of such commerce. This proposition is su ported by many adjudications. Thus, in Gi bons v. Ogden, the earliest and leading case up the commercial power of Congress, it was he that the Acts of New York giving to Livin ston and Fulton the exclusive right, for a c tain number of years, to navigate all the wat within its jurisdiction with vessels propelled steam, were unconstitutional and void. Maki the navigation of those waters subject to license of the grantee of the State—that is, such a tax or other burden as they might levy was an obstruction to commerce between t States and in conflict with the laws of Congr respecting the coasting trade. 9 Wheat., Although the sole point in judgment was whe er the State could regulate commerce on t waters in the face of such legislation by C [illegible] yet the argument of the court was that [illegible] attempted control of the navigable waters [illegible] State was an encroachment upon the [illegible] power of Congress independently of that [illegible].

[illegible] Ownership Co. v. Portwardens, 6 Wall., 31 [illegible] U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 749], it was held that a [illegible] of Louisiana declaring that the master [illegible] wardens of the port of New Orleans should [illegible] entitled to demand and receive, in addition [illegible] other fees, the sum of $5 for every [illegible] arriving at that port whether called on [illegible] perform any service or not, was unconstitutional and void, as imposing a burden upon commerce both interstate and foreign. The [illegible] was in effect a tax for entering the [illegible], for the navigation of its waters. The control of the navigable waters of the port, and of all public waters constituting channels of communication between the States and foreign countries, is embraced within the commercial power of Congress, and equally beyond the interference of the States. It was claimed that the tax was for compensation to the master and wardens for the performance of certain duties required of them, and that the law for its collection stood, therefore, on the same constitutional grounds as the laws authorizing the collection of pilotage; but the court answered that in Acts of Congress recognize such laws as those of Louisiana as proper and beneficial regulations, whilst state laws in respect to pilotage are not recognized. The court also added that the right to recover pilotage and half-pilotage prescribed by state legislation rested not only upon state laws but upon contract, carrying that pilotage was compensation for services performed, and half-pilotage was compensation for services which a pilot had put himself in readiness to perform by labor, risk and cost, and had offered to perform; whilst in the case in Louisiana the state law subjected the vessel to the demand of the master and wardens whether called upon to perform any service or not. The case therefore was simply that of a tax imposed upon the vessel for the navigation of the public waters of the State, and as such was a regulation of commerce and an illegal encroachment upon the power of Congress.

In Railway R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, sometimes called the Case of the State Freight Tax, [illegible] U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 146], it was held that the Act of the Legislature of Pennsylvania requiring railroad companies to pay to the state treasurer, for the use of the Commonwealth, a tax on each two thousand pounds of freight carried, was unconstitutional and void so far as it affected commodities imported through the State, or from points without the State to points within the State, or from points within the State to points without, as being a regulation of interstate commerce. The court said that the imposition of the tax whether large or small was a restraint upon the privilege or right to have the subjects of commerce passed freely from one State to another without being obstructed by the intervention of state lines. Its payment was a condition upon which the prosecution of that branch of commerce was made to depend, and the imposition therefore was in conflict with the power of Congress over the subject.

In Henderson v. Mayor of N. Y., 92 U. S., 259 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 543], an Act of the State of New York requiring the owner or consignee of a vessel arriving at the Port of New York to give a bond for every passenger in a penalty of $300, with two sureties, each a resident and freeholder, conditioned to indemnify the Commissioner of Emigration, and every county, city and town in the State against any expense for the relief or support of the person named in the bond, for four years thereafter, but allowing in commutation of the bond a payment of one dollar and a half for each passenger within twenty-four hours after his landing, and imposing a penalty of $500 for each passenger if such payment were not made within that time, the penalty to be a lien upon the vessel, was held to be unconstitutional and void. In its decision the court said that the State imposed a tax on the shipowner for the right to land his passengers, and that it was in effect a tax on the passenger himself, since its payment was required as part of his fare. "The transportation of a passenger from Liverpool to the city of New York," it added, speaking by Mr. Justice Miller, "is one voyage. It is not completed until the passenger is disembarked at the pier in the latter city. A law or a rule emanating from any lawful authority which prescribes terms or conditions on which alone the vessel can discharge its passengers is a regulation of commerce; and, in case of vessels and passengers coming from foreign ports, is a regulation of commerce with foreign nations." 92 U. S., 259, 271 [Bk. 23, L. ed., 543, 548].

These cases would seem to be decisive of the character of the business which is the subject of taxation in the present case. Receiving and landing passengers and freight is incident to their transportation. Without both there could be no such thing as their transportation across [214] the river Delaware. The transportation, as to passengers, is not completed until, as said in the Henderson Case, they are disembarked at the pier of the city to which they are carried; and, as to freight, until it is landed upon such pier. And all restraints by exactions in the form of taxes upon such transportation or upon acts necessary to its completion are so many invasions of the exclusive power of Congress to regulate that portion of commerce between the States.

The cases where a tax or toll upon vessels is allowed to meet the expenses incurred in improving the navigation of waters traversed by them; as, by the removal of rocks, the construction of dams and locks to increase the depth of water and thus extend the line of navigation, or the construction of canals around falls—rest upon a different principle. The tax in such cases is considered merely as compensation for the additional facilities thus provided in the navigation of the waters. Kellogg v. Union Co., 12 Conn., 7; Thames Bank v. Lovell, 18 Conn., 500; McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush, 447.

Upon similar grounds, what are termed harbor dues or port charges exacted by the State from vessels in its harbors, or from their owners, for other than sanitary purposes are sustained. We say for other than sanitary purposes, for the power to prescribe regulations to protect the health of the community and prevent the spread of disease is incident to all local municipal authority, however much such regulations may interfere with the movements of commerce. But independently of such measures the State may prescribe regulations for the government of vessels whilst in its harbors; it may provide for their anchorage or mooring, so as to prevent confusion and collision; it may designate the wharves at which they shall discharge and receive their passengers and cargoes, and require their removal from the wharves when not thus engaged, so as to make room for other vessels. It may appoint officers to see that the regulations are carried out, and impose penalties for refusing to obey the directions of such officers; and it may impose a tax upon vessels, sufficient to meet the expenses attendant upon the execution of the regulations. The authority for establishing regulations of this character is found in the [215] right and duty of the supreme power of the State to provide for the safety, convenient use and undisturbed enjoyment of property within its limits; and charges incurred in enforcing the regulations may properly be considered as compensation for the facilities thus furnished to the vessels. Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow., 351.

Should such regulations interfere with the exercise of the commercial power of Congress, they may at any time be superseded by its action. It was not intended, however, by the grant to Congress to supersede or interfere with the power of the States to establish police regulations for the better protection and enjoyment of property. Sometimes, indeed, as remarked by Mr. Cooley, the line of distinction between what constitutes an interference with commerce and what is a legitimate police regulation is exceedingly dim and shadowy, and, he adds, "it is not doubted that Congress has the power to go beyond the general regulations of commerce which it is accustomed to establish, and to descend to the most minute directions if it shall be deemed advisable; and that to whatever extent ground shall be covered by those directions, the exercise of state power is excluded. Congress may establish police regulations, as well as the States, confining their operations to the subjects over which it is given control by the Constitution; but as the general police power can better be exercised under the provisions of the local authority, and mischiefs are not likely to spring therefrom so long as the power to arrest collision resides in the National Congress, the regulations which are made by Congress do not often exclude the establishment of others by the State covering very many particulars." Cooley, Const. Lim., 732.

The power of the States to regulate matters of internal police includes the establishment of ferries as well as the construction of roads and bridges. In Gibbons v. Ogden [9 Wheat., 203], Chief Justice Marshall said that laws respecting ferries, as well as inspection laws, quarantine laws, health laws regulating the internal commerce of the States, are component parts of an immense mass of legislation, embracing everything within the limits of a State not surrendered [216] to the General Government; but in this language he plainly refers to ferries entirely within the State, and not to ferries transporting passengers and freight between the States and a foreign country; for the power vested in Congress, he says, comprehends every species of commercial intercourse between the United States and fo eign countries. No sort of trade, he adds, can b carried on between this country and another which the power does not extend; and what true of foreign commerce is also true of com merce between States over the waters separa ing them. Ferries between one of the Stat and a foreign country cannot be deemed, ther fore, beyond the control of Congress under th commercial power. They are necessarily go erned by its legislation on the importation an exportation of merchandise and the immigratio of foreigners—that is, are subject to its reg lation in that respect; and if they are not b yond the control of the commercial power Congress, neither are ferries over waters sep rating States. Congress has passed vario laws respecting such international and intersta ferries, the validity of which is not open question. It has provided that vessels used e clusively as ferry-boats, carrying passenger baggage and merchandise, shall not be require to enter and clear, nor shall their masters be r quired to present manifests, or to pay entran or clearance fees, or fees for receiving or ce tifying manifests; "but they shall, upo arrival in the United States, be required report such baggage and merchandise to th proper officer of the customs, according to law (R. S., § 2792); that the lights for ferry-boa shall be regulated by such rules as the Boa of Supervising Inspectors of Steam Vessels sha prescribe (R. S., § 4233, Rule 7); that an foreign railroad company or corporation who road enters the United States by means of ferry or tug-boat, may own such boat, and th it shall be subject to no other or different r strictions or regulations in such employme than if owned by a citizen of the United Stat (R. S., § 4370); that the hull and boilers of ever ferry-boat propelled by steam shall be inspec ed, and provisions of law for the better securit of life, which may be applicable to them, shal by regulations of the supervising inspectors, b required to be complied with before a certi cate of inspection be granted; and that the shall not be navigated without a licensed eng neer and a licensed pilot (R. S., § 4426).

It is true that from the earliest period in th history of the government the States have a thorized and regulated ferries not only ove waters entirely within their limits, but ove waters separating them; and it may be concede that in many respects the States can more a vantageously manage such interstate ferri than the General Government; and that th privilege of keeping a ferry, with a right to tak toll for passengers and freight, is a franchis grantable by the State, to be exercised withi such limits and under such regulations as ma be required for the safety, comfort and co venience of the public. Still the fact remai that such a ferry is a means—and a necessar means—of commercial intercourse between th States bordering on their dividing waters, an it must therefore be conducted without the in position by the States of taxes or other burde upon the commerce between them. Freedo from such imposition does not of course in ply exemption from reasonable charges as con pensation for the carriage of persons, in th way of tolls or fares, or from the ordinary tax tion to which other property is subjected, an [illegible] like freedom of transportation on land implies such exemption. Reasonable charges for the use of property either on water or land are not an interference with the freedom of transportation between the States secured under the commercial power of Congress. Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S., 80 [Bk. 24, L. ed., 377]; Packet Co. v. St. Louis, 100 U. S., 423 [Bk. 25, L. ed., 688]; Vicksburg v. Tobin, Id., 24 L. ed., 696]; Packet Co. v. Catlettsburg, 105 U. S., 559 [Bk. 26, L. ed., 1170]; Transportation Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S., 691 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 396].

That freedom implies exemption from charges other than such as are imposed by way of compensation for the use of the property employed, or for facilities afforded for its use, or as ordinary taxes upon the value of the property. The conflicting legislation of the two States on the subject of ferries on waters dividing them is to be met and treated is not a question before us for consideration. Pennsylvania has never attempted to exercise its power of establishing and regulating ferries across the Delaware River. Any one, so far as her laws are concerned, is free, as we are informed, to establish such ferries as he may choose. No license fee is exacted from ferrykeepers. She merely reserves the right to designate the places of landing, as she does the places of landing for all vessels engaged in commerce. The question, therefore, respecting the tax in the present case is not complicated by any action of that State concerning ferries. However great her power, no legislation on her part can impose a tax on the portion of interstate commerce which is involved in the transportation of persons and freight, whatever be the instrumentality by which it is carried on.

It follows that upon the case stated the tax imposed upon the Ferry Company was illegal and void. The judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania must therefore be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Attest:
James H. McKenney, Clerk. Sup. Court, U. S.

DELINZO A. WALDEN, Appt.,
v.
SHERMAN W. KNEVALS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 373-376.)

Indemnity to railways, attach when—route definitely fixed when—subsequent entry, void.

1. Under the Act of July 23, 1866, the land-grant to the St. Joseph and Denver Railroad Company attaches to the adjoining sections when the route designated by the company, and a map designating it was filed with the Secretary of the Interior and accepted by him.

2. A subsequent entry by one without notice acquires no interest in him, and the patent issued on such entry passes none. VanWyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S., 360, affirmed.

[No. 220.]

Submitted Apr. 1, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska.

The bill in this case was filed in the court below, by the appellee, to secure the conveyance to him of the legal title to certain premises alleged to be held in trust by the defendant.

The court below having entered a decree for the complainant, upon an agreed statement of facts, the defendant appealed to this court.

The facts of the case are sufficiently stated by the court.

Messrs. Delinzo A. Walden, in person, John M. Thurston, L. M. Colby and Alfred Haslett, for appellant.

Mr. J. M. Woolworth, for appellee.

[373]

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions presented in this case are similar to those considered and decided in Van Wyck v. Knevals, reported in 106 U. S. Reports [bk. 27, L. ed. 201]. By the Act of Congress of July 23, 1866 [14 Stat. at L., 210], there was granted to the State of Kansas, for the use and benefit of the St. Joseph and Denver Railroad Company, in the construction of a railroad from Ellwood in that State to its junction with the Union Pacific Railroad or a branch thereof, not further west than the 100th meridian of west longitude, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers, for ten sections in width on each side of the road, to the point of intersection. The grant was accompanied, however, with this qualification—that in case it should appear that the United States had, when the line or route of the road was "definitely fixed," sold any section or part thereof thus granted, or that the right of preemption or homestead settlement had attached to the same, or that it had been reserved by the United States for any purpose whatever, then it should be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to cause an equal quantity of other lands to be selected from the odd sections nearest to those designated, in lieu of the lands thus appropriated. The main question here, as in the case mentioned, is, When was the route of the road to be considered as "definitely fixed" so that the grant attached to the adjoining sections. In the case mentioned we held that the route must be considered as "definitely fixed" when it had ceased to be the subject of change at the volition of the company; that until the map designating the route of the road was filed with the Secretary of the Interior the company was at liberty to adopt such a route as it might deem best after an examination of the ground had disclosed the advantages of different routes. But it was held that when the route was adopted by the company and a map designating it was filed with the Secretary of the Interior and accepted by that officer, the route was established. In the language of the Act, it was "definitely fixed" and could not be the subject of further change so as to affect the grant except by legislative consent; and that no further action was required on the part of the company to establish the route. It then became the duty of the Secretary to withdraw the lands granted from market, and the court said: "If he should neglect this duty, the neglect would not impair the rights of the company however prejudicial it might prove to others. Its rights are not made dependent upon the issue of the Secretary's order or upon notice of the withdrawal being given to the local land officers. Congress, which possesses the absolute power of alienation of the public lands, has prescribed the period at which other parties than the grantee named shall have the privilege of acquiring a right to portions of the lands specified, and neither the Secretary nor any other officer of the Land Department can extend the period by requiring something to be done subsequently, and until done continuing the right of parties to settle on the lands as previously." 106 U. S., 366 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 203]. Since the decision of that case the court, in R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S., 629 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1122], has reconsidered the question and come to the same conclusion, the receipt of the map in the land-office without objection being considered as equivalent to its acceptance.

[374]

[375]

It appears from the agreed statement of facts that previous to the 21st of March, 1870, the engineers of the railway company surveyed and staked out upon the ground the proposed line of the road, made a topographical map of the country through which the line ran, showing the government surveys and the proposed route with reference to the section lines, and the towns, counties and rivers; that such map was on that day approved by the board of directors, and on the 25th of the same month was filed, together with a certificate of the approval indorsed thereon, with the Secretary of the Interior, who approved the same, and on the 28th of the same month transmitted it to the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, with directions to instruct the proper local land officers to withdraw from sale or other disposal all the odd-numbered sections falling within the limits of twenty miles on each side of the line of the route. On the 8th of April following the Commissioner transmitted by mail a copy of the map to the register and receiver of the local land office at Beatrice, in Nebraska, but it was not received by them until the 15th of that month. On the 8th of April, 1870, one Clark Irvin entered the lands in question at the land office in Beatrice, and on the 1st of November, 1871, a patent was issued to him. At the time of his entry no instructions had been received [376] from the Land Department of the Government that the lands were withdrawn from market, and he made his entry without any actual knowledge of the filing of the company's map with the Secretary, or of his order to withdraw the lands from market. Subsequently the company applied to the Land Department for a patent of the lands, and tendered the necessary fees and charges. The application was refused on the ground that Irvin's right of entry had attached to the lands and a patent for them had been issued to him. The plaintiff deraigned title from the railroad company, and the defendant deraigned title from Irvin, by deed, for which he paid a valuable consideration, without notice of the claim of the plaintiff. It thus appears that the defendant made his entry and therefore acquired whatever rights he possesses after the map of the company designating its route had been filed with the Secretary of the Interior, March 25, 1870, and the route had thereby become definitely established. The title of the company to the adjoining odd sections was then fixed. No rights could be initiated subsequently which could affect that title. The entry of the defendant being on the 8th of April afterwards created no interest in him, and the patent issued upon that entry passed none.

All other questions presented in this case are fully considered in Van Wyck v. Knevals, and we see no ground to change the conclusion then reached. For the reasons there stated, the decree of the court below must therefore be affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

PENN NATIONAL BANK, Appt.,

v.

JAMES T. FURNESS, FRANCIS BRINLEY, Administrator of EDWARD L. BRINLEY, Deceased, ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 376-381.)

Partnership—neither retiring member nor firm liable for loans to new firm used in payment of his capital and debts of old firm.

Certain members of a copartnership agreed to pay a retiring member a fixed amount as his capital, all erroneously believing the firm to be solvent. The new firm borrowed on its own notes and applied the proceeds in payment of part of the capital so agreed upon and of some of the debts of the old firm. Upon the failure of the new firm the holder of its notes cannot charge the old firm or the retiring partner with the money loaned on said notes although it was thus applied.

[No. 221.]

Argued Mar. 31 and Apr. 1, 1885. Decided April, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

The bill in this case was filed in the court below by the appellant, to charge the defendants with certain moneys upon an accounting.

The court below having entered a decree dismissing the bill the complainant appealed to this court.

The facts of the case are stated by the court.

Mr. Nathan H. Sharpless, for appellant.

Mr. Charles Hart, for Furness et al., appellees.

Messrs. Samuel Dickson and E. G. Platt, for Francis Brinley, appellee.

Mr Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit by the Penn National Bank to charge the firm of Furness, Brinley & Co., of Philadelphia, with moneys obtained from the Bank by the firm of Furness, Ash & Co., of that city, in a discount of its paper, and used in payment of the debts of the first firm; and also to charge the defendant Edward L. Brinley with the moneys thus obtained by Furness, Ash & Co., which were used to pay its debts to him.

It appears from the record that for many years preceding January 1, 1878, the firm of Furness, Brinley & Co. was engaged in business as auctioneers in the City of Philadelphia and was in good standing and credit. It consisted, up to October 1, 1878, of James T. Furness, Edward L. Brinley, Joshua P. Ash, William H. Ash, Henry Day and Dawes E. Fu [illegible] at that time Henry Day and Dawes E. Furness [illegible] from the firm. Soon afterwards Edward L. Brinley expressed a desire also to [illegible] from it. An agreement was accordingly [illegible] into between him and James T. Furness and Joshua P. Ash to the effect that he should [illegible] his retirement to take place as of the first of July 1877, but not to be announced until the first of January, 1878, and that he was to withdraw his capital in the firm, $25,000, to be paid in monthly payments of $5,000, commencing on the first of December, 1877. For the payment of this amount James T. Furness and Joshua P. Ash made themselves individually liable. On the first of January, 1878, Brinley's retirement was accordingly announced, and a new firm was then formed under the name of Furness, Ash & Co., consisting of James T. Furness, Joshua P. Ash and William [illegible] Ash, to continue the same business at the same stand, as successors of Furness, Brinley & [illegible]. This new firm existed only till the 15th of the following month when it failed. During its existence it obtained large discounts of its paper at the Penn National Bank and from other parties, and the money derived from them was used by it, among other purposes, to pay the instalments of $5,000 each month to Edward L. Brinley, the retired partner. Of the sum agreed upon, $20,000 were thus paid. The retirement of Edward L. Brinley from the old firm, and the formation of the new firm, the insolvent condition of the old firm was unknown to its members; but upon an examination of their books after the failure of the new firm it appeared that the old firm was in fact insolvent on the first of July, 1877, and on the first day of January, 1878. The bill in the present case charges that this agreement for the retirement of Brinley and the payment to him of $25,000 was made with knowledge of the insolvency of the old firm and upon a corrupt conspiracy between the partners to enable Brinley to fraudulently withdraw his capital from the firm and escape liability for its debts. It also charges that the discounts of the paper of the new firm were promoted by false statements on the part of Edward L. Brinley to intending parties who discounted the paper; and that they were made to carry out the corrupt conspiracy mentioned. All the allegations of fraud and conspiracy are explicitly and emphatically denied in the answers of the defendants, and are not wholly unsustained by the proofs. Although the business of the old firm for the last year of its existence was loosely conducted, there is not the slightest evidence that any of its members, except perhaps James G. Furness, had a suspicion of its insolvent condition. He may have suspected its condition, but if so he was too suspicious to himself, in no way intimating them to the other members of the firm. He kept the accounts of the partnership, and it does not appear that any other member knew anything of them. It is clear that they believed the firm was financially sound, and not only capable of paying all its debts but that there was a large surplus. It also appears that the National Bank at the time it discounted the paper of Furness, Ash & Co. knew who composed the firm and relied entirely upon its solvency and its obligations.

The case, then, stands thus: Certain members of the copartnership agreed to pay another member a fixed amount as his capital, on his withdrawal from the concern, all parties believing at the time in the firm's solvent condition. The member accordingly withdraws and a new partnership is thereupon formed between the remaining members. The new firm, on its own responsibility, borrows money on its notes from different parties—among others from the plaintiff—who were acquainted with its members, and pays part of the capital as agreed upon to the retiring member and also some of the debts of the old firm. Soon afterwards the new firm fails, and the plaintiff Bank now seeks to charge the old firm with the moneys thus loaned, which were used to pay its debts, and the retiring member for the amount due to him. We are clear that this cannot be done. The discount was a transaction entirely between the new firm and the plaintiff. No credit was given to the old firm or to the retired partner. It was not a matter between the Bank and either of them. It is simply a common instance of credit given to an insolvent firm without knowledge by the lender, of its insolvency; and in the course of business the loss is to be ascribed to overconfidence in the firm's responsibility, whilst in ignorance of its true condition.

The old firm remains liable for its debts contracted whilst it was in existence, and unpaid, and the retired member, as a partner in that firm, is liable with the other partners; and it seems from the record, that since the failure of the new firm he has himself discharged outstanding liabilities of the old firm amounting to over $37,000, exceeding by about $17,000 the sums paid to him by the new firm. The new firm is alone liable for the debts of its own contracting. [380] They cannot be transferred to others with whom the plaintiff never dealt.

The case is different from those where a retiring partner draws out a portion of the capital of the concern with an agreement that the other members will pay the debts, and it turns out that the firm was at the time insolvent. There the retiring party will be held to restore the capital, so far as may be necessary to pay the debts of the concern existing at the time, and this, too, whether there was any fraud designed in the transaction or not. He cannot be permitted to remove any portion of the capital of the insolvent concern beyond the reach of its existing creditors, if necessary to satisfy their demands, nor, if there be any scheme of future fraud in the removal, beyond the reach of its future creditors. Here the defendant Brinley has paid, as already mentioned, in the discharge of the debts of the old firm, several thousand dollars more than he received as his capital in that concern from the new firm. There has been no attempt at any time on his part to avoid the liabilities falling upon him as one of the partners in that firm.

The case of Anderson v. Maltby, 2 Ves. Jr., 244, to which counsel of appellant refers as a beacon-light for nearly a hundred years in this branch of the law, differs from the one at bar in essential particulars. There, upon the retirement of a partner in the firm of Maltby & Son a fictitious account was made up, showing indebtedness to him of several thousand pounds which was entered upon the books of the [illegible] This was done without any examination books at the time, or valuation of the property of the firm, or calculation of its debts, and no public notice was given of the retirement of the partner except by changing the title of the firm in the books of the Bank of England, and other books, from Maltby & Sons to Maltby & Son. The other members continued the partnership and failed. On a bill filed by its assignee, an account was decreed in favor of the new partnership against the retiring partner for the moneys thus received, owing to the circumstances of fraud attending the transaction. In deciding the case the Chancellor, after observing that when partners make up an account of profits which do not exist it is colorable, said: "If at [381] the close of the former partnership he (the retiring partner) was bona fide entitled, all the payments were just and legal; if he was not bona fide entitled to any demand on account of the former partnership as against the two about to form a new partnership, but that, to the knowledge and conviction of all three, was mere color and not a real but a nominal transaction, all the payments were made not merely without consideration but upon a bad consideration, and such as a court of equity, and, I think, a court of law, equally, ought to condemn." page 256. This is nothing more than declaring that a suit will lie by the assignee of a bankrupt concern to compel a retired partner to account for moneys paid to him by the firm upon a fraudulent claim.

In the case at bar there was no fraudulent claim advanced. The amount to be paid Brinley was for the capital put by him into the firm of Furness, Brinley & Co., all the partners, except perhaps one of them, supposing at the time of his retirement that the firm was not only solvent, but in possession of a large surplus; and the plaintiff is neither the new company nor its assignee, but the Bank which lent the money to that company upon its supposed solvency, and now seeks to charge the parties to whom the company paid it in discharge of its obligations. Equity does not follow money thus lent into the hands of persons to whom it has been paid in discharge of obligations to them and with whom the lender had no relations.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[381] JOSE AURRECOECHEA, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOSEPH L. BANGS, Admr. of AMOS S. BANGS, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 381-387.)

Public lands—suit to have legal holder declared to be a trustee—grant of school lands to California—Act of July 23, 1866.

1. Under the Act of July 23, 1866, passed to remedy the effects of the unauthorized survey and selection, by the State of California, of school lands granted by the Act of March 3, 1853, land claimed to be within a valid Mexican grant is within the excepting clause of section 1.

2. After the survey, the land thus restored to the public domain is open to preemption, and the preemptor acquire a valid title as against one who claims under the invalid selection made by the State.

The case of Huffy v. Doyle, bk. 23, p. 975, affirmed.

[No. 703.]

Submitted Jan. 5, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

The petition in this case was filed in the Third District Court, County of Alameda, California, by the plaintiff in error, to hold the defendant, who had the legal title to certain premises, to be a trustee for the plaintiff.

The court sustained a demurrer and rendered judgment for the defendant. This judgment having been affirmed on appeal, by the court below, the complainant sued out this writ of error.

Messrs. Edward J. Pringle and H. F. Crane, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. Chester, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the Supreme Court of California.

The case relates to the title to lands in that State and was decided on a demurrer, which was sustained, to a petition of plaintiff in error. This petition was in the nature of a bill in chancery seeking to hold the defendant, who had the legal title to the land, by a patent from the United States, to be a trustee for the plaintiff, on the ground that in a contest between the two before the Land Department the officers of that department had, by the decision in favor of the defendant, deprived plaintiff of his superior right by a misconstruction of the law.

The land in controversy was within the exterior limits of a claim under a Mexican grant. The validity of this grant was established by proceedings under the Act of Congress on the subject. But when the survey was made and finally confirmed which ascertained the locality of this grant, it was found that the land in suit was not within it. This fact was established on June 6, 1871, by the confirmation of the final survey of that grant.

On July 1, 1871, the map of the congressional survey of the township, which included the land and which was completed by subdivision into sections and quarter sections, was filed in the local land office of the district of San Francisco.

Bangs, the defendant, who had been residing on the land for some time, made and filed with the register and receiver his declaratory statement asserting an intention to preempt the land June 26, 1871. Under this claim the defendant, having complied with the requirements of law, received the patent of which plaintiff claims the benefit.

Plaintiff's superior equity, as he sets it out in his petition, arises under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1853, granting to the State of California every sixteenth and thirty-sixth section of the public lands for school purposes. 10 Stat. at L., 244. As none of the public lands in California had been surveyed, it could not then be known where these school sections would be located; and in view of the fact that many settlements would be made on those sections before they could be ascertained by survey, the seventh section of the Act, while val [illegible] the claims of such settlers, authorized the State to select other lands in lieu of them, and a list of such as were reserved for public [illegible] or taken for private claims.

The history of the attempt of the State to make these surveys for herself, and to exercise the right of selection under this seventh section of the Act of 1853, is given in the opinion of the court in the case of Huff v. Doyle, 93 U. S. 335 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 975], and reference is now made to that history for an understanding of the present case. Indeed the land in that case, as in this, was a part of the Mexican claim of Parkins, and the principles announced in that case are decisive of this.

It appears from the history there detailed that the Land Department of the United States [illegible] to recognize the surveys made by the authority, and the selection made by the State and sold and certified to its purchasers, [illegible] on July 23, 1866 (14 Stat. at L., [illegible]), passed an Act for the relief of such persons and to remedy the evils of this unauthorized action on the part of the State of California so far as possible.

The first section of this Act is as follows: "That in all cases where the State of California has heretofore made selections of any portion of the public domain in part satisfaction of any grant to the State by any Act of Congress, and has disposed of the same to purchasers in pursuance with her laws, the lands so selected shall be and hereby are confirmed to said State." A proviso making several exceptions to this confirmation excludes from it, among others, "any land held or claimed under any valid Mexican or Spanish grant." The second section makes it the duty of the authorities of the State, when the selections named in section 1 have been made upon land which has been surveyed by the authorities of the United States, to notify the register of the land-office of such selection, and if, upon inquiry by the land officers, such selection is found to be in accordance with section 1, the Commissioner of the General Land-Office shall certify the land to the State in the usual manner. This section of the statute had reference to cases where the selections had been made of lands which had been surveyed at the date of the passage of the Act.

The third section made provisions for selections made of lands which had not been surveyed by the United States at the date of the Act, which is the case before us. This section says that the selection so made shall have, when the lands are afterwards surveyed, the same force and effect as the preemption rights of a settler on the unsurveyed public lands, and the claimant shall be allowed the same time after the surveys have been made to prove up to purchase as is allowed under the preemption laws.

The bill alleges that in the year 1863 the State, by its agent, selected this land and sold it to a purchaser for a valuable consideration, from whom plaintiff purchased it. It then alleges that some time in the year 1866 this selection was made known to the register and receiver of the land-office, and a note of it made on their books. Complainant further says that within three months after the completion of the surveys by the United States he appeared before these officers and asserted his claim under that selection, and proved it upon the contest with Bangs before the department.

There would seem to be no objection to the case made by plaintiff but for the fact that the land in controversy was, at the time of this selection by the State, part of a claim under a Mexican grant. The grant itself was confirmed as valid by judicial proceedings, though upon final survey this piece of land did not fall within it. But the exclusion of the proviso of the first section of the Act of 1866 is of land held or claimed under a valid Mexican grant. This land was claimed under a Mexican grant, which proved to be valid, though, as located, it did not include all the land claimed. [385]

In the case of Huff v. Doyle, already cited, we held that land embraced in this Mexican claim, though not included in the final survey, was within the excepting clause of the proviso of the Act of 1866.

When this selection was made by the State in 1866, the land was not subject to such selection. The Act of making such a selection was a nullity. It conferred no right to the State or its vendee, and when the United States made its remedial and confirmatory statute it refused to confirm selections within the bounds of Mexican claims, and did not confirm this.

But in the case of Huff v. Doyle we held that, after the grant was surveyed and the surplus thus restored to the public domain and the congressional survey completed, the party might then present his claim under the selection, and if no superior right existed he would be entitled to the land. We said, referring to this legislation: "In all this we see the purpose of Congress to refer the exercise of the right of the State to select indemnity for school lands to the condition of the lands for which indemnity is claimed, as well as those out of which it is sought at the time the official surveys are made and filed in the proper office, or as soon thereafter as the right is asserted."

In that case the claimant under the State made and proved up his claim as soon as the survey was made, and the land was accordingly certified to the State. His opponent, who had also made his declaration as preemptor while the land was still claimed under the Mexican grant, which claim was for that reason also void, and before the public survey or the survey of that grant was made, renewed his claim after that of plaintiff, and was rejected. To both parties the condition of the land, as liable to either claim at the time the claim was rightfully asserted, governed the case. [386]

In the case before us the preemptor was the first, after the land ceased to be a part of the Mexican claim and was restored to the public domain, to make application to the land-office and assert his right to appropriate it as public land. The officers of the department recognized his claim, as we think they were bound to do, for the land had only a few days before this become public land, and thus liable to preemption or to the valid selection of the State. The invalid selection, made at a time when the land was not subject to selection, was not made good by the Act of 1866, which expressly excluded it; and while we held that, after the land became public land and liable to selection the former selection might be made good, its validity could only relate to the time of its assertion in the land-office after it became so liable.

But if, before this latter proceeding was had, or notice to the land-office of an intention to rely on the old selection was given, other rights had intervened, the state right of selection could not be made to the prejudice of those rights.

On this principle we think all the benefit which could possibly be derived from the confirmatory Act of 1866 in regard to such cases as this is had, while the just rights of others are preserved. The statute, in express language, gives the holder of the invalid state selection the same right as a preemption settler on unsurveyed lands, and no more. Here Bangs had asserted his right as soon as the land was released from the Mexican claim and a few days before the congressional survey became fixed. The least that can be said of Bangs' claim is, that it was of equal force when the maps of these surveys were filed, and by his superior diligence, in a lawful manner, he obtained the patent, and plaintiff has no superior equity which should take it from him.

As to the allegation in the bill that Bangs made a forcible intrusion on the possession of complainant in September, 1870, before the land became public land, that was a question to be considered by land officers in the contest be-[387] tween the parties, and is not a fraud or mistake for which the patent can be held to inure to plaintiff's benefit. Nor does the plaintiff rely on it as sufficient. His claim to the benefit of defendant's title rests upon the selection made under state authority. That is the question of federal law which this court must decide, and, as we have seen, that was well decided against him by the state court.

Its decree is accordingly affirmed.

Jose Aurrecoechea, Plff. in Err.,
v.
Duncan Sinclair et al.—No. 258.

This case is submitted on the same facts and principles and the same briefs as the foregoing case, and the same judgment necessarily follows.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of California is accordingly affirmed.

Jose Aurrecoechea, Plff. in Err.,
v.
Joseph Bangs et al.—No. 1014.

Jose Aurrecoechea, Plff. in Err.,
v.
George Gerk et al.—No. 1015.

Jose Aurrecoechea, Plff. in Err.,
v.
John W. Clark et al.—No. 1016.

Jose Aurrecoechea, Plff. in Err.,
v.
Earl B. French et al. No. 1017.

In accordance with stipulations by the parties on file in this court, that the above mentioned cases should abide the result of the judgment in the case of the plaintiff against Amos Bangs, the judgments in the cases are affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

HENRY AMY AND GUSTAVE L. HO
PENSTEDT, Partners as H. AMY & C
ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,
v.
TAXING DISTRICT OF SHELBY COU
TY (Tenn.) ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 387-394.)

Constitutional law—impairing obligation of co tracts—validity of legislation of Tennessee pr viding for the refunding of the indebtedness the extinct municipality of Memphis—set-off.

1. A state law authorizing a debtor to procure t obligations of his creditor and use them as a set-o for his own debt is not liable to impeachment devesting vested rights or impairing the obligati of contracts.

2. The Acts of March 23, 1883, of the Legislatu of Tennessee, providing for the refunding of t indebtedness of the extinct municipality of Me phis in the bonds of the Taxing District of Shel County, and the collection and application of ba taxes, did the plaintiffs no injustice, but rath benefited them. It violated no right of theirs, n any contract of theirs, that the new bonds e changed for old indebtedness should be received back taxes at the same rate that the old indebte ness would have been received if no exchange h been made.

[No. 974.]

Submitted Jan. 8, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 188

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of t State of Tennessee.

This writ of error is prosecuted by t plaintiffs in error, to reverse the decree of t court below affirming, with certain modific tions, the decrees of the Chancery Court Shelby County, Tennessee, in three cases whi were heard together in the court below.

The facts of the case are sufficiently stat by the court.

Messrs. Wm. M. Randolph, E. Myers a Wm. N. Sneed, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. S. P. Walker, for the Taxing Distr of Shelby County, defendant in error.

Messrs. Minor Merriweather and La rence Lamb, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion the court:

This is a writ of error to the Supreme Co of Tennessee.

By an Act of the Legislature of the State Tennessee, approved January 29, 1879, charter of the City of Memphis was repeal and by another Act, approved the same day, territory which had constituted the city v created a taxing district; and the property the city and all debts due to it and all unc lected taxes were vested in the State.

On March 13th of the same year anot statute, familiarly called "Chapter 92," direc the appointment of an officer for each of corporations whose charter was repealed the earlier statute, to be called the receiver back taxes, who was to be under the con of a court of chancery in the collection paying out of the taxes so collected by h Section 2 of this Act directs that "he s distinguish, in making such payments, the NOTE.—Constitutional law—impairing obligat of contracts. See Fletcher v. Peck, 10 U. S. (6 87, note.

[illegible] sources from which the moneys paid [illegible] are derived, showing what is collected from taxes for general purposes and what for taxes for special purposes, designating the particular or special purpose, so that the same may be kept separate in the State treasury, in order that the treasurer may pay the same according to any lien, priority or equity, if any, which may be declared by the chancery court, touching any of said funds, in favor of any creditor or class of creditors." Another section authorized the receiver of back taxes to file a bill in chancery, in the name of the State, in behalf of all the creditors, against all delinquent taxpayers, for the ascertainment and enforcement of the rights of the parties in regard to these back taxes unpaid.

Such a bill was filed, and important proceedings have been had under it.

A bill was pending, however, in the Circuit Court of the United States before the bill authorized by this statute was filed, which sought to enforce the collection of taxes by certain parties, to which the receiver of back taxes was afterwards made a defendant; and under that bill a decree was rendered which treated the new provisions of this state legislation as void. On appeal from that decree this court reversed it and announced certain principles which upheld the validity of the legislation of the State, [illegible] the power of courts of the United States to enforce against the receiver and in his hands any decree or judgment by [illegible] for levying and collecting taxes which had been made by such court prior to the beginning of this legislation.

The case—a report of which contains the history of this legislation and the statutes above referred to—is that of Merriweather v. Garrett, [illegible] U. S., 472 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 197].

Section 5 of the Act last mentioned provided with some particularity for the receipt by the back tax collector, in payment of these back taxes of certain classes of outstanding indebtedness of the City of Memphis, and fixed the rate, as always the same, at which they might be received, chiefly at the rate of fifty cents on payment of taxes for each dollar of indebtedness.

The collection of these taxes and their distribution continued under the supervision of the court of chancery in the suit already mentioned, and many orders and decrees on the subject were made.

The State in the meantime passed statutes which authorized the Taxing District to compromise the indebtedness of the City of Memphis, by taking up its old obligations and issuing bonds of the Taxing District at the rate of fifty cents of the latter for one dollar of the former.

The two statutes on this subject which are supposed to violate the Constitution of the United States were passed March 23, 1883.

One of these Acts, chapter 170 of the Acts of that year, authorizes all municipal corporations and taxing districts to compromise and scale their debts, and to issue the bonds and scrip of taxing districts at the rate of fifty per cent of the principal and past due interest; and a section of the Act is as follows:

"Sec. 16. Be it further enacted, That the acceptance and consummation by any creditor, of the compromise provided by this Act, shall of itself operate to assign and transfer to said municipal corporation or taxing district all his rights to and claims against the uncollected taxes or other assets whatever of said municipal corporation, with the right in said municipal corporation or taxing district to enforce the same either in its own name or in the name of the creditor; the funds that may be realized therefrom to be paid into the designated depository of such municipality or taxing district; and they are hereby devoted and appropriated exclusively to the payment of the bonds and coupons that come under the provisions of this Act."

The other statute, passed the same day, is an Act modifying the provision of chapter 92 (March 13, 1879), as to what shall be received in payment of back taxes, and the rate at which the various items of debt should be received. One of these changes, made in evident relation to the Act passed the same day for refunding this old indebtedness by bonds of the taxing district, is in these words: "And provided, further, That when any indebtedness of such extinct municipality shall be hereafter funded into new bonds at fifty cents on the dollar, such new bonds and matured coupons thereon shall be received in payment of the back taxes due such extinct municipality, at the same rate as herein provided for Flippin compromise bonds." The Flippin compromise bonds were to be received at double their face value. [391]

The obvious reason for this was that both the Flippin compromise bonds and the bonds to be issued under the new Act just passed represented two dollars of old debt for one dollar on the face of the new bonds; and this new regulation was making all old indebtedness receivable at par. It was necessary, therefore, in order to place the holders of Flippin bonds who had compromised this old debt for fifty cents on the dollar, and those who might do the same under the new statute just passed, at the same rate, on an equality with those who still held the old debt unchanged, to make this difference in the rate at which they might be received for back taxes.

It is the decree of the Supreme Court of Tennessee holding this legislation valid which is assigned for error, and the principal error in the case.

The plaintiffs in error are parties who held and still hold debts against the City of Memphis, which were not secured by a lien or claim on any tax specially assessed for their payment. Their debts belonged to the unpreferred class. While a large part of the debt of the city during the time between the first and latest enactments we have mentioned was satisfied by using it in payment of back taxes at the rate of two dollars for one, or by exchanging it for the new bonds of the Taxing District, the parties now complaining did neither, but still held their old bonds with accumulated interest. It is to be observed, also, that the special taxes assessed under writs of mandamus to pay judgments prior to the repealing law could only be paid in money; and as fast as it was paid it was appropriated to the payment of the debts for which it was specifically assessed. And so also of all taxes assessed for any special purpose. [392]

One result of this process was that the back taxes were gradually being paid and satisfied by exchange for this old indebtedness, whereby the holders of it, who sold it to taxpayers to be used for that purpose, were getting something for it, and both the indebtedness and the back taxes were being extinguished by a process of set-off. For when a tax debtor became by purchase an owner of any part of this debt, the extinguishment of the tax and the debt was clearly within the doctrine of set-off of mutual obligations.

When, however, the back tax receiver began to receive in payment, under the law of 1883, the new bonds of the Taxing District, issued in compromise of the old indebtedness, these plaintiffs in error insisted that this could not be done to their prejudice; and by a petition to the chancery court they prayed its interference to prevent it. As the language of the statute was plain they insisted that it was void because forbidden by the Constitution of the United States. The Supreme Court of the State held the law to be valid, and hence this writ of error.

The assignment of errors in plaintiff's brief points out no special provision of the Constitution which forbids the legislation of Tennessee complained of, which, it is to be remembered, is only the more recent statutes we have referred to.

The language of the brief, as repeated in several forms, is that the court erred because it did not hold that these statutes as construed by the court were a violation of the Constitution of the United States, and devested the rights of plaintiffs as set out in their petition.

This expression, when the argument in its support is examined, resolves itself into the proposition that chapter 92 of the Acts of 1879 conferred on them some right, which they insist became a vested right, of which right they have been deprived by the later Act.

But we do not see what right was vested in them by that statute. It is to be remembered that their debts did not belong to any class which at the time the statute was passed constituted a lien on any part of these back taxes. [393] Such liens as did exist, or such vested rights in any special class of taxes as then existed, were carefully preserved by the statute; and these taxes could only by its terms be collected in money and used to discharge these liens or special claims. It gave no lien of the general debtor on the back taxes or any part of them. It provided for their collection and for their use when collected, in payment of the debts of the city. In this respect it did not change any existing law, but provided the means of enforcing the rights of the creditors of the city against its assets.

The Legislature having assumed charge of the property of the defunct corporation, and undertaken to administer its assets, passed judicious laws for this purpose, and it is not asserted that the original Act which allowed the use of the debt of the city in payment of the taxes was unjust, though it required two dollars of the former in satisfaction of one of the latter. All holders of the general city debt were placed on equality in this respect. Plaintiffs here could have used their debt or disposed of it in that manner, as others did. The State did not come under any obligation to pay their debt, except as it could be paid in this manner and it did not guarantee that the back taxes whether paid in this manner or in any other would give it a fund sufficient to pay all bac indebtedness. It only undertook to do the bes it could with the means it had.

The legal and equitable right, in a genera way, of a debtor to procure the obligations c his creditor and use them as a set-off for hi own debt, will hardly be denied when the lav of the State authorizes it; and such a law ca be liable to no impeachment as devesting veste rights or impairing the obligation of contracts Blount v. Windley, 95 U. S., 173 [Bk. 24, L ed. 424]. Both the original Act (chapter 92 and the Acts of 1883 did this. The fact tha the latter Acts made a change in the rate a which this set-off should be allowed did n injustice to plaintiffs, but rather favored them since it permitted their debt, with its accumu lated interest, to be set off, dollar for dollar whereas this could only be done before at tw dollars for one. It did them no injustice, an violated no right of theirs nor any contract c theirs, that the new bonds exchanged for ol indebtedness should be receivable for bac taxes at the same rate that the old indebtedne would have been received if no exchange ha been made.

We see no vested right of plaintiffs which violated by the decree, no contract of thei impaired by the legislation complained of, an no injustice done them, and especially non which this court can remedy.

The decree of the Supreme Court of Tennessee therefore affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

BOATMEN'S SAVINGS BANK, Plf. in Err., v. STATE SAVINGS ASSOCIATION OF ST. LOUIS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 265-269.)

Jurisdiction—federal controversy—bankruptcy

When the question in a state court was, whethe the presentation of a check, drawn on a banker b a depositor, transferred to the holder so much c the debt due the drawer as was sufficient to pay th check, no federal question is presented and th court is without jurisdiction. The subsequen bankruptcy of the drawer, and a claim by the ban of a set-off against his deposit, under § 5073, R. S., d not operate to give this court jurisdiction, the re question at issue not depending on the bankrup law.

[No. 228.]

Argued Apr. 1, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885

IN ERROR to the St. Louis Court of Appeal of the State of Missouri.

The history and facts of the case appear i the opinion of the court.

Messrs. John W. Noble, W. Hallet Phillips, P. Phillips, John C. Orrick an A. M. Gardner, for plaintiff in error:

The case presented arises under the Bankrup Act. R. S., § 5013.

[illegible] v. Hopkins, 104 U. S., 303 (bk. 27, L. ed. [illegible]).

It is analogous to the case of Factors' Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S., 740 (Bk. 28, L. ed., 582). See also Roy v. Norsworthy, 23 Wall., 123 ([illegible] U. S., bk. 23, L. ed. 116).

The judgment of the state court was against the right asserted and exercised by the defendant under the Bankrupt Act. This is all that is necessary to confer the jurisdiction.

[illegible] v. Kelly, 16 Wall., 620 (83 U. S., bk. [illegible], L. ed. [illegible]).

Messrs. Jeff. Chandler, John M. Glover, [illegible] F. Shepley and George H. Shields, for defendant in error:

The record must affirmatively show that the judgment in the state court was founded on a decision of a federal question.

[illegible] v. Vose, 14 Wall., 5 (81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. [illegible]); Bk. of West Tenn. v. Citizens Bk., [illegible] Id., 314; Hurley v. Street, Id., 85 (Id., [illegible]); Caperton v. Bowyer, Id., 216 (Id., 882); [illegible] v. Ins. Co., Id., 661 (Id., 757); Smith v. [illegible], 15 Wall., 185 (83 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 310).

Section 25 does not give jurisdiction to review decisions against mere assertions of authority under the United States.

Millinger v. Hartupee, 6 Wall., 258 (73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 829); Mills v. Brown, 16 Pet., 525; [illegible] v. Kelly, 22 Wall., 57 (89 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. [illegible]).

The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction unless the state court decides against the privileges claimed.

[illegible] v. Coldcleugh, 3 Cranch, 268; McClung v. Silliman, 6 Wheat., 598; Fulton v. Shaw, 16 Pet., 149; Ableman v. Booth, 21 [illegible] (62 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 169); Silver v. Ladd, 6 Wall., 440 (73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. [illegible]).

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the State Savings Association of St. Louis against the Boatmen's Savings Bank to recover the amount of two checks drawn on the Bank by the firm of Cobb, Delhonde & Co., dated respectively September [illegible], and October 23, 1874, and presented for payment November 5, 1874. When the checks were presented there was a balance on deposit in the Bank to the credit of the firm more than enough to take them up, but the firm had failed between the dates of the checks and the time of their presentation, and had notified the Bank to that effect. The Bank, on that account, refused payment. At the time of the presentation of the checks, and also at the time of the failure of the firm, the Bank held a draft, not then due, drawn by one Bradley and accepted by the firm, for $3,174, dated October 3, 1874, and payable in forty days from date. On the same day that the checks were presented and refused it was arranged between the Bank and the Savings Association that if the Bank succeeded in collecting this draft from the drawer it would pay the checks. The draft was never collected and the checks still remain unpaid.

Cobb, Delhonde & Co. did not resume payment after their failure; and on the 23d of March, 1875, they were duly adjudicated bankrupts on a petition filed January 8, 1875. The Bank indorsed on the Bradley draft the amount standing to the credit of the firm at the time of the failure, and proved its claim in the bankruptcy proceeding for the balance remaining due after this indorsement was made. Upon this balance dividends were paid by the assignee in bankruptcy. The Savings Association also proved its claim in bankruptcy and received dividends thereon. The total amount of its claim was much more than the amount of the checks.

The ground on which the Savings Association sought to recover in the suit was that the presentation of the checks to the Bank for payment, while there was a balance of deposits to the credit of the firm exceeding the amount drawn for, charged the Bank with the liability to pay the checks to the Association as the holder thereof. The defenses set up by the Bank in its answer were: (1) that the failure of the firm, and notice thereof to the Bank, was equivalent to instructions from the firm not to pay any checks that might thereafter be presented; 2, that the Savings Association was not the assignee or indorsee of the checks; (3) that, in consideration of the agreement of the Bank to pay the checks if the Bradley draft was collected, the Savings Association bound itself not to hold the Bank liable if the collection was not made; and (4) that, relying on this agreement by the association, the Bank credited the full amount of the balance of deposits in favor of the firm upon the Bradley draft and proved up its demand against the estate of the bankrupts on account of the draft for no more than remained due after this credit was given, and that dividends were paid by the assignee only on the amount proven. Upon the trial, judgment was given in favor of the Savings Association for the full amount of the checks, and this judgment was affirmed by the St. Louis Court of Appeals, which is the highest court of the State in which a decision in the suit could be had.

We are unable to discover any federal question in the record. No title, right, privilege or immunity under the Constitution or laws of the United States was set up in the pleadings, and no claim of that kind was made at the trial. The whole controversy at and before the trial seems to have been as to the right of the holder of a banker's check to recover against a bank having funds of the drawer when presentation has been duly made and payment demanded, and as to the effect of the arrangement between the parties when it was agreed that the Bank should pay the checks if the Bradley draft was collected. [267]

In the Court of Appeals it was, among other things, assigned for error that "the judgment was against the right of the defendant to a judgment in his favor, under the provisions of the Act of Congress of the United States establishing and providing for a uniform system of bankruptcy, in force at the time of the transaction between the parties, out of which the controversy arises"; and, from the opinion of the court, section 5078 of the Revised Statutes seems to have been relied on. That section provides: [268]

"In all cases of mutual debts or mutual credits between the parties, the account between them shall be stated, and one debt set off against the other, and the balance only shall be allowed or paid."

No rights under this section were set up in the pleadings or claimed at the trial; and, besides, the right of the Bank to apply whatever credit there may be in its accounts in favor of the bankrupt firm to the reduction of the amount due on the draft is not denied. The only dispute is as to the amount of the credit, and we are unable to see that the bankrupt law is involved in the determination of that question. The Court of Appeals decided that the presentation of the checks on the 5th of November operated as an equitable assignment at that date, of an amount of the fund then standing to the credit of the firm equal to the amount of the checks, and made the Savings Association from that time, in equity, the creditor of the Bank to that extent. Debts are provable against a bankrupt's estate as of the date of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy. Rev. Stat., § 5067. As section 5073 relates to the amount which may be allowed upon such proof, it is clear that the mutual debts or mutual credits there referred to must be such as are in existence at the same date. In the present case the question was whether on the 5th of November, 1874, more than two months before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, a part of the balance standing to the credit of Cobb, Dolhonde & Co. on the books of the Bank had been assigned to the plaintiff in this action. That did not depend on the bankrupt law, but on the legal effect of what was done at and before that time by the parties, and when, so far as appears from the record, no proceedings in bankruptcy were contemplated. The point for determination was whether the presentation of a check drawn on a banker by a customer having funds to his [269] credit transferred in equity to the holder of the check so much of the debt due from the bank to the drawer as was sufficient to pay the check. This clearly is not a federal question.

It follows that we have no jurisdiction of the case, and it is dismissed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[262] BRADSTREET COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

FORRESTER H. HIGGINS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 262-264.)

Costs on motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction.

1. Upon the dismissal of a case for want of jurisdiction, on motion of the defendant, he is entitled to judgment for the costs of the motion.
2. The right to decide a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction implies the right to decide as to costs incident to the motion.

[No. 657.]

Submitted Apr. 6, 1885. Decided Apr. 13, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri.

Motion for an order that the plaintiff in error be required to pay the costs of printing the record and the clerk's fees for supervising t same.

Messrs. W. Hallett Phillips, Karnes Ess and Chas. L. Dobson for defendant in erro in support of motion.

Mr. Henry Wise Garnett, for plaint in error, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opi ion of the court:

This writ of error was dismissed at a form day in this term, on motion of the defendant error, for want of jurisdiction, because the val of the matter in dispute did not exceed $5,00 112 U. S., 227 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 715]. In ord to present his motion to dismiss, it became n cessary for the defendant in error to cause t record to be printed; and to do that he was co pelled to pay the cost of printing and the fee the clerk for supervising. The judgment, entered on the motion to dismiss, made no der as to costs, and the defendant in error no moves that the cost of printing and the clerl fee for supervising be taxed against the plai iff in error.

It has been orten decided that if a suit is d missed for want of jurisdiction in this court judgment for the costs of the suit can be give Ingles v. Coolidge, 2 Wheat., 368; McIver Wattles, 9 Wheat., 650; Strader v. Graham, How., 602 [59 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 464]; Ho thall v. Collector, 9 Wall., 566 [76 U. S., bk. L. ed. 562]. A different rule prevails wh there has been a reversal here because the C cuit Court did not have jurisdiction, as t court has authority to correct the error of Circuit Court in taking jurisdiction. Tur v. Enville, 4 Dall., 7; Winchester v. Jackson Cranch, 514; Montalet v. Murray, 4 Cran 47; M. C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. 387 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 465].

Here, however, the question is not as to right of the defendant in error to recover costs in the suit, but only such as are incid to his motion to dismiss. It has been decid that the writ of error was wrongfully sued by the plaintiff in error. To get rid of the w and the supersedeas which had been obtai thereunder, the defendant in error was co pelled to come to this court and move to dism That motion we had jurisdiction to hear and cide. The right to decide implies the right adjudge as to all costs which are incident to motion.

Under Rule 10, section 2, of this court was the duty of the plaintiff in error to ca the record to be printed and to pay all the co and fees incident thereto in time for use wh required in the progress of the cause. I failed in this the defendant in error might the costs and fees and thus secure the printi Under section 7, in case of reversal, affirma or dismissal with costs, the amount of the c of printing the record and the clerk's fee ar be taxed to the party against whom the co are given.

In this case the plaintiff in error neglecte have the record printed by the time it wanted by the defendant in error on his mo to dismiss. Under these circumstances we not doubt our authority to adjudge the cost cident to the printing against the plaintiff i ror as part of the costs of the motion to dism

It is accordingly ordered that the judgment herein entered be amended so as to charge the plaintiff in error with all the costs of the motion to dismiss, which shall include the cost of printing the record and the clerk's fee for supervising.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOHN DOBSON AND JAMES DOBSON, trading as JOHN & JAMES DOBSON, and as "THE FALLS OF SCHUYLKILL CARPET MILLS," Appts.,

v.

HARTFORD CARPET COMPANY.

SAME, Appts.,

v.

BIGELOW CARPET COMPANY.

SAME, Appts.,

v.

SAME.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 439–447.)

Patent law—infringement—measure of damages—joinder of claims—practice—costs.

1. In suit in equity, for the infringement of a patent for a design for carpets, where no profits were found to have been made by the defendant, the Circuit Court allowed to the plaintiff, as damages, in respect to the yards of infringing carpets made and sold by the defendant, the sum per yard which was the profit of the plaintiff in making and selling carpets with the patented design, there being no evidence as to the value imparted to the carpet by the design. Held, that such award of damages was improper, and that only nominal damages should have been allowed.

2. Where a bill founded on a design patent, with a claim for a pattern and separate claims for each of the suits, is taken as confessed, it alleging infringement of the "invention," the patent will be held valid for the purposes of the suit.

3. The joinder of such claims in one patent does not prevent invalidate the patent, or any claim, at the objection of a defendant.

4. A claim of "the design for a carpet, substantially as shown," refers to the description and the drawing, and is valid.

5. An objection that a patent for a design is for an aggregation of old ornaments, and embodies no "invention," is concluded, where the bill alleges infringement of the "invention" and is taken as confessed.

6. Where the master reported no profits, and nominal damages, in a suit in equity for the infringement of a patent for a design, and on exception by the plaintiff the Circuit Court allowed a sum for damages, and this court reversed its decree, the plaintiff was allowed costs in the Circuit Court and including the interlocutory decree, and the defendant was allowed his costs after such decree.

[Nos. 231, 232, 233.]

Argued Apr. 2, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

The history and facts of the cases appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Hector T. Fenton, Richard P. Wade and George E. Buckley, for appellants.

Mr. Arthur Briesen, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court.

These are three suits in equity, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, against John Dobson and James Dobson, trading as John & James Dobson and as "The Falls of Schuylkill Carpet Mills." No. 1 is brought by the Hartford Carpet Company, for the infringement of design letters patent No. 11074, granted March 18, 1879, to the plaintiff, as assignee of Winthrop L. Jacobs, for three and one half years, for a design for carpets. No. 2 is brought by the Bigelow Carpet Company, for the infringement of design letters patent No. 10778, granted August 13, 1878, to the plaintiff, as assignee of Hugh Cristie, for three and one half years, for a design for carpets. No. 3 is brought by the Bigelow Carpet Company, for the infringement of design letters patent No. 10870, granted October 15, 1878, to the plaintiff, as assignee of Charles Magee, for three and one half years, for a design for carpets.

No. 1 was commenced on the 26th of April, 1879, and Nos. 2 and 3 on the 7th of May, 1879. [441] In No. 1 and No. 3 the defendants appeared by a solicitor, but did not plead, answer or demur to the bill, and it was taken as confessed, in each suit, on the 11th July, 1879; and, on the 2d of September, 1879, an interlocutory decree was entered in each suit awarding a perpetual injunction and an account of profits and damages.

In No. 2 an answer was filed on the 3d of September, 1879, denying infringement and setting up a want of novelty. A replication was filed, and on the 5th of November, 1879, a preliminary injunction was granted. Testimony was taken, and on April 23, 1880, on final hearing, a decree was made for a perpetual injunction and an account of profits and damages. Some testimony on the accounting in Nos. 1 and 3 was taken in November, 1879, but most of the evidence before the master was taken in the three suits at the same time, in June, 1880.

In No. 1 the master filed a report on January 18, 1881, setting forth that the plaintiff, before the master, waived all claim for profits and limited its claim to the damages it had suffered by the infringement; that the defendants had sold twenty pieces, of fifty yards each, of carpet containing the patented design; that the plaintiff claimed $13,400 damages, being 67 cents a yard on 400 pieces of carpet of fifty yards each, as being the decrease of the plaintiff's sales caused by the infringement, estimating the cost to the plaintiff of making and selling the carpet at $1.08 per yard, and his selling price at $1.75 per yard; and that the master had rejected that claim, as founded on admissible evidence, and a further claim of $3,000 damages for expenses caused to the plaintiff by the infringement, in getting up other designs and changing its looms to other carpets. The report was for six cents damages. The plaintiff excepted to the report because it did not find profits to have been made by the defendants and did not report more than nominal damages. The court sustained the exceptions, and decreed to the plaintiff $737, being for twenty pieces of infringing carpet made and sold by the defendants at fifty-five yards per piece, or 1,100 yards, at 67 cents per yard, as the plaintiff's profit per yard on carpet of the patented design. The final decree was for $737 [442] and costs, and a perpetual injunction. The defendants have appealed.

Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

In No. 2 the master filed a report on January 18, 1881, setting forth that the plaintiff, before the master, waived all claim for profits, and limited its claim to the damages it had suffered by the infringement; that no testimony had been taken showing the amount of the defendants' sale of the infringing carpet; that the plaintiff claimed $11,250 damages, being 75 cents a yard on 300 pieces of carpet of fifty yards each, as being the decrease of the plaintiff's sales caused by the infringement, estimating the costs to the plaintiff of making and selling the carpet at $1.10 per yard, and his selling price at $1.85 per yard; and that the master had rejected that claim as not sustained by the evidence, and also a further claim for expense caused to the plaintiff by the infringement, in getting up another design and in resetting its looms to manufacture the same. The report was for six cents damages. The plaintiff excepted to the report for not finding more than nominal damages. The court sustained the exceptions and decreed to the plaintiff $750, being for twenty pieces of infringing carpet made by the defendants, at fifty yards per piece, or 1,000 yards, at 75 cents per yard, as the plaintiff's profit per yard on carpet of the patented design. The final decree was for $750 and costs, and a perpetual injunction. The defendants have appealed.

In No. 3 the master filed a report on January 18, 1881, setting forth that the plaintiff, before the master, waived all claim for profits, and limited its claim to the damages it had incurred by the infringement; that the defendants had sold thirty-one pieces, amounting to 1,684¼ yards, of carpet containing the patented design; that the plaintiff claimed $3,750 damages, being 75 cents a yard on 5,000 yards of carpet, as being the decrease of the plaintiff's sales caused by the infringement, estimating the plaintiff's profit on making and selling the carpet at 75 cents per yard; and that the master had rejected that claim as not sustained by the evidence, and also a furthur claim for the cost of getting up another design to replace the one infringed. The report was for six cents damages. The plaintiff excepted to the report because it did not find profits to have been made by the defendants and did not report more than nominal damages. The court sustained the exceptions and decreed to the plaintiff $1,312.50, being for thirty-five pieces of infringing carpet made and sold by the defendants at fifty yards per piece, or 1,750 yards, at 85 cents per yard, as the plaintiff's profit per yard on carpet of the patented design. The final decree was for $1,312.50 and costs and a perpetual injunction. The defendants have appealed.

[443]

The Circuit Court proceeded on the ground, as stated in its decision (10 Fed. Rep., 385), that it was to be presumed that the defendants' carpets displaced in the market an equal quantity of the plaintiff's carpets; and that the profits which the plaintiffs would have made on that quantity of carpets was the measure of their damages. It rejected the claims for losses for any greater decline in the plaintiff's sales, and on looms, as "too remotely connected with the defendants' acts as their supposed cause" and "too speculative in their character" to be allowed."

Leaving out of view all question as to the presumption that the plaintiffs would h made and sold, in addition to the carpets of patented designs which they did make and s the infringing carpets which the defenda made and sold, which are alleged to have b of poorer quality and cheaper in price, it is pl that the price per yard allowed as damages v the entire profit to the plaintiffs, per yard, the manufacture and sale of carpets of the tented designs, and not merely the value wh the designs contributed to the carpets. Th was no evidence as to that value.

It is provided by section 4921 of the Revis Statutes that, in a suit in equity for the fringement of a patent the plaintiff may, o decree in his favor, recover the damages he l sustained, in addition to the profits to be counted for by the defendant, such damages be assessed by the court, or under its directic and with the same power to increase the da ages, in the discretion of the court, as in t case of verdicts; and the damages intended "the actual damages sustained," in the langua of section 4919. Root v. R. Co., 105 U. S., 1 212 [bk. 26, L. ed. 975, 983]. By section 49 all these provisions apply to patents for desig

This court has, in a series of decisions, l down rules as to what are to be regarded "profits to be accounted for by the defendan and what as "actual damages," in suits for t infringement of patents; and no rule has be sanctioned which will allow, in the case of patent for a design for ornamental figures c ated in the weaving of a carpet, or imprint on it, the entire profit from the manufactu and sale of the carpet, as profits or damages, cluding all the profits from carding, spinnin dyeing and weaving, thus regarding the enti profits as due to the figure or pattern, unless is shown by reliable evidence that the enti profit is due to the figure or pattern. It is m ter of common knowledge that there is an i finite variety of patterns in carpets, and th between two carpets of equal cost to make a equal merit as to durability of fabric and fa ness of color, each with a pattern pleasing the taste, one having a design free to be us and the other a design protected by a pate the latter may or may not command in t market a price larger than the former. If does, then the increased price may fairly be tributed to the design, and there is a solid ba of evidence for profits or damages. But, sh of this, under the rules established by t court, there is no such basis. The same pri ciple is applicable as in patents for inventior The burden is upon the plaintiff, and if he fa to give the necessary evidence, but resorts, i stead, to inference and conjecture and specu tion, he must fail for want of proof. There another suggestion of great force. The car with the infringing design may be made on infringing loom, and various infringing proce es or mechanisms for carding, spinning or d ing may be used in making it, and if the e tire profit in making and selling it is necessari to be attributed to the pattern, so it may as we on principle, be attributed to each of the oth infringements, and a defendant might be call on to respond many times over for the sar amount. There is but one safe rule—to requi the actual damages or profits to be establish by trustworthy legal proof.

It is not necessary to cite at length from the [illegible] decided by this court on the subject. It is sufficient to refer to them as follows: Livingston v. Woodworth, 15 How., 546; Seymour v. [illegible], 16 How., 480; Mayor v. Ransom, 23 [illegible] 87 [64 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 515]; Mowry v. [illegible], 14 Wall., 620 [81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. [illegible]]; [illegible] v. York, 17 Wall., 460 [84 U. S., bk. [illegible] L. ed. 679]; Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall., 205 [illegible] 5, bk. 22, L. ed. 577]; Birdsall v. Coolidge, [illegible] S., 64 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 802]; Cawood Patent, [illegible] 86 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 238]; Blake v. Robert[illegible] [Id., 245]; Garretson v. Clark, 111 [illegible] [Bk. 28, L. ed. 371]; Black v. Thorne, [illegible] 372].

The rule, which applies also to a patent for a design, was formulated thus by this court, [illegible] v. Clark: "The patentee must in every case give evidence tending to separate or apportion the defendant's profits and the patentee's damages between the patented feature and the unpatented features, and such evidence must be reliable and tangible, and not conjectural or speculative; or he must show by equally reliable and satisfactory evidence that the profits and damages are to be calculated on the whole machine, for the reason that the entire value of the whole machine as a marketable article is properly and legally attributable to the patented feature." The case of Mfg. Co. v. [illegible], 96 U. S., 253 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 987], was a case falling within the last clause of the rule laid down, and was an exceptional case, as was said by the Chief Justice, in the opinion. The general rule was recognized in that case, and the question was made in regard to the oil-well pump there involved because there was only a limited and local demand for it, which could not be met and was not supplied by any other [illegible].

The rule in question is even more applicable to a patent for a design than to one for mechanism. A design or pattern in ornamentation or [illegible] appeals only to the taste through the eye, and is often a matter of evanescent caprice. The article which embodies it is not necessarily or generally any more serviceable or durable for an article for the same use having a different design or pattern. Approval of the particular design or pattern may very well be one motive for purchasing the article containing it, but the article must have intrinsic merits of quality and structure, to obtain a purchaser, aside from the pattern or design; and to attribute in law the entire profit to the pattern, to the exclusion of the other merits, unless it is shown by evidence, as a fact, that the profit ought to be so attributed, not only violates the statutory rules of "actual damages" and of "profits to be accounted for," but confounds all distinctions between cause and effect.

The decrees must therefore, all of them, be reversed as to the damages awarded.

In No. 1, though the bill was taken as confessed, the defendants take the point that the patent is void on its face because it has nineteen claims. It has a claim for an entire pattern, and for a separate claim for each of eighteen separate parts making up the whole. The bill alleges infringement by the making and selling of the "invention" and of carpets containing the "invention." Even if the defendants can raise this point after a decree pro confesso (see Thomson v. Wooster, 114 U. S., 104 [ante, 105]), the patent must be held valid at least for the purposes of this case.

In No. 2, the question of proof of making and selling by the defendants before suit brought is raised. But we think, on the pleadings and all the proofs, including the defendant's letter of April 13, 1880, the case is made out. The point is also taken that this patent is void because it has a claim for the entire pattern and three claims for each of three constituent parts of it. No such point is taken in the answer, which speaks of the patent as one for a single design. If the Patent Office, in view of the question of fees, and for other reasons, grants a patent for an entire design, with a claim for that and a claim for each one of various constituent members of it, as a separate design, we see no objection to it, leaving the novelty of the whole and of each part and the validity of the patent open to contestation. The mere joinder of such claims in one grant does not per se invalidate the patent or any particular claim, at the objection of a defendant.

In No. 3 objection is taken to the patent because it claims "the design for a carpet, substantially as shown." As the bill is the same in form as that in No. 1 and was taken pro confesso, the patent is valid at least for the purposes of this case. Aside from this we see no good objection to the form of the claim. It refers to the description as well as the drawing, in using the word "shown." The objection is also made, as to No. 3, that the patent is for an aggregation of old ornaments and embodies no invention. This objection is concluded, for this case, by the language of the bill and the decree pro confesso. [4

The final decrees in all of the suits are reversed, and the cases are remanded to the Circuit Court with directions to disallow the award of damages in each suit, and to award six cents damages in each, and to allow to the defendants a recovery in each case for their costs after interlocutory decree, and to the plaintiff in each case a recovery for its costs to and including interlocutory decree.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Dissenting: Mr. Justice Bradley.

RUDGER CLAWSON, Plff. in Err., [4

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 477–488.)

Juries in Utah—exclusion of believers in polygamy—§ 5, Act March 22, 1882, and § 4, Act June 23, 1874.

*Under § 5 of the Act of Congress of March 22, 1882 (22 Stat. at L., 30), which provides "that in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation under any statute in the United States, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any person drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman, * * * that he believes it right for a man to have more than one living and undivorced wife at the same time," the proceedings to impanel the grand jury which finds an indictment for one of the offenses named, under a statute of the United States, against a person not before held to answer, are a part of the prosecution, and the indictment is good, although persons drawn and summoned as grand jurors were excluded by the court from serving on the grand jury, on being challenged by the United States, for the cause mentioned, the challenges being found true.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

The statute applies to grand jurors.

Where, under § 4 of the Act of Congress of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. at L., 254), "in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah," in the trial of an indictment, the names in the jury-box of 200 jurors, provided for by that section, are exhausted, when the jury is only partly impaneled the District Court may issue a venire to the United States marshal for the Territory, to summon jurors from the body of the judicial district, and the the jury may be completed from persons thus summoned.

[No. 1263.]

Argued Apr. 8, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah.

The history and facts of the case fully appear in the opinion of the court. See also Clawson v. U. S., ante, 47.

Messrs. Franklin S. Richards and Wayne MacVeagh, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., for defendant in error.

[478]

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

At April Term, 1884, of the Third Judicial District Court of Utah Territory, Rudger Clawson was indicted, under two counts in the same indictment, one for polygamy and the other for cohabiting with more than one woman. The first count was founded on § 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by § 1 of the Act of Congress of March 22, 1882 (22 Stat. at L., 30); and the second on section 3 of that Act. By section 4, counts for those offenses may be joined in the same indictment. The defendant was tried in October, 1884, and found guilty on both counts, as charged, and sentenced, on the first count, to pay a fine of $500 and to be imprisoned three years and six months; and on the second count to pay a further fine of $300 and to be imprisoned the further term of six months; and further, to be confined till the fines be paid. From this judgment he appealed to the Supreme Court of the Territory, which affirmed the judgment and sentence, and he has brought the case to this court by a writ of error.

The indictment was presented and filed in court April 24, 1884. On the 30th of April, 1884, before plea, the defendant moved to set aside the indictment, on the ground that the grand jury was not legally constituted, in that qualified grand jurors, drawn and summoned, were illegally excluded from the grand jury on the challenge of the prosecuting attorney. The motion was heard on an agreed statement of facts, which is set out in the bill of exceptions, and was overruled, and the defendant excepted to the decision. The first error here assigned is that that motion was improperly overruled.

By § 4 of the Act of Congress of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. at L., 254), entitled "An Act in Relation to Courts and Judicial Officers in the Territory of Utah," it is provided as follows: "That within sixty days after the passage of this Act, and in the month of January annually thereafter, the clerk of the District Court i each judicial district, and the judge of probat of the county in which the District Court is nex to be held, shall prepare a jury list from whic grand and petit jurors shall be drawn, to serv in the District Courts of such district until new list shall be made as herein provided. Sai clerk and probate judge shall alternately selec the name of a male citizen of the United State who has resided in the district for the period o six months next preceding, and who can rea and write in the English language; and, as se lected, the name and residence of each shall b entered upon the list until the same shall con tain two hundred names, when the same shal be duly certified by such clerk and probat judge; and the same shall be filed in the offic of the clerk of such District Court, and a dupl cate copy shall be made and certified by suc officers and filed in the office of said probat judge. Whenever a grand or petit jury is to b drawn to serve at any term of a District Cou the judge of such district shall give public no tice of the time and place of the drawing o such jury, which shall be at least twelve day before the commencement of such term; an on the day and at the place thus fixed th judge of such district shall hold an open sessio of his court, and shall preside at the drawin of such jury; and the clerk of such court shal write the name of each person on the jury list returned and filed in his office upon a separat slip of paper, as nearly as practicable of th same size and form, and all such slips shall, b the clerk in open court, be placed in a covere box, and thoroughly mixed and mingled; an thereupon the United States marshal or hi deputy shall proceed to fairly draw by lot fron said box such number of names as may hav previously been directed by said judge; and i both a grand and petit jury are to be drawn the grand jury shall be drawn first; and whe the drawing shall have been concluded, th clerk of the District Court shall issue a venir to the marshal or his deputy, directing him t summon the persons so drawn, and the sam shall be duly served on each of the persons s drawn at least seven days before the commence ment of the term at which they are to serve and the jurors so drawn and summoned shal constitute the regular grand and petit juries fo the term for all cases. And the names thu drawn from the box by the clerk shall not b returned to or again placed in said box until new jury list shall be made. If during an term of the District Court any additional gran or petit jurors shall be necessary, the same shal be drawn from said box by the United State marshal in open court; but if the attendanc of those drawn cannot be obtained in a reason able time, other names may be drawn in th same manner. * * * The grand jury must in quire into the case of every person imprisone within the district on a criminal charge an not indicted. * * *"

A jury list of 200 persons from which t draw grand and petit jurors for the Third Ju dicial District Court for the year 1884 was made certified and filed in the office of the clerk o the court, under the above cited provisions o the Act of June 23, 1874, and a number wa set opposite to each name. Those having eve numbers opposite to their names were selecte [illegible] the probate judge and were reputed Mormons, and those having odd numbers opposite their names were selected by the clerk of the court and were reputed not to be Mormons. On the 21st of March, 1884, at a session of the court thirty names were drawn from the jury box from which to impanel a grand jury for the April Term, 1884. Of these thirty, thirteen were even numbers, and seventeen odd numbers. Of the thirty, five did not appear or were excused, leaving twenty-five, of whom ten had even numbers and fifteen odd numbers. Those twenty-five persons, during the proceedings to impanel the grand jury, were all called and sworn and examined as to their qualifications as grand jurors, fifteen of them being each asked the following questions: "Do you believe in the doctrine and tenets of the Mormon church? Do you believe in the doctrine of plural marriage, as taught by the Mormon church? Do you believe it is right for a man to have more than one undivorced wife living at the same time?" Each of the fifteen persons so interrogated answered the questions affirmatively, each was thereupon challenged by the prosecuting attorney, and the court allowed the challenges and excluded each of those fifteen persons from the grand jury. Thus every one of the twenty-five persons who was a reputed Mormon was excluded from the grand jury. Each of the fifteen persons so interrogated had all the qualifications prescribed by law for grand jurors, unless disqualified by such answers. The defendant had not been charged nor held to answer the offenses charged in the indictment, or any criminal offense, at the time the grand jury was impaneled; the examination of the persons called as grand jurors, and the challenges, were wholly conducted and made by the prosecuting attorney; and no questions were propounded to or answered by persons with odd numbers opposite their names, concerning their religious belief. After those fifteen persons were excluded, only ten grand jurors accepted by the United States remained, out of the list of thirty originally drawn; and thereupon the court ordered a drawing of ten additional names from the general list of 200, which was done, three having even numbers, and seven odd numbers. A venire was issued for them, and six of them appeared, all having odd numbers, and five of the six were added to the ten accepted, and the jury, as impaneled and sworn, consisted of those fifteen, all of them reputed non-Mormons, and it found and presented the indictment against the defendant.

The challenging and exclusion of the fifteen persons is maintained to have been proper, under [illegible] of the Act of March 22, 1882, before referred to, and which reads as follows: "That in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation, under any statute of the United States, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any person drawn or summoned as a juror or talesman, first, that he is or has been living in the practice of bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation with more than one woman, or that he is or has been guilty of an offense punishable by either of the foregoing sections, or by section fifty-three hundred and fifty-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States, or the Act of July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled 'An Act to Punish and Prevent the Practice of Polygamy in the Territories of the United States and Other Places, and Disapproving and Annulling Certain Acts of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah'; or, second, that he believes it right for a man to have more than one living and undivorced wife at the same time, or to live in the practice of cohabiting with more than one woman; and any person appearing or offered as a juror or talesman, and challenged on either of the foregoing grounds, may be questioned on his oath as to the existence of any such cause of challenge, and other evidence may be introduced bearing upon the question raised by such challenge; and this question shall be tried by the court. But as to the first ground of challenge before mentioned, the person challenged shall not be bound to answer if he shall say upon his oath that he declines on the ground that his answer may tend to criminate himself; and if he shall answer as to said first ground, his answer shall not be given in evidence in any criminal prosecution against him for any offense named in sections one or three of this Act; but if he declines to answer on any ground he shall be rejected as incompetent." [482]

As each of the fifteen persons challenged and excluded answered, when questioned on oath, that he believed it right for a man to have more than one undivorced wife living at the same time, he was properly excluded, if section 5 of the Act applied to the case.

It is contended that that section did not apply because the defendant had not been held to answer, and there was no prosecution against him. The language of the section is, that "in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation, under any statute of the United States, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge," etc. It is urged that the proceedings to impanel a grand jury were not part of a prosecution, and that the prosecution could not begin until after the grand jury had been completely impaneled. But we think this is too narrow a view of the statute. The whole scope of section 5 is to prescribe what shall be sufficient causes of challenge to be made by the United States in a case of bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation. It is the United States alone which would desire to exclude from the grand jury persons answering the descriptions named in the section. It is not contemplated that a person to be prosecuted for the offenses specified would challenge for any of the causes set forth. The mischief to be remedied was the having as grand jurors, against the interest of the United States, the persons specified, in a prosecution for the particular offenses named. If the grand jury enters upon the investigation of cases involving the offenses designated, and such investigation results in the finding of an indictment for any of those offenses, it cannot properly be alleged by the defendant in the indictment that the prosecution did not, within the meaning of section 5, begin with the first step in the proceedings to obtain the grand jury which found the indictment. And, for the protection of the defendant himself, it would necessarily be equally held that he was entitled to claim that such proceedings were a part of the prosecution against him, because otherwise [483] he could have no right to question those proceedings.

The prosecution was one for offenses created by a statute of the United States. That is the meaning of section 5 of the Act. And it is not an objection that can be urged by this defendant that the same grand jury might have been called upon to act on other offenses than those named in that section.

It is also urged that section 5 does not apply to grand jurors. The language is, "any person drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman" —"any person appearing or offered as a juror or talesman." In view of the fact that by § 4 of the Act of June 23, 1874, both grand jurors and petit jurors are to be drawn from the box containing the two hundred names, and are to be summoned under venires, and are to constitute the regular grand and petit juries for the term, and of the further fact that the persons to be challenged and excluded are persons not likely to find indictments for the offenses named in section 5, we cannot doubt that the words "jurymen" and "juror" include a grand juror as well as a petit juror. There is as much ground for holding that it includes the former alone, as the latter alone, if it is to include but one. It must include one at least, and we think it includes both. The purpose and reason of the section include the grand juror; and there is nothing in the language repugnant to such view. The use of the words "drawn or summoned as a juryman or talesman," and of the words "appearing or offered as a juror or talesman," does not have the effect of confining the meaning of "juror" to "petit juror," on the view that the ordinary meaning of "talesman" refers to a petit juror. A grand juror is a juryman and a juror, and is drawn and summoned, and it might well have been thought wisest to mention a "talesman" specifically, lest the words "juryman" and "juror" might be supposed not to include him.

[484]

It is objected that none of the grand jurors who were retained on the panel were interrogated as to whether they believed it right for a man to live in the practice of cohabiting with more than one woman. As to this it is sufficient to say that the challenges were based on the affirmative answers to the third question, and that the statute only specifies what shall be a sufficient cause of challenge, and does not compel the making of the challenge or the asking of the questions.

After the motion to set aside the indictment was overruled, the trial was had on a plea of not guilty. In impaneling a jury it appeared that the list of jurors drawn and summoned for the term, and also the general jury list for the year, consisting of two hundred names selected and returned for a general jury list, were exhausted, and that no names remained in the general jury box. Thereupon the prosecuting attorney, on the ground that the jury list provided for by statute was exhausted, moved the court that an open venire issue, to summon such jurors as were necessary. The defendant objected to the issuing of an open venire or any venire for jurors, on the ground that there was no law authorizing it. The court overruled the objection, and the defendant excepted. By an order of the court a venire was then issued to the United States marshal for Utah Territory, commanding him to summon from the body of the judicial district fifty jurors. They were summoned, and on the return of the venire the panel was challenged by the defendant because the jurors were selected and summoned on an open venire. The challenge was overruled and the defendant excepted. Like proceedings took place in respect to two further open venires for thirty and twenty-four jurors respectively. Of the twelve persons who composed the jury, eleven were obtained from those summoned under the open venires.

It is assigned for error that the petit jury was illegally constituted, in that the court had no right to summon petit jurors on an open venire. The argument is, that the provisions of § 4 of the Act of June 23, 1874, are, on their face exclusive; that the method prescribed by that section for obtaining jurors is the only one that can be employed; that only the probate judge and the clerk of the court can select the jurors and make the jury list; that the grand and petit jurors for a term must be drawn by the marshal from a box containing names of persons thus selected, and constitute the regular grand petit juries for the term; that if, during the term, any additional grand or petit jurors are necessary, they must be drawn by the marshal in open court from the same box; and that if the two hundred names are all drawn out, for grand or petit jurors, at any time during the year, there can be no more indictments found, or any more civil or criminal jury trials had, in the court of the district for the rest of the year, because it is provided in section 5 that the jurors drawn from the box shall be jurors only for the term, of which there are four in the year, and that the names drawn shall not be again placed in the box until a new jury list is made, which is to be done annually in January. A result so disastrous to the administration of justice, so certain to impair, if not destroy, public and private rights is not to be permitted unless imperatively required. The Act of June 23, 1874, does not prescribe the making of a new list by the probate judge and clerk except once a year, in January, or the making by them of an additional list at any time during the year. But that Act does not directly, or by implication or intendment, exclude the use of an open venire when the two hundred names are exhausted during the year. It provides that the jurors drawn and summoned shall constitute "the regular grand and petit juries for the term, for all cases." By other provisions of law, each of the district courts of the Territory is required to hold four terms a year. There is no doubt that jurors must be drawn from the two hundred names, or those of them remaining in the box, so long as any remain. But the question is, What is to be done when those names are exhausted? If there is no method that can be resorted to to obtain jurors in such event, the provisions in § 5 of the Act of 1882, for challenges by the United States, with a view to indictments for the offenses named in that section, will have proved suicidal, and resulted in destroying all opportunity to find or try such indictments. We are not referred to any statutory provision in any Act of Congress or an Act of the Territory which forbids the use of an open venire when the 200 names are e [illegible]. The argument is, that the provisions of § 5 of the Act of 1882 cover the entire subject of obtaining jurors and do not allow of any supplementary measures, and that such measures cannot be resorted to unless affirmative statute authority, directed to the very point, is to be found.

The Supreme Court of Utah, in its opinion affirming the judgment in the present case, did not refer to any statute of Congress or of the Territory directly authorizing the open venire, but rested the power to issue it on the fact that such power was inherent in the court and was not forbidden by any statute in force in Utah; and held that it followed as an incident to the authority and duty of the District Court to hold its sessions and try by jury indictments for crimes. We concur in this view so far as the [illegible] to the open venire after the exhaustion of the two hundred names is concerned.

The fourth section of the Act of 1874 prescribes the rule to be observed, to the extent in which it prescribes any rule. It proceeds on the view that the jury list of two hundred names will be sufficient for ordinary purposes, or, as it expresses it, for "the regular grand and petit juries for the term"; and it provides what shall be done so long as there are any names left in the box. But it is silent as to what shall take place when the names are all exhausted. It does not forbid the ordinary and well known [illegible] to an open venire. Moreover, section 5 of the Act of 1882, in regard to prosecutions like the present one, prescribes what shall be a sufficient cause of challenge to a person [illegible] or summoned as a juryman or talesman," and what questions may be put to "any person appearing or offered as a juror or talesman," thus recognizing a "talesman" as distinct from a "juryman" or a "juror." The persons drawn from the box of two hundred names are "jurors," and are so defined and called in section 4 of the Act of 1874. Congress, therefore, in using the word "talesman," had reference to a person not drawn from such box. The word "talesman" is not satisfied by referring it to the additional jurors which section 4 of the Act of 1874 says may and shall be drawn from the box, if they "shall be necessary" during the term. They are not talesmen in any proper sense, but are as much regular jurors as those first drawn from that box.

The principle which authorized the action of the court in obtaining petit jurors in this case after the statutory measures had been exhausted is sanctioned by authority. Bac. Abr., Juries, C.; 1 Chit. Crim. Law, 518; 2 Hale, P. C., [illegible], 266; U. S. v. Hill, 1 Brock., 156; [illegible] v. People, 2 Col., 13; Stone v. People, [illegible]; Straughan v. State, 16 Ark., 37, [illegible]; Wilburn v. State, 21 Ark., 198, 201; Gibson v. Commonwealth, 2 Va., Cas., 111, 121; Kaffer v. State, 1 How. (Miss.), 238, 241; Woodside v. State, 2 How. (Miss.), 655, 659; State v. [illegible], Supreme Court of Iowa, September, [illegible], 17 Chic. Leg. News, 58. By section 1868 of the Revised Statutes, the district courts of the Territory have common-law jurisdiction, and, under § 1874 of the Revised Statutes and § [illegible] of the Compiled Laws of Utah of 1876 these courts have original jurisdiction in criminal cases. By § 217 of the Criminal Procedure Act of Utah of February 22, 1878, all issues of fact in criminal cases must be tried by jury, and by section 7 the defendant in a criminal action is entitled to a speedy trial. A venire to summon jurors is a writ necessary to the exercise of the jurisdiction of the court and agreeable to the principles and usages of law, where it is not forbidden or excluded, and where the affirmative provisions of law have, so far as they extend, been first observed. In U. S. v. Hill (before cited) Chief Justice Marshall, speaking of the law as it then existed, says: "It has been justly observed that no Act of Congress directs grand juries or defines their powers. By what authority, then, are they summoned, and whence do they derive their powers? The answer is, that the laws of the United States have erected courts which are invested with criminal jurisdiction. This jurisdiction they are bound to exercise; and it can only be exercised through the instrumentality of grand juries. They are therefore given by a necessary and indispensable implication. But how far is this implication necessary and indispensable? The answer is obvious. Its necessity is co-extensive with that jurisdiction to which it is essential." [488]

The cases to which we are referred by the plaintiff in error were cases where express statute provisions had been disregarded or violated. If, in this case, an open venire had been issued before the two hundred names were exhausted, a different question would have been presented.

The record shows no error, and the judgment is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

FREDERICK HOPT, Plff. in Err., [488]
v.
PEOPLE OF THE TERRITORY OF UTAH.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 488–492.)

Criminal procedure—Code of Utah—defective record.

*Under the Utah Code of Criminal Procedure of 1878, a judgment upon a verdict of guilty of murder, the record of which states that the court charged the jury, and does not contain the charge in writing, nor show that with the defendant's consent it was given orally, is erroneous, and must be reversed on appeal.

[No. 1141.]

Submitted Jan. 28, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. R. N. Baskin, W. G. Van Horne and S. H. Snider, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Asst. Atty-Gen., for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to reverse a judgment

*Head note by Mr. Justice GRAY.

rendered by the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah, affirming, upon appeal from the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory, a judgment and sentence of death upon a conviction of murder. The decisions of this court, after former trials of the case, are reported in 104 U. S., 631 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 873], and 110 U. S., 574 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 262].

One of the errors now assigned in the brief filed in behalf of the plaintiff in error is that the record did not comply with the statute of Utah requiring that the written charges of the court should form part of the record.

[489] In the copy of the record of the District Court contained in the record transmitted by the Supreme Court of the Territory to this court, the statement relating to the charge of the court to the jury, and the exceptions to the charge, are as follows: On May 5 the case was finally argued by the counsel for either party, "and the court charged the jury; defendant's counsel except generally to the instructions given by the court on its own motion, and exception allowed; and a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was returned and entered." And on May 16, "the time allowed by law for filing the bill of exceptions herein having passed, the court, upon application of defendant's counsel, refuses to further extend the time. Defendant excepts." The record also shows that on May 10, after judgment and sentence, a notice of appeal was filed by the defendant with the clerk, and a copy of the notice served on the district attorney.

Appended to the brief filed in this court in behalf of the United States is an affidavit, taken January 7, 1885, of the deputy clerk of the District Court, testifying that the counsel for the defendant at the trial in that court, who requested him to prepare the transcript of record on appeal to the Supreme Court of the Territory, requested him to omit the written charge given by the court to the jury at the trial, and told him that no point was to be made by the defendant upon the instructions given by the court to the jury; that the transcript prepared in accordance with that request was delivered by the clerk to the counsel, and by them filed with the clerk of the Supreme Court of the Territory; that by reason alone of that request the written charge was omitted from the record; and that no bill of exceptions was ever filed or offered to be filed or presented to the Judge of the District Court for settlement.

[490] By the Utah Code of Criminal Procedure of 1878, the charge of the court to the jury "must be reduced to writing before it is given, unless by mutual consent of the parties it is given orally." § 257, cl. 7. Within five days after judgment upon a conviction, the clerk must annex together and file the papers necessary to constitute the record, including "4. A copy of the minutes of trial; 5. A copy of the minutes of the judgment; 6. The bill of exceptions, if there be one; 7. The written charges asked of the court and refused, if there be any; 8. A copy of all charges given and of the indorsements thereon." § 339. The defendant may either take exceptions to the instructions of the court to the jury in matter of law at the trial of an indictment, or he may, without a bill of exceptions, appeal from a final judgment of conviction on any question of law presente by written charges requested, given or refused or any other question of law appearing on th record. §§ 309, 315, 358, 360. The manner o taking an appeal is by filing a notice with th clerk of the court in which the judgment is en tered, and serving a copy thereof upon the at torney of the adverse party. § 368.

The statute expressly and peremptorily re quires that the charge of the court to the jur shall be reduced to writing before it is given unless by mutual consent of the parties it i given orally; and, as has already been adjudge by this court in this case, the giving, withou the defendant's consent, of any oral charge o instruction to the jury is an error, for whic judgment must be reversed. 104 U. S., 63 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 873]. The requirement of th statute that the clerk of the court in which th trial is had shall include, in making up its re ord, a copy of all written charges, as well as o the minutes of the trial, is equally positive The object of these provisions, requiring the in structions to be in writing and recorded, is t secure an accurate and authentic report of th instructions, and to insure to the defendant th means of having them revised in an appellat court.

When the record shows that the jury wer charged by the court, nothing can excuse th omission to set forth in the record a charge i writing, except express consent of the defendar that it should be given orally, and that conser must appear of record. The record must eithe set forth the charge in writing, or a waiver b the defendant of such a charge. If it does ne ther, it fails to show what is made by expres statute an essential requisite to the validity c the conviction, and contains upon its face fatal error, of which the defendant may ava himself by appeal, without tendering a bill c exceptions.

The duty of making up a complete record the duty of the clerk; and the duty of seein that the record contains everything that act ally took place, necessary to support the co viction, is the duty of the district attorney. the copy of the record made up by the clerk c the District Court, and entered by the defen ant in the Supreme Court of the Territory, wa defective in a material point, the district atto ney might have moved in the latter court t have the defect supplied by certiorari or othe proper process. The defendant and his cou sel were under no obligation to cure, and ca not be held to have waived, any defect in th record, but were entitled to take advantag either in the Supreme Court of the Territor or in this court, of any error apparent upon th record as it stood in that court.

Applying these principles to the record b fore us, the conviction cannot be supporte The record merely states that the court charge the jury, and does not state whether the charg was written or oral. If the charge was wri ten, it should have been made part of the re ord, which has not been done. If it was ora the consent of the defendant was necessary, an that consent does not appear of record an cannot be presumed.

It is hardly necessary to add that the affidav taken since the entry of the case in this cou cannot be considered. The lawfulness of th [illegible] and sentence of the defendant is to be determined by the formal record, made up and transmitted as required by law, of what was done in his presence at the trial in open court, and not by ex parte affidavits of private conversations supposed to have afterwards taken place in his absence between the counsel and the clerk.

Judgment reversed and case remanded, with direction to order the verdict to be set aside and a new trial granted.

The Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Harlan dissented.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

THOMAS POINDEXTER, Plff. in Err.,

v.

SAMUEL C. GREENHOW, Treasurer of the CITY OF RICHMOND, VA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 270-306.)

Constitutional Law—Virginia Law of January 26, 1882, and March 15, 1884, impair the obligation of the contract to receive coupons in payment of taxes under the Act of March 30, 1871, and are void—detinue—liability of officer for acts unauthorized by law—suit against officer for such acts not a suit against the State.

In an action of detinue for personal property, brought by the defendant for delinquent taxes, a moiety of which the plaintiff had duly tendered coupons cut from bonds issued by the State of Virginia under the Funding Act of March 30, 1871;

1. That by the terms of that Act, and the issue of bonds and coupons in virtue of the same, a contract was made between every coupon holder and the State that such coupons should "be receivable for all taxes, debts, dues and demands due the State"; the right of the coupon holder under which was to have his coupons received for taxes when offered, and that any Act of the Legislature which forbids the receipt of these coupons is a violation of the contract, and void as to coupon holders.

2. The faculty of being receivable in payment of taxes is of the essence of the right. It constituted a self-executing remedy in the hands of a creditor, and it became thereby the legal duty of every collector to receive such coupons in payment of taxes, upon an equal footing and with equal effect as though they were money; after a tender of such coupons duly made for that purpose, the relation and rights of the taxpayer and coupon holder were precisely what they would have been if he had made a like tender in money.

3. It is well settled by many decisions of this court that, for the purpose of affecting proceedings consequent upon the payment of taxes, a lawful tender of coupons is equivalent to actual payment, either sufficient to deprive the collecting officer of authority for further action, and making every subsequent step illegal and void.

4. The coupons in question are not "bills of credit" in the sense of the Constitution, which forbids a State to "emit bills of credit;" because, although issued by the State of Virginia on its credit, and made receivable in payment of taxes, and transferable so as to pass from hand to hand by delivery merely, they were not intended to circulate as money between individuals, and between governments and individuals, for the ordinary purposes of money.

5. In an action or suit brought by a taxpayer, who has tendered such coupons in payment of his taxes against the person who, under color of office, was collector, and acting in the enforcement of the law which gave it is also a contract, and of a void law passed by the Legislature of the State, having refused such tender or coupon, proceeds by seizure and sale of the property of the plaintiff, to enforce the collection of such taxes, is an action or suit against him personally as a wrongdoer, and not against the State, within the meaning of the Eleventh Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. [271]

[illegible] by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

6. Such a defendant, sued as a wrongdoer, who seeks to substitute the State in his place, or to justify by the authority of the State, or to defend on the ground that the State has adopted his act and exonerated him, cannot rest on the bare assertion of his defense but is bound to establish it; and as the State is a political corporate body, which can act only through agents and command only by laws, in order to complete his defense he must produce a valid law of the State, which constitutes his commission as its agent, and a warrant for his act.

7. The Act of the General Assembly of Virginia of January 26, 1882, "To Provide for the More Efficient Collection of the Revenue to Support Government, Maintain the Public Schools, and to Pay Interest on the Public Debt," requiring tax collectors to receive in discharge of the taxes, license taxes and other dues, gold, silver, United States treasury notes, national bank currency, and nothing else, and thereby forbidding the receipt of coupons issued under the Act of March 30, 1871, in payment therefor, although it is a legislative Act of the government of Virginia, is not a law of the State of Virginia, because it impairs the obligation of its contract and is annulled by the Constitution of the United States.

8. The State has passed no such law, for it cannot; and what it cannot do, in contemplation of law it has not done. The Constitution of the United States and its own contract, both irrepealable by any act on its part, are the law of Virginia, and that law made it the duty of the defendant to receive the coupons tendered in payment of taxes, and declared every step to enforce the tax thereafter taken to be without warrant of law, and therefore a wrong. This strips the defendant of his official character, and convicts him of a personal violation of the plaintiff's rights, for which he must personally answer.

9. It is no objection to the remedy in such cases that the statute, the application of which in the particular case is sought to be prevented, is not void on its face, but is complained of only because its operation in the particular instance works a violation of a constitutional right; for the cases are numerous where the tax laws of a State, which in their general and proper application are perfectly valid, have been held to become void in particular cases, either as unconstitutional regulations of commerce, or as violations of contracts prohibited by the Constitution, or because in some other way they operate to deprive the party complaining of a right secured to him by the Constitution of the United States.

10. In cases of detinue the action is purely defensive on the part of the plaintiff. Its object is merely to resist an attempted wrong and to restore the status in quo as it was when the right to be vindicated was invaded. It is analogous to the preventive remedy of injunction in equity when that jurisdiction is invoked, of which frequent examples occur in cases to prevent the illegal taxation of national banks by state authorities.

11. The suit authorized by the Act of General Assembly of Virginia of January 26th, 1882, against the collector of taxes, refusing to accept a tender of coupons, to recover back the amount paid under protest, is no remedy at all for the breach of the contract, which required him to receive the coupons in payment. The taxpayer and coupon holder has a right to say he will not pay the amount a second time, and, insisting upon his tender as equivalent to payment, to resist the further exaction, and treat as a wrongdoer the officer who seizes his property to enforce it. [272]

12. Neither can it be considered an adequate remedy, in view of the supposed necessity for summary proceedings in matters of revenue, and the convenience of the State, which requires that the prompt collection of taxes should not be hindered or embarrassed; for the revenue system must yield to the contract which the State has lawfully made, and the obligation of which, by the Constitution, it is forbidden to impair.

13. The right to pay in coupons cannot be treated as a mere right of set-off, which is part of the remedy merely, when given by the general law, and therefore subject to modification or repeal, be-therefore cannot be changed without mutual consent.

14. The Acts of the General Assembly of Virginia of January 26, 1882, and the amendatory Act of March 13, 1884, are unconstitutional and void because they impair the obligation of the contract of the State with the coupon holder under the Act of March 30, 1871; and that being the main object of the two Acts, the vice which invalidates them pervades them throughout and in all their provisions. It is not practicable to separate those parts which repeal and abolish the actions of trespass and trespass on the case, and other particular forms of action, as remedies for the taxpayer, who has tendered his coupons in payment of taxes, from the main object of the Acts, which that prohibition was intended to effectuate; and it follows that the whole of these and similar statutes must be declared to be unconstitutional, null and void. It also follows that these statutes cannot be regarded in the courts of the United States as laws of the State, to be obeyed as rules of decision in trials at common law under § 721, Rev. Stats., nor as regulating the practice of those courts under § 914, Rev. Stats.

15. The present case is not covered by the decision in Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S., 769 [bk. 27, L. ed. 468], the points now involved being expressly reserved in the judgment in that case.

[No. 588.]

Argued Mar. 20, 23, 24, 25, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Hustings Court of the City of Richmond, State of Virginia.

The history and facts of the case fully appear in the opinion of the court. See also the six following and related cases, post, 198, 199, 200, 202, 204, and 205, and the dissenting opinion, applicable to and entitled in all, post, 207 (330).

Messrs. William L. Royall, Daniel H. Chamberlain, Wm. M. Evarts, Wager Swayne and Wm. B. Hornblower, for plaintiff in error:

No question of jurisdiction can arise in these cases on the ground that these are suits against the State of Virginia.

A suit against a public officer for trespass is a suit against such a person individually and personally and not against the political State or body of which he is the officer.

U. S. v. Lee, 196 U. S., 196 (bk. 27, L. ed. 171); Cunningham v. R. R. Co., 109 U. S., 446 (bk. 27, L. ed. 992).

The existence and terms of the contract of the State of Virginia to receive the coupons for taxes and other dues to the State are not open to dispute.

Antoni v. Wright, 22 Gratt., 883; Wise v. Rogers, 24 Gratt., 169; Clarke v. Tyler, 30 Gratt., 137; Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S., 672 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 271); Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S., 769 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 468).

The coupon is a legal tender for the tax.

Antoni v. Wright, supra; Wise v. Rogers, supra; Clarke v. Tyler, supra; Williamson v. Massey, 33 Gratt., 237; Hartman v. Greenhow, supra.

A tender of that which ought to be received for a tax produces exactly the same effect, so far as the rights of the taxpayer are concerned, as a receipt by the officer of what is tendered.

Bennett v. Hunter, 9 Wall., 326 (76 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 672); Tracey v. Irwin, 18 Wall., 549 (85 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 786); Atwood v. Weems, 99 U. S., 183 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 471); U. S. v. Lee, 106 U. S., 196 (Bk. 27, L. ed., 171); Thorndike v. U. S., 2 Mason, 1.

Property taken unlawfully by a public officer may be recovered in detinue.

Burnley v. Lambert, 1 Wash. (Va.), 308; O'Neill v. Henderson, 15 Ark., 235; Owing Fisher, 2 A. K. Marsh., 268; Overfield v. L lett, 1 Mo., 749; Beazely v. Mitchell, 9 Ala., 7 Spaulding v. Scanland, 4 B. Mon., 365; Hai Reed, 15 B. Mon., 479; Schulenberg v. Campb 14 Mo., 491.

This court will enjoin the collection of state tax laid under an Act which impairs obligation of a contract.

Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How., 331 (59 U. S., 21, L. ed. 401); R. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall., 264 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 563); Charleston v. Branch, Wall., 470 (82 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 193); Bra v. Charleston, 92 U. S., 677 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 7 Humphery v. Pegues, 16 Wall., 244 (83 U. bk. 21, L. ed. 326); Home of Friendless v. Ro 8 Wall., 430 (75 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 4 Washington University v. Rouse, Id., 439 (1 498); McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall., 143 (71 U. (Bk. 18, L. ed. 314).

It will enjoin the collection of any tax wh the laws of the United States forbid the St to impose.

Osborn v. Bank, 9 Wheat., 838; Pelton v. Ba 101 U. S., 143 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 901); Cummi v. Bank, Id., 153 (Id., 903); Davis v. Gray, Wall., 220 (83 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 453).

A court of equity will always enjoin the lection of a tax where it is clear that in mak the collection the officer is a simple naked t passer. His character of officer and his fu tion as collector give him no immunities wh the character of trespasser is fixed on him cl ly and without doubt.

Belknap v. Belknap, 2 Johns. Ch., 4 Frewin v. Lewis, 4 Mylne & C., 249; Comm wealth v. Supervisors, 29 Pa. St. 121; Leba v. R. R. Co., 77 Ill., 539.

Messrs. F. S. Blair, Atty-Gen. of Virgi A. H. Garland, R. T. Merrick, J. Am Smith and S. B. Witt, for defendant in er

We rely on the following cases against jurisdiction of the court and the right to m tain the foregoing suit against the State and officers.

Louisiana v. Jumel and Elliott v. Wilts, 10 S., 711 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 448); Antoni v. Gr how, Id., 769 (Id., 468); Cunningham v. R. Co., 109 U. S., 446 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 992).

Virginia has consented to be sued in her c courts and by remedies she has prescribed, she can be sued in no other tribunal and by other procedure.

The coupons were not verified to be genu by a verdict of a jury and the judgment of court, as required by either the Act of Janu 14, 1882, or that of January 26, 1882, fo in Acts of 1881-82, the first of which Acts declared to be constitutional and to furni complete remedy to the taxpayers, by the preme Court of the United States in Anton Greenhow, supra; and the later Act of Janu 26, 1882, was in effect declared to be const tional and to afford a sufficient remedy, by Supreme Court in the case of Tennessee Sneed, 96 U. S., 71 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 611).

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opi of the court:

The plaintiff in error, who was also plai below, brought his action in detinue on the day of April, 1883, against Samuel C. Gr how, for the recovery of specific personal p [illegible] one office desk of the value of $30, [illegible] police justice in the City of Richmond, [illegible] the case for want of jurisdiction. [illegible] was taken by the plaintiff to the [illegible] Court for the City of Richmond, [illegible] facts were found by agreement of [illegible] to be as follows: That the plaintiff was [illegible] of the city of Richmond, in the State [illegible] that he owed to the State of Virginia, for taxes on property owned by him in [illegible] for the year 1882, $12.45, which said [illegible] were due and leviable for, under the laws [illegible] on the first day of December, 1882; [illegible] defendant, Samuel C. Greenhow, was [illegible] Treasurer of the City of Richmond, and as [illegible] charged by law with the duty of collecting taxes due to the State of Virginia by all [illegible] said city; that on the 25th day of [illegible] the defendant, as such Treasurer [illegible] of taxes, made upon the plaintiff [illegible] for the payment of the taxes due by [illegible] the State as aforesaid; that the plaintiff, [illegible] was so made for payment of his [illegible] tendered to defendant in payment thereof [illegible] in lawful money of the United States, and coupons issued by the State of Virginia under the provisions of the Act of the General Assembly of that State of March 30, [illegible] entitled "An Act to Provide for the Funding and Payment of the Public Debt"; that said coupons so tendered by plaintiff were all due and past maturity, and amounted in the aggregate to $12, and were all cut from bonds issued by the said State of Virginia under the provisions of the said Act of March 30, 1871; that the said coupons and money so tendered by the plaintiff amounted together to exactly the [illegible] due the State by the plaintiff for taxes; but the defendant refused to receive the said coupons and money so tendered in payment of the plaintiff's taxes; that the defendant, after [illegible] was made, as he deemed himself [illegible] to do by the Acts of Assembly of Virginia, entered the plaintiff's place of business in said city and levied upon and took possession of the desk, the property of the plaintiff, now [illegible] for the purpose of selling the same to pay the taxes due from him; and that the said desk is of the value of $30, and still remains in possession of the defendant for the purpose [illegible], he having refused to return the same to the plaintiff on demand.

The Hustings Court was of the opinion that the police justice erred in deciding that he had no jurisdiction, and that the issue in the action should have been tried by him, and that it should be tried by that court on the appeal; but it was also of the opinion that in tendering to the defendant, as part of the tender in payment of the plaintiff's taxes, the coupons mentioned and described, the plaintiff did not tender what the law required, nor what the defendant was, as Treasurer, obliged to or should have received in payment of the plaintiff's taxes, under the provisions of the Act of the General Assembly of Virginia, approved January 26, 1882, entitled "An Act to Provide for the More Efficient Collection of the Revenue to Support Government, Secure the Public Schools, and to Pay Interest on the Public Debt"; that the plaintiff's remedy for the failure of the defendant as Treasurer, to receive coupons in payment of taxes, was to be found in the provisions of said Act of January 26, 1882; and that therefore the defendant does not unlawfully or wrongfully detain the plaintiff's property levied on by the defendant, as Treasurer of the City of Richmond, for the plaintiff's taxes; and judgment was accordingly rendered for the defendant.

It appears from the record that there was drawn in question the validity of the said Act of the General Assembly of Virginia, approved January 26, 1882, and of the 18th section of the Act of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, approved April 1, 1879, which authorizes the collection of delinquent taxes by distraint of personal property, upon the ground that these Acts are repugnant to section 10 of article I of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that no State shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts, the judgment of the court being in favor of the validity of said Acts and against the rights claimed by the plaintiff under the Constitution of the United States. The Hustings Court is the highest court of the State to which the said cause could be taken. [275]

The Act of January 26, 1882, the validity of which is thus questioned, is as follows:

"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, That the several tax collectors of this Commonwealth shall receive in discharge of the taxes, license taxes and other dues, gold, silver, United States treasury notes, national bank currency, and nothing else; provided that in all cases in which an officer charged by law with the collection of revenue due the State shall take any steps for the collection of same claimed to be due from any citizen or taxpayer, such person against whom such step is taken, if he conceives the same to be unjust or illegal, or against any statute, or to be unconstitutional, may pay the same under protest, and under such payment the officer collecting the same shall pay such revenue into the state treasury, giving notice at the time of such payment to the treasurer that the same was paid under protest. The person so paying such revenue may at any time within thirty days after making such payment, and not longer thereafter, sue the said officer so collecting such revenue in the court having jurisdiction of the parties and amounts.

"If it be determined that the same was wrongfully collected, for any reason going to the merits of the same, then the court trying the case may certify of record that the same was wrongfully paid and ought to be refunded; and thereupon the auditor of public accounts shall issue his proper warrant for the same, which shall be paid in preference to other claims on the treasury, except such as have priority by constitutional requirement.

"There shall be no other remedy in any case of the collection of revenue, or the attempt to collect revenues illegally, or the attempt to collect revenue in funds only receivable by said officers under this law, the same being other and different funds than the taxpayer may tender or claim the right to pay, than such as are herein provided; and no writ for the prevention of any revenue claim, or to hinder or delay the collection of the same, shall in any wise issue, either injunction, supersedeas, mandamus, prohibition or any other writ or process whatever; but in all cases, if, for any rea- [276] son, any person shall claim that the revenue so collected of him was wrongfully or illegally collected, the remedy for such person shall be as above provided, and in no other manner. In all such cases, if the court certify of record that the officer defendant acted in good faith and diligently defended the action, the necessary costs incurred by him shall be taxed to and paid by the State, as in criminal cases. The commonwealth attorney for the county or corporation in which suit is brought shall appear and represent the defense. In every case where judgment is rendered for the defendant, a fee of $5 shall be taxed in favor of said attorney and against the plaintiff, and whenever the court shall refuse to certify the good faith and diligence of the officer defending the case, a like fee of $5 shall be taxed against said officer. Any officer charged with the collection of revenue, who shall receive payment thereof in anything other than that hereinbefore provided, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not less than $100 nor more than $500, in the discretion of the court; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to subject any officer of the State to any suit, other than as hereinbefore provided, for any refusal on his part to accept in payment of revenue due the State any kind or description of funds, security or paper not authorized by this Act.

"2. This Act shall be in force from and after the first day of December, eighteen hundred and eighty-two."

The 18th section of the Act of April 1, 1879, (Acts of 1878–79, p. 318), so far as material, is that "it shall be the duty of the treasurer, after the first day of December, to call upon each person chargeable with taxes and levies, who has not paid the same prior to that time, or upon the agent of such person resident within the county or corporation, and upon failure or refusal of such person or agent to pay the same he shall proceed to collect by distress or otherwise." Goods and chattels distrained by an officer, by provisions of other statutes then in force, were required to be sold at public sale after due notice, as prescribed.

[277] The Act of January 26, 1882, was amended by an Act which was passed and took effect March 13, 1884, by the addition of the following sections:

"Sec. 2. Whenever any papers, purporting to be coupons cut from bonds of this State, shall be tendered to the collecting officer in payment of any taxes due to the State by any party desiring to bring a suit under this statute, it shall be the duty of the collecting officer to place the coupons so tendered in an envelope, to seal the said envelope, write his name across the seal thereof, indorse it with the numbers of the coupons enclosed, and return it to the taxpayer. Upon the trial of any proceeding under this Act the said coupons, enclosed in the said envelope so sealed and indorsed, must be produced in evidence to prove the tender. If the court shall certify that the money paid under protest ought to be refunded, the said coupons shall be delivered to the auditor of public accounts, to be canceled simultaneously with the issue of his warrant.

"Sec. 3. No action of trespass or trespass on the case shall be brought or maintained against any collecting officer for levying upon the property of any taxpayer who may h tendered in payment, in whole or in part, a coupon or paper purporting to be a coup cut from bonds of this State, for such tax and who shall refuse to pay his taxes in go silver, United States treasury notes, or natio bank notes. The suit contemplated by t Act shall be commenced by a petition filed rules, upon which a summons shall be issu to the collecting officer; and the said s shall be regularly matured like other actic at law, and the coupons tendered shall filed with said petition."

The contract which the plaintiff in error leges has been violated is with the State Virginia, and is contained in the Act of Ma 30, 1871, known as the Funding Act, entit "An Act to Provide for the Funding and P ment of the Public Debt," and in the bonds a coupons issued under its authority. It provid for the funding of two thirds of the existi State debt and of two thirds of the inter accrued thereon to July 1, 1871, in new per cent bonds, to run thirty-four years, bonds, coupon or registered, payable to or or bearer, and the coupons to bearer, a declared that the coupons should be paya semi-annually and "be receivable at a after maturity for all taxes, debts, dues a demands due the State," and that this sho be expressed on their face. For the remaini one third, certificates were to be issued the creditors to hold as claims against State of West Virginia, that being assum as her just proportion of the entire debt. "U der this Act," it was said by this court Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S., 672, [Bk. 26, L. ed. 271, 274], "a large number of creditors of the State, holding bonds amou ing — including interest thereon — to ab thirty millions of dollars, surrendered th and took new bonds with interest coupons nexed for two thirds of their amount and c tificates for the balance. A contract was t consummated between the State and the hold of the new bonds and the holders of the c pons, from the obligation of which she could n without their consent, release herself by a subsequent legislation. She thus bound h self not only to pay the bonds when they came due, but to receive the interest coup from the bearer at and after their maturity, their full amount, for any taxes or dues by h to the State. This receivability of the coup for such taxes and dues was written on th face, and accompanied them into whate hands they passed. It constituted their ch value and was the main consideration offe to the holders of the old bonds to surren them and accept new bonds for two thirds their amount.

The same view had been taken by the preme Court of Appeals of Virginia in cases of Antoni v. Wright, 22 Gratt., 833; W v. Rogers, 24 Gratt., 169, and Clarke v. Tyler, Gratt., 184, in the last of which cases it was clared to be the settled law of the State. It repeated by this court in Antoni v. Greenh 107 U. S., 769 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 468], where was said (p. 775): "The right of the coup holder is to have his coupon received for ta when offered"; and (page 771): "Any Act the State which forbids the receipt of th [illegible] taxes is a violation of the contract, [illegible] against coupon-holders." Upon [illegible] propositions, there was an entire agreement between the majority and minority of [illegible] in that case.

[illegible] and value of this contract right [illegible] coupon-holder deserved to be further [illegible]. It was evidently a part of the con[illegible] which the creditors of the State [illegible] to accept, under the Act of March [illegible] from the State of Virginia, new obli[illegible] for two thirds of their claim, in ex[illegible] for the surrender of the original bonds. [illegible] depended for their payment, [illegible] principal and interest, upon the con[illegible] faith of the State in making from [illegible] necessary appropriations out of [illegible] treasury, to meet its recurring liabili[illegible] legislation to that effect. In [illegible] there was no remedy by legal [illegible]. The State itself could not be sued. Its [illegible] to pay had no sanction but the [illegible] of duty to the public creditors. [illegible] security for their performance was [illegible] faith.

[illegible] immediately on the passage of the Act [illegible] 30, 1871, and thereafter, occasional [illegible] default in the payment of interest [illegible] issued in pursuance of its provi[illegible] by reason of failures to provide by laws [illegible] appropriations for its payment, was [illegible] obviated, by a self-executing remedy [illegible] by the law in the hands of the creditor [illegible] for from that time it became the [illegible] duty of every tax-collector to receive [illegible] from these bonds, offered for that pur[illegible] by taxpayers, in payment of taxes, upon [illegible] footing, at an equal value, and with [illegible] effect, as though they were gold or silver [illegible] tender treasury notes. They were by [illegible] reduced, in effect, into money, and as [illegible] the State and its taxpayers were a [illegible] tender as money; and being not only a [illegible] a contract, it became, by force of the [illegible] of the United States, irrepealable, [illegible] is to-day what it was when first [illegible] the unchangeable law of Virginia. [illegible] a tender of such coupons by a taxpayer [illegible] of taxes, and a refusal by a tax [illegible] to receive them, the situation and [illegible] of the taxpayer and coupon-holder were [illegible] what they would have been if he had [illegible] a like tender in gold coin and it had been [illegible]. What they would be we shall have [illegible] presently to inquire. In the mean[illegible] it is clear that the contract obligation em[illegible] in the quality imparted by law to these [illegible] of being receivable in payment of [illegible] is a distinct, collateral and real security [illegible] in the hands of the creditor, intended to [illegible] him to collect them without process of [illegible]. As long as the annual taxes of the State [illegible] sufficient in amount to absorb all coupons [illegible] and unpaid, a certain market [illegible] for them which will maintain them [illegible] their par value. In the hands of the [illegible] who buys them for tender, they are [illegible] no longer chose in action, but equal [illegible] and quality to money, and equivalent [illegible] for taxes already paid.

[illegible] of the passage of the Act of March [illegible] there existed a remedy by mandamus [illegible] a tax collector refused to receive [illegible] coupons issued under that Act, tendered in payment of taxes, to compel him specifically to do so. The case of Hartman v. Greenhow [supra] was one in which that relief was administered; and in Antoni v. Greenhow [supra] it is stated to have been the settled practice of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia to entertain suits for similar relief. By an Act of January 14, 1882, the General Assembly of that State modified the proceedings in mandamus in such cases so as to require the taxpayer first to pay his taxes in money, and then the coupons tendered having in another proceeding been determined to be genuine, he was entitled to a judgment upon the mandamus, requiring them to be received in payment of the taxes, and the money previously paid refunded. The validity of this Act became the question in Antoni v. Greenhow, ubi supra, and it was affirmed on the ground that, for the purpose of specifically enforcing the right to have the coupons received in payment of taxes, the new remedy was substantially equivalent to the old one. The court were not willing to decide that it was a suit against the State, in which the mode of proceeding could be modified, or the remedy taken away altogether, at the pleasure of the State. And it affirmed the right of the coupon holder to have his coupon received for taxes when offered. "The question here," said the court, "is not as to that right, but as to the remedy the holder has for its enforcement when denied." "The question," said the Chief Justice, delivering the [281] opinion of the court, "we are now to consider is not whether, if the coupon tendered is in fact genuine and such as ought, under the contract, to be received, and the tender is kept good, the treasurer can proceed to collect the tax by distraint or such other process as the law allows, without making himself personally responsible for any trespass he may commit, but whether the Act of 1882 violates any implied obligation of the State in respect to the remedies that may be employed for the enforcement of its contract if the collector refuses to take the coupon."

That was a case in which it was sought, by mandamus, specifically to enforce the contract of the State with the coupon holder, by compelling, by affirmative action and process of law, the collector actually to receive the coupons tendered in satisfaction of taxes. It left unaffected the right of the coupon holder and taxpayer, after his tender had been unlawfully refused, to stand upon his contract and the law, in defense of his rights, both of person and property, against all unlawful assaults and seizures. In the former he was an actor, seeking affirmative relief, to compel the specific performance of the contract. In the latter he is a defendant, passively resting on his rights, and resisting only demands and exactions sought to be enforced against him in denial of them. He has himself, in all things, performed the contract on his part, and obeyed the law, and simply insists, that if more is illegally exacted and taken from him, he shall have the remedy which the law gives to every other citizen, not himself in default, against the wrongdoer who, under color of law, but without law, disturbs or dispossesses him. As we have seen, the coupon holder, whose tender of genuine coupons in payment of taxes has been refused, stands upon the same footing in this respect as though he had tendered gold coin in similar circumstances and with like result.

The question next in order is, whether he has any, and if any, what remedy for the recovery of property distrained to pay the same tax which he has thus already offered and attempted to pay in money or its equivalent. It is well settled by many decisions of this court, that, for [282] the purpose of affecting proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes, a lawful tender of payment is equivalent to actual payment, either being sufficient to deprive the collecting officer of all authority for further action, and making every subsequent step illegal and void. In Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How., 190, 208, it was held that a tender of the notes of the bank of the State of Arkansas, by law and a contract with the noteholders made receivable in payment of public dues to the State, was equivalent to payment, in extinguishing the judgment in satisfaction of which they were offered. The court said: "The law of tender which avoids future interest and costs, has no application in this case. The right to make payment to the State in this paper arises out of a continuing contract, which is limited in time by the circulation of the notes to be received. They may be offered in payment of debts due to the State in its own right, before or after judgment, and without regard to the cause of indebtment." In the case of U.S. v. Lee, 106 U. S., 196 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 171], it was held that a certificate of a sale of land for taxes, made by commissioners, which by law was impeachable by proof that the taxes had been paid previous to sale, was rendered void by proof that the commissioners had refused to receive the taxes, without proof of an actual tender, where the commissioners had waived it by a previous notice that they would not accept it. In the opinion of the court it is said: "This court has in a series of cases established the proposition that where the commissioners refused to receive such taxes their action in thus preventing payment was the equivalent of payment in its effect upon the certificate of sale," citing Bennett v. Hunter, 9 Wall., 326 [76 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed., 672]; Tracey v. Irwin, 18 Wall., 549 [85 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 786]; Atwood v. Weems, 99 U. S., 183 [Bk. 25, L. ed., 471]; and Hills v. Exchange Bk., 105 U. S., 319 [Bk. 26, L.ed., 1052].

The case, then, of the plaintiff below is reduced to this: He had paid the taxes demanded of him by a lawful tender. The defendant had no authority of law thereafter to attempt to enforce other payment by seizing his property. In doing so, he ceased to be an officer of the law and became a private wrongdoer. It is the simple case in which the defendant, a natural private person, has unlawfully, with force [283] and arms, seized, taken and detained the personal property of another. That an action of detinue will lie in such a case, according to the law of Virginia, has not been questioned. The right of recovery would seem to be complete, unless this case can be met and overthrown on some of the grounds maintained in argument by counsel for the defendant in error. These we proceed now to examine in their order.

It is objected, in the first place, that the law and contract, by which the quality of being receivable in payment of taxes to the State is imputed to the coupons, is itself in violation of that clause of the Constitution of the Unit States, art. I. sec. 10, which declares that State shall "emit bills of credit," and is the fore void.

The coupons in question are in the ordina form, and one of them reads as follows:

"Receivable at and after maturity for taxes, debts and demands due the State.

"The Commonwealth of Virginia will pay t bearer thirty dollars, interest due 1st Januar 1884, on bond No. 2731.

"Coupon No. 20.

"Geo. Rye, Treasurer."

It is contended that this is a bill of credit the sense of the Constitution, because, bei receivable in payment of debts due the Sta and negotiable by delivery merely, it was tended to pass from hand to hand and circul as money.

The meaning of the term "bills of credit," used in the Constitution, has been settled decisions of this court. By a sound rule of terpretation it has been construed in the lig of the historical circumstances which are kno to have led to the adoption of the clause p hibiting their emission by the States, and view of the great public and private mischi experienced during and prior to the period the War of Independence, in consequence unrestrained issues, by the Colonial and St governments, of paper money, based alone on credit. The definition thus deduced not founded on the abstract meaning of words, so as to include everything in the ture of an obligation to pay money, reposi on the public faith, and subject to future demption, but was limited to those particu forms of evidences of debt which had been abused to the detriment of both private public interests Accordingly, Chief Just Marshall, in Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet., 410, said that "bills of credit signify a paper medi intended to circulate between individuals, between governments and individuals, for ordinary purposes of society." This definiti was made more exact by merely expressi however, its implications, in Briscoe v. Ba of Ky., 11 Pet., 257, 314, where it was sa "The definition, then, which does include classes of bills of credit emitted by the Co nies or States, is a paper issued by the soverei power, containing a pledge of its faith and signed to circulate as money." And again 318), "To constitute a bill of credit, within the Constitution, it must be issued by a Sta on the faith of the State, and be designed circulate as money. It must be a paper wh circulates on the credit of the State, and is received and used in the ordinary business life." The definition was repeated in Darri ton v. Bank of Ala., 13 How., 12.

It is very plain to us that the coupons in qu are not embraced within these terms. Th are not bills of credit in the sense of this c stitutional prohibition. They are issued by State, it is true. They are promises to p money. Their payment and redemption based on the credit of the State, but they w not emitted by the State in the sense in wh a government emits its treasury notes, or a ba its bank notes—a circulating medium or pa currency—as a substitute for money. And th is nothing on the face of the instruments, [illegible] or nature, nor in the terms of the [illegible] authorize their issue, nor in the circumstances of their creation or use, as shown [illegible] on which to found an inference [illegible] coupons were designed to circulate, [illegible] common transactions of business, as [illegible] that in fact that they were so used. [illegible] relied on to show such a de[illegible] prove such a use is, that they are [illegible] receivable in payment of taxes and other [illegible] State. From this it is argued that [illegible] such a circulation from hand [illegible] money, as the demand for them, [illegible] such a quality, would naturally [illegible] But this falls far short of their fitness [illegible] circulation in the community, as a [illegible] and substitute for money, in the [illegible] transactions of business, which is nec[illegible] bring them within the constitutional [illegible] against bills of credit. The notes [illegible] bank of the State of Arkansas, which [illegible] subject of controversy in Woodruff v. [illegible] 10 How., 190, were by law receiv[illegible] by the State in payment of all dues to it, [illegible] circumstance was not supposed to make [illegible] bills of credit. It is true, however, that [illegible] case it was held they were not so be[illegible] they were not issued by the State and [illegible] none, although the entire stock of the [illegible] was owned by the State, which furnished [illegible] capital and was entitled to all the [illegible] profits. In this case the coupons were issued [illegible] State of Virginia and in its name, and [illegible] obligations based on its credit, and which [illegible] as one mode of redemption, to re[illegible] in payment of all dues to itself in the [illegible] of any holder; but they were not issued [illegible] money, nor was this quality im[illegible] upon them to fit them for use as mon[illegible] with the design to facilitate their circula[illegible] such. It was conferred, as is apparent [illegible] all the circumstances of their creation and [illegible] merely as an assurance, by way of con[illegible] the holder, of the certainty of their [illegible] in the ordinary transactions be[illegible] the state treasury and the taxpayers. [illegible] not become receivable in payment of [illegible] till they are due, and the design, we are [illegible] to presume, was that they would be [illegible] at maturity. This necessarily excludes [illegible] that they were intended for circulation [illegible]

It is [illegible] objected that the suit of the plain[illegible] below could not be maintained because it is [illegible] an action against the State of Vir[illegible] which it has not assented. It is said that [illegible] collector, who is sued, was an officer and [illegible] of the State, engaged in collecting its [illegible] under a valid law, and that the tax he [illegible] to collect from the plaintiff was lawfully [illegible] that, consequently, he was guilty of no [illegible] wrong, but acted only in an official [illegible] representing the State; and, in refus[illegible] to receive the coupons tendered simply [illegible] the commands of his principal, whom [illegible] was lawfully bound to obey; and that, if [illegible] wrong has been done, it has been done by [illegible] State in refusing to perform its contract, [illegible] for that wrong the State is alone liable, but [illegible] from suit by the Eleventh Article of [illegible] to the Constitution of the United [illegible] which declares that "The judicial power [illegible] United States shall not be construed to [illegible] extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens of or subjects of any foreign State."

This immunity from suit, secured to the States, is undoubtedly a part of the Constitution, of equal authority with every other, but no greater, and to be construed and applied in harmony with all the provisions of that instrument. That immunity, however, does not exempt the State from the operation of the constitutional provision that no State shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts; for it has long been settled that contracts between a State and an individual are as fully protected by the Constitution as contracts between two individuals. It is true that no remedy for a breach of its contract by a State, by way of damages as compensation, or by means of process to compel its performance, is open, under the Constitution, in the courts of the United States, by a direct suit against the State itself, on the part of the injured party, being a citizen of another State or a citizen or subject of a foreign State. But it is equally true that whenever in a controversy between parties to a suit, of which these courts have jurisdiction, the question arises upon the validity of a law by a State impairing the obligation of its contract, the jurisdiction is not thereby ousted, but must be exercised, with whatever legal consequences, to the rights of the litigants, may be the result of the determination. The cases establishing these propositions, which have been decided by this court since the adoption of the Eleventh Amendmendment to the Constitution, are numerous. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87; N. J. v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat., 1, 84; Providence Bk. v. Billings, 4 Pet., 514; [287]
Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How., 190; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U.S., 358 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 395]; Jefferson Branch Bk. v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436 [66 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 173].

It is also true that the question whether a suit is within the prohibition of the Eleventh Amendment is not always determined by reference to the nominal parties on the record. The provision is to be substantially applied in furtherance of its intention, and not to be evaded by technical and trivial subtleties. Accordingly, it was held in N. H. v. La. and N. Y. v. La., 108 U. S., 76 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 656], that although the judicial power of the United States extends to "controversies between two or more States," it did not embrace a suit in which, although nominally between two States, the plaintiff State had merely permitted the use of its name for the benefit of its citizens in the prosecution of their claims, for the enforcement of which they could not sue in their own names. So, on the other hand, in Cunningham v. Macon and B. R. R. Co., 109 U. S., 446 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 992], where the State of Georgia was not nominally a party on the record, it was held that, as it clearly appeared that the State was so interested in the property that final relief could not be granted without making it a party, the court was without jurisdiction.

In that case, the general question was discussed in the light of the authorities, and the cases in which the court has taken jurisdiction, when the objection has been interposed that a State was a necessary party to enable the court to grant relief, were examined and classified. The second head of that classification is thus described: "Another class of cases is where an individual is sued in tort for some act injurious to another in regard to person or property, to which his defense is that he has acted under the orders of the government. In these cases he is not sued as, or because he is, the officer of the government, but as an individual, and the court is not ousted of jurisdiction because he asserts authority as such officer. To make out his defense, he must show that his authority was sufficient in law to protect him." And in illustration of this principle reference was made to Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How., 115; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S., 204 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 471]; Meigs v. McClung, 9 Cranch, 11; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet., 498; Brown v. Huger, 21 How., 305 [62 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 125]; Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall., 363 [73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 863]; and U. S. v. Lee, 106 U. S., 196 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 171].

[288]

The ratio decidendi in this class of cases is very plain. A defendant sued as a wrongdoer, who seeks to substitute the State in his place, or to justify by the authority of the State, or to defend on the ground that the State has adopted his act and exonerated him, cannot rest on the bare assertion of his defense. He is bound to establish it. The State is a political corporate body, can act only through agents, and can command only by laws. It is necessary, therefore, for such a defendant, in order to complete his defense, to produce a law of the State which constitutes his commission as its agent, and a warrant for his act. This the defendant in the present case undertook to do. He relied on the Act of January 26, 1882, requiring him to collect taxes in gold, silver, United States treasury notes, national bank currency, and nothing else, and thus forbidding his receipt of coupons in lieu of money. That, it is true, is a legislative Act of the government of Virginia, but it is not a law of the State of Virginia. The State has passed no such law, for it cannot; and what it cannot do, it certainly, in contemplation of law, has not done. The Constitution of the United States and its own contract, both irrepealable by any act on its part, are the law of Virginia; and that law made it the duty of the defendant to receive the coupons tendered in payment of taxes, and declared every step to enforce the tax, thereafter taken, to be without warrant of law, and therefore a wrong. He stands, then, stripped of his official character, and, confessing a personal violation of the plaintiff's rights, for which he must personally answer, he is without defense.

No better illustration of this principle can be found than that which is furnished by the case of U. S. v. Lee [supra], in which it was applied to a claim made on behalf of the national government. The action was one in ejectment, to recover possession of lands to which the plaintiff claimed title. The defendants were natural persons, whose defense was that they were in possession as officers of the United States under the orders of the government and for its uses. The Attorney-General called this aspect of the case to the attention of the court, but without making the United States a party defendant. It was decided by this court that to sustain the defense and to defeat the pla iff's cause of action it was necessary to sh that the defendants were in possession un the United States, and on their behalf, by vir of some valid authority. As this could not shown, the contrary clearly appearing, pos sion of lands actually in use as a national ce tery was adjudged to the plaintiffs. The cision in that case was rested largely upon authority of Osborn v. Bank of U. S., 9 Whe 738, which was a suit in equity against an ficer of the State of Ohio, who sought to enfo one of her statutes which was in violation rights secured to the bank by the Constitut of the United States. The defendants, Osb and others, denied the jurisdiction of the co upon the ground that the State was the party in interest and could not be sued, that a suit against her officers, who were e cuting her will, was in violation of the Eleve Amendment of the Constitution. To this jection, Chief Justice Marshall replied: "If State of Ohio could have been made a party fendant, it can scarcely be denied that would be a strong case for an injunction. objection is that, as the real party cannot brought before the court, a suit cannot be s tained against the agents of that party; and ca have been cited to show that a court of ch cery will not make a decree unless all th who are substantially interested be made par to the suit. This is certainly true where it i the power of the plaintiff to make them part but if the person who is the real principal— person who is the true source of the r chief, by whose power and for whose adv tage it is done—be himself above the law, be empt from all judicial process, it would be s versive of the best established principles to that the laws could not afford the same re dies against the agent employed in doing wrong which they would afford against could his principal be joined in the suit." T language it may be observed, was quoted w approval in U. S. v. Lee. The principle wh it enunciates constitutes the very foundat upon which the decision in that case rested.

[289]

In the discussion of such questions the tinction between the government of a State the State itself is important and should be served. In common speech and common prehension they are usually regarded as ide cal; and as ordinarily the acts of the gove ment are the acts of the State, because wit the limits of its delegation of power, the g ernment of the State is generally confoun with the State itself, and often the forme meant when the latter is mentioned. The St itself is an ideal person, intangible, invisil immutable. The government is an agent, a within the sphere of the agency, a perfect re sentative; but outside of that it is a law usurpation. The Constitution of the Stat the limit of the authority of its government, both government and State are subject to supremacy of the Constitution of the Uni States and of the laws made in pursua thereof. So that, while it is true in respec the government of a State, as was said in La ford v. U. S., 101 U. S., 341 [Bk. 25, L. 1010], that the maxim that the King can do wrong has no place in our system of gove ment: yet it is also true, in respect to the St [illegible] that whatever wrong is attempted in its [illegible] is imputable to its government and not [illegible] the State, for, as it can speak and act only [illegible] law, whatever it does say and do must be [illegible]. That which, therefore, is unlawful [illegible] made so by the supreme law, the Con[illegible]tion of the United States, is not the word [illegible] act of the State, but is the mere wrong and [illegible] of those individual persons who false[illegible] speak and act in its name. It was upon the [illegible] of this important distinction that this [illegible] was decided in the case of Texas v. White, [illegible] Wall., 700 [74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 227], [illegible] adjudged that the acts of secession [illegible] constituted the civil war of 1861 were [illegible] lawful acts of usurping State govern[illegible] and not the acts of the States themselves, [illegible] as "the Constitution, in all its pro[illegible], looks to an indestructible Union, com[illegible] of indestructible States"; and that conse[illegible] the war itself was not a war between [illegible] States, nor a war of the United States [illegible] States, but a war of the United States [illegible] unlawful and usurping governments, [illegible] not the States, but a rebellion [illegible] United States. This is, in substance, [illegible] said by Chief Justice Chase, deliver[illegible] the opinion of the court in Thorington v. [illegible], 1, 9 [75 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. [illegible]], when he declared, speaking of the [illegible] Government, that "it was regarded [illegible] the military representative of the in[illegible] against the authority of the United [illegible]." The same distinction was declared [illegible] in Williams v. Bruffy, 96 U. S., [illegible] [Bk. 24, L. ed. 716, 720], and in Horn [illegible], 17 Wall., 570 [84 U. S., bk. 21, L. [illegible]], both of which were referred to and [illegible] in Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S., 454, 465 [illegible], L. ed. 1071, 1075].

[illegible] distinction is essential to the idea of con[illegible] government. To deny it or blot it [illegible] obliterates the line of demarcation that [illegible] constitutional government from abso[illegible], free self-government based on the [illegible] of the people, from that despotism, [illegible] of the one or the many, which enables [illegible] of the State to declare and decree that [illegible] State—to say "L'Etat, c'est moi." Of [illegible] are written constitutions, whose bills [illegible] for the security of individual liberty [illegible] written, too often, with the blood of [illegible] upon the battle field and the scaf[illegible], if their limitations and restraints upon [illegible] may be overpassed with impunity by the [illegible] created and appointed to guard, [illegible] and enforce them; and that, too, with [illegible] authority of law, not only compel[illegible], but entitled to respect? And [illegible] these principles of individual liber[illegible] be maintained, if, when violated, [illegible] tribunals are forbidden to visit pen[illegible] upon individual offenders, who are the [illegible] of wrong, whenever they interpose [illegible] of the State? The doctrine is not to [illegible]. The whole frame and scheme of [illegible] institutions of this country, State [illegible], protest against it. Their contin[illegible] is not compatible with it. It is [illegible] of absolutism, pure, simple and [illegible], and of communism, which is its twin; [illegible] progeny of the same evil birth.

[illegible] said by Chief Justice Chase, speaking for the whole court in Lane Co. v. Oregon, 7 Wall., 71, 76 [74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 101, 104], that the people, through the Constitution of the United States, "established a more perfect union by substituting a national government, acting, with ample power, directly upon the citizens, instead of the confederate government, which acted with powers, greatly restricted, only upon the States." In no other way can the supremacy of that Constitution be maintained. It creates a government in fact as well as in name, because its Constitution is the supreme law of the land, "anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding"; and its authority is enforced by its power to regulate and govern the conduct of individuals, even where its prohibitions are laid only upon the States themselves. The mandate of the State affords no justification for the invasion of rights secured by the Constitution or the United States; otherwise that Constitution would not be the supreme law of the land. When, therefore, an individual defendant pleads a statute of a State, which is in violation of the Constitution of the United States, as his authority for taking or holding property to which the citizen asserts title, and for the protection or possession of which he appeals to the courts, to say that the judicial enforcement of the supreme law of the land, as between the individual parties, is to coerce the State, ignores the fundamental principles on which the Constitution rests, as contrasted with the Articles of Confederation which it displaced; and practically makes the statutes of the States the supreme law of the land within their respective limits. [292]

When, therefore, by the Act of March 30, 1871, the contract was made by which it was agreed that the coupons issued under that Act should thereafter be receivable in payment of taxes, it was the contract of the State of Virginia, because, though made by the agency of the government, for the time being, of the State, that government was acting within the scope of its authority, and spoke with its voice as its true representative; and inasmuch as, by the Constitution of the United States, which is also the supreme law of Virginia, that contract, when made, became thereby unchangeable and irrepealable by the State, the subsequent Act of January 26, 1882, and all other like Acts which deny the obligation of that contract and forbid its performance, are not the Acts of the State of Virginia. The true and real Commonwealth which contracted the obligation is incapable in law of doing anything in derogation of it. Whatever having that effect, if operative, has been attempted or done, is the work of its government acting without authority, in violation of its fundamental law, and must be looked upon, in all courts of justice, as if it were not and never had been. The argument, therefore, which seeks to defeat the present action, for the reason that it is a suit against the State of Virginia, because the nominal defendant is merely its officer and agent, acting in its behalf, in its name and for its interest, and amenable only to it, falls to the ground, because its chief postulate fails. The State of Virginia has done none of these things with which this defense charges her. The defendant in error is not her officer, her agent or her representative, in the [293] matter complained of, for he has acted not only without her authority, but contrary to her express commands. The plaintiff in error, in fact and in law, is representing her, as he seeks to establish her law, and vindicates her integrity as he maintains his own right.

Tried by every test which has been judicially suggested for the determination of the question, this cannot be considered to be a suit against the State. The State is not named as a party in the record; the action is not directly upon the contract; it is not for the purpose of controlling the discretion of executive officers or administering funds actually in the public treasury, as was held to be the case in Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S., 711 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 448]; it is not an attempt to compel officers of the State to do the acts which constitute a performance of its contract by the State, as suggested by a minority of the court in Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S., 769, 783 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 468, 474]; nor is it a case where the State is a necessary party, that the defendant may be protected from liability to it after having answered to the present plaintiff; for, on this supposition, if the accounting officers of the state government refuse to credit the tax collector with coupons received by him in payment of taxes, or seek to hold him responsible for a failure to execute the void statute, which required him to refuse coupons in payment of taxes, in any action or prosecution brought against him in the [294] name of the State, the grounds of the judgment rendered in favor of the present plaintiff will constitute his perfect defense. And as that defense, made in any cause, though brought in a state court, would present a question arising under the Constitution and laws of the United State, it would be within the jurisdiction of this court to give it effect, upon a writ of error, without regard to the amount or value in dispute.

In the case of Osborn v. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat., 738, 853, Chief Justice Marshall put, by way of argument and illustration, the very case we are now considering. He said: "Controversies respecting boundary have lately existed between Virginia and Tennessee, between Kentucky and Tennessee, and now exist between New York and New Jersey. Suppose, while such a controversy is pending, the collecting officer of one State should seize property for taxes belonging to a man who supposes himself to reside in the other State, and who seeks redress in the federal court of that State in which the officer resides. The interest of the State is obvious. Yet it is admitted, that in such a case the action would lie, because the officer might be treated as a trespasser, and the verdict and judgment against him would not act directly on the property of the State. That it would not so act may, perhaps, depend on circumstances. The officer may retain the amount of the taxes in his hands, and, on the proceedings of the State against him, may plead in bar the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction. If this plea ought to be sustained—and it is far from being certain that it ought not—the judgment so pleaded would have acted directly on the revenue of the State in the hands of its officers. And yet the argument admits that the action in such a case would be sustained. But suppose, in such a case, the party conceiving himself to be injured, instead of bringing an action sounding in damages, should sue for t specific thing, while yet in possession of t seizing officer. It being admitted in argume that the action sounding in damages would b we are unable to perceive the line of distincti between that and the action of detinue. I the latter action would claim the specific artic seized for the tax, and would obtain it, shou the seizure be deemed unlawful."

Although the plaintiff below was nomina the actor, the action itself is purely defensiv Its object is merely to resist an attempted wro and to restore the status in quo as it was wh the right to be vindicated was invaded. In t respect it is upon the same footing with t preventive remedy of injunction in equity, wh that jurisdiction is invoked, and of which conspicuous example, constantly followed the courts of the United States, was the case Osborn v. Bank of U. S., ubi supra. In th case the taxing power of the State was resist on the ground that its exercise threatened deprive the complainant of a right conferr by the Constitution of the United States. T jurisdiction has been constantly exerted by t courts of the United States to prevent the illeg taxation of national banks by the officers of t States; and in Cummings v. Nat. Bk., 101 S., 153, 157 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 903, 904], it was la down as a general principle of equity jurisd tion "that when a rule or system of valuati is adopted by those whose duty it is to ma the assessment, which is designed to oper unequally and to violate a fundamental pri ciple of the Constitution, and when this rule applied not solely to one individual, but to large class of individuals or corporations, equi may properly interfere to restrain the operati of this unconstitutional exercise of power."

And it is no objection to the remedy in su cases, that the statute whose application in t particular case is sought to be restrained is r void on its face, but is complained of only b cause its operation in the particular instan works a violation of a constitutional right; f the cases are numerous, where the tax laws a State, which in their general and proper a plication are perfectly valid, have been held become void in particular cases, either as u constitutional regulations of commerce, or violations of contracts prohibited by the Co stitution, or because in some other way th operate to deprive the party complaining, o right secured to him by the Constitution of t United States. At the present term of t court at least three cases have been decid in which railroad companies have been co plainants in equity, seeking to restrain offic of States from collecting taxes, on the grou of an exemption by contract, and no questi of jurisdiction has been raised. The pract has become common, and is well settled incontestable principles of equity procedu Memphis R. R. v. Railroad Commissioners, U. S., 609 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 837]; St. Louis, e R. Co. v. Berry, 113 U. S., 465 [Bk. 28, L. 1055]; Ches. & O. R. Co. v. Miller, 114 U. 176 [ante, 121].

It is still urged upon us, however, in ar ment, that notwithstanding all that has b or can be said it still remains that the cont versy disclosed by the record is between an dividual and the State; that the State alone

[illegible] interest in its determination; that the [illegible] effect of such determination is to control the action of the State in the regular and [illegible] administration of its public affairs; and that therefore the suit is and must be regarded as a suit against the State, within the prohibition of the Eleventh Amendment to the Constitution. Omitting for the time being the consideration already enforced, of the fallacy that lies at the bottom of this objection arising from the distinction to be kept in view between the government of a State and the State itself, the premises which it assumes may all be admitted, but the conclusion would not follow. The same argument was employed in the name of the United States in the Lee Case and did not prevail. It was pressed with the greatest force of which it was susceptible in the case of Osborn v. Bank of U. S., and was met and overcome by the masterly reasoning of Chief Justice Marshall. It appeared early in the history of this court, in 1799, in the case of Fowler v. Lindsay, 3 Dall., 411, in which that able magistrate, Mr. Justice Washington, pronounced the first reported opinion. On a motion to remove the cause by certiorari from the circuit court, on the ground that it was a suit in which a State was a party, it being an ejectment for lands the title to which was claimed under grants from different States, he said: "A case which belongs to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, on account of the interest that a State has in the controversy, must be a case in which a State is either nominally or substantially a party. It is not sufficient that a State may be consequentially affected; for in such case (as when the grants of different States are brought in question) the circuit court has clearly a jurisdiction. And this remark furnishes an answer to the suggestions that have been founded on the remote interest of the State, in making validity to her grantees, upon the event of a verdict."

Nothing prohibited by the Eleventh Amendment is the exercise of jurisdiction in a "suit in law or equity commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State." Nothing else is touched; and suits between individuals, unless the State is the party in a substantial sense, are left untouched, however much their determination may incidentally and consequentially affect the interests of a State or the operations of its government. The actual inconvenience of an interference with the collection of its taxes by the government of Virginia, by suits against its tax-collectors, vanishes at once upon the suggestion that such interference is not possible except when that government seeks to enforce the collection of its taxes contrary to the law and consent of the State and in violation of the Constitution of the United States. The immunity claimed by the State, now invoked vainly to protect individual wrongdoers, finds no [illegible] in the Eleventh Amendment to the Constitution, and is in fact a protest against the enforcement of that other provision which forbids any State from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts. To accomplish that result requires a new amendment which would not forbid any State from passing laws impairing the obligation of its own contracts.

What we are asked to do is, in effect, to overrule the doctrine in Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, and hold that a State is not under a constitutional obligation to perform its contracts; for it is equivalent to that to say that it is not subject to the consequences when that constitutional prohibition is applied to suits between individuals. We could not stop there. We should be required to go still further, and reverse the doctrine on which that constitutional provision rests, stated by Chief Justice Marshall in that case, when he said: "When, then, a law is in its nature a contract, when absolute [298] rights have vested under that contract, a repeal of the law cannot devest those rights; and the act of annulling them, if legitimate, is rendered so by a power applicable to the case of every individual in the community. It may well be doubted whether the nature of society and of government does not prescribe some limits to the legislative power; and, if any be prescribed, where are they to be found if the property of an individual, fairly and honestly acquired, may be seized without compensation? To the Legislature all legislative power is granted; but the question, whether the act of transferring the property of an individual to the public be in the nature of legislative power, is well worthy of serious reflection." And, in view of such a contention, we may well add the impressive and weighty words of the same illustrious man, when he said, in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137: "The Government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve this high appellation if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right."

It is contended, however, in behalf of the defendant in error, that the Act of January 26, 1882, under which he justified his refusal of the tender of coupons, does not impair the obligation of the contract between the coupon-holder and the State of Virginia, inasmuch as it secures to him a remedy equal in legal value to all that it takes away, and that consequently, as the State may lawfully legislate by changing remedies so that it does not destroy rights, the remedy thus provided is exclusive and must defeat the plaintiff's action.

The remedy thus substituted and declared exclusive is one that requires the taxpayer demanding to have coupons received in payment of taxes, first, to pay the taxes due from him in money, under protest, when, within thirty days thereafter, he may sue the officer to recover back the amount paid, which, on obtaining judgment therefor, shall be refunded by the auditor of public accounts out of the treasury. By the amendment passed March 13, 1884, the [299] coupons tendered are required to be sealed up and marked for identification, filed with the petition at the commencement of the suit, produced on the trial as evidence of the tender, and delivered to the auditor of public accounts to be canceled when he issues his warrant for the amount of the judgment.

It is contended that, in view of this remedy, the case is ruled by the decision of this court in Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S., 769 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 468]. We have, however, already shown, by extracts from the opinion of the court in that case, that the question involved in the present proceeding was not covered by that judgment. In that case the plaintiff in error was seeking to compel the officer specifically to receive his coupons in payment of taxes by mandamus, on the ground that he was entitled to that remedy when the contract was made by the law of March 30, 1871. The law giving that remedy was subsequently amended, requiring the petitioner to pay the taxes in money in the first instance, and permitting the writ to issue only after a trial in which the genuineness of the coupons tendered had been established. The court held that he might have been put to the same proof in the former mode of proceeding, and that the amendment did not destroy the efficiency of the remedy.

But here the plaintiff did not seek any compulsory process against the officer to require him specifically to receive the coupons tendered. He offered them and they were refused. He chose to stand upon the defensive and maintain his rights as they might be assailed. His right was to have his coupon received for taxes when offered. That was the contract. To refuse to receive them was an open breach of its obligation. It is no remedy for this that he may acquiesce in the wrong, pay his taxes in money which he was entitled to pay in coupons, and bring suit to recover it back. His tender, as we have already seen, was equivalent to payment, so far as concerns the legality of all subsequent steps by the collector to enforce payment by distraint of his property. He has the right to say he will not pay the amount a second time, even for the privilege of recovering it back. And if he chooses to stand upon a lawful payment once made, he asks no remedy to recover back taxes illegally collected, but may resist the exaction, and treat as a wrongdoer the officer who seizes his property to enforce it.

[300]

It is suggested that the right to have coupons received in payment of taxes is a mere right of set-off, and is itself but a remedy subject to the control of legislation. Ordinarily, it is true, the right to set off mutual independent debts, by way of compensation and satisfaction, is dependent on the general law, does not enter into the contract, although it may be the lex loci contractus, and is dependent for its enforcement upon the lex fori, when suit is brought, and consequently may be changed by the Legislature without impairing vested rights. But in such cases the right is entirely dependent upon the general law, and changes with it. It is different when, as in many cases of equitable set-off, it inheres in the transaction, or arises out of the relations of the parties; and it may in any case, as it was in this, be made the subject of contract between parties. When this is done, it stands upon the footing of every other lawful contract, upon valuable consideration, the obligation of which cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation.

It is urged upon us, however, that in a revenue system, a provision of law which gives to a party complaining of an illegal exaction of taxes the right to recover back the amount in dispute only after previous payment under protest, as the sole remedy against either the officer or the government, is a just and reasonable rule, sufficiently securing private rights, and convenient, if not necessary, to the interests of the public. We are referred to the revenue laws of the United States for illustration and exa ple, and the question is put, why a similar pr vision, as it is assumed to be, should not be co sidered adequate as a remedy for the holders coupons in Virginia, who have been denied t right to use them in payment of taxes.

The answer is obvious and complete. V ginia, by a contract which the Constitution the United States disables her from impairin has bound herself that it shall be otherwi The State has agreed that the coupons cut fr her bonds shall be received in payment of ta due to her, as though they were money. Wh the taxpayer has tendered such coupons, he h complied with the agreement, and in legal c templation has paid the debt he owed the Sta So far as that tax is concerned, and every s taken for enforcing its payment in disregard that tender, the coupon holder is withdra from the power and jurisdiction of the Sta He is free from all further disturbance, and securely shielded by the Constitution in his i munity. No proceeding, whatever its prete which does not respect this right, can be ju cially upheld. The question is not of the r sonableness of a remedy for a breach of contract to receive the tendered coupons in p ment of the tax; it is whether the right to h them so received, and the use of that right defense against all further efforts to exact compel payment of the tax, in denial and d ance of that right, can be taken away with a violation of that provision of the Const tion which prohibits the States from pass laws which impair the obligation of contra Certainly, a law which takes from the pa his whole contract, and all the rights whic was intended to confer, must be regarded law impairing its obligation.

Another point remains for consideration. tion 721, R. S., provides that "The laws of several States, except where the Constituti treaties or statutes of the United States ot wise require or provide, shall be regarded rules of decision in trials at common law, in courts of the United States, in cases where t apply"; and section 914, R. S., declares "The practice, pleadings and forms and m of proceeding in civil causes, other than eq and admiralty causes, in the Circuit and Dis Courts, shall conform, as near as may b the practice, pleadings and forms and mod proceeding existing at the time in like ca in the courts of record of the State wi which such Circuit or District Courts held, any rule of court to the contrary not w standing." Upon these sections it is ar that, admitting the Acts of the General As bly of Virginia of January 26, 1882, and amendment by the Act of March 13, 188 be unconstitutional and void, so far as they bid tax collectors from receiving coupon payment of taxes, nevertheless, as the Stat control over the forms of action and mod proceeding by way of remedy, and has fo den, in cases where the tax collector has ref coupons in payment of taxes, any persons tion against him other than the suit to re back the tax demanded and paid under pr the same law, by force of the Revised Sta of the United States, must govern in the c of the United States.

It is not entirely clear, on the face of th of January 28, 1882, that it does forbid actions against the officer for illegally levying upon the property of the coupon holder for the tax which he has offered to pay. The language of the Act seems to embrace only such suits as are [illegible] with the direct object of preventing or restraining him from taking steps to collect the tax. And this uncertainty is not made clear by the mandatory Act of March 13, 1884, which, by expressly forbidding actions of trespass or trespass on the case to be brought or maintained against any collecting officer for seizing upon the property of any taxpayer who shall have tendered coupons in payment of the tax demanded, would seem to have left the action of detinue, which was authorized in such cases by the previously existing law of Virginia, untouched by the prohibition.

We shall assume, however, for the purposes of this opinion, that these Acts of the General Assembly of Virginia were intended to and do bar every action, of whatever kind, against a collecting officer, for the recovery of specific property taken by distraint or of damages for conversion or detention, and leaves to the coupon holder, as his sole right of action, the suit to recover back the money illegally collected from him.

This action, as we have already seen, is no remedy whatever for the loss of the specific tax of paying his taxes with coupons. It does not even profess so to be. Neither is it a remedy for the loss of the right sought to be vindicated in this and other personal actions against the collector for unlawfully taking from the plaintiff his property. And, upon the supposition made, this wrong is without remedy by any act of Virginia.

The direct result, then, of giving effect to the provisions of the Act in question is to deny entirely the right of the coupon holder to pay his taxes with his coupons, which we have already said avoids that part of the Acts in question which forbids it in terms, and to take from him that right as a defense against the wrongful trespasses committed upon him and his property in denial and defiance of it. All persons whose property is unlawfully taken, otherwise than to enforce payment of taxes, are secured in their right of action for redress. But the coupon holder, to whom the Constitution of the United States guarantees the right, conferred upon him by the law and contract of Virginia, to pay his taxes in coupons, is excluded. The discrimination is made against him in order to deprive him of that right, and, if permitted, will have the effect of denying to him all redress for a deprivation of a right secured to him by the Constitution. To take away all remedy for the enforcement of a right is to take away the right itself. But that is not within the power of the State.

Section 721, R. S., it will be observed, makes no express exception, in reference to the adoption of state laws as rules of decision, of cases where the Constitution otherwise requires, such follows wherever the adoption of the state law deprives a complaining party of a remedy essential to the vindication of a right, and that right is derived from or protected by the Constitution of the United States. The same exception is implied in section 914, the language of which, indeed, is not imperative, as the conformity required in the practice and procedure of the courts of the United States with that of the State Courts needs only to be "as near as may be." No one would contend that a law of a State, forbidding all redress by actions at law for injuries to property, would be upheld in the courts of the United States, for that would be to deprive one of his property without due process of law. This is exactly what the statutes in question undertake to do, in respect to that class of persons whose property is taken from them for the offense of asserting, under the protection of the Constitution, the right to pay their taxes in coupons. The contract with Virginia was not only that the coupons should be received in payment of taxes, but, by necessary implication, that the taxpayer making such a tender should not be molested further, as though he were a delinquent; and that, for [304] every illegal attempt subsequently to enforce the collection of the tax, by the seizure of property, he should have the remedies of the law in force when the contract was made, for redress, or others equally effective. "The obligation of a contract," said this court, in McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How., 608, 612, "consists in its binding force on the party who makes it. This depends on the laws in existence when it is made. These are necessarily referred to in all contracts, and forming a part of them, as the measure of the obligation to perform them by the one party and the right acquired by the other. There can be no other standard by which to ascertain the extent of either than that which the terms of the contract indicate, according to their settled legal meaning; when it becomes consummated, the law defines the duty and the right, compels one party to perform the thing contracted for, and gives the other a right to enforce the performance by the remedies then in force. If any subsequent law affect to diminish the duty or to impair the right, it necessarily bears on the obligation of the contract, in favor of one party to the injury of the other; hence, any law, which in its operation amounts to a denial or obstruction of the rights accruing by a contract, though professing to act only on the remedy, is directly obnoxious to the prohibition of the Constitution."

The Acts of Assembly in question must be taken together, as one is but an amendment to the other. The scheme of the whole is indivisible. It cannot be separated into parts. It must stand or fall together. The substantive part of it, which forbids the tax collector to receive coupons in payment of taxes, as we have already declared, as, indeed, on all sides, is admitted, cannot stand, because it is not consistent with the Constitution. That which is merely auxiliary to the main design must also fall with the principal of which it is merely an incident; and it follows that the Acts in question are not laws of Virginia, and are therefore not within the sections of the Revised Statutes referred to, nor obligatory upon the courts of the United States.

It is undoubtedly true that there may be cases where one part of a statute may be enforced as constitutional, and another be de- [305] clared inoperative and void, because unconstitutional; but these are cases where the parts are so distinctly separable that each can stand alone, and where the court is able to see and to declare, that the intention of the Legislature was that the part pronounced valid should be enforceable, even though the other part should fail. To hold otherwise would be to substitute for the law intended by the Legislature one they may never have been willing by itself to enact. An illustration of this principle is found in the Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, [Bk. 25, L. ed. 550], where an Act of Congress, which, it was claimed, would have been valid as a regulation of commerce with foreign Nations and among the States, was held to be void altogether, because it embraced all commerce, including that between citizens of the same State, which was not within the jurisdiction of Congress, and its language could not be restrained to that which was subject to the control of Congress. "If we should," said the court in that case (page 99), "in the case before us undertake to make, by judicial construction, a law which Congress did not make, it is quite probable we should do what, if the matter were now before that body, it would be unwilling to do."

Indeed it is quite manifest, from the face of the laws themselves, that they are together but parts of a larger whole. By an Act of the General Assembly of Virginia, passed February 14, 1882, the Legislature restated the account between the State and its creditors on a basis of readjustment which reduced it to the sum of $21,085,877.15, including interest in arrears to July 1, 1882, which was thereby declared to be her equitable share of the debt of the old and entire State, and on which it was also declared that the State was not able to pay interest for the future at a larger rate than 3 per cent per annum. The outstanding debt, of which this was a reduction, was then classified, and bonds of the State were authorized to be issued, bearing interest at the rate of three per cent per annum, in exchange for outstanding bonds of the different classes, scaled at rates of 53 per cent, 60 per cent, 69 per cent, 63 per cent, and, as to one class, as high as 80 per cent, which [306] were to be retired and canceled. The coupons on the new bonds were not made receivable in payment of taxes. To coerce creditors holding bonds issued under the Act of March 30, 1871, to exchange them for these new bonds, at these reduced rates, and with them to give up their security for the payment of interest arising out of the receivability of coupons in payment of taxes, is the evident purpose of the Acts of January 26, 1882, and of March 13, 1884, and all together form a single scheme, the undisguised object of which is to enable the State to rid itself of a considerable portion of its public debt, and to place the remainder on terms to suit its own convenience, without regard to the obligation it owes to its creditors.

The whole legislation, in all its parts, as to creditors affected by it and not consenting to it, must be pronounced null and void. Such is the sentence of the Constitution itself, the fundamental and supreme law for Virginia, as for all the States and for all the people, both of the States separately and of the United States, and which speaks with sovereign and commanding voice, expecting and receiving ready and cheerful obedience, not so much for the display of its power, as on account of the majesty of its authority and the justice of its mandates.

The judgment of the Hustings Court of the City of Richmond is accordingly reversed and the cause will be remanded, with directions to render judgment upon the agreed statement of facts in favor of the plaintiff; and it is so ordered.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Dissenting, Mr. Chief Justice Waite and Justices Bradley, Miller and Gray. See opinion, post, 207.

Cited—114 U. S., 308, 310, 314; 116 U. S., 570, 571.

R. B. CHAFFIN, Plff. in Err.,
v.
WILLIAM TAYLOR.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 309, 310.)

*This case falls within the decision in Poindexter v. Greenhow (ante, 185) and is decided by it.

[No. 1260.]

Argued Mar. 20, 23, 24, 25, 1885. Decided April 20, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See, also, the related case of Poindexter v. Greenhow, ante, 185, and the dissenting opinion, post, 207.

Messrs. William L. Royall, Daniel H. Chamberlain, Wager Swayne, Wm. M. Evarts and Wm. B. Hornblower, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. F. S. Blair, Atty-Gen. of Virginia, R. T. Merrick and A. H. Garland, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action in trespass de bonis asportatis, brought by the plaintiff in error against the defendant in the Circuit Court for the County of Henrico in Virginia, for the recovery of $150 damages for unlawfully entering upon the plaintiff's premises and seizing, taking and carrying away one horse, the property of the plaintiff, of the value of $100.

The defendant justified the taking, etc., as treasurer of Henrico County, charged by law with the duty of collecting taxes due the State of Virginia on property and persons in said county, alleging that the property was lawfully seized and taken for taxes due from the plaintiff to the State, which, on demand, he had refused to pay.

To this plea the plaintiff replied a tender in payment of the taxes, when demanded and before the trespass complained of, of the amount due, in coupons cut from bonds of the State of Virginia, receivable in payment of taxes by virtue of the Act of March 30, 1871.

To the replication the defendant demurred specially, on the ground, first, that by the Act of January 26, 1882, he was forbidden to receive coupons in payment of taxes; and, second, that by the Act of March 13, 1884, an action of trespass would not lie in such a case.

In this demurrer the plaintiff joined, and assigned, as a reason why it should be overruled,

*Head note by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

[illegible] the two statutes mentioned and relied on by [illegible] were repugnant to section 10, [illegible] of the Constitution of the United [illegible] and therefore null and void.

[illegible] was rendered on the demurrer in [illegible] of the defendant. Thereafter, on Novem[illegible] 1884, the plaintiff filed his petition in the [illegible] Court of Appeals of Virginia for the [illegible] of a writ of error; whereupon, as the [illegible] recites, the petition "having been ma[illegible] considered, and the transcript of the rec[illegible] of the judgment aforesaid seen and inspect[illegible] the court, being of opinion that said judg[illegible] a plainly right, doth deny the said writ." [illegible] this judgment this writ of error is [illegible]

[illegible] judgment of the Supreme Court of Ap[illegible] in substance, a judgment affirming the [illegible] of the Circuit Court of Henrico [illegible], and is therefore reviewable upon this [illegible] error by this court, the case being one [illegible] under the Constitution of the Unit[illegible] Williams v. Bruffy, 102 U. S., 248 [illegible] L. ed. 135].

[illegible] merits of the case are disposed of by the [illegible] Poindexter v. Greenhow [ante, 185], [illegible] it was decided that the Act of January [illegible] and the Act of March 13, 1884, were [illegible], and therefore null and void. [illegible] denied that, but for these Acts, the [illegible] of trespass would lie in such a case under [illegible] of Virginia; and as the Acts relied on [illegible] defendant must be treated as ineffectual [illegible] purpose, they do not work a repeal of [illegible] existing law.

[illegible] of the Supreme Court of Ap[illegible] accordingly reversed, and the cause is re[illegible] to that court, with directions to take [illegible] proceedings, in accordance with law, in [illegible] with this opinion; and it is so or[illegible]

[illegible] Test:

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] Mr. Chief Justice Waite and [illegible] Miller, Bradley and Gray. See [illegible] post, 307.

WILLIAM L. WHITE, Ptf. in Err.,

v.

SAMUEL C. GREENHOW.

([illegible] S. C., Reporter's ed., 307-308.)

[illegible] falls within the decision in Poindexter [illegible] ante, 185, and is decided by it.

[No. 589].

[illegible] Mar. 20, 23, 24, 25, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

[illegible] ERROR to the Circuit Court of the Unit[illegible] for the Eastern District of Virginia.

[illegible] history and facts of the case appear in [illegible] of the court. See, also, the pre[illegible] and related case of Poindexter v. Green[illegible] ante, 185, and the dissenting opinion, [illegible]

[illegible] by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

Messrs. William L. Royall, Daniel H. Chamberlain, Wm. M. Evarts, Wager Swayne and Wm. B. Hornblower, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. F. S. Blair, Atty-Gen. of Virginia, A. H. Garland, R. T. Merrick, J. Ambler Smith and S. B. Witt, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court: [307]

The plaintiff in error, who was plaintiff below, brought his action in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia against the defendant, both being citizens of that State. The declaration, in substance, sets out that the plaintiff, owning property in the City of Richmond, was assessed thereon for the year 1882 for certain taxes to be paid to the State of Virginia, leviable for after December 1, 1882; that the defendant was Treasurer of the City of Richmond, and, as such, collector of taxes due to the State assessed on property in that City; that plaintiff tendered to the defendant, on demand being made for payment of said taxes, the amount thereof in coupons cut from bonds issued by the State of Virginia under the Act of March 30, 1871, entitled "An Act to Provide for the Funding and Payment of the Public Debt," which coupons, by the terms of said Act, were receivable in payment of taxes by virtue of a contract with the State of Virginia; that the defendant refused to receive said coupons, under color of the authority of the Act of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, passed January 26, 1882, which forbade him to receive the same; that the defendant, after refusal of said tender, forcibly and unlawfully entered the premises of the plaintiff, and levied upon and [308] seized and carried away personal property of the plaintiff of the value of $3,000, in order to sell the same for the satisfaction of said taxes, which he claimed to be unpaid and delinquent; that the Acts of the General Assembly of Virginia, specified in the pleadings, which require the tax collector to refuse to receive such coupons in payment of taxes, and to proceed with the collection of taxes, for the payment of which they have been tendered, as if they were delinquent, impair the obligation of the said contract between the State of Virginia and the plaintiff; and that by reason of the said wrongs the plaintiff has suffered damage in the sum of $6,000, for which he brings suit.

To this declaration the defendant demurred generally, the demurrer was sustained, and judgment was rendered for the defendant. The plaintiff sued out this writ of error.

All the questions raised and argued upon the merits of this case have been fully considered in the opinion of the court in the case of Poindexter v. Greenhow [ante, 185].

The present action, as shown on the face of the declaration, was a case arising under the Constitution of the United States, and was one, therefore, of which the Circuit Court of the United States had rightful jurisdiction by virtue of the Act of March 3, 1875, without regard to the citizenship of the parties, the sum or value in controversy being in excess of $500.

In conformity with the views expressed in the opinion in Poindexter v. Greenhow, the judgment in the present case is reversed and the cause is remanded, with directions to proceed therein in conformity with law.

Judgment reversed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Dissenting, Mr. Chief Justice Waite and Justices Miller, Bradley and Gray. See opinion, post, 207.

Cited—116 U. S., 559.

S. BROWN ALLEN, Auditor of Public Accounts of the STATE OF VIRGINIA, ET AL., Appts.

[311]

v.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 311-317.)

Taxes — tender of tax — receivable coupons by railroad corporation — injunction lies to prevent subsequent distraint.

*1. The general questions arising and argued in this case are fully discussed and decided in the case of Poindexter v. Greenhow (ante, 185).

2. The remedy by injunction to prevent the collection of taxes by distraint upon the rolling stock, machinery, cars and engines, and other property of railroad corporations, after a tender of payment in tax-receivable coupons, is sanctioned by repeated decisions of this court, and has become common and unquestioned practice, in similar cases, where exemptions have been claimed in virtue of the Constitution of the United States; the ground of the jurisdiction being that there is no adequate remedy at law.

[No. 826.]

Argued Mar. 25, 26, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See, also, the related case of Poindexter v. Greenhow, ante, 185, and the dissenting opinion, post, 207.

Messrs. F. S. Blair, Atty-Gen. of Virginia, R. T. Merrick and A. H. Garland, for appellants.

Messrs. John H. Cowen, Hugh W. Sheffey, William L. Royall, Daniel H. Chamberlain and Wm. B. Hornblower, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

[311]

This is a bill in equity filed by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, a Corporation created by the laws of Maryland, and a citizen of that State, against the appellants, who were defendants below, of whom Allen is Auditor of Public Accounts; Revely, Treasurer of the State of Virginia, and Hamilton, Treasurer of Augusta County, in that State, and all citizens of Virginia.

The complainant is the lessee in possession of certain railway lines in Virginia—the Winchester and Potomac, the Winchester and Strasburg, and the Strasburg and Harrisonburg Railroads—and also operates a railroad belonging to the Valley Railroad Company in that St

It is alleged in the bill that, "By the 2 and 21st sections of an Act of the General A sembly of Virginia, approved on the 22d day April, 1882, and entitled 'An Act for the A sessment of Taxes on Persons, Property, I come, and Licenses, and Imposing Taxes Ther on for the Support of the Government ar Free Schools and to Pay the Interest on th Public Debt,' provision was made for the a sessment and taxation of the railroads with the State, the board of public works, actin upon the reports of the officers of the railro companies, and upon the best and most reliab information that could be procured, being a thorized and required to ascertain and asse the value of the real and personal property such companies for taxation at the rate forty cents on every $100 of the estimat value thereof; and said Act further provid that it shall be the duty of every railroad co pany so assessed to pay into the treasury of t State, within sixty days after receipt of noti of such assessment, the tax imposed by la and a company failing to pay the tax assess upon its property shall be immediately assess under the direction of the auditor of public a counts, by any person appointed by him f the purpose, rating their real estate and rolli stock at $20,000 per mile, and a tax there levied of forty cents on the $100 of su fixed value; and the amount so assessed sh be collected by any treasurer to whom the a ditor may deliver the assessment, who is a thorized to distrain and sell any personal pro erty of such company for the amount of su taxes."

It is further alleged, that on November 2 1882, the board of public works assessed sa railroads for taxation at the rate of $15,000 p mile, of which notice was given to the co plainant, on January 17, 1883, as the party able by law for the payment of the taxes sessed upon them; that on March 16, 18 within sixty days thereafter, the complaina obtained from the auditor of public accou warrants to pay into the treasury the seve amounts charged as to each of said railroa which the treasurer of the Commonwealth, indorsement thereon, required to be paid i a specified bank in the City of Richmond, t being the only mode recognized by law making such payments; that, at that time, complainant, being the owner and holder the requisite amount of coupons for interest from bonds of the State of Virginia, issued der the Act of March 20, 1871, entitled " Act to Provide for the Funding and Paym of the Public Debt," and receivable by vir thereof in payment of taxes tendered the sam with coin sufficient exactly to make the quired amounts, to the said bank in Richmo in discharge of said warrants; that said coup were refused, and the same having been set ap the complainant brings the same into co subject to its order, in payment of said ta that similar tenders were made to the audito public accounts, and to the treasurer of St on the same day, each of whom refused to ceive the same; that thereupon the defend Allen, the auditor of public accounts, proce to assess the said railroads upon their rea tate, not having any rolling stock, at $20

*Head notes by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

[illegible] as being in default for nonpayment of the taxes assessed by the board of public works; and placed copies of said assessment in the hands of the defendant, Hamilton, as treasurer of Augusta County, for collection, in pursuance of which he levied upon certain cars and locomotives belonging to the complainant, used in operating said railroads, for part of said taxes, and threatens to make further levies upon other cars and engines, to be sold for payment of said taxes, so assessed by the auditor of public accounts.

The bill prays for an injunction on the several grounds of irreparable damage; that the acts complained of prevent the proper exercise by the complainant of its franchise, involving a public duty, of operating the railroads of which it is lessee, and in possession; to avoid multiplicity of suits; the want of adequate remedies at law; to remove the cloud upon the title to the railroad property, occasioned by the fact that assessed taxes are a lien thereon; and because it is necessary to protect the complainant in the immunity to which it is entitled, by virtue of the contract with the State of Virginia secured against state laws impairing its obligation by the Constitution of the United States.

It is admitted by the parties in the record that the coupons tendered are genuine, though not verified as required by the Act of January [illegible]. It is also admitted in like manner, that if the property of the complainant levied on should be sold "Great sacrifice and loss must result therefrom; and that the withdrawal from complainant's use of the amount of rolling stock and machinery levied on and proposed to be sold as aforesaid will cause serious and prolonged embarrassment to complainant's business; that much delay must accrue before such rolling stock and machinery, if sold, can be replaced, and that it will be difficult, if not impracticable, to ascertain and estimate, with even proximate certainty, the losses and damages which would result to complainant from such sale; so that, although the estate of said J. M. Hamilton should be sufficient to meet any verdict for damages, in case the sale should be adjudged to have been illegal, the pecuniary value of the complainant's losses and damages could not be properly and adequately ascertained and fixed by the verdict of a jury."

There was a final decree in favor of the complainant for a perpetual injunction, as prayed for, and the case is brought here by appeal by the defendants.

The general questions arising and argued in the said other cases involving them are fully discussed in the opinion in the case of Poindexter v. Greenhow [ante, 185]. The conclusions reached in that judgment apply to the present appeal, and require that the decree of the Circuit Court should be affirmed.

It is deemed proper to add a few observations to the question of the jurisdiction of the Circuit Courts, in such cases, in equity, to grant relief by injunction.

The circumstances of this case bring it, so far as that remedy is in question, fully within the principle firmly established in this court by the decision in Osborn v. U. S. Bank, 9 Wheat., [illegible], and within the terms of the rule as declared in Cummings v. Nat. Bk., 101 U. S., 153 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 903]; quoted in the case of Poindexter v. Greenhow.

The jurisdiction was exercised with energy in behalf of a stockholder in a banking corporation in Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How., 331 [59 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 401], where the refusal of the directors of the company to resist the collection of an unconstitutional tax was made the ground of interposition in behalf of a stockholder as a breach of trust.

In Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S., 531–541 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 623, 628], it is said in the opinion of the court, speaking on the question of remedies: [315]

"On this branch of the subject, the numerous and well considered cases heretofore decided by this court leave little to be said. The objections to proceeding against state officers by mandamus or injunction are: first, that it is, in effect, proceeding against the State itself; and, secondly, that it interferes with the official discretion vested in the officers. It is conceded that neither of these things can be done. A State, without its consent, cannot be sued by an individual; and a court cannot substitute its own discretion for that of executive officers in matters belonging to the proper jurisdiction of the latter. But it has been well settled that, when a plain official duty, requiring no exercise of discretion, is to be performed, and performance is refused, any person who will sustain personal injury by such refusal may have a mandamus to compel its performance; and when such duty is threatened to be violated by some positive official act, any person who will sustain personal injury thereby, for which adequate compensation cannot be had at law, may have an injunction to prevent it. In such cases, the writs of mandamus and injunction are some what correlative to each other. In either case, if the officer plead the authority of an unconstitutional law for the non-performance or violation of his duty, it will not prevent the issuing of the writ. An unconstitutional law will be treated by the courts as null and void." And the opinion cites Osborn v. Bank, 9 Wheat., 859, and Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall., 220 [83 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 453]. The same principle was applied in the State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S., 575 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 663]. In the opinion of the court it is said (page 615): "In the examination which we have made of these cases, we do not find any of the matters complained of to come within the rule which we have laid down as justifying the interposition of a court of equity. There is no fraud proved if alleged. There is no violation of the Constitution, either in the statute or in its administration, by the board of equalization. No property is taxed that is not legally liable to taxation; nor is the rule of uniformity prescribed by the Constitution violated." If the facts here negatived had been affirmed the converse of the rule would have been equally applicable. [316]

In Trans. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S., 691–695 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 584, 586], it was declared that a bill in equity would lie which seeks to have a wharfage ordinance declared void, and for an injunction to restrain further collections under it, and any further interference with the right of the complainant to the free navigation of the Ohio River, and, perhaps, as incidental to the other relief, a demand for the return of of the wharfage already paid.

The remedy to restrain by injunction taxes levied upon railroads, in alleged violation of a contract with the State, was administered in Tomlinson v. Branch, 15 Wall., 460 [82 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 189], and in numerous other similar cases, where it has been denied, the jurisdiction to grant the relief if the facts warranted it has been assumed without question. And see Litchfield v. Webster Co., 101 U. S., 773 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 925].

In the case of national banks, the assessment and collection of taxes illegally assessed under the authority of state laws, in violation of Acts of Congress, are habitually restrained by the preventive remedy of injunction; and the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States in those cases is regarded as in the highest degree beneficial and necessary to prevent the agencies of the Goverment of the United States from being hindered and embarrassed in the performance of their functions by state legislation. The exercise of that jurisdiction, and by means of that remedy, in such cases is to vindicate the supremacy of the Constitution, and to maintain the integrity of the powers and rights which it confers and secures; and that jurisdiction is vested in the Courts of the United States because the cases embraced in it are necessarily cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Where the rights in jeopardy are those of private citizens, and are of those classes which the Constitution of the United States either confers or has taken under its protection, and no adequate remedy for their enforcement is provided by the forms and proceedings purely legal, the same necessity invokes and justifies, in cases to which its remedies can be applied, that jurisdiction in equity vested by the Constitution [317] of the United States, and which can not be affected by the legislation of the States.

In the present case the jurisdiction in equity to grant the relief prayed for by injunction, and the propriety of its exercise, are alike indisputable.

The decree of the Circuit Court is accordingly affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk Sup. Court, U. S.

Dissenting, Mr. Chief Justice Waite and Justices Miller, Bradley and Gray. See opinion post, 207.

---

[317] SAMUEL S. CARTER, Plff. in Err.,

v.

SAMUEL C. GREENHOW.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 317-323.)

Taxes; remedy for violation of contract of Virginia to receive coupons in payment of—trespass does not lie under sec. 629, R. S., against collector.

*1. The 16th clause of sec. 629, R. S., authorizing suits, without reference to the sum or value in controversy or the citizenship of the parties, to be brought in the Circuit Courts of the United States to redress the deprivation, under color of state law, of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States, in violation sec. 1979, R. S., does not embrace an action of tre pass on the case in which the plaintiff seeks a reco ery of damages against a tax collector in Virgini who, having rejected a tender of tax-receivable co pons, issued under the Act of March 30, 1871, see to collect the tax for which they were tendered a seizure and sale of personal property of t plaintiff.

2. Although the right to have such coupons r ceived in payment of taxes is founded on a contra with the State, and that right is protected by t Constitution of the United States by article 1, se tion 10, forbidding the State to pass any laws i pairing the obligation of the contract, the on mode of redress in case of any disturbance or d possession of property, or for other legal rig based on such violation of the contract, is to hav judicial determination, in a suit between indivi uals, of the invalidity of the law, under color which the wrong has been committed. No dire action for the denial of the right secured by t contract will lie.

[No. 590.]

Argued Mar. 20, 23, 24, 25, 1885. Decid Apr. 20, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the Unit States for the Eastern District of Virginia.

The history and facts of the case appear the opinion of the court. See, also, the case Poindexter v. Greenhow, ante, 185, and the d senting opinion, post 207.

Messrs. William L. Royall, Daniel Chamberlain, Wm. M. Evarts, Wag Swayne and Wm. B. Hornblower, plaintiff in error.

Messrs. F. S. Blair, Atty-Gen. of Virgin A. H. Garland, R. T. Merrick, Ambler Smith and S. B. Witt, for defe ant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the op ion of the court:

The plaintiff in error brought his action, the Circuit Court of the United States, agai the defendant, on May 7, 1883. His cause action is set forth in the declaration as follo

"Samuel S. Carter, plaintiff, complains Samuel C. Greenhow, defendant, of a plea of tr pass on the case, for that the said plaintiff is a c zen of the State of Virginia and a resident of City of Richmond in said State. That the plai iff owns property in said city, and that he w lawfully assessed on said property by the o cers of the State of Virginia whose duty it w under the laws of Virginia to make such asse ment, with taxes to be paid to the State of V ginia for the year 1882, and that said taxes w due and leviable for, on and after the first d of December, 1882.

"That the defendant, Samuel C. Greenho is the treasurer of the City of Richmond in State of Virginia, and that the laws of Virgi make it his duty to collect all taxes due to State of Virginia by residents of said city property situated and being in said city. T on the 3d day of May, 1883, the plaintiff v indebted to the said State of Virginia on count of the taxes so assessed upon his prope as aforesaid for the year 1882, and that on s last named date he tendered to the defenda in payment of his said taxes, coupons cut fr bonds issued by the State of Virginia, under provisions of the Act of the General Assem of the State of Virginia, approved March 1879, entitled 'An Act to Provide a Plan of S tlement of the Public Debt,' which coupo together with a small amount of lawful mo of the United States, tendered at the same time, amounted exactly to the sum so due by the plaintiff for taxes as aforesaid, and which coupons were due and past maturity, in payment of the said taxes so due as aforesaid. That by the terms of the Act of the General Assembly under which said coupons were issued, the said coupons are receivable in payment of all taxes due to the State of Virginia, and that each of said coupons bore upon its face the contract of the State of Virginia that it should be received in payment of taxes due to said State. That the defendant refused to receive the said coupons and money in payment of the taxes so due by the plaintiff. That after said tender the said defendant unlawfully entered into and upon the plaintiff's premises and place of business and broke open and seized the plaintiff's property and carried the same away to sell the same in payment of plaintiff's taxes. That plaintiff was always ready and willing to deliver to the defendant in payment of said taxes, up to the moment when the defendant so levied upon his said property, the said coupons and money, and in many times offered to do so, but the defendant always refused to receive the same. That the plaintiff has the right, under the Constitution of the United States, to pay his said taxes to the said defendant in the said coupons and money, and that this right is secured to him by the Constitution of the United States. That when the defendant refused to receive the said coupons and money in payment of the taxes so due as aforesaid by the plaintiff, he did so under color of and by the command of an Act of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, approved January 26, 1882, entitled 'An Act to Provide for the More Efficient Collection of the Revenue, to Support Government, Maintain the Public Schools, and to Pay Interest on the Public Debt,' which Act forbids collectors of revenue to said State to receive in payment thereof anything except gold, silver, United States treasury notes, and national bank currency, and that when he so levied upon the plaintiff's property he did so by virtue of and under the command of the 18th section of an Act of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, approved April 1, 1879, which Act is chapter sixty of the laws published by authority of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia for the special session of 1879, and by virtue of and under the command of other statutes enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Virginia. That the said two last mentioned Acts of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, and the other mentioned statutes of said State, commanding the defendant to levy as aforesaid upon the property of the plaintiff, are repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and are therefore void; that in refusing to receive the said coupons and money in payment of said taxes, and in levying and seizing the plaintiff's property for said taxes after the plaintiff had tendered the same in payment thereof, the defendant deprived the plaintiff of a right secured to him by the Constitution of the United States, under color of statutes enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, to the damage of the plaintiff one hundred dollars ($100), and therefore he brings this suit."

*Head notes by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

To this declaration a general demurrer was filed and sustained, and judgment rendered accordingly for the defendant. To reverse that judgment the present writ of error is prosecuted.

The sixteenth clause of section 629, Rev. Stats., defining the original jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of the United States, gives to them cognizance, without reference to the sum or value in controversy, or the citizenship of the parties, "Of all suits authorized by law to be brought by any person to redress the deprivation, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, custom or usage of any State, of any right, privilege or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States, or of any right secured by any law providing for equal rights of citizens of the United States, or of all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States."

Similar jurisdiction is conferred upon District Courts by the twelfth clause of section 563, R. S.

Section 1979, Rev. Stats., provides that "Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom or usage of any State or Territory, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States, or other person within the jurisdiction thereof, to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress."

These three provisions constituted the first section of the Act of April 20, 1871, entitled "An Act to Enforce the Provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and for Other Purposes." 17 Stat. at L., 13. In that section, the language conferring jurisdiction in the courts was as follows: [321]

Such proceeding to be prosecuted in the several District or Circuit Courts of the United States, with and subject to the same rights of appeal, review upon error, and other remedies provided in like cases in such courts, under the provisions of the Act of the ninth of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, entitled "An Act to Protect All Persons in the United States in Their Civil Rights, and to Furnish the Means of Their Vindication," and the other remedial laws of the United States which are in their nature applicable in such cases.

The second section of the Act here referred to, of April 9, 1866, 14 Stat. at L., 27, provided "That any person who, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation or custom, shall subject, or cause to be subjected, any inhabitant of any State or Territory, to the deprivation of any right secured or protected by this Act, or to different punishment, pains or penalties on account of such person having, at any time, been held in a condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, or by reason of his color or race, than is prescribed for the punishment of white persons, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court."

The question presented in this record is whether the facts stated in the plaintiff's declaration constitute a cause of action within the terms of section 1979, Revised Statutes; that is, whether he shows himself, within its meaning, to have been subjected by the defendant, under cover of a statute of a State, to the deprivation of a right, privilege or immunity secured by the Constitution.

The acts charged against the defendant are, that he refused to receive from the plaintiff the coupons tendered in payment of taxes, and thereafter proceeded to levy upon and take his property for the purpose of collecting such taxes in money. The rights alleged to be violated are the right to pay taxes in coupons instead of [322] in money, and, after a tender of coupons, the immunity from further proceeding to collect such taxes as though they were delinquent. These rights the plaintiff derives from the contract with the State, contained in the Act of March 28, 1879, and the bonds and coupons issued under its authority.

How and in what sense are these rights secured to him by the Constitution of the United States? The answer is, by that provision, article 1, section 10, which forbids any State to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts That constitutional provision, so far as it can be said to confer upon, or secure to, any person, any individual rights, does so only indirectly and incidentally. It forbids the passage by the States of laws such as are described. If any such are nevertheless passed by the Legislature of a State, they are unconstitutional, null and void. In any judicial proceeding necessary to vindicate his rights under a contract, affected by such legislation, the individual has a right to have a judicial determination, declaring the nullity of the attempt to impair its obligation. This is the only right secured to him by that clause of the Constitution. But of this right the plaintiff does not show that he has been deprived. He has simply chosen not to resort to it. The right to pay his taxes in coupons, and the immunity from further proceedings, in case of a rejected tender, are not rights directly secured to him by the Constitution, and only so indirectly as they happen in this case to be the rights of contract which he holds under the laws of Virginia. And the only mode in which that constitutional security takes effect is by judicial process to invalidate the unconstitutional legislation of the State, when it is set up against the enforcement of his rights under his contract. The mode in which Congress has legislated in aid of the rights secured by that clause of the Constitution, is, as is pointed out with clearness and fullness in the opinion of the court in the Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S., 3-12 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 835-840], by providing for a review on writ of error to the judgments of the state courts, in cases where they have failed properly to give it effect, and by conferring jurisdiction upon the Circuit Courts by the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, 18 Stat. at L., 470, of all cases arising under the Constitution and laws [323] of the United States, where the sum or value in dispute exceeds $500. Congresss has provided no other remedy for the enforcement of this right.

It might be difficult to enumerate the several descriptions of rights secured to individuals by the Constitution, the deprivation of which, by any person, would subject the latter to an a tion for redress under section 1979, Rev. Stat and, fortunately, it is not necessary to do so this case. It is sufficient to say that the de laration now before us does not show a cau of action within its terms.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is accor ingly affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Dissenting: Mr. Chief Justice Waite a Justices Miller, Bradley and Gray. S opinion, post, 207.

Cited—114 U. S., 324.

J. ADAIR PLEASANTS, Appt.,
v.
SAMUEL C. GREENHOW, Treasurer of t CITY OF RICHMOND.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 323, 324.)

*This case falls within the decision in Carter Greenhow (ante, 202).

[No. 941.]

Submitted Dec. 1, 1884. Decided Apr. 20, 18

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the U ed States for the Eastern District of V ginia.

The history and facts of the case appear the opinion of the court. See, also, the prec ing case of Carter v. Greenhow, ante, 185, a the dissenting opinion, post, 207.

Messrs. William L. Royall, Daniel Chamberlain, Wager Swayne and W B. Hornblower, for appellant.

Mr. F. S. Blair, Atty-Gen. of Virginia, appellee.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the op ion of the court:

This is a bill in equity filed by the appellan citizen of Virginia, praying that the defenda Greenhow, Treasurer of the City of Richmo may be perpetually enjoined from taking ste by distraint of the complainant's property collect certain taxes claimed by the defend to be due to the State of Virginia, amount to $36.25, but for which the bill avers the c plainant tendered in payment the exact amo thereof, for a part, coupons cut from bond sued by the State under the Act of March 1871, and part in money.

On demurrer to the bill, it was dismissed the Circuit Court for want of jurisdiction, amount in controversy being less than $ and the complainant has brought this app

It is sought to maintain the jurisdiction this case on the ground that the suit is aut ized by section 1979, Revised Statutes, ju diction to entertain which is conferred by sixteenth clause of section 629, R. S.

The case comes within the decision just dered in Carter v. Greenhow [ante, 202], a governed by it. It is not, in our opinion, su suit as is contemplated by the sections of Revised Statutes referred to.

*Head note by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

As the sum or value in controversy does not exceed $[illegible], the suit cannot be maintained as a case arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, provided for in the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, 18 Stat. at L., 470. The bill was, therefore, rightly dismissed.

The decree of the Circuit Court is accordingly affirmed.

Transcript. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Dissenting, Mr. Ch. J. Waite and Justices Miller, Bradley and Gray. See opinion, post, [illegible].

MORTON MARYE, Auditor of the STATE OF VIRGINIA, ET AL., Appts.,

v.

EDWIN PARSONS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 325-330.)

Contract right of coupon holder under Act of Virginia of March 30, 1871—bill calling for decree declaring merely an abstract right does not lie.

The contract right of a coupon holder under the Virginia Act of March 30, 1871, whereby his coupons are receivable in payment of taxes, can be executed only by a taxpayer; and a bill in equity for an injunction to restrain tax collectors from refusing to receive them, when tendered in payment of taxes, will not lie in behalf of a coupon holder who does not allege himself to be also a taxpayer. Such a bill calls for a decree declaring merely an abstract right, and does not show any breach of the contract, or other ground of relief.

[No. 1278.]

Argued Mar. 26, 27, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See, also, the case of Poindexter v. Greenhow, ante, 185, and the dissenting opinion, post, 207.

Messrs. P. S. Blair, Atty-Gen. of Virginia, Walter R. Staples and A. H. Garland, for appellants.

Messrs. Richard L. Maury, Wager Swayne and Daniel H. Chamberlain, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellee, who was complainant below, a citizen of New York, filed his bill in equity, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia, against Morton Marye, described as Auditor of the Commonwealth of Virginia; Samuel C. Greenhow, Treasurer of the City of Richmond; A. L. [illegible], Treasurer of the City of Norfolk, and V. G. Dunnington, Treasurer of the City of Lynchburg; R. B. Munford, Commissioner of Revenue for the City of Richmond; Charles W. Price, for the City of Lynchburg, and Charles D. Langley, for the City of Norfolk, all citizens of Virginia.

The complainant avers in his bill that he is the owner of overdue coupons to the amount of $[illegible], cut from bonds of the State of Virginia issued under the Act of March 30, 1871, which coupons are receivable, by the terms of that Act, in payment, at and after maturity, for all taxes, debts and demands due the State. A list of these coupons, described by the numbers and amounts of the bonds, is exhibited with the bill. He claims that these coupons [326] constitute a contract with the State, by which it agreed to pay the amount of each to the holder at maturity; and, second, in case of default, that the holder should have the right to assign or transfer the same to any taxpayer or other debtor of the State, with the quality of being received for taxes and other demands due the State, and with the guaranty that the State would receive them specifically in payment pro tanto for any such taxes and demands, and that they should be accepted by any of her tax collectors from any of her taxpayers or debtors in discharge and payment of such taxes or other dues.

The defendants to the bill, it is alleged, are officers of the State, charged severally with the collection of certain taxes and license fees and other dues to the State; and it is charged that, in pursuance of certain statutes passed since the Act of March 30, 1871, and the issue of the bonds and coupons under it, they are forbidden to receive these and similar coupons in payment of taxes and other dues to the State, which statutes, it is averred, impair the obligation of the contract between the State and the holder of its coupons, and are accordingly in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and are null and void; but that, nevertheless, the defendants, as officers of the State, as is publicly known, habitually refuse to accept coupons when tendered by taxpayers, in payment of taxes and other dues to the State, with the collection of which they are severally charged, and the General Assembly of Virginia has also passed statutes repealing all laws which provided any remedy for the enforcement of the right to have them so received.

The bill then proceeds as follows:

"And your petitioner furthermore shows that, confiding in his right to a specific performance of said contract, and in his title to equitable relief, should the same be denied, he hath made arrangements with sundry taxpayers of Virginia to use his above coupons in payment of their taxes and license taxes now due, by which arrangement, if the said coupons can be used without delay or difficulty, he will receive nearly par therefor, and thus be able to have his coupons collected. But, unless they [327] are so accepted in payment when tendered, the said taxpayers will not use them at all, because they are compelled to pay their taxes forthwith under heavy penalties, and to obtain their licenses immediately, or cease from business, so that, if the collectors of these taxes continue to refuse to accept these coupons, and so render necessary an appeal to the courts, and a separate action by each taxpayer upon each tender, such refusal will be tantamount to an utter destruction of the rights of your petitioner, because delays will thus occur which the taxpayers cannot submit to for the above named reasons and others, and thus your petitioner will be deprived of the benefit of the arrangements he has made, as well as of all opportunity of having his coupons so used at any time save in small amounts and at rare intervals."

*Good note by Mr. Justice MATTHEWS.

The prayer for relief is as follows:

"In tender consideration whereof, and inasmuch as your petitioner is without adequate relief save in a court of equity, wherein such matters are properly cognizable, and inasmuch as he will suffer great and irreparable loss and damage, exceeding $500 in amount, unless relief is afforded him immediately, and the above named officers are required to perform specifically the contract aforesaid, and receive his said coupons in payment of all or any of the dues and taxes above named immediately upon their being tendered therefor by any taxpayer or applicant for a license, and to avoid a multiplicity of suits and prevent an obstruction of justice, he prays that Morton Marye, Auditor of Virginia, Samuel C. Greenhow, A. L. Hill, and V. G. Dunnington, Treasurers of the Cities of Richmond, Norfolk and Lynchburg, respectively, and R. B. Munford, Charles D. Langley and Charles W. Price, Commissioners of the Revenue for said cities, respectively, be made parties defendant hereto, with apt words to charge them, and may be required on oath to answer fully the allegations hereof.

"And that the said defendants, their assistants, clerks and agents, be required and compelled to specifically perform the said coupon contract according to its legal tenor and effect, and to accept your orator's said coupons, or [328] any of them, from any taxpayer presenting them or any of them in payment of his taxes, license taxes, or other dues, and to receipt therefor, or certify the payment and deposit thereof, in cases of applications for license, in precisely the same form and with precisely the same force and effect as they would do if said tender, payment, or deposit were made in money. And that your honors will decree said coupons to be genuine, legal coupons, legally receivable for all taxes, debts and demands due the State of Virginia, and especially for all license taxes or assessments by whatever name the same may be called. And to the end that your orator may have full relief in the premises, he also prays that a preliminary restraining order and injunction may be issued without delay, enjoining and restraining the said defendants, their assistants, clerks and agents, and each and every one of them, from refusing to accept any of the coupons named in the Exhibit A herewith, in full payment pro tanto of the taxes, license taxes, or other dues, due by any taxpayer to the State who may tender the same in payment thereof, and enjoining and restraining them from refusing to execute and deliver forthwith to such taxpayer his tax bill, duly receipted, or to an applicant for a license, a certificate that the amount of coupons tendered by such applicant has been deposited with him in payment of the tax or deposit required or assessed for said license, and from refusing, immediately upon the presentation of such certificate, to grant and issue the license applied for to such applicant, all in the same manner, and to have precisely the same force and effect as if said payments were made in coin or currency."

There is also a prayer for general relief.

There was a final decree on bill, answer, replication and proofs, granting the injunction as prayed for, and the defendants appealed.

This bill is without precedent, and should have been dismissed. It is a clear case, as stated, of damnum absque injuria. So far as the co tract with the complainant was that the Sta should pay to him his coupons at maturit there is, no doubt, a breach; but he asks no r lief as to that, for there is no remedy by suit compel the State to pay its debts. So far as t contract was to receive the coupons of the co plainant in payment of taxes and other dues the State, there is no breach, for he does not a lege that any of them have been tendered any taxpayer or debtor to the State in payme of taxes or other dues; nor that there has bee a refusal on the part of any tax collector, other officer of the State charged with the co lection and receipt of taxes and dues to the Sta to receive them in payment therefor. Perso ally the complainant has no right to offer the for such purpose, for he owes no taxes or oth debt to the State. There is nothing shown the bill by which he is prevented from tran ferring them to others who would have th legal right to use them in that way, except tha being discredited for such uses by the previo refusals of the officers of the State to receiv other but similar coupons, the complainant ca find no one willing to purchase them from hi at a reasonable price for such purposes. Th damage is not actionable, because it is not direct and legal consequence of a breach of th contract, and is not distinguishable from th damage any creditor might suffer from th known inability or unwillingnes of his debto to perform their obligations. Such discred might, and often does, result in the bankruptc and financial ruin of the creditor, but no actio lies to recover damages for the consequenti loss, which the law does not connect with th default, as cause and effect. To enable th complainant to avail himself of the benefit his contract with the State, to receive his co pons in payment of taxes, he must first assig them to some one who has taxes to pay, as has not; but when he does so, by the assig ment, he has lost his interest in the contract an his right to demand its performance, all rig to which he has transferred with the coupon It is only when in the hands of taxpayers or other debtors that the coupons are receivab in payment of taxes and debts due to the Stat

The bill as framed, therefore, calls for a de laration of an abstract character, that the co tract set out requiring coupons to be receive in payment of taxes and debts due to the Sta is valid; that the statutes of the General A sembly of Virginia impairing its obligatio are contrary to the Constitution of the Unite States, and therefore void; and that it is th legal duty of the collecting officers of the Sta to receive them when offered in payment such taxes and debts.

But no court sits to determine questions law in thesi. There must be a litigation upo actual transactions between real parties, grov ing out of a controversy affecting legal or equ table rights as to person or property. All que tions of law arising in such cases are judicial determinable. The present is not a case of th description.

The decree of the Circuit Court is according reversed and the cause is remanded, with directio to dismiss the bill; and it is so ordered

True Copy. Test:

James H. McKinney, Clerk, Sup. Court U.

Thomas Poindexter, Plff. in Err., v. Samuel C. Gwathmey, Treasurer of the City of Richmond, Virginia. No. 588. [Reported ante, 185.]

William L. White, Plff. in Err., v. Samuel C. Gwathmey. No. 589. [Reported ante, 199.]

Samuel S. Carter, Plff. in Err., v. Samuel C. Gwathmey. No. 590. [Reported ante, 202.]

S. Brown Allen, Auditor of Public Accounts of the State of Virginia, et al., Appts., v. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co. No. 826. [Reported ante, 200.]

J. Adair Pleasants, Appt., v. Samuel C. Gwathmey, Treasurer of the City of Richmond. No. 861. [Reported ante, 204.]

R. R. Chaffin, Plff. in Err., v. William Taylor. No. 1260. [Reported ante, 198.]

Marye, Auditor of the State of Virginia, et al., Appts., v. Edwin Parsons. No. [illegible] [Reported ante, 205.]

Mr. Justice Bradley, dissenting in all of the above entitled cases.

The Chief Justice and Justices Miller, Gray and Strong dissent from the opinions and judgments of the majority of the court in which they sustain the claims of the holders of coupons against the State of Virginia, and I have been requested to state the grounds on which our dissent is based. And, first, those which apply to the case of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. This company is a corporation of the State of Maryland, and operates, as lessee, certain railroads situated in Virginia. It filed a bill in equity in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia, alleging a tender of coupons in payment of taxes due upon the railroads in its possession, and praying for a decree declaring that such tender with a deposit of the coupons in court amounted to payment, and that the proceedings of the auditor in imposing a penal assessment for pretended non-payment of the taxes were void, and that an injunction be issued to restrain the treasurer from seizing or selling any of the property of the company for the said taxes.

The fundamental ground of our dissent is, that the proceeding, and all the other proceedings on those coupons brought here for our review, are virtually suits against the State of Virginia to compel a specific performance by the State of her agreement to receive the said coupons in payment of all taxes, dues and demands. However just such a proceeding may seem in the abstract, or however willing courts might be to entertain it if it were constitutional, we, looking at the case as it really is, we regard it as directly repugnant to the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution, which declares that "The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity commenced or prosecuted against any one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State."

The counsel for the bondholders press upon us the notion that provision of the Constitution which declares that no State shall pass any law impairing the obligation of a contract, and have shown that the laws passed by the Legislature of Virginia forbidding the receipt of coupons between the passage of the Act of 1871 by which they were made receivable, are unconstitutional and absolutely void, and that no officer or tax collector of the State is bound to regard, but, on the contrary, each is bound to disregard them. So that we have one provision of the Constitution set up against the other, and are asked to enforce that relating to contracts by regarding the individual officers as the real parties proceeded against, and ignoring the fact that, in the matter of receiving coupons in payment of taxes, the officers only represent the State. By this technical device it is supposed that the Eleventh Amendment may be evaded. In our opinion this is not a sound or fair interpretation of the Constitution. If the contract clause and the Eleventh Amendment come into conflict, the latter has paramount force. It was adopted as an amendment to the Constitution, and operates as an amendment of every part of the Constitution to which it is at any time found to be repugnant. Every amendment of a law or constitution revokes, alters or adds something. It is the last declared will of the law-maker, and has paramount force and effect. The States became dissatisfied with certain parts of the Constitution as construed by the courts, whereby, in a manner not anticipated, they were subjected to be dragged into court like a common delinquent at the suit of individuals. They demanded that this should be changed, and it was changed by the Eleventh Amendment. The language of the Constitution was not changed, but it became subject and subordinate to the paramount declaration of the amendment. The Constitution still de- [332] clares that no State shall pass any law impairing the obligation of a contract; but the effect of the amendment is that, even if a State should pass a law impairing the validity of its own contract, no redress can be had for the enforcement thereof against the State in the Federal Courts. In other words, in consequence of the amendment, no State can be coerced into a fulfillment of its contracts or other obligations to individuals by the instrumentality of the federal judiciary. It is true, it cannot proceed against them contrary to its contract; but, on the other hand, it cannot be proceeded against on its contract. All those who deal with a State have full notice of this fundamental condition. They know, or are bound to know, that they must depend upon the faith of the State for the performance of its contracts, just as if no Federal Constitution existed, and cannot resort to compulsion unless the State chooses to permit itself to be sued.

Moreover, the Eleventh Amendment is not intended as a mere formula of words, to be slurred over by subtle methods of interpretation, so as to give it a literal compliance, without regarding its substantial meaning and purpose. It is a grave and solemn condition, exacted by sovereign States, for the purpose of preserving and vindicating their sovereign right to deal with their creditors and others propounding claims against them, according to their own views of what may be required by public faith and the necessities of the body politic. We have no right, if we were disposed, to fritter away the substance of this solemn stipulation by any neat and skillful manipulation of its words. We are bound to give it its full and substantial meaning and effect. It is only thus that all public instruments should be construed.

Now, what is the object of all this litigation which fills our courts in reference to the Virginia bonds and coupons, but an attempt, through the medium of the Federal Courts, to coerce the State of Virginia into a fulfillment of her contract? To enforce a specific performance of her agreement? It is nothing less. That is the object of the bill in the case of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. That [333] is the object of the bill of Parsons against the State Auditor and others. That is also the object of those actions of detinue and trespass which are brought against the collectors of Richmond and other places. Injunctions are sought, mandamuses are sought, damages are sought, for the sole purpose of enforcing a specific performance of the engagement made by the State by the Act of 1871, to receive the coupons of its bonds issued under that Act in payment of taxes and other dues to the State.

There is no question about the validity of the taxes. They are admittedly due. The officer is entitled to collect them; his authority is undisputed. The coupons are tendered in payment, not as money, for they have no quality of money, but as a set-off, which, as is insisted, the State has agreed to allow. The taxpayer stands on this agreement. That is the situation; and that is the whole of it. He stands on the agreement and seeks to enforce it. All suits undertaken for this end are, in truth and reality, suits against the State, to compel a compliance with its agreement.

A set-off is nothing but a cross action, and can no more be enforced against a State without its consent than a direct action can be. When set-offs are allowed against the sovereign, it is always by virtue of some express statute.

It is argued, however, that these coupons are not set-offs, but cash. How it can be pretended that they are cash it is difficult to comprehend. To regard them as cash would make them unconstitutional and void under that clause of the Constitution which prohibits any State from emitting bills of credit. But it is insisted that, if not cash, the State agreed that they should be received as cash. Then, it is the agreement which is relied on, and, as before said, it is the performance of this agreement which is sought to be enforced.

Another argument made use of to show that the coupons are not set-offs is, that by virtue of the agreement to receive them in payment they inhere in the claim for taxes as a ground of extinguishment and not as a distinct counter demand. This cannot be true, because taxes imposed by the State, or by its authority, are pure and unmixed duties, accruing year by year for the public service, without any relation to, [334] or dependence upon, collateral obligations. Whether the taxpayer has or has not any coupons is an accidental circumstance in no way affecting his taxes. If he has them, and does not tender them, his taxes must be paid; if he has them, and does tender them, they can only be tendered by way of set-off; for, as we have seen, they have no necessary connection with or relation to the taxes until they are so tendered.

The coupons, then, are tendered, and the tax collector declines to receive them. The State does not permit him to receive them. By subsequent legislation it has declared that the taxes must be paid in money, and that the tax c lector must receive nothing else in payme and that coupons, if offered, must be inve gated in a juridical way to ascertain t genuineness before they will be paid, and wl so ascertained, the provision for paying then ample. The officers have no power but w the State gives them. They act for and behalf of the State, and in no other way. sue them, therefore, because they will not ceive the coupons in payment, is virtually sue the State. The whole object is to coe the State. To say otherwise is to talk only effect, without regard to the truth of thing

If the taxes were not due, or were uncon tutional, and the collector should attempt collect them by seizing property or otherw it would be a different thing. There wo then be an invasion of the citizen's prop without lawful authority. That would b trespass on the part of the officer for whicl would be properly liable in suit. So, if taxpayer should tender the amount of his in lawful money and the collector should re it, and should proceed to distrain for the then he would also be a trespasser.

But neither of these things is this case. tax is due, undisputedly due; no money is dered; the taxpayer only offers to set off coupons, which are nothing but due bill the State, and pleads the State's collat agreement to receive them. This is not mo and bears no resemblance to money. It is ply a promise. The State, for reasons o own, declines to comply with its agreemen mode and form, and forbids its officers t ceive the coupons in payment of taxes. taxpayer insists that the State shall con with its agreement. All the proceedings i tuted by him to enforce the receipt of the pons, or to obtain redress against the colle for not receiving them, or for proceedin collect the tax, have that object alone in vie to compel the State to fulfill its agreement. is idle to say that the proceeding is against the officers. That is a mere prete The real object is to coerce the State thro its officers; to compel a specific performanc the State of its agreement. It all comes to this.

But it is said that it is not the State, bu government of the State, which declines t ceive the coupons, contrary to engagement is said that the government does not repr the State when it does an unconstitutional or passes an unconstitutional law. Whilst may be averred (as it was averred in Ta White, 7 Wall., 700 [74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 2 when the government of a state attempts to the State from its constitutional relations the United States, and to produce a disru of the fundamental bonds of the national pact; and whilst in such a case it may b missible to say that the government o State has exercised a usurped authority, mode of speech is not admissible in ordi cases of legislation and public administra A State can only act by and through its c tuted authorities, and it is represented by in all the ordinary exhibitions of sove power. It may act wrongly; it may act u stitutionally; but to say that it is not the that acts is to make a misuse of terms, [illegible] confound all just distinctions. It also [illegible] in our judgment, to inculcate the dan[illegible] doctrine that the government may be [illegible] and resisted as a usurpation whenever [illegible] in the exercise of his private judg[illegible] deems its acts to be unconstitutional.

But then, it will be asked, has the citizen [illegible] against the unconstitutional acts or [illegible] of the State? Certainly he has. There [illegible] difficulty on the subject. Whenever his [illegible] liberty or property is threatened, assailed or [illegible] by unconstitutional acts, or by an at[illegible] to execute unconstitutional laws, he may [illegible] himself, in every proper way, by habeas [illegible] by defense to prosecutions, by actions [illegible] on his own behalf, by injunction, by [illegible] Any one of these modes of redress, [illegible] to his case, is open to him. A citizen [illegible] in any way, be harassed, injured or de[illegible] by unconstitutional laws without having [illegible] means of resistance or redress. But [illegible] where the State or its officers moves [illegible] him. The right to all these means of [illegible] and redress against unconstitutional [illegible] and exaction is a very different [illegible] from the right to coerce the State into a [illegible] of its contracts. The one is an in[illegible] right, a right which cannot be taken [illegible] the other is never a right, but may or [illegible] be conceded by the State: and if con[illegible] may be conceded on such terms as the [illegible] chooses to impose.

[illegible] cases that are cited from the books [illegible] redress has been afforded to individ[illegible] by the courts against State action are [illegible] out of the first class, and not out [illegible] second; cases of State aggression, and [illegible] refusal to fulfill obligations. The case of [illegible] against The United States Bank was of [illegible] so was that of the Dartmouth Col[illegible] was that of New Jersey v. Wilson. So, [illegible] carefully, were those of Davis v. [illegible] and the Board of Liquidation v. Mc[illegible] although these last cases approach near[illegible] suits against a State than any others [illegible] have received the sanction of this court. [illegible] these cases the State has attempted to do [illegible] unconstitutional act injurious to the [illegible] or some act which it had entered into a [illegible] not to do; and redress was sought [illegible] such aggressive act; they, none of them, [illegible] the case of a State declining to pay a [illegible] to perform an obligation, and the party [illegible] to enforce its performance by judicial [illegible]

[illegible] the great mass of cases in which the [illegible] of mandamus and injunction have [illegible] mentioned, to compel State officers to do, [illegible] from doing, some act in which the [illegible] had an interest, they have generally [illegible] in which the law made it the duty [illegible] officers to do the act commanded, or not [illegible] the act forbidden. Those of a different [illegible], as where a remedy has been taken [illegible], have been purely cases of demands by [illegible] individual against another, and not of an [illegible] against the State.

[illegible] cases differ toto cœlo from any [illegible] They are attempts to coerce a State [illegible] judicial proceedings; as before stated, they [illegible], and nothing else. It it useless to at[illegible] ourselves by an adroit use of words, or by a train of metaphysical reasoning. We cannot, in that way, change the nature of things.

This is the first time, we believe, since the Eleventh Amendment was adopted, in which a State has been coerced by judicial proceedings at the suit of individuals in the Federal Courts. That this is such a case, seems one of the plainest propositions that can be stated.

As the observations already made apply equally to actions against the officers of the State brought to recover damages, or to recover property taken for taxes, as to bills for injunction and applications for mandamus, only a few words are necessary to be added in reference to the suit of Poindexter v. Greenhow, in which the first opinion was read, and to the trespass cases similarly situated. Those are actions brought not by citizens of another State, but by citizens of Virginia herself, in her own courts; and the highest court of Virginia has adjudged them to be untenable. Our jurisdiction is invoked to reverse this decision, and to sustain the actions.

The Eleventh Amendment, it is true, does not prohibit the extension of the judicial power of the United States to suits prosecuted against a State by its own citizens. But the evident reason of this is, that the judicial power was not granted to the United States by the original Constitution in such cases; hence, as it was not granted, it was not deemed necessary to prohibit it. It was evidently supposed that the control of all litigation against a State by its own citizens was in its own power, amongst that mass of rights which was reserved to the States and the people. It would be very strange to say that although a State cannot, in any case, be sued by a citizen of another State since the adoption of the Eleventh Amendment, yet, in a case arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, it may be sued by its own citizens. This would be to deprive the State, with regard to its own citizens, of its sovereign right of exemption from suit. [338]

It seems to us that the absurdity of this proposition is its sufficient answer. Unless the State chooses to allow itself to be sued, it cannot be sued; it has this perogative if no other. It is admitted in point of form, that it cannot be sued by the citizens of other States, or of foreign States, because of the Eleventh Amendment. The whole argument of the opinions of the majority of the court is directed to the object of showing that the State is not sued in the suits under consideration. We do not remember that it is anywhere contended that the State can be sued by its own citizens, against its own law, merely because the Eleventh Amendment does not in terms extend to that case.

In our judgment none of these suits can be maintained, for the reason that they are in substance and effect suits against the State of Virginia.

We have not thought it necessary or proper to make any remarks on the moral aspects of the case. If Virginia or any other State has the prerogative of exemption from judicial prosecution, and of determining her own public policy with regard to the mode of redeeming her obligations, it is not for this court, when considering the question of her constitutional rights, to pass any judgment upon the propriety of her conduct, on the one side or on the other.

True Copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.S.

---

[447] WESTERN ELECTRIC MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
ANSONIA BRASS AND COPPER COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 447-453.)

Patent law—patents, void when anticipated—sec. 4888, R. S.—process patent being void, product patent is also void.

1. Reissued letters patent, number 6954, for the process of compressing the coating used in the insulation of telegraph wires, is void, having been substantially anticipated by the process described in the English patents of Dundonald and Baudouin, dated January 22, 1852, and April 3, 1857.
2. Reissued letters patent number 6954, for a process, being invalid, it follows that reissued letters patent number 6955, for the product, are also invalid.
3. The scope of letters patent should be limited to the invention covered by the claim; and, though the claim may be illustrated, it cannot be enlarged by the language in other parts of the specification.
4. Under sec. 4888, R. S., an element of an invention not described in the specification, is not covered by the patent.

[No. 227.]

Argued Apr. 2, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

The history and facts of the case appear in the Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Woods:

[447] The case was a suit in equity, brought by the appellant, the Western Electric Manufacturing Company, against the Ansonia Brass and Copper Company, to restrain the infringement of two reissued letters patent, numbered 6954 and 6955, respectively, granted to the appellant as the assignee of Joseph Olmstead, both dated February 29, 1874, for improvements in insulating telegraph wires. The reissues are divi-
[448] sions of original letters patent No. 129858, dated July 23, 1872. The descriptive specifications of the two patents were identical. They differed only in the claims, the first being for a process, and the second for the product of the process.

The specification of both patents, after stating that Olmstead had invented a new and useful improvement in insulating telegraph wires, proceeded as follows:

"The method of insulating now in use consists in braiding over the wires a fibrous covering, after which it is dipped in wax, for the purpose of filling and closing its pores, and, after a subsequent scraping to remove the surplus wax, it is ready for use. This method is, however, objectionable, inasmuch as it leaves the covering in a very rough and soft condition, and fails to secure perfect insulation.

"In my improved method, after the wire has received its coating, I dip it in paraffine or wax, after which, instead of scraping off the surplus coating, I pass the whole through a suitabl machine, which compresses the covering an forces the paraffine or wax into the pores an secures perfect insulation. By so compressin the covering the paraffine or wax is forced in the pores, and the surface becomes and appear polished.

"Wire insulated in this manner is entirel impervious to the atmosphere, of greater durability, and less cumbersome than any heretofore made."

The claim of the process, patent No. 6954 was as follows: "The method of insulating tel egraph wire by first filling the pores of the cov ering and subsequently compressing this cover ing, and thereby polishing its surface, substan tially as described."

The claim of the product, patent No. 6955 was: "An insulated telegraph wire, the cover ing of which has its pores filled and its surfac polished, substantially as described."

The defendant denied in its answer that Olm stead was the first and original inventor of th improvement described in the patents, or o any substantial or material part thereof, or tha the same was patentable or the subject-matte of invention, and that the alleged invention ha been previously patented by letters patent o Great Britain granted to Thomas Earl of Dun donald, dated July 22, 1851, and by letters pa tent of Great Britain granted to Felix M. Bau douin, dated April 3, 1857. The defendant als denied infringement.

The Circuit Court, on final hearing, dismisse the bill, and the plaintiff appealed.

Mr. George P. Barton, for appellant.

Messrs. O. H. Platt and William H Wooster, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion o the court:

It is clear that the two patents must stand o fall together. If the patent for the process i invalid so must be the patent for the product What we have to say will refer to the proces patent.

The alleged invention described in the paten is not for insulating telegraph wires, for tha art long antedated the original patent. Th specification disclaims as a part of the inventio the braiding of a fibrous covering over the wire and then dipping it in wax for the purpose o filling and closing the pores, and the subsequen scraping of the surplus wax from the wire The patent does not cover the material in whic the wire, after it has received its fibrous coa ing, is dipped, which may be either paraffine wax, or bitumen, or any other suitable materia The three substances mentioned had long bee used for that purpose. Nor does the paten specify or cover any device by which the pro ess is to be carried on. Any suitable machin may be used.

The process described by the patent consist therefore, simply in this: After the wire has r ceived its fibrous coating, and been dipped i paraffine, wax, or other suitable substance, th compressing and forcing of the paraffine, wa or other substance, without scraping off an part of it, into the pores of the fibrous materi by some suitable means. We think this pro ess was not new.

It was subsequently anticipated both by th process described in the patent of Dundonald and is that of Baudouin, the first dated January 2, 1842 and the other April 8, 1857. Dundonald describes his process thus:

"I also employ a bituminous material to cover and thus insulate, the conducting wires of electric telegraphs, which are intended to be laid under ground. For this purpose I employ the said bitumen, either simple or compounded of a flexible description, and pass the wire through it when it is in a melted state, then causing the wire to pass through some die or orifice, which will deprive it of all the superfluous bitumen. * * * The incasement of the wire with bitumen may also be affected by covering it with a filamentous material, which has been previously saturated with melted bitumen, and then passing the wire so covered through a heated die or orifice, so as to melt or soften the bitumen upon the filamentous material, and press the whole of the coating against the wire in such a way as to cause it to form one compact continuous covering of the wire, and thus secure its insulation."

The patent of Baudouin describes his process as follows:

"My invention relates to the preparation of conductors of electricity for electric telegraphs, using wires insulated to prevent the loss or deviation of the electric currents used for that purpose, and also in the machinery for the preparation or manufacture of such conductors. Coat the wires with bituminous or such like substances that are not liable to become hard or soft, but, on the contrary, are constantly acted on by the temperature of the atmosphere. Substances of this material in themselves are insufficient to maintain the proper protection and insulation for telegraph conductors, but when combined with other materials, such as paper, woven fabrics of cotton, silk, wool or hemp, in a particular manner, are well adapted for the purpose.

"I prefer to use three ribbons and bobbins for this purpose, the first covering of the wire being enveloped by the second in such manner that the helical junction of the first ribbon is covered by the second, and the second by the first. The wire is passed through a bath of bituminous matter, and has the superfluous matter removed by passing through suitable dies or parts to compact and smooth its surface, and render it of uniform thickness. The first and second ribbons are also passed through bituminous or other suitable matter to render them more impervious to electricity. The coated and lapped wire is passed through suitable dies to remove superfluous matter, to smooth down the laps of the ribbons, and to compress and cause their proper adhesion.

"The coated and lapped wire passes through the or smoothing holes both in entering and emerging the rotating frame; these dies or smoothers have a reciprocatory motion, the better to enable them to wipe and smooth the coated wire."

It is plain that these patents anticipate the process set out in the specification of the Olmstead process patent. They all three describe the compounding of the wax, paraffine or bituminous coating of a wire covered with the fibrous material, so as to attain the same result, namely, the insulation of the wire.

The Olmstead patent, therefore, covers an old process applied to the same subject, with no change in the manner of applying it, and with no result substantially distinct in its nature. It cannot, therefore, be a valid patent. Penn. R. R. Co. v. Truck Co., 110 U. S., 490 [Bk. 28, L. ed., 222]; Vinton v. Hamilton, 104 U. S. 485 [Bk. 26, L. ed., 807].

The fact that in the process described in the Olmstead patent the surplus wax or paraffine is not scraped off, but all that adheres to the wire is compressed against it and forms part of the covering, is relied on to distinguish that process from those of Dundonald and Baudouin. But the Dundonald process does not differ in this respect from that of Olmstead, for in the Dundonald process the whole of the coating is pressed against the wire, and is left to form the covering; and as to the Baudouin process, the difference consists merely in the use of a greater quantity of wax or paraffine to form the coating. This may be an improvement upon the Baudouin process, but it does not involve invention.

So far as the present case is concerned, another answer to this contention of the appellant is, that, in this respect, the defendant follows the Baudouin, and not the Olmstead process, by scraping off the superfluous material.

It was insisted in argument, by appellant's counsel, that one of the features of the process [452] described in the Olmstead patent was the allowing of the wax or paraffine covering to cool before compressing it upon the wire, and as this was not done in the Dundonald or Baudouin process, they did not anticipate the Olmstead process. But neither the specification nor claim of the Olmstead patent mentions, as a part of the process, the cooling of the wax or paraffine coating before compressing it upon the wire. The appellant's counsel, however, contends that it must be considered a part of the process, because the polished appearance of the surface of the covering described in the specification is the result of allowing the paraffine or wax to cool before compressing it upon the wire. But, clearly, a patentee cannot claim the benefit of an element of his invention thus vaguely and indefinitely hinted at. The law in force when the patent of Olmstead was issued (Act of July 8, 1870 [16 Stat. at L., 201], section 4888, Revised Statutes) requires that "Before any inventor shall receive a patent for his invention or discovery he shall file in the Patent Office a written description of the same, and of the manner and process of making, constructing, compounding and using it, in such full, clear, concise and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art or science to which it appertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make, construct, compound, or use the same, and he shall particularly point out and distinctly claim the part, improvement or combination which he claims as his invention or discovery." It is clear that if the patentee intended to include the cooling of the wax or paraffine before compressing it upon the wire, he has failed to describe in his specification that element of his invention, as required by the statute. Instead of describing the process he mentions a quality of the product, and asks the court to infer the process from that quality. Such a vague and inverted method of description is not a compliance with the statute. That part of the alleged invention is not even referred to in the most distant manner in the claim. It has been held by this court that "the scope of letters patent should be limited to the invention covered by the claim; and, though the claim may be illustrated, it cannot be enlarged by the language in [453] other parts of the specification. R. R. Co. v. Mellon, 104 U. S., 112 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 639]. The element of the process under consideration cannot, therefore, be held to be covered by the patent. The contention that the patentee intended to include it in his process is evidently an afterthought.

The result of the views expressed is that both the patents sued on are void.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[464]

JOHN S. CAVENDER, Appt.,
v.
ROBERT S. CAVENDER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 464-474.)

Trusts—removal of trustee for neglect to invest trust funds—pleading and practice.

1. Where the acts or omissions of a trustee are such as to show a want of reasonable fidelity, a court of equity will remove him.
2. Where trust funds are to be invested by the trustee, neglect to invest constitutes of itself a breach of trust, and is ground for removal.
3. Where one person is to pay and receive the same money, and nothing remains but to make proper entries in his accounts, the law will consider that as done which ought to be done.
4. A demurrer to a bill setting up a trust will not be sustained on the ground that the nature of the trust is not sufficiently set forth, when the facts stated are sufficient, if true, to enable the court to act intelligently.
5. An answer which states material facts omitted from the bill, waives any objection to such omission.
6. A defendant to a bill, who states in his answer under oath the provisions of a writing which is presumed to be in his possession, cannot complain that the court acted upon his admission without the production of the writing.

[No. 235.]

Argued Apr. 6, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

The history and facts of the case appear in the Statement by Mr. Justic Woods:

Robert S. Cavender, the appellee, was the [464] plaintiff in the Circuit Court. He stated his case in the bill of complaint substantially as follows:

John Cavender, deceased, by his last will and testament, dated May 6, 1858, and probated in the Probate Court of the City, then county, of St. Louis and State of Missouri, February 4, 1862, made and constituted the defendant, John S. Cavender, executor of his estate, and, after payment of debts, as therein mentioned, bequeathed one half of the remainder of his estate to John S. Cavender aforesaid, as trustee, to hold the same in trust for the use and benefit of the plaintiff during the term of his natural life, and by said will directed him to invest the same in real or personal securities, and to pay over the rents, profits, issues and incomes thereof to the plaintiff semi-annually, at the end of every half year, during his lifetime.

The Probate Court, by its order and decree made on October 5, 1878, found in the hands of the defendant, as such executor, the sum of $17,169.49 belonging to the trust estate, and directed him to pay over the same to himself as trustee; and afterwards, on December 3, 1878, the defendant executed his bond as trustee, with sureties, in the penalty of $25,000 conditioned for the faithful execution of his trust. On April 22, 1879, John S. Cavender, trustee, filed in the Probate Court his written receipt, whereby he acknowledged that he had received from John S. Cavender, executor, the sum of $17,169.49; and thereupon prayed for his discharge as executor of the said estate, which, on the same day, the court granted.

The bill then averred that if the said sum of $17,169.49 had thereafter been properly invested by the trustee, as, by the terms of the will, it became his duty to invest the same, it would have fairly yielded an annual income of 6 per cent, which was, by the terms of the will payable semi-annually.

It further alleged that, by the obligations assumed by John S. Cavender, as trustee of the plaintiff under the will, it became his duty to set apart and invest in safe and permanent securities said trust fund so acknowledged to have been received by him, in order that it might remain intact, and yield a regular and certain income to the plaintiff from year to year. But the bill averred that Cavender had been guilty of a gross breach of his trust; that he had never set apart or invested any sum whatever in securities of any description, or in property or assets of any sort, as a trust fund for the benefit of plaintiff, or deposited in bank or elsewhere any sum of money to the credit of the trust estate, but, on the contrary, had converted to his own use and dissipated the whole of the trust estate and all the assets and money belonging thereto, except certain lands in the State of Illinois; and that the income for the first six months from the trust funds was due, had been demanded, and was unpaid at the commencement of the suit.

The bill further averred that there were large tracts of land in the State of Illinois belonging to the estate of John Cavender, the proceeds and income of which were, under his will, part of the trust estate; that the profits of said lands and the proceeds of their sale would probably be large, which John S. Cavender would be likely to convert to his own use.

The prayer of the bill was, that Cavender might be removed from his office of trustee and a proper person appointed in his stead, whom he might be ordered to pay over the said sum of $17,169.49, with the interest due thereon.

A demurrer was filed to the bill and overruled by the court.

Thereupon Cavender answered, admitti that John Cavender, deceased, by his last will and testament, dated and probated as specified in the bill, did constitute the defendant executor of his estate, and bequeathed one half the residue of his estate, after the payment of debts to the defendant as trustee, to hold said money in trust for the use and benefit of complainant during complainant's natural life, to be invested in real or personal securities, and the income thereof only to be paid over to the complainant, semi-annually, during his lifetime" but averring that, by the terms of said will after the lapse successively of the life estates of complainant and Charlotte M., his wife, the trust property aforesaid, such property must descend to defendant and his heirs, in fee simple, forever discharged of the trust aforesaid.

The answer also admitted "that the Probate Court of the City of St. Louis, by its judgment of October 5, 1878, found to be due, and ordered to be paid, by this defendant, as executor to the defendant as trustee, the sum of $17,169.49, and that thereafter the defendant made and executed his bond as such trustee, with good and sufficient sureties, whereby he bound himself to the State of Missouri, to the use of all persons beneficially interested, in the penal sum of $25,000, and conditioned for the faithful performance by this defendant as such trustee of the trust created by the provisions of said will as aforesaid," but denied "that on the 23d day of April, 1879, as alleged in said bill he filed as such trustee in said Probate Court his written receipt, whereby he acknowledged to have received from himself as executor the said sum of $17,169.49, and was thereafter on April 30, 1879, granted his discharge as executor by said Probate Court," and averred the fact to be that he had "never received as trustee, at the date of said alleged receipt, or at any other time, from himself as executor aforesaid, or from any source, the sum of $17,169.49, or any other sum whatsoever, on account of said trust estate," and denied that any income had accrued in his hands from said trust estate to which the plaintiff was entitled, and admitted that no part of such income had ever been paid to the plaintiff.

The answer admitted that Cavender held the funds referred to in the bill, and that their proceeds and income should be set aside for the benefit of said trust estate, but denied that he would be likely to convert and absorb the same, and denied that he had mismanaged the trust estate.

The plaintiff filed the general replication to the answer, and, upon the final hearing, before the admissions of the answer, offered the following evidence:

First. A certified copy of the original receipt of the defendant, on file in the Probate Court of the City of St. Louis, which was in the words and figures following:

"In the Probate Court, City of St. Louis. In the matter of the estate of John Cavender, deceased. St. Louis, April 23, 1879. I, John S. Cavender, trustee of Robert S. Cavender and Caroline under the last will and testament of John Cavender, deceased, acknowledge that I have received from John S. Cavender, executor of said deceased the sum of seventeen thousand one hundred and sixty-nine and $\frac{49}{100}$ dollars, ordered to be paid to me by said Probate Court. Entered of record in the records of said court on the 5th day of October, 1878. John S. Cavender, Trustee."

Second. A certified copy of a paper writing, on file in the same Probate Court, signed by W. G. Eliot, George Partridge, E. S. Rouse and John S. Cavender, entitled "In the matter of the estate of John Cavender, deceased," and dated St. Louis, April 23, 1879, in which it was recited that John S. Cavender, executor of the last will of John Cavender, deceased, had, on October 5, 1878, been ordered by the said Probate Court to pay over to himself, as trustee of Robert S. Cavender, under the last will of John Cavender, the sum of $17,169.49, and after such order the said John S. Cavender, trustee, as principal, and the said Eliot, Partridge and Rouse, as sureties, executed and filed their bond, dated December 3, 1878, in the penalty of $25,000, conditioned for the faithful execution of his trust by said trustee, and that said John S. Cavender had given to himself, as said executor, his receipt, dated April 22, 1879, for the sum of $17,169.49, and, on the strength of said receipt as a voucher, was about to apply to the said Probate Court for his discharge as such executor. The writing then proceeded as follows: [468]

"Now we, William G. Eliot, George Partridge, and Edward S. Rouse, acknowledge, as such sureties, that said John S. Cavender, has, in law, received, and is now bound, as such trustee, for said sum of seventeen thousand one hundred and sixty-nine and $\frac{49}{100}$ dollars, as for cash actually received, and that the said bond is still in full force, and binding upon the undersigned, to all intents and purposes, in contemplation of law, touching the custody of said fund, as for cash actually received, and the execution of said trust concerning the same.

"And John S. Cavender, on his own part, as trustee and principal in said bond, admits the full and binding force of the above admission."

Third. A certified copy of the order of the Probate Court discharging John S. Cavender as executor of the estate of John Cavender, deceased, which was dated April 30, 1879, and was based on the ground that John S. Cavender had filed a receipt, signed by himself as trustee, acknowledging the receipt from himself, as executor, of the sum of $17,169.49, and was as follows:

"Estate of John Cavender.

Now comes John S. Cavender, executor, and files the receipt dated April 22, 1879, given by John S. Cavender, trustee of Robert S. Cavender, and Caroline M. Cavender to said executor, for seventeen thousand one hundred and sixty-nine $\frac{49}{100}$ dollars, ordered by this court October 5, 1878, to be paid by said executor to said trustee, and it appearing to the court that on the 9th day of December, 1878, said trustee filed his bond as trustee in the St. Louis Circuit Court, conditioned for the faithful execution of the trust vested in him under the will of said John Cavender, deceased, with William G. Eliot, George Partridge, and Edward S. Rouse, as sureties; and said trustee, with said sureties, having, on the 23d day of April, 1879, filed in this court their written ad [469] mission that said trustee has in law received and is bound for said sum of seventeen thousand one hundred and sixty-nine $\frac{48}{100}$ dollars, as for cash actually received, and that said bond is in full force as to the custody of said sum as for cash actually received, and for the execution of the trust touching the same; and said executor, asking for his discharge on the strength of said receipt and admission, and said Robert S. and Caroline M. Cavender, having by counsel, T. A. Post, appeared to said motion for discharge, and submitting the same on their part without argument or objection; now, therefore, in view of the premises, the court being in possession of the evidence, and having fully considered the same, doth order that said John S. Cavender be, and he is hereby, finally discharged as such executor."

All the foregoing evidence was received by the court without objection by the defendant.

Fourth. The deposition of J. S. Fullerton, who testified that money could be safely lent on real estate security in the City of St. Louis, in 1878 and part of 1879, at 7 per cent per annum, and in the latter part of 1879, and since that year, at 6 per cent per annum net.

Fifth. The deposition of John S. Cavender, the defendant, who stated that he was the trus-[470] tee of Robert S. Cavender, but had made no investments for him, and that he had placed no money to the benefit of the trust fund in securities of any sort, or in bank, and had set aside no annuities for the benefit of Robert S. Cavender or the trust estate.

No proofs were offered for the defendant, and the court, upon the evidence above recited, made a decree removing John S. Cavender as trustee and appointing John M. Glover in his stead, and directing Cavender, upon demand, to pay over to Glover, trustee, the said sum of $17,169.49 and such sums of money as had been received and collected by Cavender from sales of land or otherwise since April 30, 1879, belonging to the trust fund.

From this decree John S. Cavender has brought the present appeal.

Messrs. Henry Hitchcock, Lucien Eaton, Edward C. Eliot and James S. Garland, for appellant.

Mr. Wm. A. McKenney, for appellee.

[470] Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

The first contention of the plaintiff in error is that the demurrer to the bill should have been sustained, because the nature of the trust was not therein so sufficiently set forth as to form the foundation of a decree on the part of a court of equity.

Whether the trust was fully and accurately set forth could not be known until the filing of the answer or the taking of the proofs. When the demurrer was heard, from all that then appeared, the exact provisions of the will of the testator raising the trust, and all the terms and conditions of the trust, were stated in the bill. It could not then be known whether or not there was anything more to state. What was stated showed the creation of a trust estate, the appointment of a trustee, the designation of a cestui que trust, and specific directions to the trustee in respect to his duties. The court could not assume that any of the provisions of the will relating to the subject-matter of the trus were omitted from the bill, and what was statec was sufficient, if correctly stated, to enable th court to act intelligently. The demurrer was therefore, properly overruled. But the defend ant refused to stand on his demurrer and an swered the bill. Having, as it may be fairl presumed, the will of the testator before him he undertook to set out in his answer, unde oath, the provisions of the will in respect to th trust estate and trust in question. There is n pretense that any material word or clause, i relation to the subject of the trust was omitte from the answer. It is, therefore, too late fo the defendant, on final hearing in the appellat court, to object that the provisions of the wi were not fully set out in the bill of complain If there was any defect in the statement mad in the bill, it was rendered immaterial by th statements of the answer, and is not now groun of complaint. Greenleaf v. Birth, 5 Pet., 13

A similar assignment of error to that just n ticed is, that the court erred in removing th appellee from his office of trustee without ha ing before it the will or declaration of trust fc interpretation.

But it is clear that a defendant to a bill i equity, who states in his answer under oath tl provisions of a writing, which is presumed to l in his possession, cannot complain that tl court acted upon his admission. The cou might in its discretion have refused to interpr the writing without its production. But havir acted upon the presumption that the defen ant in his answer stated truly the contents the writing, the latter cannot, on the ground th the writing itself was not put in evidence, ask reversal of the decree. Courts of equity are fr quently required to act on the admissions of tl answer without other proof. Thus, when cause is heard upon bill and answer, the decree based entirely on the admissions of the answ without other testimony. Reynolds v. Crawford ville Bk. 112 U.S., 405 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 733]; Bri kerhoff v. Brown, 7 Johns. Ch., 217; Grosvenor Cartwright, 2 Cas. Ch., 21; Perkins v. Nicho 11 Allen, 542. At all events, it does not lie the mouth of a defendant in equity to compla that the court assumed his answer made und oath to be true and decreed accordingly.

The next assignment of error is, that the c cree rendered by the Circuit Court is not jus fied by the law.

The decree rests solely on the ground alleg in the bill, of neglect of duty and mismana ment of the trust property. If these groun are sustained by the proof, the authorit are ample to justify the decree of remov For, where the acts or omissions of the trus are such as to show a want of reasonable fid ity, a court of equity will remove him. Ex pa Phelps, 9 Mod., 357; Mayor of Coventry Atty-Gen., 7 Bro. P. C., 235; Atty-Gen. Drummond, 1 Dru. & W., 358; Atty-Gen. Shore, 7 Sim., 309 n.; Ex parte Greenhous Madd., 92; Ex parte Reynolds, 5 Ves., 707; mens v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon., 171; Johnson Simpson, 9 Pa. St., 416; Ex parte Potts, 1 As 340; Buchanan v. Hamilton, 5 Ves., 722; E son v. Ellison, 6 Ves., 663; Portsmouth v. lows, 5 Madd., 450; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 J. Eq., 192; Hussey v. Coffin, 1 Allen, 3 Atty-Gen. v. Garrison, 101 Mass., 223.

The averments of the bill sufficiently charge, and the proofs establish, neglect of duty and mismanagement of the trust estate. The charge of the bill, which is distinctly admitted by the answer, is, that the Probate Court found in the hands of the appellant, executor of John Cavender, [illegible] and belonging to said trust estate, the sum of $17,169.49, and ordered him to pay over that sum to himself as trustee. The averment of the bill is sufficient to charge, and the admission of the answer sufficient to prove, the receipt by the defendant, as trustee, of the sum of money mentioned. They are conclusive evidence of the fact. For when one person is to pay money and receive the same money, and nothing remains but to enter receipts and payments in their proper accounts accordingly, the law will consider that as done which ought to be done. Thus, where a sole executor sustains the twofold character of executor and guardian the law will adjudge the ward's proportion of the property in his hands to be in his hands in the capacity of guardian, after the time limited by law for the settlement of the estate whether the final account has been passed by the Orphan's Court or not. Watkins v. State, 2 Gill. & J., [illegible]. So, where the same person is executor of an estate and guardian of a distributee, and there is nothing to show in which capacity he holds funds after payment of debts and settlement of the estate, he shall be presumed to hold them as guardian. State v. Hearst, 12 Mo., 365. See also, Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Hill (S. C. Ch.), [illegible]; Karr v. Karr, 6 Dana, 3.

But the proof that the trust fund came to the hands of the trustee does not stop with the order and decree of the Probate Court finding the money in his hands as executor, and directing its payment to himself as trustee, for it appears that he made and filed in the Probate Court his receipt as trustee for the fund, and upon the strength of that receipt procured his discharge as executor. The record of the Probate Court, put in evidence, shows these facts. We have, therefore, the admission of record of the appellant, upon which the court of probate acted, at his instance, and upon the strength of which it made an order relieving him from liability as executor, and it is binding on him, and he cannot be heard in any controversy with the appellee to deny his admission that the fund came to his hands.

It remains to inquire whether the proof sustains the charge of neglect of duty and mismanagement of the trust funds.

Having taken possession of the trust money, it became the duty of the appellant to invest them as directed by the will, if it were possible to do so. The proof shows that it was possible. The appellant admits, under oath, that he has made no investments of the trust assets, and placed no funds in securities of any sort, or in bank, and set aside no annuities for the benefit of the cestui que trust or the trust estate. His own admissions show neglect of duty and mismanagement of the trust estate.

The neglect to invest constitutes of itself a breach of trust, and is ground for removal. [illegible] v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon., 174; Lathrop v. [illegible], 22 N. J. Eq., 192.

The only defense set up in the answer of the appellant is a denial that he ever gave a receipt as trustee, or that he had been discharged as executor by the Probate Court, or that the trust fund ever came to his hands. As the facts thus denied are conclusively established by the evidence, the denial is an aggravation of the misconduct of the appellant. A trustee, into whose hands trust assets are shown [474] to have come, who not only fails to discharge any duty of the trust, but even denies that he has ever received the property, cannot successfully resist an application made to a court of equity for his removal.

The counsel for appellant say that they regret that the pleadings and evidence do not permit a full presentation of the case upon its merits. We cannot act on this vague intimation. There may be facts not disclosed which, if shown by the record, would entirely change the aspect of the case. But we must try the case as the record reveals it. Upon the cause, as presented, with no explanation vouchsafed by the appellant, it is difficult to conceive of a clearer case for the removal of a trustee and the appointment of another in his stead.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

MARY K. BURTON, Plff. in Err., [474]

v.

WEST JERSEY FERRY COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 474-477.)

Personal injuries — negligence — practice — instructions.

1. A general exception to a charge, not directing attention to particular portions objected to, raises no question for review by this court.
2. The mere failure of a steam ferry company to provide a seat for a passenger on its boat is not of itself proof of negligence.
3. Under the circumstances disclosed in this case, the jury would not have been justified in finding that proper care required the defendant to furnish seats sufficient to accommodate all passengers that its boat could safely carry, or such number of passengers as ordinarily traveled upon it.

[No. 242.]

Argued Apr. 9, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Jerome Carty, B. F. Clapp and Mayer Sulzberger, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Richard D. Dale and Samuel Dickson, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion [475] of the court:

The plaintiff in error, who was plaintiff below, took passage at Camden, New Jersey, for Philadelphia, on a ferry-boat belonging to the defendant, a New Jersey Corporation engaged in the business of transporting passengers, animals and vehicles across the Deleware between those cities. On that trip the boat was unusually crowded with passengers. The river at the time was very full of ice, and it was difficult for the boat to get across and enter the ferry slip on the Philadelphia side. The wharf on that side was reached only after repeated efforts. In the attempt to land, the boat was driven against the bridge with such force as to throw the plaintiff and a number of other persons, all of whom were standing during the passage across the river, with great violence upon the floor. The fall caused serious and, perhaps, permanent injury to the plaintiff. In this action she claims damages from the defendant upon the ground that her injuries resulted from the careless and negligent management of the ferry-boat by its agents and servants. The plaintiff made a case entitling her to go to the jury upon the issue as to the defendant's negligence. But there was, also, proof tending to show that the striking of the boat against the wharf on the Philadelphia side occurred under peculiar circumstances, and could not, perhaps, have been avoided by any diligence upon the part of the agents of the defendant.

---

NOTE.—Appeal or error—exceptions—particularity—what sufficient—insufficiency of general exceptions. See Moore v. Bank, 38 U. S. (13 Pet.), 302, note.

When the evidence was concluded, and after the parties submitted their requests for instructions, the court delivered its charge upon the whole case, reading to the jury the instructions asked by either party that were approved, and accompanying them with such observations, by way of explanation or qualifiaction, as it deemed necessary.

The third and fourth points submitted in behalf of plaintiff were overruled. They were as follows:

"Third. If the jury believe from the evidence that the defendants received the plaintiff as a passenger, and that they failed to provide her with a [476] seat, or that she was unable to obtain a seat by reason of the crowded condition of the boat, and while standing in the cabin she was, without any fault of her own, thrown down and injured by a sudden shock to the boat, then the defendants are guilty of negligence, and your verdict should be for the plaintiff.

"Fourth. If the jury believe from the evidence that the defendants received the plaintiff, a woman 67 years of age, as a passenger, and that they failed to provide her with a seat, or that she was unable to obtain a seat by reason of the crowded condition of the boat, and while standing in the cabin she was, without any fault of her own, thrown down and injured by a sudden shock to the boat, then the defendants were guilty of negligence, and your verdict should be for the plaintiff."

At the conclusion of the charge, the plaintiff, by counsel, excepted to the overruling of her third and fourth points, and, also, to "the charge and opinion" of the court. No other exceptions were taken.

1. The general exception to the charge did not direct the attention of the court to the particular portions of it to which the plaintiff objected. It, therefore, raises no question for review by this court. Conn. Life Ins. Co. v. Union Trust Co., 112 U. S., 250, 261 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 708], and auth·orities there cited.

2. The only question for determination relates to the refusal of the court to instruct the jury as indicated by the third and fourth points of the plaintiff, which involve substantially the same proposition. Those points were properly overruled. Under the theory of the case which they present, the jury—although the sudden shock to the boat, from which plaintiff's injuries immediately resulted, may have occurred without want of care or skill upon the part of the defendant's servants—would have be required to find for the plaintiff, if the defen ant failed to provide her with a seat, or if s was unable, by reason of the crowded conditi of the boat, to obtain one. In other word that the mere failure of the Company to p vide a seat for a passenger on its boat was, law and of itself, proof of negligence. It a peared in evidence that the boat was provid with seats; but it did not appear that a less nu ber was provided than was customary and s ficient for those who ordinarily preferred to seated while crossing in ferry-boats betwe Camden and Philadelphia. No circumstanc were disclosed that would have justified t jury in finding that a proper degree of ca upon the part of defendant, required it to p vide seats sufficient for the accommodation all the passengers that its boat could saf carry, or of such number of passengers as dinarily traveled upon it.

The judement is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U

JAMES B. EDMONDS ET AL., Comm sioners of the DISTRICT OF COLUMB Appts.,

v.

BALTIMORE AND POTOMAC RAI ROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 453-463.)

Washington City—right of Baltimore & P mac Railroad Company to use of streets, ject to control of Congress—construction statute.

1. The title to the streets of Washington is in United States, and the right to use them for other than the ordinary use of streets should ceed from Congress.

2. The Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Comp can occupy only such streets in the City of W ington as have been expressly designated by C gress for that purpose.

3. The said Company is without authority to c struct a lateral track from Maryland Avenue ac or along 14th Street to reach a freight depo square 253.

4. The said Company was not organized under general corporation law of the District of Colun and it derives no authority under that Act to the streets of the City of Washington.

5. The Maryland charter of the said Company not confer any power to use the streets of a cit an incident of its right to run to and from city.

[No. 1283.]

Argued Apr. 9, 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of District of Columbia.

The history and facts of the case appe the opinion of the court.

Mr. A. G. Riddle, for appellants.

Mr. Enoch Totten, for appellee:

It is the established law of this court whenever a statute authorizes the construc and operation of a railroad, the authority is cessarily implied to construct warehouses, tions and other works, and to construct tracks communicating between them and main line of the road.

Rock Creek v. Strong, 96 U. S., 276 (Bk. 2

[illegible] R. R. Co. v. U. S., 93 U. S., 453 (Bk. 23, [illegible]; see, also, Toll Bridge Co. v. R. R. Co. [illegible] 454; Black v. R. R. Co., 58 Pa. St., 249; [illegible] Co. v. R. R. Co., 2 Harr. (N. J.), 314; [illegible] v. R. R. Co., 94 Pa. St., 435; R. Co. v. [illegible], 16 Ohio St., 390; R. R. Co. v. Kip, 46 [illegible]; Protsman v. R. R. Co., 9 Ind., 469; [illegible] v. Municipality of N. O., 1 La. Ann., [illegible].

[illegible] the implied authority of a railroad company to construct its road on and over the public [illegible], see Improvement Co. v. La Crosse Co., [illegible]; R. Co. v. State, 3 Ind., 421; R. R. Co. v. [illegible], 8 C. E. Green, 157; Davis v. R. R. [illegible], 94; U. S. v. Bridge Co., 6 Mc[illegible].

[illegible] having reposed the power of selecting the site for the warehouse in the officers of the Company, and they having chosen this [illegible], it is just as firmly established as a terminus of the side track as if the Act itself had [illegible] fixed the location. This being true, [illegible] to lay the connecting side track follows from necessity.

[illegible] R. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S., 356 (Bk. 23, L. ed. [illegible]; Duncan v. R. R. Co., 94 Pa. St., 435; [illegible] v. Adams, 3 Head., 597; R. R. Co. v. [illegible] 38 Pa. St., 325; People v. Brooklyn R. Co., [illegible]; Rorer, R. R., 489; R. R. Co. v. R. [illegible] N. J. Eq., 157; Hughes v. R. R. Co., 18 [illegible], 106; R. R. Co. v. Gas Light Co., 63 [illegible]; R. R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill., 110, [illegible] v. Brownsville, 45 Tex., 88; 10 Johns., [illegible].

[illegible] Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The Railroad Company has constructed its [illegible] from Baltimore through the District of Columbia and through the City of Washington to the Potomac River at Long Bridge, on which it [illegible] that river to the Virginia side. It has done this by virtue of several Acts of Congress granting the necessary authority to do so. At the Washington end of the bridge it has purchased and now owns one of the squares of the city and part of another, numbered, in the division of the city into streets, squares and [illegible] squares 233 and 267. These squares are [illegible] by Fourteenth street, running north and south, and square 267, on its south side, [illegible] on Maryland avenue, one of the streets of the city. At the junction of Maryland avenue whose course is nearly east and west, and Fourteenth street, there is a considerable space of ground made by Water street, which follows the bank of the river, and the other two streets, which is a public highway made by the union of all these streets at that point. A map or diagram found in the record, and which the reporter will copy, is necessary to a clear understanding of the controversy. [See next page.]

The Railroad Company alleges that its increased traffic requires in the City of Washington additional accommodations for receiving, storing and transferring freight, and that it has purchased the two squares mentioned for that [illegible], and that it intends to build a freight [illegible] on square 233, as being at once convenient for the Company and more out of the way of the travel, current business and residences of the citizens than any point within reasonable distance of the line of the road. As their road is at present located lawfully on Maryland avenue, along which it touches the city end of the bridge, this allegation is probably true.

In order, however, to reach square 233 with its trains, they must depart from Maryland avenue and cross square 267 and Fourteenth street, which lies between the two squares, or they must make a curve from the avenue around the south end of square 267, and reach square 233 by the use of the public highway made by the junction of Maryland avenue, Water street and Fourteenth street, and, in so doing, depart from Maryland avenue. The [455] Company gave notice, as required law, to appellants, who, as Commissioners of the District of Columbia, are charged with the care and protection of the streets and other highways of the city, that it intended to construct a lateral track, which, leaving its main track on Maryland avenue at a point near its intersection with Thirteenth street, should cross square 267 from its east to its west side, and then crossing Fourteenth street, would reach its projected depot on square 233. The Commissioners refused to consent to this, and, fearing it would be attempted without such consent, they guarded the way across the street by police force for some time.

In this condition of affairs, the Railroad [456] Company filed its bill in chancery in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, praying an injunction against the Commissoners, to prevent them from interfering with the exercise of the right which the Company claimed of laying its track across Fourteenth street, and that court granted an injunction as prayed.

The appeal of the Commissioners from this decree brings the matter in issue before us for review. Neither the pleadings in the case, nor the relief sought by the bill, nor the decree of the court, brings into question the right of the Company to purchase squares 233 and 267, nor the right to erect on either of these a warehouse for the storage of freight. Nor does the question arise of their right to locate at that place such a depot as their business requires, nor to use it as such, if they have the right of access to it by using the streets and highways of the city for that purpose. This court does not, therefore, consider those questions, because the only point raised by the record is the right of the Company to lay in or across the streets of the city their railroad track, and use it as a means of transit for its locomotives and cars, without any express authorization by Act of Congress, or the consent of any authority representing the City of Washington or the District of Columbia.

The assertion of the existence of such a right is, to say the least, somewhat novel. It is not known to any member of this court that any railroad company, whether its cars are propelled by steam or horse-power, has ever claimed to use the streets of an incorporated city or any part of them, without express authority from some legislative body, or the authorities of the city governmennt. It would be a strange grant of power which, authorizing a railroad company to enter or even pass through a city, should leave to the company the selection, not only of its route into or through the city, but even the streets and highways over which its tracks should be laid, subject only to its sense of its own convenience and that of the people of the city. Nor does the decision of a court of justice, that the necessities of the Company demand the use of these streets, and that the cality of the depot to which the track lead selected with a due regard to the interest the whole city, make this claim of power the less remarkable. No judicial decisio cited in favor of such propositions.

The streets of Washington are largely [illegible] railroad companies whose tracks occupy their surface. There are some four or five of these companies, and their cars are propelled by horse-power and not by steam. They are not only a great convenience to the citizens, but they have become almost a public necessity. But it is not believed that a foot of all these tracks over all these streets exists otherwise than by virtue of an Act of Congress directing specifically and minutely where this shall be done. And no power exists in one of these corporations to lay a track, however short, anywhere else.

The Railroad Company now asserting this right runs its cars from the east side of the city to the west, a distance of two miles or more, through a densely populated part of the city, over a track, the location of every foot of which is prescribed with minuteness by Acts of Congress. And its principal passenger depot, located several hundred yards from the main line of its road through the city, makes this deflection from that line solely by virtue of an express Act of Congress, passed to enable the Company to do so.

It is with these well-known facts before us showing the care with which Congress has reasonably exercised the power of granting, refusing and regulating the use of the streets of Washington for railroads, that we approach the examination of the statute or statutes which are supposed to grant the enlarged power claimed by the Baltimore and Potomac Company in this instance.

The first and most important of these is the Act of Congress of February 5, 1867, 14 Stat. at L., [illegible].

After reciting that it is represented that the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company, incorporated by an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed May 6, 1853, is desirous to construct a lateral branch from its road in the District of Columbia, it is enacted that said Company shall be, and they are hereby authorized to extend into and within the District of Columbia, a lateral branch, such as the said Company shall construct or cause to be constructed, in a direction towards the said District, in connection with the railroad which they are about to locate and construct from the City of Baltimore to the Potomac River, in pursuance of their said Act of incorporation; and the said Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company are hereby authorized to exercise the same powers, rights and privileges, and shall be subject to the same restrictions in the extension and construction of the said lateral railroad into and within the said District as they have exercise or are subject to, under and by virtue of their said charter or Act of incorporation, in the extension and construction of any railroad within the State of Maryland, and shall be entitled to the same rights, compensations, benefits and immunities, in the use of the said road, and in regard thereto, as are provided in their said charter, except the right to construct any lateral road or roads within the said District from the said lateral branch or [illegible] authorized, it being expressly understood that the said Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company shall have power only to construct from the said Baltimore and Potomac Railroad one lateral road within the said District to some point or terminus within the City and County of Washington, to be determined in the manner hereinafter mentioned."

The third section of this Act, after describing the care with which the Company shall construct the road across any street or other way, adds: "But the said Company, in passing into the District aforesaid, and in constructing the said road within the same, shall enter the City of Washington at such place, and shall pass along such public street or alley to such point or terminus within said city, as may be allowed by Congress, upon presentation of survey and map of proposed location of said road; provided that the level of said location within the said city shall conform to the present graduation of the streets, unless Congress shall authorize a different level."

This provision of the original Act, under which the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad enters this city, has never been repealed or modified, as far as we are aware, and it fully asserts the purpose of Congress to retain in its own hands the right to the use of the streets of the city in regard to this Company and its road, as it has in regard to all others.

By another Act, passed March 18, 1869, 16 Stat. at L., 1, entitled as supplementary to the one above cited, it was declared "that said Company might enter the City of Washington with their railroad, and construct the same within the limits of said city on or by whichever one of the two routes herein designated the said Company may elect and determine; that is to say: [459]

"First. Beginning at the intersection of Boundary street and North Carolina avenue; thence along said North Carolina avenue to South D street, westwardly, to Virginia avenue; thence along Virginia avenue, northwestwardly, to the intersection of South C street and West Ninth street; or,

"Second. Beginning at some point on the northern shore of the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River, between South L and South M streets; thence westwardly between said streets to the intersection of Virginia avenue with South L and East Twelfth streets; thence along said Virginia avenue, northwestwardly, to South K street; thence along said South K street, westwardly, to South Fourth street; thence, by a line curving to the right, to the north bank of the canal; and thence along the said bank of the canal, northwestwardly, to Virginia avenue; thence along Virginia avenue, northwestwardly, to the intersection of South C and West Ninth streets."

Whether this was in accordance with a map or maps furnished by the Company we are not informed; probably it was. But this was wholly immaterial, as this supplemental statute was clearly made to allow the use of these streets as provided in section three of the original Act. By another Act, approved March 25, 1870, Congress authorized the Company to make some changes in the line of its road between Esta Fourth street and the terminus at the junction of C street south and Ninth street west, which change, however, is described with the same particularity as the routes above described, and by the same Act the time for the completion of the road was extended.

The next Act of Congress, approved June 21, 1870, 16 Stat. at L., 161, also entitled as amendatory of the Act of July 5, 1867, authorizes the Company to extend its road from the terminus at Ninth street, "by way of Maryland avenue, conforming to its grade, to the viaduct over the Potomac River at the City of Washington, known as the Long Bridge, and extend their tracks over said bridge and connect with any railroads constructed, or that may hereafter be constructed, in the State of Virginia." The Act then delivers over Long Bridge to the Company for its use as a railroad bridge, with conditions requiring it to be kept in good repair, and open to free use as a public highway for all the people.

[460]

It is by virtue alone of the words of this statute, which we have cited in italics, that the road of the Company is anywhere near the bridge, or near the locus in quo of the present controversy. It requires a larger measure of liberality in construing grants of the sovereign, and especially grants for the use of the streets of a city for a railroad, than we are accustomed to, to discover in this any authority to depart from Maryland avenue on its way from Ninth street to the Long Bridge.

The Company, having its road well under way, needed a passenger depot for its business—a need much more important than its present need of an additional freight depot. It did not, however, attempt to establish one under its general powers, but made application to Congress, which authorized its construction, and in doing so described its location with great precision, and the streets along which the track must go, in departing from the right of way already granted.

This Act of March 3, 1871, required the assent of the municipal authorities of the City of Washington for the erection of the depot, and that assent was given by a joint resolution of the board of aldermen and common council on March 9, 1871. And so necessary did the Company deem the consent of Congress to this, or any other occupation of the streets or public property of the city, that it procured the passage of the Act of May 21, 1872, ratifying the action of the city authorities in the matter, and setting out with greater detail the direction of the lateral track to the passenger depot, and the streets over which it should go.

The title to the streets of Washington is in the United States, and not in the city, or in the owners of the adjacent lots. Potomac S. B. Co. v. Upper Potomac Co., 109 U. S., 672 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 1070]. It is, therefore, eminently proper that the right to use them for any other than the ordinary use of streets should proceed from Congress; and when we consider the express reservation of the power to Congress to allow this use in the original grant to the Company, found in the third section of that Act, and the detail and precision with which every foot of the track or tracks of the road has been prescribed by Congress, and every change which expediency required has been previously authorized by Congress, we can see no place for the assertion of any right in the Company to make other tracks, or changes in location of those now existing without an Act giving the consent of that body.

[461]

In the face of these statutes it is hardly necessary to look into the language of the charter of the Company by the Legislature of Maryland to see if the powers thus conferred, which are said to be adopted by the Act of C gress, give this extraordinary power.

It is sufficient to say that we do not fin the Maryland charter of that Company power to use the streets of a city as an inci of its right to run to or from such city. T no such right is granted may be fairly infe from the fact that the track of this road for two miles under the City of Baltimore tunnel built for that purpose, which must l delayed the completion of the road tw three years, and cost a large sum of mo The Company certainly would not have this expensive underground roadway if thing in its charter authorized it to use the face streets of the city.

And if the construction which counsel upon that charter is sound, it is very ce that Congress did not intend extending power of the Company into the District o lumbia, and part with its own control o streets and highways of Washington City such a power is in conflict with the ex language of the Act, and with the con practice under it.

We are referred by counsel to the Re Statutes of the District of Columbia, ch 18, concerning Corporations. Clause 7 o chapter provides for the voluntary as tion of individuals into corporations for l ing railroads in the District. It grants corporations, when formed in compliance the rules there prescribed, all the usual p of such companies organized under State utes, and all that are necessary to the ope of a railroad, and the powers thus conferre in the main, very liberal.

There are two reasons, however, why provisions can give no aid to the Baltimo Potomac Company.

1. That Corporation is organized un special statute of the State of Maryland, a corporation of that State. The Act of gress of February 5, 1867, merely auth that Maryland Corporation to extend its r to the District of Columbia, and in defini powers which the Company should exer the District, it referred to and adopted, main, the Act of the State of Maryland ing the charter.

This was three years before the gene corporation law was enacted by Congres the Company has never organized unde law, or professed to be governed by it, serted itself to be a corporation of the D of Columbia. Whether it could do this it is unnecessary to decide, but it is very that the power conferred by that Act signed only for corporations organized it, and is not conferred on corporations by States of the Union, governed by th of those States.

2. But if this were not so, and if thi pany could exercise all the powers whi statute grants to corporations organized it, the statute itself shows, as all the leg by Congress has shown, both before an that that body never intended to part w right to designate the route of a railroad t the city, and on what streets its track be located, and which streets it shou This is plain from one of the closing

[illegible] of the Revised Statutes on that [illegible]:

[illegible] No railroad shall be built under [illegible] of this chapter until the route [illegible] of such road have been approved [illegible]."

[illegible] of the general law for the vol[illegible] of corporations for build[illegible] in the District of Columbia, ex[illegible] the same idea and the same purpose [illegible] three of the Act authorizing the [illegible] and Potomac Company to enter the [illegible], namely: to retain in the hands of [illegible] the absolute control of the use of the [illegible] of the city by any railroad company [illegible].

[illegible] of opinion that, when this Company [illegible] to depart in any direction from the line [illegible] track as prescribed for it by Acts [illegible], it must obtain permission to do so [illegible] body. And that Congress, and not [illegible] the Company, is the judge of the [illegible] or the necessity of such change, [illegible] the manner in which the public good [illegible] to be made and the safeguards which [illegible] accompany it.

[illegible] of the Supreme Court of the Dis[illegible] of Columbia is reversed, and the case re[illegible] with directions to dismiss the bill.

[illegible] Test:

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] NATIONAL BANK OF BOSTON, Plff. in Err.,

v.

GEORGE MIXTER.

([illegible] S. C., Reporter's ed., [illegible].)

[illegible] 1001, R. S.—mistake in name.

[illegible] required in cases by or against in[illegible] Banks when brought to this court [illegible] of the Comptroller of the Currency.

[illegible] record shows that the Comptroller [illegible] of error, a mistake in name is no [illegible].

[No. 1124.]

[illegible] Apr. [illegible], 1885. Decided Apr. 20, 1885.

[illegible] to the Circuit Court of the Unit[illegible] for the District of Massachusetts.

[illegible] to dismiss.

[illegible] sufficiently stated by the court.

[illegible] D. Ball, for defendant in [illegible] support of motion.

[illegible] A. A. Ranney, for plaintiff in error, [illegible].

[illegible] Justice Waite delivered the opin[illegible] of the court.

[illegible] is denied. Under section 1001 [illegible] Revised Statutes no bond for the prose[illegible] of the suit, or to answer in damages or [illegible] required on writs of error or appeals [illegible] or brought to this court by di[illegible] of the Comptroller of the Currency in [illegible] or against insolvent national banks, or [illegible] thereof. This is such a case.

[illegible] evidence in the record that [illegible] from the comptroller to the re[illegible] take out a writ of error in this [illegible] by mistake in one of the papers. Henry Mixter was named as the plaintiff instead of George Mixter.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

ATLANTIC PHOSPHATE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN C. GRAFFLIN.

[492]

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 492-501.)

Contracts—party making advances for purchase of goods for another, held to be the owner.

*A contract was made by A., of Charleston, with D., of Baltimore, for the sale and delivery, at Charleston, of 2,500 tons of kainit, to be shipped from August to October, 1880, at a fixed price, cash on delivery of each cargo. The kainit was to come from R., at Hamburg. D. procured G., for a commission paid him by D., to send to R. a credit, on London, for the amount of 2,500 tons of kainit in five cargoes, under which R. obtained the money. G. paid drafts, against the credit, to the amount of the cargoes. The declarations and invoices by R., presented before the consul at Hamburg, named G. as the consignee at Charleston; and the bills of landing made the cargoes deliverable, at Charleston, to G. or his assigns. These papers were sent to A., before any of the cargoes arrived, with an invoice for each cargo, in the shape of a bill, made out thus: A. bought of G., a cargo of kainit, shipped by such a vessel, such a quantity, such a price; and a power of attorney, under which A.'s agent, as attorney for G., entered the cargoes at the custom-house at Charleston, in February and March, 1881, as imported by G., and made oath that G. was the owner. A. received and accepted the cargoes. Held,

(1) G. was the owner of the cargoes, and sold and delivered them to A., to be paid for on delivery, free from any claim growing out of the contract of A. with D. or R., for any breach of that contract, as to the time of shipping the cargoes.

(2) A. was liable to G. for the price of the cargoes, with interest from their delivery.

[No. 256.]

Argued Apr. 16, 17, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Carolinia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. S. Lord and James Conner, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Charles Nephew West and James Lowndes, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court: [493]

This is an action at law, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Carolina, by John C. Grafflin against the Atlantic Phosphate Company, a South Carolina Corporation. The complaint sets forth as a first cause of action, that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of $2,792.60, with interest from February 24, 1881, "the same being due to the plaintiff for a cargo of kainit, sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant," on that day, "at the special instance and request of the defendant." It sets forth four other like causes of action, for cargoes of kainit, amounting to $3,347.55, March 3, 1881; $1,743.37, March 15, 1881; $5,083.53, March 16, 1881; and $2,483.37, March 18, 1881. Bills of particulars are annexed, showing the vessels, quantities and prices. The total amount is $15,450.42; and there is added a cause of action for that sum, with interest, as money advanced, laid out and expended, by the plaintiff for the use of the defendant, at its special instance and request. The cargoes are stated to amount to 2,500 tons.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

The answer contains a general denial of all the causes of action. It also avers a purchase by the defendant, in May, 1880, through one Dunan, of Baltimore, representing himself as agent of one Radde, of Hamburg, of 2,500 tons of kainit, to be shipped between August 1, 1880, and October 31, 1880; further purchases by it, afterwards, from the same parties, of 1,550 tons, for future shipment, all by January 1, 1881; the receipt by it of, and payment for, 1,080 tons on the 2,500 tons' contract; its receipt of the five cargoes sued for; and its willingness to pay for the cargoes according to the contracts therefor, subject to its claims for [494] damages for the nonperformance, by the vendors, of the contract of May, 1880, in that the cargoes were not shipped within the time and in the manner specified in the contract, but arrived when the business of the year was over, and when the goods were much depreciated in value; which damages, amounting to $9,586.62, it claims to recoup.

The answer also avers, that the defendant purchased the cargoes mentioned in the complaint, at Hamburg, under the contract, and received the same under the circumstances above set forth, and was, from the time of the shipment of the kainit, the owner thereof; that the invoices for all of the cargoes shipped by Radde to the defendant were in the name of Dunan; that, on January 25, 1881, Dunan requested the defendant to return his invoices and substitute similar ones in the name of Grafflin, and it did so, but it never made any new contract, in regard to any of the cargoes, with Grafflin; that it never received any notice of the assignment of the contract or cargoes to Grafflin; that, if Grafflin advanced money on the cargoes, he did so subject to the rights of the defendant under the contract, and was conversant with those rights; and that Grafflin was the real principal in the contract.

To the counterclaim so set up the plaintiff replied, alleging that he, and not Radde, owned the kainit; that it was sold and delivered to, and accepted and received by, the defendant, as the property of the plaintiff, free from the claim made for recoupment; and that he and the defendant never occupied any other relations than those of seller and buyer of the kainit, set forth in the complaint, at the prices agreed to be paid.

The case was tried before a jury, and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for the $15,450.42, with interest on the amount of each cargo from the date of its delivery; and there was a judgment accordingly, to review which the defendant brings this writ of error.

The bill of exceptions embodies all the evidence, by a stipulation between the parties, made in this court. There was no dispute as to any material question of fact. The transactions originated in the following letter, dated April 29, 1880, from Dunan, at Baltimore, to Pelzer, Rodgers & Co., at Charleston, they be- [495] ing the general agents there of the defendant: "Radde cables sell Atlantic 2,500 tons b quality Eagle Mine genuine raw kainit, gu anteed to test not below 24 per cent sulph of potash by the German chemist, Dr. Ul to be shipped during the summer and f months—say from August to October inc sive—for $7.50 per ton of 2,240 lbs. in taki Hamburg weights. The kainit to be delive at your Atlantic Phosphate Company's wha Ashley river, Port of Charleston, S. C. T price of $7.50 per ton includes cost, freight a insurance to your wharf. From the price, as quantity is large, I will rebate 10 cents per t Terms of payment, cash on delivery of e cargo." Pelzer, Rodgers & Co. replied, writing to Dunan, on May 10, 1880, as follo "We will take 2,500 tons of best kainit, as scribed by you, to test not less than 24 per c sulphate of potash, to be delivered at our wh on Ashley river, at seven dollars $\frac{50}{100}$ per ton 2,240 lbs."

To enable Radde to send the cargoes to defendant, the plaintiff, who resided in Ba more, at the request of Dunan, and for a co pensation of 1 per cent commission, paid him by Dunan, sent to Radde, at Hamburg credit with Brown, Shipley & Co., of Lond for the amount of five cargoes, under wh Radde drew on Brown, Shipley & Co., pay them their commission, and Brown, Shipley Co. drew on the plaintiff. They received shipping documents from Radde and sent th to the plaintiff, and he paid their drafts. directed them to ship the cargoes to Charlest The shipping documents consisted of bills lading, charter party, consular invoices for try at the custom-house, certificates of anal and weight in Hamburg, and memorandum voices. The declarations before the United St consul, at Hamburg, were made by Radde owner, and they named the plaintiff as the c signee at Charleston; and they and the consu certificates named Charleston as the inten port of entry. The invoices referred to in, annexed to, the consular certificates named plaintiff as the consignee. The bills of lading forth that the kainit was to be delivered at Port of Charleston, at the Atlantic Phosph Company's wharf, on Ashley River, "unto M C. Grafflin, or his assigns." The Hamburg larations and invoices and consular certific were presented by the plaintiff at the cust house at Baltimore, and he made oaths to tries, before a deputy collector at the cust house there that the goods were assigned to C. Grafflin, Charleston," and the papers v verified by the collector of customs at B more, and were passed by the cashier of toms at that custom-house. These papers the bills of lading, in this condition, for al cargoes (the bills of lading probably indo in blank by the plaintiff, though this is clear), were put by the plaintiff into the ha of Dunan, at Baltimore, and Dunan sent t all to Pelzer, Rodgers & Co., before Jan 25, 1881, with invoices made out in his (nan's) name, for the five cargoes in quest On that day, Dunan wrote to the compan follows: "Atlantic Phosphate Co., Cha ton, S. C. Gentlemen, I wish to withd all my invoices sent you with the docum for these cargoes, and substitute instead closed invoices from Mr. John C. Graf

[illegible] cargoes came out in his name, and [illegible] will please return to me my invoices, by re[illegible] and in remitting for these cargoes, please [illegible] name of John C. Grafflin, through me. [illegible] I will always furnish invoice in [illegible] in which the cargo comes for[illegible] I inclose you herewith Mr. John C. [illegible]'s invoices for the cargoes which are [illegible] forward, and for which you have [illegible]." In compliance with this re[illegible] the invoices which Dunan had sent were [illegible] to him by the defendant, and it re[illegible] the invoices from Grafflin. All this took [illegible] before any of the five cargoes arrived at [illegible]. The following is the form of one [illegible] invoices: "Baltimore, Janu[illegible] Atlantic Phosphate Co., Charles[illegible] bought of John C. Grafflin: A car[illegible] kainit, shipped per Batavia, Capt. [illegible] to Charleston, S. C., weighing 400 [illegible] at $7.50 per ton," etc. The total [illegible] these invoices was $14,450.42. At [illegible] Pelzer, Rodgers & Co. had in their [illegible] a power of attorney, dated August [illegible] executed by the plaintiff, appointing [illegible] of that firm, five in number, by [illegible] of them, his attorneys, to en[illegible] at the custom-house at Charles[illegible] merchandise which might thereafter be [illegible] by him, or which might arrive con[illegible] to him, or in which he might be inter[illegible] principal or otherwise. When the sev[illegible] arrived at Charleston, Mr. Ingles[illegible] of the firm of Pelzer, Rodgers & Co., [illegible] under this power of attorney, entered [illegible] custom-house there in the name of [illegible]. The entries described the mer[illegible] "imported by John C. Grafflin," and [illegible] "John C. Grafflin, per Thos. S. [illegible] Atty.," and Inglesby took the entry [illegible] of the owner, to the invoices and [illegible] of lading presented on entry, and in each [illegible] that, to the best of his knowledge, J. C. [illegible] was the owner of the goods "men[illegible] in the annexed entry."

[illegible] papers, the defendant received and [illegible] the cargoes and then refused to pay [illegible] for them. He had confidence in [illegible] responsibility of the defendant, [illegible], was willing to deliver the car[illegible] and waive any lien on them, and accept [illegible] as his debtor. The defendant did [illegible] not make any complaint as to the [illegible] of the kainit. No objection based on a [illegible] of the contract of May, 1880, as to the [illegible] of delivery, was made until after the [illegible] were received. The plaintiff, if [illegible] at the time of any such claim, could [illegible] the cargoes elsewhere. He bought [illegible], but he did not assume the contract, [illegible] under no obligation to fulfill it or to [illegible] the cargoes. But the defendant, in ac[illegible] the cargoes from him, on all the facts [illegible], as above set forth, entered into the [illegible] of purchaser of the cargoes from him, [illegible] for on delivery, without reference to [illegible] against Radde or Dunan for a breach [illegible] of May, 1880. It was admitted, [illegible] that the damages for such breach [illegible].

[illegible] of the trial, the defendant prayed [illegible] instructions to the jury, each of [illegible] was refused by the court, and to each refusal the defendant excepted: "(1.) If, from the testimony, the jury believe that the Atlantic Company never requested Grafflin to sell them these cargoes, and that there was no agreement between Grafflin and the Atlantic Company for the sale by Grafflin, and the purchase by the Atlantic Company, of these cargoes, the action cannot be supported, and the verdict should be for the defendant. (2.) If, from the evidence, the jury are satisfied that the Atlantic Company purchased these cargoes from Radde, and that all that Grafflin did was to advance money to Radde or furnish a credit to him, and that he received the bills of lading from Radde as security for his advances, then Grafflin had only a special property, and his transfer of the bills of lading to the Atlantic Company was not a sale, and he cannot maintain an action for goods sold and delivered. (3.) To produce a change of property from the shipper to the consignee, it is essentially necessary that the goods should have been sent in consequence of some contract between the parties by which the one agreed to sell and the other to buy. (4.) If the jury believe that Grafflin was aware of the contract of sale made by Dunan for Radde to the Atlantic Company, and that the transfer of the bills of lading by Grafflin to the Atlantic Company was in pursuance of, and in execution of, that contract, then there was no sale by Grafflin to the Atlantic Company, and the plaintiff cannot recover. (5.) If Grafflin had a lien on these cargoes for his advances to Radde, and parted with the goods without any agreement by the Atlantic Company to pay his advances, he has lost his lien and must look to the party to whom he advanced, for his redress." [498]

The Circuit Court instructed the jury as follows: "If the jury find from the evidence, that the defendant, through Dunan, purchased from Radde, upon a contract made between Radde and the defendant, the kainit mentioned in the pleadings and evidence, and that the plaintiff made the advances to Radde for the purchase of the kainit, and had the bills of lading and invoices made out in his name as the proof of his ownership and the amount of his advances, and forwarded to Pelzer, Rodgers & Co. his power of attorney authorizing them to enter the said merchandise in his name as owner, they being the agents of the Atlantic Phosphate Company, and to deliver the same to the said Company, which acepted the merchandise, then the jury must find for the plaintiff the amount of the plaintiff's advances on the cargoes in suit, although they may find that Radde or Dunan did not faithfully perform the contract spoken of above, the claim of the defendant for damages, if any, being against them and not against the plaintiff." To this instruction the defendant excepted. [499]

The jury having come in with a verdict for the plaintiff for $15,450.42, with interest from the date of the delivery of each cargo, the defendant prayed the court to instruct the jury that interest was not due on open account. The court ruled that interest was due, and so instructed the jury, and the defendant excepted. The verdict was then rendered for $15,450.42, "with interest on the amount of each cargo from the date of delivery thereof, being five days after the date of entry," all objection to the form being waived.

The facts of the case, and the views before stated as to the relations of the parties, show that the propositions contended for by the defendant were properly rejected, and that there was no error in the instructions to the jury. Indeed, the court might properly have directed a verdict for the plaintiff. A contract of sale by Grafflin to the defendant, and of purchase by it from him, arose, in judgment of law, out of the undisputed facts. The plaintiff had become the owner of the goods. The defendant, by the acceptance of the cargoes under the documents, was estopped from treating him as other than owner. It abandoned, so far as the plaintiff was concerned, its relation with Dunan and Radde, and its claim for damages, and cannot now alter the position of the plaintiff to his detriment.

The "advances" spoken of in the instruction given were the same as the amount of the "invoices" there spoken of, made out in the name of the plaintiff. The amount of both was $15,450.42, and that was the amount of the recovery, being the sale price. There was no error in the form of the instruction, to the prejudice of the defendant.

There having been a contract of sale, by mutual assent, and the contract having been executed by the vendor, by the delivery of the goods, the liability of the vendee to pay for [500] them on delivery, in the absence of other terms, accrued, and the law raises an implied contract to pay interest from delivery, on the purchase money, which was liquidated by the terms of the invoices in the name of the plaintiff, received and retained by the defendant. Such is the rule of the general commercial law. Dodge v. Perkins, 9 Pick., 368, 388; Foote v. Blanchard, 6 Allen, 221; Van Rensselaer v. Jewett, 2 N. Y., 135; Esterly v. Cole, 3 N.Y., 502. The case is not one of an open running account, but is of the class where there is a stipulated term of credit, which has expired.

We do not find anything in the decisions in South Carolina which would forbid the allowance of interest in the present case. In Rice v. Hancock, 1 Harp. (S. C.), L., 393, in 1824, interest was disallowed on a book account for goods, because, although there was a special agreement to pay for the goods in cotton in sixty days, and otherwise to pay interest after sixty days, there was no count on the agreement. A like decision was made in Schermerhorn v. Perman, 2 Bailey, 178, in 1831. In Lindsey v. Bland, 2 Speer, 30, in 1843, on a count for negroes sold, but no count for interest, interest was allowed after twelve months, because a twelve months' note was to have been given. In Ancrum v. Stone, Id., 594, in 1844, the rule is stated, that interest is allowable on a liability to pay money, if the sum is certain, from the time when, by construction of law, the payment is demandable. In Kennedy v. Barnwell, 7 Rich., 124, in 1854, under a contract to pay a fixed sum for digging a canal, no time of payment being mentioned, interest was allowed from the completion of the work. In Kyle v. R. R. Co., 10 Id., 382, in 1857, interest was allowed on the value of cotton lost by a common carrier, on the ground that the cotton was a cash article at the place of delivery, and its value was taken on a cash sale, as cash lost by the plaintiff, who was, therefore, entitled to interest on the value. In Arnold v. House, 12 S. C., 600, in 1879, and in Childs v Frazee, 15 Id., 612, in 1880, interest was recov ered against a purchaser of land for cash at judicial sale.

In the present case, the objection made the trial was not because of the want of a cour for interest, but because interest was "not du on an open account." The case was not or of an open account, in the sense of any rule to interest, and the holding of the Court, th interest was due, was correct.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

WILLIAM R. SCHOFIELD, Plf. in Err

v.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE AND ST PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 615-619.)

Personal injuries — contributory negligence practice—when proper for court to direct ve dict for defendant.

*1. The doctrine laid down in Railroad Co. v. Hou ton, 95 U. S., 697, cited and applied to the facts this case.

2. Where a person, in a sleigh drawn by one hor on a wagon road, approaching a crossing of a ra road track with which he was familiar, could ha seen a coming train during its progress through distance of 70 rods from the crossing, if he h looked from a point at any distance within 600 fe from the crossing, and was struck by the train the crossing and injured, he was guilty of contri utory negligence, even though the train was n a regular one, and was running at a high rate speed, and did not stop at a depot 70 rods from t crossing in the direction from which the tra came, and did not blow a whistle or ring a bell t tween the depot and the crossing.

3. On these facts, it was proper for the trial cou to direct a verdict for the defendant.

[No. 263.]

Argued Apr. 17, 21, 1885. Decided May 4, 18

IN error to the Circuit Court of the Unit States for the District of Minnesota.

The history and facts of the case appear the opinion of the court.

Messrs. S. L. Pierce and John B. Sanbo for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Chas. E. Flandrau, for defendant error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the op ion of the court:

This is an action brought by William R. Sc field against the Chicago, Milwaukee and Paul Railway Company, in a State Court Minnesota, and removed by the defendant i the Circuit Court of the United States for District of Minnesota. It was tried befor jury, and, after the plaintiff had rested his ca the jury, under the instruction of the cou rendered a verdict for the defendant. T suit was one to recover damages for perso injuries to the plaintiff, caused by his be struck by a train running on the railroad of defendant, while the plaintiff, in a sleigh dra by one horse, was endeavoring to cross track, on the 13th of February, 1881, at N port, in Minnesota. The train was runn

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

[illegible] on the east bank of the Mississippi River, through Newport, to St. Paul, about four [illegible] in the afternoon, in daylight, on Sunday. The track was straight from the crossing to a point 2,200 feet south of it, and the country was flat and open. The plaintiff was himself driving, with a companion in the sleigh, northerly direction, on a wagon road which ran in the same general course with the railroad, and to the west of it, and attempted to cross it from the west to the east, as the train approached from the south. The crossing was [illegible] mile to the north of the depot at Newport. Opposite the depot, the wagon road was 280 feet distant to the west of the depot. The plaintiff had a slow horse, and was following the beaten track in the snow. When he arrived at a point in the wagon road 600 feet from the crossing, he could there, and all the way from there till he reached the crossing, have an unobstructed view of the railroad track to the south, and of any train on it, from the crossing north to the depot; and, when he reached a point in the wagon road 33 feet from the crossing, he could have an unobstructed view to a considerable greater distance southward beyond the depot. The evidence shows, that, if the train had passed the depot when the plaintiff was at a point 600 feet, or any less number of feet from the crossing, he could not have failed to see the train, if he had looked for it; and that, if the train had not reached the depot, when the plaintiff arrived at a point 33 feet from the crossing, he could not at that point, or at any point in the 33 feet, have failed to see the train beyond and to the south of the depot, if he had looked for it. When the train passed the depot the plaintiff was at least 100 feet from the crossing. The train consisted of a locomotive engine and seven or eight cars. The engine reached at a point 4,200 feet south of the depot, and was the whistling place for that depot. The wind was blowing strongly from north to south. The man in company with the plaintiff was killed by the accident, as was the horse. The plaintiff resided in the neighborhood, and was familiar with the crossing. After the accident, the man, horse and sleigh were found on the west side of the railroad, showing that they had been struck as they were entering on the crossing. The train was not a regular one [illegible] was done at the time of the accident; was moving at a high rate of speed; it did not stop at the depot; and it gave no signal by sounding a whistle, or ringing a bell, after it passed the depot.

The ground upon which the circuit court directed a verdict for the defendant (2 McCrary, [illegible]) was, that the plaintiff, by his own showing, was guilty of contributory negligence, whatever negligence there may have been on the part of the defendant. Applying the test that, it would be the duty of the court, on the plaintiff's evidence, to set aside, as contrary to the evidence, a verdict for the defendant if given, the court had authority to direct a verdict for the defendant, it considered the case under the rules laid down in Improvement Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall., 442 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 867], and especially in R. R. Co. v. Houston, Id., 697 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 558], and arrived at the conclusions of law, that notwithstanding the fact that the train was not a regular one, nor the fact of its high rate of speed, excused the plaintiff from the duty of looking out for a train; that the fact that it did not stop at the depot could avail the plaintiff only on the view that, hearing a whistle from it, as it was south of the depot, he supposed it would stop there and so failed to look, but that, in such case, he would have been negligent, because it was not certain the train would stop at the depot, and he would have had warning that a train was approaching; that the neglect of the train to [618] blow a whistle or ring a bell between the depot and the crossing did not relieve the plaintiff from the duty of looking back, at least as far as the depot, before going on the track; and that, in view of the duty incumbent on the plaintiff to look for a coming train before going so near to the track as to be unable to prevent a collision, and of the fact that he was at least 100 feet from the crossing when the train passed the depot, and could then have seen it if he had looked, and have avoided the accident by stopping until it had passed by, he was negligent in not looking.

These conclusions of law approve themselves to our judgment, and are in accordance with the rules laid down in the cases referred to. In R. R. Co. v. Houston, it was said: "The failure of the engineer to sound the whistle or ring the bell, if such were the fact, did not relieve the deceased from the necessity of taking ordinary precautions for her safety. Negligence of the company's employés, in these particulars, was no excuse for negligence on her part. She was bound to listen and to look, before attempting to cross the railroad track, in order to avoid an approaching train, and not to walk carelessly into the place of possible danger. Had she used her senses, she could not have failed both to hear and to see the train which was coming. If she omitted to use them, and walked thoughtlessly upon the track, she was guilty of culpable negligence, and so far contributed to her injuries as to deprive her of any right to complain of others. If, using them, she saw the train coming, and yet undertook to cross the track, instead of waiting for the train to pass, and was injured, the consequences of her mistake and temerity cannot be cast upon the defendant." The court added, that an instruction to render a verdict for the defendant would have been proper.

These views concur with those laid down by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, in Brown v. R. R. Co., 22 Minn., 165, and are in accord with the current of decisions in the courts of the States.

It is the settled law of this court, that, when the evidence given at the trial, with all the inferences which the jury could justifiably draw [619] from it, is insufficient to support a verdict for the plaintiff, so that such a verdict, if returned, must be set aside, the court is not bound to submit the case to the jury, but may direct a verdict for the defendant. Improvement Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall., 442 [81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 867]; Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Id., 116 [89 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed., 780]; Herbert v. Butler, 97 U.S. 319 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 958]; Bowditch v. Boston, 101 Id., 16 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 980]; Griggs v. Houston, 104 Id., 553 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 840]; Randall v. R. R. Co., 109 Id. 478 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 1003]; Anderson Co. Comrs. v. Beal, 113 Id., 227 [Bk.

[illegible] Co., 16, 316 [illegible] Rule was rightly applied [illegible] Court in the present case.

[illegible] affirmed.

[illegible] Cir. Ct., Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible]

[illegible] AND CLAIBORNE STREETS RAILROAD COMPANY, Garnishee, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JUDAH HART.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., [illegible])

[illegible] of [illegible] petition; sufficiency of; [illegible] of oath to—jurisdiction by judgment [illegible] of New Orleans—practice—motion in [illegible] not reviewable on error.

[illegible] commenced in a State Court, No. [illegible] in the Circuit Court of the United [illegible] the next day, entitled in the suit as [illegible] by the attorneys, not sworn to, re[illegible] the suit as commenced, and asking for a [illegible] under subdivision 3 of § 639 of the Revised [illegible] stating facts showing a right to a re[illegible] under that subdivision, but also un[illegible] Act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. at L., 470, [illegible] by an affidavit, made by the plain[illegible] stating that "he is the plain[illegible] in the suit, as No. 4414, and giving its title, and [illegible] of the court, and alleging "that he has [illegible] believe, that, from preju[illegible] State Court." The State Court [illegible] the cause to be removed, and the Circuit [illegible] on motion of the defendant, to re[illegible]

Held:

1. The affidavit was sufficient for a removal under subdivision 3 of § 639;

2. The petition made out a case for a removal under the Act of 1875;

3. The absence of an oath to the petition was, at most, only an informality, which the defendant waived by not taking the objection on the motion to remand.

2. H., having obtained a money judgment against the City of New Orleans, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana, filed in that court a supplemental petition and interrogatories, in accordance with the second paragraph of Article 246 of the Code of Practice of Louisiana, added by the Act of March 30, 1839, against a street railroad corporation, as a debtor to the city, praying that it be cited, as garnishee, and answer the interrogatories, and pay the judgment. The corporation was cited to answer, and did so, to the effect that it owed nothing to the city but some taxes. H. filed a traverse to the answers, in law and in fact, and it was tried before a jury, which found a verdict for the plaintiff, for a sum of money, on which judgment was rendered. Before it was signed, the corporation moved to expunge it and to arrest it, for specified reasons. The motion was overruled, a bill of exceptions was taken thereto, and judgment was signed. No bill of exceptions was taken in regard to the trial; Held, that the motion in arrest had no more effect than a motion for a new trial, and could not be reviewed on a writ of error.

3. The garnishment proceedings were authorized by § 916 of the Revised Statutes, being authorized by laws of Louisiana, in force when § 916, formerly § 8 of the Act of June 1, 1872, chap. 255, 17 Stat. at L., 197, was enacted.

4. The remedies supplementary to judgment, adopted by § 916, were those then provided by the laws of Louisiana in regard to judgments in suits of a like nature or class, and not the provisions of the Act of the Legislature of Louisiana, passed March 17, 1870, Sess. Laws of 1870, Extra Session, No. 5, p. 10, in regard to judgments against the City of New Orleans.

5. Questions not raised on the trial before the jury and saved by a bill of exceptions, cannot be considered by this court, on a writ of error.

[No. 283.]

Submitted Apr. 24, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Jas. R. Beckwith, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. E. H. Farrar, E. Howard McCaleb and A. G. Brice, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 3d of March, 1882, Judah Hart obtained a judgment, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana, against the City of New Orleans, for $121,697.18, with five per cent per annum interest thereon until paid, and costs, in a suit commenced by him in the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, and State of Louisiana against the city, to recover the amount of sundry debts due by the city, for labor done and services rendered, and specially specified which debts the creditors had assigned to him. The suit was removed into the Circuit Court of the United States by the plaintiff, and a motion made to that court to remand it was denied.

On March 15, 1882, the plaintiff filed in the Circuit Court a supplemental petition and interrogatories, in accordance with the second paragraph of Article 246 of the Code of Practice of Louisiana, added by the Act of March 30, 1839, averring that he had obtained a writ of fieri facias, in the suit in the Civil District Court, that the Canal and Claiborne Streets Railroad Company, a corporation created by the laws of Louisiana, was indebted to the city, and in execution of the writ, was in possession or [illegible] debtor, he had [illegible] the hands of [illegible] it be cited [illegible] the amount [illegible] creditor, he [illegible] the judgment [illegible] to whether [illegible] city or has [illegible] made on [illegible] garnishee, [illegible] the court [illegible] [illegible] interrogatories [illegible]

• Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

[illegible]pany, made garnishee herein, now comes [illegible] court, and for answer to the interrogatories [illegible] by and through its president, E. [illegible] says.

[illegible] interrogatory. No; except taxes of [illegible] 1882.

[illegible] interrogatory. No; except taxes of the [illegible]

[illegible] interrogatory. No.

[illegible] for a full and correct statement of the [illegible] which the above answers are made, [illegible] further answering, says, that the [illegible] of the right of way of the said Canal [illegible] Claiborne Streets Railroad Company was [illegible] for and in consideration of a bonus [illegible] two sixteenths of a cent per passenger, pay[illegible] monthly; the rate of fare is five cents per [illegible]; that the total receipts of the Com[illegible] from 1st March, 1870, to 15th March, [illegible]:

For the year	1870	$118,515 20
" "	1871	152,098 75
" "	1872	144,378 05
" "	1873	136,656 60
" "	1874	115,625 40
" "	1875	100,095 95
" "	1876	96,101 60
" "	1877	89,701 90
" "	1878	90,205 20
" "	1879	89,267 25
" "	1880	95,269 45
" "	1881	98,591 70
" "	1882	20,889 60
		$1,347,891 65

[illegible] respondent further says, that the re[illegible] from the 16th March, 1872, to the 15th [illegible], 1882, amount to the sum of $1,046,-[illegible]

[illegible] respondent, further answering, says, [illegible] is informed and believes that the [illegible] was in lieu and place of the license; that [illegible] could not claim both; that it has [illegible] to demand the bonus, but has imposed a [illegible] the Company, and the Company has [illegible] in 1880, based on the receipts of [illegible] 1881, based on the receipts of 1880; and [illegible] 1882, based on the receipts of 1881, viz., [illegible] year, making in all $1,125, thereby [illegible] the Company from any obligation to [illegible] bonus for said years. And respondent [illegible] says, that he is informed and believes [illegible] any claim for the bonus based on the re[illegible] preceding years is prescribed.

[illegible] further swears, that the said [illegible] and Claiborne Streets Railroad Company [illegible] been garnisheed in the suits of Myra [illegible] Samuel Smith, Subrogee, v. New [illegible] No. 2,[illegible] of the U. S. Circuit Court, [illegible] Parsons v. New Orleans, No. 8,068 of [illegible] and that, should judgments be ren[illegible] against said Company, they will amount [illegible] than the Company can in any event [illegible]

[illegible] further says, that the Company [illegible] claim against the City of New Orleans for [illegible] caused by overflows in 1869, 1871 and [illegible] and against which it should have been [illegible] by the city; and that the amount due [illegible] and damages exceeds any amount which [illegible] be due for the bonus, if any was due.

For this and other reasons the city has not required the bonus.

On March 30, 1882, the plaintiff, according to the practice in Louisana, filed a traverse of the answers, and the court made an order, which set forth that, on motion of the plaintiff, and on suggesting to the court that the answers were false, and that the Corporation was indebted to the city in larger sums than stated in the answers, and that the plaintiff traversed the answers, in law and in fact, it was ordered that the Corporation show cause, on April 5, 1882, why the interrogatories should not be taken for confessed, and why judgment should not be rendered against it for the amount of the plaintiff's claim, with interest and costs. On March 31, 1882, a copy of this order was served on the Corporation.

On the 5th of April, 1882, a stipulation in writing between the plaintiff and the city was filed, agreeing that all sums paid by the Corporation should be deposited in the registry of the court, to await the decision whether the money was subject to seizure under the plaintiff's execution.

On the same day, the traverse to the answer came on for trial before a jury. The record states that, "after hearing the pleadings, the evidence and arguments of counsel, and receiving a charge from the court," the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff against the Corporation, as garnishee, "for the following sums," naming thirteen several sums, with interest on each, at 5 per cent per annum, from a specified date, being a total of $33,684.74, "with interest on the various sums from dates as above stated, until payment." On this verdict and in accordance with it, a judgment was, on the same day, rendered, that the corporation, garnishee, be condemned to pay to the plaintiff $33,684.74, with interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum "on the following sums, from the following dates," specifying as in the verdict, until paid, with costs; and ordering that the amount, with interest, be deposited in the registry of the court, subject to the terms of the foregoing stipulation. The judgment was, on the 19th of April, 1882, amended nunc pro tunc, so as to order that the garnishee pay that amount, with interest, into the registry of the court, "subject to the rights of all parties concerned." The entire judgment was signed April 26, 1882. [659]

The Corporation made a motion for a new trial, which was refused on April 21, 1882. It also filed and made a motion, that the proposed judgment written up on the minutes and record, against it as garnishee, be expunged therefrom, and be never signed and made operative, and that any judgment by reason of the verdict be arrested, for ten specified reasons. This motion was overruled on April 26, 1882, and then the judgment was signed. To reverse this judgment the Corporation has brought a writ of error.

The record contains a bill of exceptions, which states that, at the same term at which all the foregoing proceedings took place, and before any final judgment against the Corporation, as garnishee, had been signed and become final, the Corporation made the motion in writing for arrest of the judgment, and both parties appeared, and the court overruled and refused the motion, and the Corporation excepted to the ruling and judgment of the court in that particular.

It is assigned for error, that the Circuit Court never acquired jurisdiction of the original suit against the city. The petition by which the original suit was commenced in the State Court was filed November 4, 1881, and is marked No. 4,414. The citation was issued and served on the city on that day. The plaintiff's petition for removal is entitled in the suit as No. 4,414. It was filed November 5, 1881, and is signed by the attorneys for the plaintiff, and states that the suit was commenced about November——, 1881; "that your petitioner was, at the time of bringing said suit, and is now, a citizen of the State of New York, and a resident thereof"; and "that there is, and was at the time said suit was brought, a controversy therein between your petitioner, and the said defendant, the City of New Orleans, who is a citizen of the State [660] of Louisiana, and a resident thereof." It also states, that the removal is desired "in pursuance of the Act of Congress in that behalf provided, to wit: the Revised Statutes of the United States, § 639, subdivision 3"; and that the petitioner "has filed the affidavit required by the statute in such cases." The petition was accompanied by an affidavit, filed therewith, sworn to by the petitioner, in the City of New York, before a Commissioner for Louisiana, on the 25th of October, 1881, in which the petitioner stated that "he is the plaintiff in the case of Hart v. New Orleans, No. 4,414, Civil District Court, Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana, and that he has reason to believe, and does believe, that, from prejudice and local influence, he will not be able to obtain justice in said State Court." The State Court, on consideration of the petition, affidavit and bond, made an order removing the cause. In the motion to remand the cause, made in the Circuit Court, by the city, one of the grounds of the motion, which was overruled, was, that there was no legal affidavit, because the suit named in it was filed ten days after the affidavit was made. This ground is urged here, but we do not regard it as of any force. The affidavit sufficiently identified the suit, and was, in this case, as effective for the purposes of the statute as if made after the suit was brought. Besides, the petition for removal made out a case for removal under § 2 of the Act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. at L., 470; and the reference to the prior statute did not impair the efficacy of the facts. Removal Cases, 100 U. S., 457, 471 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 593, 598]. The absence of an oath to the petition was, at most, only an informality, which could be and was waived by the city. It made no such objection in its motion to remand. This view is in accordance with the ruling in Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S., 594, 598 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1093], as to modal and formal matters, under section 3 of the Act. We have considered the question of removal because it goes to the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, and is raised for our consideration by the record.

The verdict of the jury on the trial of the traverse to the answer was rendered April 5, 1882. No bill of exceptions was taken at the trial. The motion to expunge the proposed judgment, and to arrest any judgment on the [661] verdict, was not filed till April 21, 1882, and had no more effect than a motion for a ne trial, and, therefore, under our settled practic cannot be reviewed here, on this writ of erro although there is a bill of exceptions in regar to it.

It is contended that when the fi. fa. was i sued against the city, there was no law und which a fi. fa. could issue against the cit This point was not taken in the court belo It does not appear in the motion in arrest judgment, or in the bill of exceptions, or in t assignment of errors accompanying the writ error. It was a point which should have be raised and saved when the traverse to the a swer was tried before the jury. But this w not done. Still, as the garnishment proceedin were based on the fi. fa., it is proper to sa that the proceedings in the case were warrant by section 916 of the Revised Statutes, whi provides as follows: "The party recovering judgment in any common-law cause, in any C cuit or District Court, shall be entitled to simil remedies upon the same, by execution or oth wise, to reach the property of the judgment de or, as are now provided in like causes by the la of the State in which such court is held, or any such laws hereafter enacted which may adopted by general rules of such Circuit or D trict Court; and such courts may, from time time, by general rules, adopt such State laws may hereafter be in force in such State in re tion to remedies upon judgments, as aforesa by execution or otherwise." That section of statute was considered by this court, in Ex pa Boyd, 105 U. S., 647 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1200], a was held to apply to proceedings supplement to execution, to examine the judgment deb in regard to his property, under a judgm rendered in a common-law cause. We are a of opinion that it covers the proceedings had this case to reach the property of the ci Those proceedings were authorized by laws the State of Louisiana in force when § 6 of Act of June 1, 1872, chap. 255, 17 Stat. at 197, now § 916 of the Revised Statutes, enacted.

It is urged that, by § 2 of the Act of Legislature of Louisiana, passed March 17, 1 (Sess. Laws of 1870, Extra Session, Act No. p. 10), it was made unlawful to issue any of execution or fieri facias, from any of courts in Louisiana, against the City of N Orleans, to enforce the payment of any ju ment for money against that city. But we of opinion that the provisions of that spe Act, in reference to judgments against City of New Orleans, were adopted by sect 916. The meaning of that section is, that remedies, by execution or otherwise, on a ju ment in a common-law cause, in a Circuit Co shall be the same as were then provided by laws of the State in respect to judgment suits of a like nature or class. "Like cau is the expression. By article 641 of the Cod Practice of Louisiana, it was and is provi that, "When the judgment orders the payn of a sum of money, the party in whose fav is rendered may apply to the clerk and ob from him a writ of fieri facias against the p erty of his debtor." It is this provision, the garnishee proceedings consequent upo provided by the laws of Louisiana in respe judgments generally, of a like nature or c [illegible] here in the present case, which the Act of Congress adopted as remedies for the judgment creditor, in a common-law cause, in the Circuit Court. And such has been the uniform [illegible] in the Circuit Court at New Orleans. [illegible] v. Morris, 8 Woods, 115; Hart v. [illegible] Orleans, 12 Fed. Rep., 292; New Orleans v. Pickles, decided by Mr. Justice [illegible], in 1879, unreported. The exception [illegible] by the State as to the City of New Orleans may be of force as to suits in the Courts of the State, but it is not an exception which [illegible] propria vigore in the Circuit Court.

The other assignments of error seek to raise two questions: that the debt of the Corporation to the city was part of its public revenues, and not subject to seizure or levy; that the city was not made a party to the garnishee proceedings; that the supplemental petition does not show that the debt to the city is not public property; that there was no issue raised to be tried by jury; that the character and origin of the [illegible] of the Corporation to the city were not shown to be such as would support the [illegible] against the Corporation; and that the [illegible] included in the verdict was improperly [illegible] and erroneously computed. These questions not having been raised on the trial before the jury, and saved by a bill of exceptions, cannot be considered by this court on a writ of error.

The proceedings of record appear to have been entirely regular, and in accordance with the statute and practice of Louisiana.

Judgment affirmed.

[illegible] Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

CHARLES STUART WURTS ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

ABEL HOAGLAND ET AL., Commissioners of Drainage, Etc.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 606-615.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—drainage act of New Jersey not unconstitutional.

The Statute of New Jersey of March 8, 1871, providing for the drainage of any tract of low or marsh land within the State, upon proceedings instituted by at least five owners of separate lots of land included in the tract, and not objected to by the owners of the greater part of the tract, and for assessment by commissioners, after notice and [illegible] of the expenses upon all the owners, does not deprive them of their property without due process of law, nor deny to them the equal protection of the laws, within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

[No. 193.]

Argued Nov. 20, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Dissenting opinion by Mr. Justice GRAY.

[illegible]—"Due process of law." [illegible] v. Yerkes, 35 U. S., bk. 24, [illegible], note.

Messrs. J. G. Shipman and Samuel Dickson, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Theo. Little, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court: [607]

This was a writ of error by the devisees of Mary V. Wurts to reverse a judgment confirming an assessment of Commissioners for the Drainage of Lands, under the Statute of New Jersey of March 8, 1871, the material provisions of which are as follows:

By section 1, "The Board of Managers of the Geological Survey, on the application of at least five owners of separate lots of land, included in any tract of land in this State which is subject to overflow from freshets, or which is usually in a low, marshy, boggy or wet condition," are authorized to examine the tract, and, if they deem it for the interest of the public and of the landowners to be affected thereby, then to make surveys, and decide upon and adopt a system of drainage, and report it to the Supreme Court of the State; and thereupon the court, upon reasonable notice published in a newspaper circulating in the county where the tract is, shall appoint three Commissioners to superintend and carry out the system of drainage so adopted and reported; "provided, that if, at the time fixed for such appointment of Commissioners, it shall appear to the court by the written remonstrance of the owners of a majority of the said low and wet lands, duly authenticated by affidavit, that they are opposed to the drainage thereof at the common expense, then the said court shall not appoint such commissioners."

By section 2, the Commissioners shall cause the tract to be drained in accordance with the general plan of the board of managers, and, after the completion of the work, report to the Supreme Court the expense thereof, together with a general description of the lands which, in their judgment, ought to contribute to the expense; notice of the report shall be published for four weeks, in order that any persons interested may examine the report, and file objections to it; if any such objections are filed within the four weeks, the Supreme Court shall determine upon the same in a summary manner, and, without further notice, make an order directing the Commissioners "to distribute and assess the amount of said expense, and interest, upon the lands contained within the territory reported by them originally, or as corrected by the Supreme Court, in proportion, as near as they can judge, to the benefit derived from said drainage by the several parcels of land to be assessed"; the assessment, when completed, [608] shall be deposited in some convenient place for inspection by the parties interested, and notice of the completion of the assessment and of the place where it is deposited, published for six weeks, designating a time and place when and where the Commissioners will meet to hear objections to the assessment; and the Commissioners, having heard and decided upon such objections as shall be made to them, shall proceed to complete their assessment and file it in the clerk's office of the Supreme Court, and notice of the filing shall be published for four weeks, after which, if no objections have been made to the assessment, it shall be confirmed by the court; any objections filed within the four weeks the Supreme Court shall hear and determine in a summary manner, but "shall not reverse said assessment or any part thereof, except for some error in law, or in the principles of assessment, made or committed by said Commissioners"; if for any such cause the assessment or any part thereof shall be reversed, it shall be referred to the Commissioners to be corrected accordingly, and, when it shall have been corrected and filed, like proceedings shall be had, until the court shall finally confirm the assessment; and thereupon the Commissioners shall publish notice for four weeks, requiring the several owners or other parties interested in the lands assessed to pay their assessments.

By section 3, further provisions are made for collecting the assessment by demand on the owner of the lands assessed, and if he cannot be found, or neglects or refuses to pay, then by sale of his land for the least number of years that any person will take the same.

By section 5, the Commissioners may from time to time borrow the necessary moneys to carry on the work of draining the lands, and give their bonds as such Commissioners therefor, and pledge for the repayment thereof the assessment to be made as aforesaid.

By proceedings had in accordance with this statute, the Board of Managers of the Geological Survey, upon the application of more than [609] five owners of separate lots of land situated in the tract of land known as the Great Meadows on the Pequest River, examined and surveyed the entire tract, and reported a plan for draining it to the Supreme Court, and on November 15, 1872, three Commissioners were appointed to carry the plan into execution.

Pending the proceedings, on March 19, 1874, a supplemental statute was passed, by section 2 of which, "if the said commissioners, after having commenced the drainage of such tract and proceeded therewith, shall, before the drainage of the same shall be completed, be compelled to suspend the completion thereof, from any inability at that time to raise the money required therefor, they shall proceed to ascertain the tracts of land benefited or intended to be benefited by said drainage, and the relative proportions in which the said respective tracts have been or will be benefited thereby, and also the expenses incurred in said drainage, and as near as may be the additional expenses required for the completion thereof," and make and report to the court an assessment of such expenses.

In accordance with that provision of the Statute of 1874, the Commissioners, before completing the work, made and reported to the court an assessment based upon an estimate of contemplated benefits, which was, for that reason, upon objections filed by Mrs. Wurts, set aside by an order of the Supreme Court, affirmed by the Court of Errors. 10 Vroom, 433; 12 Id., 175.

On May 17, 1879, after the completion of the work, the Commissioners made a report to the court, pursuant to the Statute of 1871, showing the expense to have been $107,916.07. No objections to that report having been filed, after four weeks' notice, the court on June 23, ordered the Commissioners to distribute that sum "upon the lands mentioned in their said report, in proportion, as nearly as they can judge, to the benefit derived from said drainage by the several parcels of land to be assessed." The Commissioners made an assessment accordingly, the proportion of which on the lands of Mrs. Wurts was $13,347.84, and, after notice to and hearing of all parties who desired to object to the assessment, reported it to the Supreme Court, which directed it to be modified as to certain lands of other parties lying outside the original survey, and in other respects confirmed the assessment, notwithstanding objections made to it by the devisees of Mrs. Wurts; and its judgment was affirmed in the Court of Errors. 13 Vroom, 553; 14 Id., 456. The judgment of the Court of Errors was the final judgment in the case, and this writ of error was addressed to the Supreme Court because at the time of suing out the writ of error the record had been transmitted to that court and was in its possession. 105 U. S., 701 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1109].

The error assigned was that "the Act of March 8, 1871, upon which the said judgment and proceedings are founded, violates the Constitution of the United States in this, that it deprives the plaintiffs in error of their property without due process of law, and denies to them the equal protection of the laws, and violates the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

General laws authorizing the drainage of tracts of swamp and low lands, by commissioners appointed upon proceedings instituted by some of the owners of the lands, and the assessment of the whole expense of the work upon all the lands within the tract in question, have long existed in the State of New Jersey, and have been sustained and acted on by her courts, under the Constitution of 1776, as well as under that of 1844. Stats. December 23, 1783, Wilson's Laws, 382; November 29, 1788, and November 24, 1792, Paterson's Laws, 84, 119; Jones v. Lore, 2 Pen., 1048; Doremus v. Smith, 1 South., 142; Westcott v. Garrison, 1 Halst., 132; State v. Frank & Guisbert Creek Co. 2 J. S. Green, 301; State v. Newark, 3 Dutch., 185, 194; Berdan v. Drainage Co., 3 C. E. Green, 69; Coster v. Tide Water Co., 3 Id., 54, 68, 518, 531; State v. Blake, 6 Vroom, 208, and 7 Id., 442; Hoagland v. Wurts, 12 Id., 175, 179.

In State v. Newark, 3 Dutch., 185, 194, the Supreme Court said: "Laws for the drainage or embanking of low grounds, and to provide for the expense, for the mere benefit of the proprietors, without reference to the public good, are to be classed, not under the taxing, but the police power of the government."

In Coster v. Tide Water Co., 3 C. E. Green, 54, 518, the same view was strongly asserted in the Court of Chancery and in the Court of Errors. The point there decided was that a statute providing for the drainage of a large tract of land overflowed by tidewater, by a corporation chartered for the purpose, none of the members of which owned any lands within the tract, if it could be maintained as an exercise of the right of eminent domain for a public use, yet could not authorize an assessment on the owners of such lands for anything beyond the benefits conferred upon them. But the case was clearly and sharply distinguished from the case of the drainage of lands for the exclusive [illegible] of the owners upon proceedings instituted by some of them.

Chancellor Zabriskie said: "But there is another branch of legislative power that may be referred to, as authorizing the taking of the lands required for the works to drain these meadows. It is the power of the government to prescribe public regulations for the better and more economical management of property of persons whose property adjoins, or which, from some other reason, can be better managed and improved by some joint operation, such as the power of regulating the building of party walls, making and maintaining partition fences and ditches, constructing ditches and sewers for the draining of uplands and marshes, which can more advantageously be drained by a common sewer or ditch. This is a well known legislative power, recognized and treated of by all jurisconsults and writers upon law through the civilized world; a branch of legislative power exercised by this State before and since the Revolution, and before and since the adoption of the present Constitution, and repeatedly recognized by our courts. The Legislature has power to regulate these subjects, either by general law, or by particular laws for certain localities or particular and defined tracts of land. When the Constitution vested the legislative power in the Senate and General Assembly, it conferred the power to make these public regulations as a well-understood part of that legislative power. * * * The principle of them all is, to make an improvement common to all concerned, at the common expense of all. And to effect this object, the Acts provide that the works to effect the drainage may be located on any part of the lands drained, paying the owner of the land thus occupied compensation for the damage by such use. So far private property is taken by them, further it is not. In none of them is the owner divested of his fee, and in most there is no appropriation in which it could be vested, and for all other purposes the title of the land remained in the owner. To effect such common drainage, power was in some cases given to conduct these drains through adjacent lands not owned, upon compensation. All this was an ancient and well known exercise of legislative power and may well be considered as included in the grant of legislative power in the Constitution." 3 C. E. Green, 68-71.

Chief Justice Beasley, in delivering the judgment of the Court of Errors, enforced the same distinction, saying: "This case, with regard to the grounds on which it rests, is to be distinguished from that class of proceedings by which meadows and other lands are drained on the application of the landowners themselves. In the present instance, the State is the sole owner and public necessity or convenience is the only justification of her intervention. But the regulations established by the legislative power whereby the owners of meadow-lands are compelled to submit to an equal burden of the expense incurred in their improvement, are rules of police of the same character as provisions concerning party walls and partition fences. To these cases, therefore, the principle upon which the decision of the present case rests is not to be extended." 3 C. E. Green, 531.

Our full and explicit statements have been since treated by the courts of New Jersey as finally establishing the constitutionality of such statutes.

In State v. Blake, 6 Vroom, 208, and 7 Id., 442, a statute authorizing a tract of swamps and marshlands to be drained by commissioners elected by the owners of the lands, and the entire expense assessed upon all the owners, was held to be constitutional, although no appeal was given from the assessment. In the Supreme Court it was said: "This branch of legislative power which regulates the construction of ditches and secures the drainage of meadows and marshy lands has been exercised so long, and is so fully recognized, that it is now too late to call it in question. It is clearly affirmed in the Tide Water Co. v. Coster, and cannot be opened to discussion." 6 Vroom, 211. And the Court of Errors, in a unanimous judgment, approved this statement of the Supreme Court, as well as that of Chief Justice Beasley, in Coster v. Tide Water Co., above quoted. 7 Vroom, 447, 448. [313]

The constitutionality of the Statute of 1871, under which the proceedings in the case at bar were had, was upheld by the Supreme Court and the Court of Errors upon the ground of the previous decisions. Re Lower Chatham Drainage, 6 Vroom, 497, 501; Re Pequest River Drainage, 10 Id., 433, 434; 12 Id., 175, 179; 13 Id., 553, 554, and 14 Id., 456. The further suggestion made by the Supreme Court in 6 Vroom, 501, 506, and 10 Id., 434, that this statute could be maintained as a taking of private property for a public use, was disapproved by the Court of Errors in 12 Id., 178.

In Kean v. Drainage Co., 16 Vroom, 91, cited for the plaintiffs in error, the statute that was held unconstitutional created a private corporation with power to drain lands without the consent or application of any of the owners; and the Supreme Court observed that in the opinions of the Court of Errors in the present case and in Coster v. Tide Water Co., the distinction was clearly drawn between meadow drainage for the exclusive benefit of the owners to be done at their sole expense, and drainage undertaken by the public primarily as a matter of public concern, in which case the assessment upon landowners must be limited to benefits imparted. 16 Vroom, 94.

This review of the cases clearly shows that general laws for the drainage of large tracts of swamps and lowlands, upon proceedings instituted by some of the proprietors of the lands to compel all to contribute to the expense of their drainage, have been maintained by the courts of New Jersey (without reference to the power of taking private property for the public use under the right of eminent domain, or to the power of suppressing a nuisance dangerous to the public health) as a just and constitutional exercise of the power of the Legislature to establish regulations by which adjoining lands, held by various owners in severalty, and in the improvement of which all have a common interest, but which, by reason of the peculiar natural condition of the whole tract, cannot be improved or enjoyed by any of them without the concurrence of all, may be reclaimed and made useful to all at their joint expense. The case comes within the principle upon which [614] this court upheld the validity of general mill Acts in Head v. Amoskeag Manufacturing Co., 113 U. S., 9 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 89].

It is also well settled by the decisions of the courts of New Jersey that such proceedings are not within the provision of the Constitution of that State securing the right of trial by jury. New Jersey Constitution of 1776, art. 22; Constitution of 1844, art. 1, § 7; Scudder v. Trenton Delaware Falls Co., Saxt., 694, 721–725; Re Lower Chatham Drainage, 7 Vroom, 442; Howe v. Plainfield, 8 Id., 145.

The Statute of 1871 is applicable to any tract of land within the State which is subject to overflow from freshets, or which is usually in low, marshy, boggy or wet condition. It is only upon the application of at least five owners of separate lots of land included in the tract that a plan of drainage can be adopted. All persons interested have opportunity by public notice to object to the appointment of commissioners to execute that plan, and no commissioners can be appointed against the remonstrance of the owners of the greater part of the lands. All persons interested have also opportunity by public notice to be heard before the court on the commissioners' report of the expense of the work, and of the lands which in their judgment ought to contribute; as well as before the commissioners, and, on any error [615] in law or in the principles of assessment, before the court, upon the amount of the assessment.

As the statute is applicable to all lands of the same kind, and as no person can be assessed under it for the expense of drainage without notice and opportunity to be heard, the plaintiffs in error have neither been denied the equal protection of the laws, nor been deprived of their property without due process of law, within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S., 27, 31 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 923, 924]; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S., 90 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 678]; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S., 97 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 616]; Hagar v. Reclamation District, 111 U. S., 701 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 569].

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

523 BEECHER MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

AYWATER MANUFACTURING COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 523, 524.)

Patent law—patentability.

The use in succession of two distinct pairs of dies, of well-known kinds, not combined in one machine nor co-operating to one result, but each pair doing by itself its own work, is not a patentable invention.

[No 224.]

Argued Apr. 23, 1885. Decided, May, 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

Head note by Mr. Justice GRAY.

The history and facts of the case appear i the opinion of the court.

Messrs. H. O. Platt and H. T. Fenton for appellant.

Messrs. J. M. Wilson, Geo. S. Prindl and Charles R. Ingersoll for appellees.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion o the court:

This is an appeal form a decree for an in junction and damages for the infringement o a patent issued to Robert R. Miller, on Febru ary 22, 1870, and reissued to his assigns o May 6, 1879, for an improvement in dies fo forming the clip-arms of kingbolts for wagons 8 Fed. Rep. 608.

According to the description in the specifica tion, such bolts are made by taking an iron ro of suitable length, splitting it for about tw inches at one end, and turning the forks o arms outwards; then heating the rod, placin the body in a hole in a block or die grooved t receive the arms, and striking it with a plan faced upper die, so as to force the arms int and make them take the shape of the groove and afterwards placing it between two othe dies, which give the arms the proper bend, t fit them to the axletree of a wagon. With th subsequent shaping of the collar and stem o the bolt, this patent has nothing to do.

In the original patent, the patentee state that he did not claim either of the dies sep rately, and claimed only "the series of dies (designating them by letters) "for forming th clip-arms and wings of the lower ends o kingbolts for wagons, said dies being construc ed and operating substantially as herein show and described." In the reissue, he claimed: The first pair of dies, "constructed and com bined substantially as and for the purpos shown." 2. "The series of dies" (designate by letters) "for forming clip kingbolts, sub stantially as shown and described."

The first claim of the reissue is bad, not onl because it was for something the patentee ha expressly disclaimed in the original patent, bu because, as the evidence clearly shows, the was nothing new in the dies themselves.

The second claim of the reissue, like th single claim of the original patent, for the u in succession, or, in the patentee's phrase, "th series," of the two pairs of old dies, the o pair to shape the arms of the bolt, and the oth to give those arms the requisite curve, does n show any patentable invention. The two pai of dies were not combined in one machine, ar did not co-operate to one result. Each pair w used by itself, and might be so used at any di tance of time or place from the other; and the two were used at the same place and in in mediate succession of time, the result of the a tion of each was separate and distinct, and w in no way influenced or affected by the actio of the other. This was no combination th would sustain a patent. Hailes v. Van Wa mer, 20 Wall., 353 [87 U. S., bk. 22, L. e 241]; Pickering v. McCullough, 104 U. S., 3 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 749]; Stephenson v. R. R. C 114 U. S., 149 [ante, 58].

Decree reversed, and case remanded with dir tions to dismiss the bill.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

ARTHUR GEORGE BROWN, Admr. of CHARLES MACALESTER, Deceased, Appt.,

v.

STATE OF MARYLAND ET AL.

(See U. C., "Macalester's Admr. v. Maryland," Reporter's ed., 598-606.)

Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company—rights of State of Maryland—injunction against general creditor to protect.

Under the Statutes of Maryland of 1834, chap. [illegible], chap. [illegible], chap. 396, and 1844, chap. 281, [illegible] the instruments executed pursuant to those [illegible], the tolls and revenues of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company are mortgaged to the State of Maryland, to secure the repayment of [illegible] by the State to the company, and the [illegible] of dividends and interest on the stock subscribed for by the State; subject, in the first place, to the appropriation of so much of the tolls and revenues as is necessary to keep the canal in repair, to [illegible] the necessary supply of water, and to pay [illegible] of officers and annual expenses; and, in [illegible] place, to a mortgage to trustees to secure the payment of certain bonds of the company. [illegible] in equity of the State and of such [illegible], even before the State has taken possession under its mortgages, a general creditor of the company, who at the time of contracting his debt, [illegible] of the provisions of the statutes and of [illegible] mortgages, will be restrained from levying on money deposited by the company in a bank, and [illegible] such necessary expenses.

[No. 253.]

[illegible] Apr. 15, 16, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Stewart Brown and Arthur [illegible] Brown, for appellant.

Mr. Chas. J. M. Gwinn and Charles [illegible] Roberts, Atty-Gen., for the State of Maryland, appellee.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an appeal from a decree in equity of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, restraining a judgment creditor of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company from levying upon money deposited by the company in a bank in Baltimore. The case appeared by the record to be as follows:

The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company was incorporated, and constructed a canal from Georgetown in the District of Columbia to Cumberland in the State of Maryland, under Statutes of Virginia and Maryland of 1824, confirmed by the Act of Congress of March 3, 1825, [illegible] 4 Stat. at L., 101, 793-802.

Under the Statute of Maryland of 1834, chap. [illegible], the State of Maryland lent to the company [illegible] of $2,000,000, to be used in the construction of the canal; and the company, on [illegible], to secure the repayment of that [illegible], made to the State a mortgage [illegible] and singular the lands and tenements, [illegible], estates and securities, goods and [illegible], property and rights, now or at any time hereafter to be acquired, and the net tolls and revenues of the said company." No part of that [illegible], or of the interest accrued thereon, was ever paid.

Under the Statute of Maryland of 1835, chap. 395, the State subscribed and paid for 30,000 shares, and under the Statute of 1838, chap. 396, 13,750 shares, together constituting a majority of the stock in the company; first receiving from the company, as required by each statute, an instrument in writing under seal, by which the company guaranteed to the State the payment, out of the profits of the work, of 6 per cent yearly on the money paid to it by the State under that statute, until the clear annual profits of the canal should be more than sufficient to discharge the sums which the company should be liable to pay annually to the State, and should be adequate to a dividend of 6 per cent among its stockholders, and further agreed that thereafter the State should receive, upon the stock by it subscribed for, a proportional dividend upon the profits of the work as declared from time to time. The company never paid to the State any part of such dividends or interest. [600]

On May 15, 1839, the company, as required by the Statute of 1838, and to secure the payment to the State of interest for three years at the yearly rate of 5 per cent on stock issued by the State under that statute to the amount of $1,375,000, made another mortgage to the State of its lands and tenements, property and effects, as well as of its net tolls and revenue. No part of this interest was paid.

The Statute of Maryland of 1844, chap. 281, authorized the company to borrow money and issue its bonds to the amount of $1,700,000, to provide means for completing its canal to Cumberland, and contained the following provisions:

Sec. 2. "The bonds so issued as aforesaid shall appear on the face of the same to be preferred liens on the revenues of said company, according to the provisions of this Act, and with the assent of the said company, as is hereinafter provided for; the said bonds, without any preference or priority over each other on account of date, shall be preferred liens on the revenues and tolls that may accrue to the said company from the entire and every part of the canal and its works between Georgetown and Cumberland, which are hereby pledged and appropriated to the payment of the same, and the interest to accrue thereon, in the manner hereinafter mentioned: Provided, however, that this State shall in no case be bound or held responsible for the payment of said bonds, or the interest thereon: And provided further, that the president and directors of the said company shall, from time to time and at all times hereafter, have the privilege and authority to use and apply such portion of said revenues and tolls as in their opinion may be necessary to put and keep the said canal in good condition and repair for transportation, provide the requisite supply of water, and pay the salaries of officers and agents, and the current expenses of the said company."

Sec. 4. That the rights and liens of this State upon the revenues of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company shall be held and considered as waived, deferred and postponed in favor of the bonds that may be issued under the aforegoing sections, so as to make the said bonds, and the interest to accrue thereon, preferred and absolute liens on said revenues, ac- [601] cording to the provisions of the second section of this Act, until said bonds and interest shall be fully paid.

[illegible] by Mr. Justice GRAY.

Sec. 5. That semi-annually in each year, as the same shall be payable, said Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company shall pay the interest on the bonds constituting preferred liens as aforesaid, to the party or parties respectively entitled thereto, or to their agent or agents authorized to receive the same; and as soon as the net revenues of said company, arising from the canal and its works between Georgetown and Cumberland as aforesaid, shall be more than sufficient to pay the interest that may become due and in arrear upon said bonds, with the costs of remittance and exchange, if there be any, and such further sum, not exceeding $5,000 annually, as may be necessary to pay the interest on the bonds or certificates of debt heretofore issued by said company to the creditors of the Potomac Company, for claims adjusted under the twelfth section of the charter of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company; the said company shall annually pay to the Treasurer of the Western Shore of this State, who shall receive the same under the responsibilities of his office, the surplus net revenues as aforesaid, to such amount as may be necessary as an adequate sinking fund, not exceeding the sum of $25,000 a year, on an average of years, dating from the first day of January next after the completion of the canal to Cumberland; which sum or sums shall from time to time be invested by said treasurer, and be accumulated by him as a sinking fund to pay the principal of said bonds, until a sufficient amount is so paid and accumulated for that purpose.

Sec. 6. That the president and directors of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company be, and they are hereby, authorized to execute any deed, mortgage or other instrument of writing, that may hereafter be deemed necessary or expedient to give the fullest effect to the aforegoing provisions.

[602] Sec. 7. That the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company shall execute to this State and deliver to the Treasurer of the Western Shore of Maryland a further mortgage on the said canal, its lands, tolls and revenues, subject to the liens and pledges by the aforegoing provisions of this Act made, created or authorized, as an additional security for the payment of the loan made by this State to the said company under the Act of December session, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, chapter two hundred and forty-one, and the interest due and in arrear and which hereafter may accrue thereon; which mortgage shall be submitted to the Attorney-General of this State, and be approved by him as sufficient in law."

On January 8, 1846, the company, pursuant to section 7 of that Statute, and as an additional security for the payment of the $2,000,000 before lent by the State of Maryland to the company, under the Statute of 1834, and interest, executed a mortgage of all its lands and tenements, its canal and appurtenances, "embracing the entire undertaking, and the tolls and revenues that may hereafter accrue," and all its property and rights; "subject, nevertheless, to all and singular the liens and pledges by the provisions of the before-mentioned Act of eighteen hundred and forty-four, chapter two hundred and eighty-one, made, created or auth ized, or that have been or may hereafter made, created, given or granted by the s Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, or t president and directors thereof, under or pursuance of the provisions of said A which said liens and pledges are in now to be lessened, impaired or interfered w by this deed, or by anything herein c tained; and subject also to all the other p visions of said Act."

On June 5, 1848, the company execute mortgage, reciting the last provision of the s ond section, as well as the provisions of fourth and sixth sections of the Act of 1844, a conveying to William W. Corcoran and othe trustees, "the revenues and tolls of the ent and every part of the canal and its works tween Georgetown and Cumberland," to cure, after the payment of debts existing thereafter contracted for repairs on the ca and providing the requisite supply of wat and for salaries and current expenses, first, payment of interest on the bonds issued by company under the Act of 1844; second, payment of interest to creditors of the Poton Company; third, the creation of a sinking fu for the redemption of those bonds; with further provisions "That so long as the s canal company shall comply with their agr ment by paying all the interest upon said bo as the same falls due, and by providing an equate sinking fund in the manner specified cording to the provisions of the said Act the final redemption of the said bonds, t shall retain the management of the canal its works, and collect and receive the reven and tolls; but if they fail to comply with th conditions from any cause except a deficie of revenue arising from a failure of busir without fault on the part of said compa said fault to be made to appear by the gran aforesaid, then the grantees may demand shall thereupon receive possession, and s appropriate the said tolls and revenues in manner hereinbefore provided."

In 1854, Charles Macalester, a citizen Pennsylvania, recovered in an action in the cuit Court of the United States for the Dist of Maryland, upon a debt not secured by of the aforesaid mortgages, a judgment $5,471.37 and costs. In 1867, Macalester l ing died, the appellant took out letters of ministration upon his estate in Maryland, became as such administrator plaintiff in action, and judgment was entered for against the company, and he in 1880 issue attachment upon that judgment, and cause to be laid in the hands of a bank in Baltim as garnishee upon moneys standing to the cr of the company on the books of the ba Those moneys were in the possession of bank on deposit, and were exclusively mad of the tolls and revenues received by the c pany in the course of its business, and were ficient to pay the judgment debt, interest costs, but were required to meet the neces expenses of putting and keeping the cana proper navigable condition, after paymen the salaries of officers, and supplying the cessary quantity of water for purposes of n gation.

In 1882, Macalester's administrator ha applied to the court for a judgment of condemnation of so much of the moneys in the hands of the garnishee as would satisfy his judgment debt, interest and costs, bills in equity to restrain further proceedings by him were filed by the State of Maryland, and by the trustees under the mortgage of 1848, setting forth the facts above stated, and also alleging that Bankster and his administrator "had each notice, before acquiring any of their respective rights of action in the premises, of all the liens, charges and duties affecting the revenues, tolls and property of the said Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, and were especially charged with knowledge that such portions of the revenues and tolls of said Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, as were necessary to put and keep the canal of the said company in good condition and repair for transportation, provide the requisite supply of water, and pay the salaries of officers and agents of the said company, were dedicated and set apart to such purpose by contract with the State of Maryland, and were under said contract exclusively applicable to said purposes."

The administrator filed a demurrer to each bill which was overruled, and a final decree entered against him, and, upon his motion at the same term, the court ordered nunc pro tunc that the two suits be consolidated, "but so that the validity, force and effect of neither of said decrees shall be by this order affected or impaired." He then appealed to this court.

An ordinary mortgagee of real estate, who does not take possession under his mortgage, is not entitled to the rents and profits as against the mortgagor or his attaching creditors; and the same rule holds good in the case of a mortgage of a railroad, canal or bridge corporation of its tolls and revenues, which provides a mode in which the mortgagee shall take possession, and until that mode is availed of, leaves the tolls and revenues in the control of the mortgagor, to be disposed of as he sees fit. R. R. Co. v. Cowdrey, 11 Wall., 459 [78 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 208]; Gilman v. Illinois & Miss. Telegraph Co., 91 U. S., 603 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 405]; Judge Co. v. Heidelbach, 94 U. S., 798 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 344].

But by the Statutes of the State of Maryland relating to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, and the mortgages executed pursuant to those statutes, the application of the tolls and revenues of the canal was not left to the disposal of the corporation.

The State of Maryland, regarding the construction and maintenance of the canal as an object of great importance and benefit to the public, had lent to the canal company large sums of money, and subscribed for a majority of its stock, and, to secure its loans and investments, had taken from the company mortgages upon the canal and all its tolls and revenues.

By the Statute of 1844, chap. 281, the State authorized the company, in order to obtain additional means, to issue bonds secured by mortgage to trustees of its net tolls and revenues; the State waived its own lien upon the gross revenues so far only as to subordinate it to the lien of that mortgage; subject to that lien, the State took a new mortgage as additional security for the repayment of its original loan to the company; and the statute, under and pursuant to which these two mortgages were executed, and to which each was made subject, expressly provided that the company should have authority to use and apply so much of the gross tolls and revenues as might be necessary to keep the canal in repair, to provide the requisite supply of water, and to pay salaries and current expenses.

The necessary effect of this arrangement was for the promotion of the public object, as well as for the ultimate benefit of the mortgagees, to appropriate the tolls and revenues in the first instance to the payment of necessary repairs and expenses.

The debt of the judgment creditor in this case was a general debt of the company, and not a bond secured by the trust mortgage, nor a debt contracted for repairs, or salaries, or other current expenses. It is alleged in the bills and admitted by the demurrers, that the creditor at the time of contracting his debt, had notice of all the charges, liens and duties affecting the tolls and revenues, and especially of the provision by which they were appropriated, in the first instance, to the payment of necessary expenses. And the money of the corporation, which he seeks to apply to the payment of his debt, is needed for those expenses. [606]

It follows that the judgment creditor has no equity, and that the State of Maryland and the trustees for bondholders, whose security will be affected by the diversion of this money from its lawful object, are entitled to injunctions.

This conclusion accords with the adjudication of the Court of Appeals of Maryland in Brady v. State, 26 Md., 290, and with the opinions expressed by that court in earlier and later cases. Boyd v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co., 17 Md., 195; Virginia v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co., 32 Md., 501.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[587]

WABASH, ST. LOUIS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

BENJAMIN F. HAM ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 587-598.)

Railroads—consolidation—agreement as to old bonds—subsequent mortgages and foreclosure—rights of holders of unsecured bonds of one of the old companies.

*Four railroad corporations, whose roads formed a connecting line in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, were consolidated, according to the statutes of those States, under an agreement in which the capital on the basis of which each entered into the consolidation was described as composed of the amount of its stock and of its mortgage bonds and other bonds, and it was agreed that all those bonds should, "as to the principal and interest thereof, as the same shall respectively fall due, be protected by the consolidated company, according to the true effect and meaning of the bonds." Two years afterwards, the consolidated company, to secure its own bonds payable at a later date than the old ones, executed a mortgage of all its property to trustees, which recited that it had been deemed for the interest of the corporation as well as for the interest of all the various classes of existing bonds (which were specifically described) that the whole of them should be consolidated into one mortgage debt upon equitable principles; and provided that a sufficient amount of the new bonds should be retained "to retire, in such manner and upon such terms as the directors may from time to time prescribe," an equal amount of the old bonds. Six years later, the consolidated company made another mortgage to secure other bonds, for nonpayment of which it was afterwards foreclosed by sale of the whole property. Held, that the property was not subject to any lien in favor of bonds of one of the old companies, issued after the passage of the statutes authorizing the consolidation, unsecured by any mortgage or lien before the consolidation, and the holders of which had not exchanged or offered to exchange them for bonds of the consolidated company before the proceedings for foreclosure.

*Head note by Mr. Justice GRAY.

[No. 1118.]

Submitted Jan. 8, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Wager Swayne, H. S. Greene and Abram Hendricks, for appellant.

Mr. Charles W. Hassler, for appellees:

It is a well established principle that the property of a corporation is a trust fund liable for the debts due its creditors. It is equally well established that a corporation cannot denude itself of its property and thus deprive its creditors of their rights as against its property.

Mumma v. Potomac Co., 8 Pet., 286; R.R. Co. v. Howard, 7 Wall., 392 (74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 117); Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall., 610 (84 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 731); Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S., 56 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 220); Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S., 362 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 483); Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S., 143 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 968).

Equity will not permit a transfer of property without paying debts.

Ins. Co. v. Trans. Co., 13 Fed. Rep., 516; The Key City, 14 Wall., 660 (81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 898).

Equity does not permit felo de se by a corporation.

Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S., 266 (Bk. 22, L. ed. 896); Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S., 472 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 197); Blair v. R. Co., 22 Fed. Rep., 36.

Creditors will be preferred to stockholders.

Ogilvie v. Ins. Co., 22 How., 380 (63 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 349); Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S., 45 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 203); King v. R. Co., 2 Fed. Rep., 36.

The Indiana courts have held that the lien may be assigned with the debt.

Nichols v. Glover, 41 Ind., 24; Johns v. Sewell, 33 Ind., 1; Wiseman v. Hutchison, 20 Ind., 40; Kern v. Haelerigg, 11 Ind., 443.

And the courts of Ohio have held that this lien is not cut off excepting by the rights of a purchaser without notice.

White v. Denman, 1 Ohio St., 110; Neil v. Kinney, 11 Ohio St., 58.

The trust created by the consolidated mortgage in favor of the holders of equipment bonds was a valid and executed trust.

1 Perry, Trusts, §§ 98, 112, 248; Martin v. Funk, 75 N. Y., 134; Train v. Gold, 5 Pick., 384; Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S., 306 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 999).

Acceptance by the stockholders was not essential.

1 Perry, Trusts, §§ 593, 594, 602, and ca cited.

It could only be revoked by the full cons of all parties in interest.

1 Perry, Trusts, § 104, and cases cited; M tin v. Funk, supra.

A trustee cannot denude himself of his tr so as to cause the trust to fail.

Moyan v. Hays, 1 Johns. Ch., 339; Diefend v. Spraker, 10 N. Y., 246.

A purchaser with notice of equitable rig of another holds the property subject to su rights.

1 Perry, Trusts, §§ 217, 828; Ketchum v. Louis, supra; Wormley v. Wormley, 8 Wheat. 4

Knowledge of a fact is knowledge of its gal effect.

Wormley v. Wormley, 8 Wheat., 448; Br v. Ware, 15 Pet., 114.

Messrs. R. P. Ranney, Geo. F. Comstock, C. Sprague and John G. Milburn, counsel the plaintiff in a suit pending in the Supre Court of Ohio, involving the validity of t lien of the equipment bonds, were permitted the court, with consent of counsel, to file b'ef in support of the position of appellees

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion the court:

This was a appeal from a decree in equi declaring certain bonds issued by the Tole and Wabash Railway Company to be a l upon property formerly owned by that co pany, and since transferred by it to the Tole Wabash and Western Railway Company, a c poration created by its consolidation with th other railroad corporations. 11 Biss., 510. T material facts appearing by the record were follows:

The Toledo and Wabash Railway Compa a corporation organized under the laws of States of Ohio and Indiana, owning a railr extending from Toledo in Ohio to Wabash Indiana—its property in Ohio being subject a first mortgage for $900,000, and a sec mortgage for $1,000,000, and its property in diana subject to a first mortgage for $2,500,0 and a second mortgage for $1,500,000—on 1 vember 2, 1862, executed and issued for va bonds to the amount of $600,000, styled "Equ ment Bonds," payable in New York on Ma 1883, with coupons attached for semi-annual terest at the yearly rate of 7 per cent; and c vertible at the option of the holder, at any t within five years, into common stock of company at par. The company paid inte on those bonds to May 1, 1865.

On May 29, 1865, no lien of any kind t existing in favor of "equipment bonds," Toledo and Wabash Railway Company three railroad corporations incorporated by States of Indiana and Illinois, whose ro formed a continuous line from Toledo to Mississippi River, entered into an agreemen consolidate their railroads, property and cap stock, and to become one corporation under name of the Toledo, Wabash and West Railway Company, with a capital stock $15,000,000, "upon the basis and condit hereinafter to be specified," the material p of which were as follows:

"The Toledo and Wabash Railway Comp [illegible] into said consolidation on the following [illegible], viz.: Its capital is $10,000,000, composed [illegible] 1st mortgage bonds, $3,400,000; 2d [illegible] bonds, $2,500,000; convertible equip[illegible] bonds, $800,000; convertible preferred [illegible]; common stock, $2,500,000."

The basis on which each of the three other [illegible] "enters into said consolidation" [illegible] set forth in like manner, by which [illegible] of the three together appeared to be [illegible], composed of mortgage bonds, [illegible], and stock $2,686,000; and one of [illegible] corporations assigned to the consolidated [illegible] certain mortgage bonds, and agreed to [illegible] in cash the sum of $780,300, required [illegible] road in equal condition with the [illegible] and Wabash Railway.

"It is further agreed that the bonds and other [illegible] hereinabove specified, in the manner and [illegible] specified, and not otherwise pro[illegible] for in this agreement, shall, as to the prin[illegible] and interest thereof, as the same shall re[illegible] fall due, be protected by the said [illegible] company, according to the true [illegible] and effect of the instruments or bonds [illegible] such indebtedness of the several con[illegible] companies may be evidenced."

"The directors shall have power to issue any [illegible] and further bonds of said corporation to [illegible] amount that the indebtedness of the [illegible] company at any time shall not ex[illegible] the amount of the capital stock authorized [illegible] agreement, and they may secure the [illegible] issued by mortgage or other lien on [illegible] property of the consolidated company, or [illegible] thereof."

"The agreement of consolidation was ratified [illegible] directors and stockholders of all the [illegible], and the stockholders of the old com[illegible] became stockholders in the new one; [illegible] company came into possession of all [illegible] and property of the four old com[illegible], and received and distributed the earn[illegible]

"On February 1, 1867, the consolidated com[illegible] executed to trustees a mortgage of all its [illegible], property and franchises, to secure [illegible] to be issued by it, to the amount of [illegible], payable in forty years, with inter[illegible] at the yearly rate of 7 per cent, and convert[illegible] at the option of the holders, at any time [illegible] years, into common stock of the [illegible] at par. The mortgage recited the [illegible], and also contained the following [illegible]

"Whereas at the time of such consolidation [illegible] property of said various companies was sub[illegible] certain bonded debts, and the mortgages [illegible] by said several companies, or by other [illegible] corporations which, at the time of the [illegible] of said debts and mortgages, were the [illegible] of the property so consolidated; and [illegible] all the bonded debt of said company, [illegible] of the first part, including that secured by [illegible] mortgages, as well as that not secured by any [illegible], now amounts in the aggregate to the [illegible] $[illegible], besides interest; and where[illegible] said bonded debt, as it now exists, is repre[illegible] and made up as follows, viz.:" Then fol[illegible] a statement of the various classes of [illegible] bonds, above mentioned, amounting [illegible] to $[illegible]; the equipment bonds, [illegible] and bonds issued by the consolidated company, due April 1, 1871, $1,000,000; and the last two classes described as not secured by any mortgage.

"And whereas it has been deemed for the interest of the said party of the first part, as well as for the benefit of the holders of all said various classes of bonds, that the whole of the same should be consolidated into one and the same mortgage debt, upon equitable principles; and whereas the increasing freight business of the road of the party of the first part requires additional equipments to do the same; and whereas it has been deemed expedient for the preservation of the bridges on the line of said road that the same should be covered, and that additional depot accommodations should be obtained, and that the road through its entire length should be fenced; and whereas the expenses to be incurred for the above should be provided for by the creation of a new capital; and whereas for the purposes aforesaid, and for the objects herein stated, the said company, party of the first part, has resolved to make and issue its [591] bonds to the extent of $15,000,000, and to secure the payment of the same by a mortgage on its entire property; and that of the amount of said bonds to be made and issued thereon should be retained $13,800,000 to retire, in such manner and upon such terms as the directors of said company may from time to time prescribe, a like amount of the bonds of the various companies hereinabove enumerated and described and representing the aforesaid bonded debt, and that the balance of said bonds, to wit: $1,700,000 thereof, should be used to provide the said additional equipment and other improvements hereinabove mentioned, and for such additional purposes as the said directors may deem advisable."

Bonds to the amount of $2,700,000 only were issued under that mortgage; $1,700,000 for money borrowed, and $1,000,000 to retire the bonds of the consolidated company that became due April 1, 1871.

The consolidated company paid the interest on the equipment bonds until November 1, 1874, after which no payment was made of interest thereon.

On April 1, 1873, the consolidated company executed to the trustees under the mortgage of February 1, 1867, and in order "to give assurance to all persons whom it may in anywise concern that the said reserved bonds shall not, nor shall any or either of them, be used for any other purpose than the retiring of the said funded debt in some part thereof," a supplemental agreement, by which it covenanted with the trustees, and with all such parties, that it would not "make or issue, or attempt to make or issue, any of the remaining $12,800,000 aforesaid bonds secured by the said indenture of mortgage, except for the purpose of, and subsequent to or simultaneously with, the retiring of an equal amount of the balance remaining of the said funded debt."

On February 1, 1878, two months before the execution of the agreement of further assurance, the consolidated company made another mortgage to secure other bonds to be issued by the company to the amount of $5,000,000, payable in gold. Default having been made in the payment of interest on bonds so issued, proceedings for the foreclosure of that mortgage [592] were instituted and a receiver appointed on February 22, 1875, and a decree was afterwards entered for the sale of the railroad, franchises and other property of the company, subject to the liens of all earlier mortgages, and without prejudice to any claim that might be made by the holders of the equipment bonds. Under that decree the property was sold and conveyed to the purchasers, who afterwards became the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company, the appellant in this case.

None of the equipment bonds were ever exchanged for bonds under the mortgage of 1867, nor did any holders of equipment bonds demand an exchange until after May 1, 1875.

The Statute of Ohio of April 10, 1856, in force at the time of the issue of the equipment bonds and of the consolidation in question, by section 1, made it lawful for any railroad company in Ohio to consolidate its capital stock with the capital stock of any railroad in an adjoining State, whenever their roads united so as to form a continuous line; by section 2, provided that the consolidation should be made by agreement of the directors of each company, "prescribing the terms and conditions thereof," and that such agreement, when ratified by the stockholders, should "be deemed and taken to be the agreement and act of consolidation of said companies"; and also contained the following provisions:

"Sec. 3. Upon the making and perfecting the agreement and Act, as provided in the preceding section, and filing the same, or a copy, with the Secretary of State, the several corporations, parties thereto, shall be deemed and taken to be one corporation, possessing within this State all the rights, privileges and franchises, and subject to all the restrictions, disabilities and duties of such corporation of this State so consolidated."

"Sec. 5. Upon the election of the first board of directors of the corporation created by said agreement of consolidation and by the provisions of this Act, all and singular the rights, privileges and franchises of each of said corporations, parties to the same, and all the property, real, personal and mixed, and debts due on account of subscriptions of stock or other things in action, shall be deemed to be transferred and vested in such new corporation without further act or deed; and all property, all rights of way, and all other interests, shall be as effectually the property of the new corporation as they were of the former corporations, parties to said agreement; and the title to real estate, either by deed, gift, grant, or by appropriations under the laws of this State, shall not be deemed to revert or be impaired by reason of this Act; Provided, that all rights of creditors, and all liens upon the property of either of said corporations, shall be preserved unimpaired, and the respective corporations may be deemed to be in existence to preserve the same; and all debts, liabilities and duties of either of said companies shall henceforth attach to said new corporation and be enforced against it to the same extent as if said debts, liabilities and duties had been contracted by it."

"Sec. 7. Suits may be brought and maintained against such new company in the courts of this State for all causes of action in the same manner as against other railroad companies in this State." 1 Swan & Critch. Stat., 327, 3

The Statute of Indiana in force at the sa time, upon the subject of consolidation, was follows:

"Any railroad company heretofore organiz under the general or special laws of this St shall have the power to intersect, join and u their railroad with any other railroad c structed or in progress of construction in t State, or in any adjoining State, at such po on the State line, or at any other point, as m be mutually agreed upon by said compani and such railroad companies are authori to merge and consolidate the stock of the spective companies, making one joint st company of the two railroads thus connect upon such terms as may be by them mutu agreed upon, in accordance with the laws of adjoining State with whose road or roads c nections are thus formed; Provided, their ch ters authorize said railroads to go to the St line, or to such point of intersection." St Feb. 23, 1853, §1; 1 Gavin & H. Stat., 526.

The only provision of the Statutes of Illin cited in argument, was the provision that "Su consolidation may take place whenever the s companies shall respectively agree upon terms and conditions of the same." Stat. F 28, 1854, chap. 9, § 2; 1 Gross. Stat., 537.

The claim of the holders of the equipm bond to a lien on the property of the Tole Wabash and Western Railway Company asserted upon several grounds:

1. It was contended that the property of Toledo and Wabash Railway Company wa trust fund for all its creditors, and that up the consolidation the Toledo, Wabash and W ern Railway Company took the property of Toledo and Wabash Railway Company charg with the payment of all its debts.

The property of a corporation is doubtles trust fund for the payment of its debts, in sense that when the corporation is lawfully d solved and all its business wound up, or wh it is insolvent, all its creditors are entitled equity to have their debts paid out of the c porate property before any distribution ther among the stockholders. It is also true in case of a corporation, as in that of a natu person, that any conveyance of property of debtor, without authority of law, and in fra of existing creditors, is void as against the Story, Eq. Jur., § 1252; Curran v. Arkans 15 How., 304; Graham v. R. R. Co., 102 U. 148, 161 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 106, 111]; R. R. Co. Howard, 7 Wall., 392 [74 U. S., bk. 19, L. 117]; Goodwin v. Cincinnati & Whitewater Ca Co., 18 Ohio St., 169.

But upon the consolidation, under expr authority of statute, of two or more solve corporations, the business of the old corpo tions is not wound up, nor their property questrated or distributed, but the very obje of the consolidation, and of the statutes whi permit it, is to continue the business of old corporations. Whether the old corporatio are dissolved into the new corporation, or continued in existence under a new name a with new powers, and whether, in either ca the consolidated company takes the proper of each of the old corporations charged with lien for the payment of the debts of that c poration, depend upon the terms of the agr [illegible] of consolidation, and of the statutes under [illegible] authority that consolidation is effected.

[593]

[illegible] the present case, before the consolidation, [illegible] lien of any kind existed in favor of the equipment bonds; and the consolidation was made under and pursuant to statutes of Ohio, [illegible] and Illinois, passed before the issue of [illegible] bonds, and to which the contract of the [illegible] was therefore subject.

[illegible] effect of the Ohio Consolidation Act [illegible] merge the old corporations into the new [illegible] which took their place, succeeded to their [illegible] and assumed their liabilities. Shields [illegible] 96 U. S., 319 [Bk. 24, L. ed., 357]; R. R. [illegible] Georgia, 98 U. S., 359 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 185]. [illegible] liabilities imposed by that statute upon the [illegible] corporation for the debts of the old ones, [illegible] same as theirs, neither greater nor less. [illegible] provision of section 5 that "all rights [illegible] and all liens upon the property of [illegible] of said corporations, shall be preserved [illegible] clearly distinguishes debts secured [illegible] from debts not so secured, and indicates [illegible] to create a new lien in favor of [illegible] who before had none, but simply [illegible] to each class of creditors the rights [illegible] to it before the consolidation. The [illegible] provisions of this section, that "the [illegible] corporations may be deemed to be in [illegible] to preserve the same," and that all [illegible] of either of the old companies shall [illegible] attach to the new corporation and [illegible] against it to the same extent as if [illegible] contracted them, lead to the same con[illegible].

The Statute of Indiana is less specific in its [illegible], but expressly authorizes railroad [illegible] within the State to consolidate with [illegible] companies in an adjoining State "in [illegible] with the laws of the adjoining [illegible]," and, as is well settled by decisions of [illegible] Supreme Court of Indiana, does not give [illegible] creditors of the old companies [illegible] precedence as against a subsequent [illegible] of the consolidated property. Mc[illegible] v. Morrison, 16 Ind., 172; R. R. Co. v. [illegible] 29 Ind., 465; Paine v. R. R. Co., 31 Ind., [illegible]; R. R. Co. v. Hendricks, 41 Ind., 48. [illegible] was not suggested in argument that there [illegible] any material difference in the statutes of [illegible] upon the subject.

The court, therefore, concurs in opinion [illegible] the Circuit Court, that the mere fact of [illegible], under these statutes, did not [illegible] lien in favor of the equipment bonds.

[illegible] was next contended that the stipulation [illegible] agreement of consolidation that the [illegible] and debts therein specified of the former [illegible] shall "be protected by the said [illegible] company" created a lien in their [illegible]

[illegible] "as to the principal and interest [illegible] respectively fall due," and "according to the true meaning and effect" of the [illegible] or bonds which are the evidence [illegible] that it is stipulated that the [illegible] "be protected by the said consolidated company", and the stipulation covers [illegible] by mortgage as well as unsecured [illegible]. The agreement "to protect" referring [illegible] time of payment, and "the true meaning [illegible]" of the equipment bonds having been [illegible] to create only a personal and unsecured debt of one of the former companies, the words "shall be protected" must have the same meaning which they ordinarily have in promises of men of business "to protect" drafts or other debts, not made or contracted by themselves, that is to say, a personal obligation to see that they are paid at maturity.

3. It was further contended that, by the [597] transfer of the property of the Toledo and Wabash Railway Company to the consolidated corporation, and the enumeration of the equipment bonds in the basis on which the former company entered into the consolidation, those bonds were part of the consideration of the transfer, and that the case comes within the principle of a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money.

But we are unable to perceive any analogy between the two cases. The doctrine of vendor's lien applies only to sales of real estate. The consolidation of the stock and property of several corporations into one was not a sale; and it did not affect real estate only, but included franchises and personal property.

4. The remaining question is whether the holders of the equipment bonds have acquired any lien under the provisions of the mortgage executed in 1867 by the consolidated company of all its franchises and property, to secure the payment of new bonds to be issued by that company.

It is true that the object of that mortgage, as appears by its recitals, was that the whole of the debts of the consolidated company, including the debts of either of the companies out of which it had been formed, whether secured by mortgage, or, as in the case of the equipment bonds, not secured at all, "should be consolidated into one and the same mortgage debt, upon equitable principles." The mortgage accordingly provided that $13,300,000 of the new bonds should be retained, in order "to retire, in such manner and upon such terms as the directors of said company may from time to time prescribe," a like amount of the earlier bonds.

But that mortgage secured only bonds issued under it, and those bonds were all to be payable in forty years from its date. The directors were authorized to exchange such bonds for existing bonds, and it is possible that any holders of existing bonds might have compelled such an exchange by seasonably applying for it. But the company could not compel any bondholder to accept, as a subsitute for the bonds which he held, new bonds payable at a later period. The equipment bonds were payable according to their terms in 1883, and the bonds issued under the new mortgage would not be payable until 1907. The holders of the equipment bonds [598] might prefer to hold without security their bonds payable in sixteen years, rather than to take instead bonds secured by mortgage, payable twenty-four years later. They took no steps to obtain such an exchange for more than eight years after the execution of the mortgage of 1867, nor until after the institution of proceedings to foreclose the subsequent mortgage, executed by the company in 1873, to secure the payment of a new issue of bonds. The lien created by the latter mortgage took precedence of any claims which were not already se-

[illegible] When the whole [illegible] company was sold [illegible] of the mort- [illegible] mortgages [illegible] property free [illegible] that the prop- [illegible] is not [illegible] holders of [illegible] Court, U. S. [illegible] Br., [illegible] Treasurer of [illegible] State of Vir- [illegible] of license [illegible] terms of the de- [illegible] v. Green- [illegible] remitting the [illegible] the Act of the [illegible] 14, 1882. [illegible] 1885. Decided May [illegible] Court of Appeals [illegible] of the case appear in [illegible]

[illegible] Royall, Daniel H. [illegible] Swayne, Wm. M. [illegible] Hornblower, for [illegible] Gen. of Virginia, [illegible] P. Morrick and A. H. Gar- [illegible] in error.

[illegible] Matthews delivered the opin- [illegible]

[illegible] in error filed his petition, on [illegible] in the Circuit Court of the City [illegible] against Greenhow, the defend- [illegible] Treasurer of the City of Richmond, [illegible] of a rule nisi, commanding the said [illegible] to show cause why a peremptory [illegible] should not be awarded to the plain- [illegible] commanding the said Treasurer to issue to [illegible] a certificate in writing stating [illegible] had made the deposit required by law [illegible] of his license tax, as a sample mer- [illegible] in said city. The petition set forth that [illegible] under made in payment of this deposit con- [illegible] of coupons cut from bonds issued by the State of Virginia, and, by contract with the State therein declared, receivable in payment of all taxes, debts, demands and dues to the State, and that the tender was refused by the Treasurer, and a certificate of deposit withheld, because the 112th section of an Act of the General Assembly of Virginia, approved March 15, 1884, for the purpose of assessing taxes on persons, property, and incomes and licenses, requires that all license taxes shall be paid in gold or silver coin, United States treasury notes, or [illegible] bank notes, and not in coupons, and [illegible] another Act of the General Assembly of t[illegible] State, approved March 7, 1884, to regulate t[illegible] granting of licenses, likewise forbids the pa[illegible] ment of license taxes in coupons.

The alternative writ prayed for was deni[illegible] by the Circuit Court of the City of Richmon[illegible] and, on a petition for a writ of error, its jud[illegible] ment dismissing the petition therefor was [illegible] firmed by the Supreme Court of Appeals of t[illegible] State.

This being a case in which, by mandam[illegible] the plaintiff in error seeks to compel the offic[illegible] of the State of Virginia specifically to rece[illegible] coupons instead of money in payment of lice[illegible] taxes, it comes within the exact terms of the [illegible] cision of a majority of this court in Antoni [illegible] Greenhow, 107 U. S., 769 [Bk. 27, L. ed., 46[illegible] according to which the plaintiff in error is [illegible] mitted to the remedy provided by the Act [illegible] January 14, 1882, entitled "An Act to Prev[illegible] Frauds upon the Commonwealth and the Ho[illegible] ers of Her Securities in the Collection and I[illegible] bursement of Revenues."

The judgment of the Supreme Court of App[illegible] of Virginia is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice Field and Mr. Justice Harl[illegible] adhere to the views expressed in their diss[illegible] ing opinions in Antoni v. Greenhow, but t[illegible] agree that the principles announced by the [illegible] jority in that case, if applied to the pres[illegible] case, require an affirmance of the judgm[illegible] below.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, [illegible]

STEPHEN B. STURGES, Plf. in Err[illegible]

v.

MERCHANT CARTER, Treasurer of R[illegible] land County, Ohio, Successor in Offic[illegible] JOHN A. LEE, Treasurer.

(S. C., Reporter's ed., 511-523.)

Constitutional law—Constitution of Ohio—[illegible] remedy for existing right, not retroacti[illegible] taxation; exemption from.

1. The subpoena of a taxpayer to appear be[illegible] the auditor to give information of all prop[illegible] within his knowledge, not returned for taxa[illegible] and notification while in attendance of the [illegible] tor's purpose to increase the amount so retur[illegible] is a substantial compliance with sec. 2782, R. [illegible] Ohio, requiring the auditor to notify the taxp[illegible] of his purpose to make such increase.

2. The Act of the Legislature of Ohio of Apr[illegible] 1873, providing for the correction of the return[illegible] property for taxation previously made, is no[illegible] troactive under sec. 28, art. 2, of the Constitu[illegible] of that State. It merely gave the State a new [illegible] edy for an existing right.

3. Exemption from taxation must be expr[illegible] in clear and unmistakable terms and canno[illegible] shown by doubtful or ambiguous language.

4. Certificates of stock of a foreign corpor[illegible] held by a citizen of Ohio are taxable in that S[illegible] though a tax is also imposed on the propert[illegible] such corporation situated in the State.

5. Where the record discloses no error in re[illegible] to the amount of the judgment, this court [illegible] sumes the amount correct.

[No. 217.]

Submitted Mar. 31, 1885. Decided May 4, [illegible]

NOTE.—Retrospective statutes; when valid. [illegible] Co. v. Baldwin, 111 U. S., 1, bk. 28, 381, note.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio.

The history and facts appear in the [illegible] of the case by Mr. Justice Woods:

This was an action brought by John A. Lee, [illegible] of Richland County, in the State of [illegible] against Stephen B. Sturges to recover taxes [illegible] for the years, 1874, 1875, 1876 and 1877, [illegible] shares of stock of the value of $100,000 [illegible] Western Union Telegraph Company, [illegible] certain credits and investments owned by [illegible] who during those years was a citizen of [illegible] residing in the City of Mansfield, in said [illegible]. The amount of the taxes sued for was [illegible] with the penalty thereon of 10 per [illegible], amounting to $1,077.68, making a total [illegible] $[illegible].54.50. The controversy in this case [illegible] only to the taxes on the stock of the [illegible] company.

Before the trial, the term of office of Lee, the [illegible] plaintiff, expired, and Merchant Car[illegible] his successor in office, was substituted as [illegible] in his stead. The parties waived a [illegible] by jury and submitted the case to the [illegible] upon the issues of facts as well as of law.

The court made a special finding of facts, [illegible] which it appeared as follows:

For ten years before the commencement of [illegible] the defendant was a citizen of said [illegible] for the years 1874, 1875, 1876 and 1877 [illegible] returns in accordance with law, pur[illegible] to contain full and accurate lists of [illegible] personal property subject to taxation; [illegible] were received and acted upon as [illegible] correct until the 23d June, 1878, when [illegible] auditor caused defendant to be sub[illegible] to appear instanter before him at his [illegible] to give information, pursuant to the [illegible] in that case provided, of all property [illegible] knowledge which had not been duly [illegible] for taxation. The defendant accord[illegible] appeared and submitted to an examina[illegible]. While undergoing examination the au[illegible] exhibited to him a list of judgments and [illegible] in his favor not included in his tax [illegible] and then and there told him that, un[illegible] the advice of the auditor of State, he felt [illegible] to make a supplemental assess[illegible] against him for the four years named, of [illegible] property which he owned during that [illegible], which was subject to taxation in said [illegible] and not included in his returns; called [illegible] attention to the statute under which [illegible] to proceed; and requested such ex[illegible] as he might deem it proper to make. [illegible] thereupon made such explanations [illegible] to offer.

This was the only notice given by the audi[illegible] the defendant, of his intention to assess [illegible] all personal property owned by him [illegible] said period and not included in his tax [illegible].

The auditor then proceeded to assess the de[illegible] on $[illegible] of stock in the Western [illegible] Telegraph Company for each of the [illegible] 1874, 1875, 1876 and 1877, and entered [illegible] as a supplemental tax duplicate, and [illegible] the same to the county treasurer for [illegible].

The defendant owned the telegraph stock so [illegible] during the four years aforesaid, and [illegible] had not been included in his returns for taxation, nor had he been theretofore charged with or paid any tax on the same.

The Western Union Telegraph Company was organized under the laws of New York; it had a paid-up capital of $41,000,000; most of its property was situated outside of Ohio; it owns 4,950 miles of telegraph wires, with the chemicals and office furniture used in connection therewith, in Ohio, all which for ten years past it had regularly returned for taxation, and paid thereon from $10,000 to $15,000 per annum of tax to the State of Ohio.

From the findings of fact, the court deduced the following among other conclusions of law:

"The auditor's said supplemental assessment was authorized, and is regular and valid, and under the Statutes of Ohio, as constructed by the courts of the State, the defendant is liable in this action for the amounts assessed on his Western Union Telegraph stock, and judgment will therefore be rendered against him for the tax so assessed thereon, with the damages prescribed by statute, and interest and costs."

The court thereupon rendered judgment against Sturges for $10,727.65, "the sum so as aforesaid found to be due;" and thereupon Sturges sued out the present writ of error to reverse that judgment.

Messrs. Albert G. Riddle, C. H. Scribner, Henry E. Davis and James E. Padgett, plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John W. Jenner and Andrew Squire, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court: [515]

The first contention of the plaintiff in error is, that the court erred in holding that the notice given to him by the auditor of Richland County was sufficient, under the Statutes of Ohio, to authorize the assessment of the additional taxes, and in admitting evidence of what was said by the auditor to the plaintiff in error when the latter was under examination.

Section 2782 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, originally section 34 of the Act of April 5, 1859 (Swan & Critch. Stat. 1452) provides, in substance, that if the county auditor shall have reason to believe that any person has given to the assessor a false statement of his personal property, moneys, or credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, which are by law subject to taxation, or that the assessor has made an erroneous return of any such property, he shall proceed, at any time before the final settlement with the county treasurer, to charge such person on the duplicate with the proper amount of taxes, and to enable him to do this, he is authorized to issue compulsory process and require the attendance of any person "whom he might suppose to have a knowledge of the articles or value of the personal property, moneys, or credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, and examine such person or persons on oath in relation to such statement or return; and it shall be the duty of the auditor in all such cases to notify every such person, before making the entry on the tax list and duplicate, that he may have an opportunity of showing that his statement or return of the assessor was correct. And the county auditor shall in all such cases file in his office a statement of the facts or evidence on which he made such correction." These provisions of the statute have been in force ever since April 5, 1859.

The findings of the fact show that the plaintiff in error was subpœnaed to appear before the auditor to give information of all property within his knowledge which had not been returned for taxation, and that, while in attendance before the auditor, he was informed by the latter of his purpose to increase the amount of the property returned by him for taxation. This was a substantial compliance with the statute, which required the auditor to notify the taxpayer, before making the entry of such increase on the tax list and duplicate, of his purpose to do so, so that he might have an opportunity of showing that his statement or the return of the assessor was correct. The subpœna served on the plaintiff in error and the conduct of the auditor under it gave him the opportunity to which the statute entitled him.

[516] But the plaintiff in error contends that, beside service of the subpœna requiring him to attend upon the auditor and give testimony in relation to property not returned for taxation, he was entitled to written notice before the auditor could make an entry on the tax list of any additional property omitted in his returns. The statute does not require any notice in writing except the compulsory process of subpœna to be served upon the person called to attend and testify. But if any further notice was required, it was waived by the plaintiff in error.

The finding of the Circuit Court shows that he appeared and submitted to an examination touching the correctness of his returns; that the auditor told him during such examination that as auditor he was required by his duty to make a supplemental assessment against him of the property which he had not included in his returns for the four years mentioned in the findings of the court, and requested him to make such explanations of his returns as he thought proper; and that he did make such as he chose. It does not appear that he complained that he had not received notice of the purpose of the auditor to increase the assessment of his property, or that the notice was not in writing, or that it was too short, or that he asked further time for consideration, or to take the advice of counsel, or to produce further evidence. From all that appears by the record, there was no surprise; he had opportunity to establish the correctness of the tax returns, and to show the auditor that he was not liable to an additional assessment. He cannot, therefore, complain of want of notice.

The plaintiff in error next insists that the law of 1878, by which the auditor assumed to correct the returns of the plaintiff in error for the years from 1874 to 1877 inclusive, and place his omitted property on the tax list, was retroactive, and therefore forbidden by section 28 of article 2 of the Constitution of Ohio, which declares that "The General Assembly shall have no power to pass retroactive laws."

Before the passage of the Act of 1878, the law of Ohio, section 1 of the Act of April 5, 1859 (vol. 46, p. 175, Laws of Ohio; vol. 2, [517] Swan & Critch. R. S. of Ohio, p. 1438), provided that all property whether real or personal, in the State, all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, etc., of persons residing ther in, should be subject to taxation and entered o the list of taxable property for that purpose; an section 6 of the same Act required the owner t make out and deliver to the assessor a statemer under oath of all the personal property, m neys, investments in bonds or stocks, required t be listed for taxation. This was the law in forc during the years for which the taxes sued fc were assessed and levied, and it is still in forc

Section 34 of the Act of April 5, 1859, re-e acted as section 2782 of the Revised Statutes Ohio of 1880, authorized as we have stated, t county auditor, in case he believed any persc had made a false return of his personal prope ty, investment in bonds or stocks, to proceed any time before the final settlement with t county treasurer, which was required to made annually, to correct the return and char such person on the duplicate with the prop amount of taxes. By section 1 of a suppl mentary Act passed March 29, 1861 (vol. 58, 47, Laws of Ohio), it was provided that if a person whose duty it was to make a return property for taxation should make a false retur the auditor should ascertain the true amount the taxable property that such person ought have returned, and add thereto fifty p centum on the amount so ascertained, a the amount so ascertained with the fifty p centum should be entered on the duplicate f taxation. These enactments continued in for until the Act of May 11, 1878, when they w amended by section 48 of that Act by addi the following clause: "And the inquiry and c rections provided for in this and the next s tion may go as far back as the same can traced, not exceeding the four years next pr to the year in which the inquiries and corr tions are made; but as to former years no pen ty shall be added and only simple taxes shou be claimed." Laws of Ohio, 1878, tit. 13, 456; Rev. Stat. of Ohio of 1880, § 2781. As t Act took effect upon its passage, it authoriz the auditor, in any future corrections and justments of taxes due, to extend his inquir back for a period of four years. It did not quire him to wait four years after its passa before he could give it full effect.

It is this amendment of April 11, 1878, whi the plaintiff in error insists is retroactive, beca it authorizes the auditor to go back for a peri of four years to correct false returns; where before its passage he could not for that purp go behind his annual settlement with the tr surer.

The complaint is not that the auditor w required to add fifty per centum to the value the omitted property, for the old law thorized him to do that, provided he did before his annual settlement with the cou treasurer and the new law authorized him make the addition of fifty per centum for current year only, so that in this respect new law did not change the old; but that it not competent for the Legislature to go beh the annual adjustments made of the taxes the auditor with the taxpayer; that if the St had wrongfully assessed too much, the citi was barred, and if the citizen had listed little the State was barred, and that legislat which undertook to open these adjustme was retroactive.

[illegible] instance, this contention is that a tax-[illegible] has been evading the payment of [illegible] due from him by making false re-[illegible] shield himself behind the annual set-[illegible] made by the auditor with the treasurer, [illegible] such as returns were assumed to be true, [illegible] the Legislature can pass no Act by [illegible] the falsity of the returns can for a limited [illegible] (in this case four years) be exposed, and [illegible] payment of the taxes enforced—in other [illegible] that the taxpayer has a vested right [illegible] fruits of his false returns. Such a [illegible] cannot be sustained. Foster v. Ele-[illegible], 16 Mass., 245.

[illegible] common, no right of the taxpayer was [illegible] by the Act of 1878. His investments in [illegible] and stocks were subject to taxation; the [illegible] upon such investments were due to the [illegible] and the Act of 1878 merely provided a [illegible] by which the taxes might be assessed [illegible] in spite of the annual settlements [illegible] by the auditor. It gave a new remedy to [illegible] for enforcing a right which it had all [illegible] possessed, namely: the right to the [illegible] property liable to taxation.

[illegible] Act is not a retroactive law within [illegible] of the Constitution of Ohio. In the [illegible] v. Wheeler, 2 Gall., 139, Mr. Justice [illegible] defines a retroactive, or, as he calls [illegible] law: "Upon principle, every [illegible] which takes away or impairs vested [illegible] required under existing laws, or creates [illegible] obligation, imposes a new duty, or at-[illegible] new disability, in respect to transac-[illegible] considerations already past, must be [illegible] retrospective." The Act of 1878 took [illegible] vested right of the taxpayer; it im-[illegible] upon him no new duty or obligation, [illegible] him to no new disability in refer-[illegible] past transactions. The definition of [illegible] was adopted by the Supreme [illegible] Ohio in Rairden v. Holden, 15 Ohio [illegible] when construing the clause in the Con-[illegible] of Ohio now under consideration. Ap-[illegible] that definition, it is clear the provision [illegible] Act of May 11, 1878, complained of, is [illegible] to the objection that it is forbidden [illegible] Constitution of the State. See also, [illegible] v. Purcell, 11 Ohio St., 641; Green [illegible] v. Campbell, 16 Ohio St., 11; State [illegible] Township, 20 Ohio St., 362; [illegible] 4 N. H., 16; Clark v. Clark, 10 [illegible] v. Greenlaw, 11 Id., 200. [illegible] cited are conclusive against the [illegible] that the legislation under review is [illegible]

[illegible] in error next insists that the [illegible] erred in deciding that certificates [illegible] of capital stock in the Western Union [illegible] Company, held by him, were taxable [illegible] of Ohio

[illegible] 2 of article 12 of the Constitution of [illegible] "Laws shall be passed taxing [illegible] rule all moneys, credits, invest-[illegible] bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, [illegible]

[illegible] effect to this provision the Act of [illegible] Rev. Stat. Swan & Critch., 1438), [illegible] "An Act for the Assessment of All [illegible] in This State," etc., was passed. It [illegible] by the first section of this Act as [illegible] "All property, whether real or per-[illegible] in this State, all moneys, credits, invest-[illegible]

ments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise, of persons residing therein, * * * except such as is hereinafter expressly exempted, shall be subject to taxation, and such property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, [520] stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, or the value thereof, shall be entered on the list of taxable property for that purpose." By section 2 of the same Act it was enacted as follows: "That the term investment in stocks, when ever used in this Act, shall be held to mean and include all moneys invested * * * in any association, corporation, joint stock company, or otherwise, the stock or capital of which is or may be divided into shares, which are transferable by each owner without the consent of the the other partners or stockholders, for taxation of which no special provision is made by this Act, held by persons residing in this State, either for themselves or as guardians, trustees, or agents."

There was no special provision for the taxation of such property as the shares held by the plaintiff in error in the Western Union Telegraph Company. It is plain, therefore, that, under the Act of April 5, 1859, the shares of stock held by the plaintiff in error were taxable in the State of Ohio, unless they were expressly exempted. The plaintiff in error relies upon an exemption contained in the ninth subdivision of the third section of the Act, which is as follows: "9th. Each individual in this State may hold exempt from taxation personal property of any description, of which such individual is the actual owner, not exceeding fifty dollars in value; * * * no person shall be required to include in his statement, as a part of the personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, which he is required to list, any share or portion of the capital stock or property of any company or corporation which is required to list or return its capital and property for taxation in this State." Rev. Stat. Swan & Critch., 1441.

Section 59 of the same Act provides that "No person shall be required to list for taxation any certificate of the capital stock of any company, the capital stock of which is taxed in the name of the company."

As the findings of the Circuit Court show that a part of the property of the Western Union Telegraph Company was in the State of Ohio, and that it paid taxes on the same to the State, the plaintiff in error insists that the shares [521] of stock held by him in the company were exempted from taxation by the clauses of the Act of April 5, 1859, which we have quoted.

This contention cannot be sustained. The law taxes the shares of the plaintiff in error unless they are "expressly exempted." The burden is on him to show an express exemption.

There is no exemption unless the payment by the Western Union Telegraph Company of the tax imposed on its property situated in the State, and which the findings of fact made by the Circuit Court show was but a small part of its whole property, relieves from taxation its shares held by a resident of the State.

It may be conceded that generally, the capital or the capital stock of a corporation is its property. Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall., 200 [69 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 793]; Nat. Bank v. Common- wealth, 9 Wall., 353 [76 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 701]. But the shares held by the stockholders are distinct from the capital stock of the corporation, and the taxation of both is not necessarily double taxation. Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S., 679 [Bk. 24, L. ed., 558]; Dewing v. Perdicaries, 96 U. S., 193 [Bk. 24, L. ed., 654]; Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St., 28. The claim, therefore, of the plaintiff in error is to the exemption of a certain class of his property from taxation. But it has been repeatedly held by this court that an exemption from taxation must be expressed in clear and unmistakable terms and cannot be shown by doubtful or ambiguous language. Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet., 514; Gilfillan v. Canal Co., 109 U. S., 401 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 977].

The case therefore depends upon the construction of the statute. The Supreme Court of Ohio has decided that shares owned by a resident of Ohio in a foreign corporation, none of whose capital was taxed in Ohio, but all of it in the State where the corporation had its home, was taxable in Ohio. Bradley v. Bauder [supra]. The controversy on this part of the case is, therefore, reduced to the question, whether the Legislature has clearly and unmistakably expressed the purpose in the Act under consideration to exempt from taxation shares in a foreign corporation owned by residents of Ohio, when but a small part of the property of the company was subject to taxation in Ohio.

[522]

The exemption from taxation of investments in stocks, provided by the statute, applies only to shares of those corporations which are required to return their capital and property for taxation in the State. Jones v. Davis, 35 Ohio St., 474. This clearly means those corporations which are required to return all, or substantially all their capital and property. There is no rule of interpretation by which the statute can be held to apply to corporations who list only a small part of their property for taxation in Ohio. If the Legislature had intended to allow an exemption in such a case, it could and would have expressed that purpose by words not admitting of doubt. As the shares of the plaintiff in error in the Western Union Telegraph Company were not only not expressly, but not even by fair implication, exempted from taxation, we are of opinion that the tax complained of was authorized by law.

Lastly, complaint is made that the Circuit Court erred in rendering judgment for the penalty and interest upon the additional taxes assessed against the plaintiff in error. .

The judgment of the Circuit Court was for $10,727.65, which is less than the taxes demanded in the petition without either interest or penalty. The findings of fact do not show the rate of taxation for any one of the four years for which the taxes were recovered, and it is impossible for us to say that anything was included in the judgment but the simple taxes. It is true that the court said in its conclusion of law that judgment would be rendered for the tax, with the damages prescribed by statute, and interest and costs.

But we have not been referred to any statute which gives damages in this class of cases, and there is nothing in the findings to show that anything was actually included in the judgment, either for damages or interest. The amount of the judgment was based upon the assessment of the property of the plaintiff in error made by the auditor, a sworn public officer. Therefore the burden is on the plaintiff in error to show by the record that the court rendered judgment for an amount not authorized by law. This he has failed to do.

Under the circumstances, we must presume that the judgment of the Circuit Court, in respect to its amount, as well as in other respects was right, unless the contrary is shown. Venetress v. Smith, 10 Pet., 161; Townsend v. Jameson, 7 How., 714; The Ship Potomac, 2 Black 581 [67 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 263].

We find no error in the record.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

NEW ORLEANS, SPANISH FORT AND LAKE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

GEORGE DELAMORE, J. R. ALCEE GAUTHREAUX, Civil Sheriff, et al.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 501-511.)

Jurisdiction — review of judgments of State Courts—bankruptcy of corporation—sale of franchises sustained.

1. This court has jurisdiction to review the judgment of a State Court against the validity of a title claimed under a sale in bankruptcy.

2. The jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court to adjudicate a railroad company bankrupt and to administer its property, under the Bankruptcy Act, is settled by the decisions of the Circuit Courts and this court is unwilling at this late date to re-examine the question.

3. The authority to mortgage the franchises of a railroad company necessarily implies the power to bring the franchises so mortgaged to sale, and to transfer them, with the corporeal property of the company, to the purchaser.

4. Where the franchises of a railroad corporation essential to the use of its road, and other tangible property, can by law be mortgaged to secure its debts, the surrender of its property, upon the bankruptcy of the company, carries the franchises, and they may be sold and passed to the purchaser at the bankruptcy sale.

5. There is nothing in the nature of a corporate franchise under the law of Louisiana, which forbids its transfer with the other property of the corporation.

[No. 252.]

Argued Apr. 15, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana

The history and facts of the case appear in the Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

This is a writ of error to bring under review a decree of the Supreme Court of Louisiana reversing a decree of the Fifth District Court for the Parish of Orleans.

The facts, as they appeared from the plea-

NOTE.—Mortgages—power of corporation to mortgage its property and franchises. M. & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry., 112 U. S., 609, bk. 26, 837, note; Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Miller, ante, 176, note.

[illegible] evidence, were as follows: The Canal [illegible] City Park and Lake Shore Railroad Company was a corporation organized under the [illegible] law of the State of Louisiana. By an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, number [illegible] 2,384, administration series, dated August [illegible] the city granted to the corporation [illegible] the right of way from the neutral [illegible] in Basin Street, by certain other designated streets, and along the embankment on the [illegible] side of the Orleans Canal to the lake [illegible] the terminus and the entire route being [illegible] the city limits. The route upon which the road was to be built was subsequently modified by ordinance numbered 2,548, administration series, dated March 25, 1874. The company constructed and used a railroad upon the right of way so granted. In the year 1876, [illegible] a petition in bankruptcy filed by Edward [illegible] Burgess and another, the railroad company was adjudicated bankrupt by the District Court of the United States for the District of Louisiana. Besides other property and assets surrendered by the bankrupt, were "the railroad [illegible] and singular, built in pursuance of the charter of the said company, and the various grants and privileges conferred upon said company by the City of New Orleans, * * * including the road bed of main tracks and [illegible] and all rights and appurtenances of [illegible] railroad tracks, as well as rights of way [illegible] attached, * * * and all the franchises and appurtenances" of said company.

On November 29, 1876, the assignee in bankruptcy applied to the bankruptcy court for an order to sell the property above described, and the assets of the company, free and clear of all incumbrances, and on May 19, 1877, the court made the order prayed for, and directed a sale to be made on the following terms: "One third cash and the balance on one and two years credit, to be secured by mortgage on the property sold." On July 14, 1877, the property was sold by the special master appointed by the court to Thomas H. Handy. The sale was afterwards confirmed by the court, and a deed made by the master to the purchaser for the [illegible] and "all the right of way, powers, privileges, immunities and franchises conferred and granted by the City of New Orleans to the Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company" by the ordinances above mentioned. At the same time, and by the same act, Handy gave a mortgage on the property conveyed to him to secure his notes given for two thirds of the purchase money. The mortgage contained a [illegible] alienando.

On January 31, 1878, a new railroad company was organized, under authority of the general railroad law of Louisiana, bearing the same name, to wit: the "Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company," and having the same objects and purposes as the company which had been adjudicated bankrupt. The new company Handy, on August 16, 1878, conveyed by public Act the property hereinbefore described, purchased by him at the bankruptcy sale of the original Canal Street, City Park and Lake Shore Railroad Company, and the purchaser assumed the mortgage of Handy and his agreement to pay the balance due from him as the purchaser of the property.

[illegible] the conveyance, the City of New Orleans, by an ordinance numbered 4,528, administration series, dated May 22, 1878, had granted to the second Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company the right of way upon which to lay a railroad through and on the same streets and along the same route as had been previously granted by ordinance to the first Canal Street City Park and Lake Railroad Company.

Both Handy and the railroad company to which he sold the property, made default in the payment of the mortgage debt, and at the suit of Elizabeth Strathman and another, holders of one of the mortgage notes made by Handy, a writ of seizure and sale was issued, and the property described in and covered by the mortgage was seized and sold to Moses Schwartz & Brother, and afterwards conveyed to them by the sheriff, by deed dated April 4, 1879.

In the meantime, on March 31, 1879, the present plaintiff, the New Orleans, Spanish Fort and Lake Railroad Company, had been organized under the general law of the State for the organization of corporations, and on April 9, 1879, Schwartz & Brother sold and conveyed to the last named Railroad Company the railroad, "with all and singular the right of way, powers, privileges and immunities and franchises conferred and granted by the City of New Orleans to the Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company" by the ordinance of August 5, 1873, as amended by the ordinance of March 24, 1874, being the same property bought by Schwartz & Brother at the mortgage sale. [50

On November 15, 1879, George Delamore, one of the defendants, recovered a judgment in the Fifth District Court for the Parish of Orleans for $5,720 against the Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company, being the second company above mentioned organized under that name. Delamore, on the 11th day of November, 1879, caused execution to issue on this judgment, which, on the 18th of November, the Sheriff for the Parish of Orleans levied on a certain frame building or structure known as "the pavilion," being on the Bayou St. John, at or near the entrance thereto into the Lake Pontchartrain, and also on "all and singular the right of way, the powers, privileges, immunities and franchises conferred and granted by the City of New Orleans to the Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company, under and by virtue of an ordinance of the City of New Orleans, being No. 4,528 of the administration series adopted by the Common Council of the City of New Orleans on the 21st of May, 1878."

Thereupon the plaintiff, the New Orleans, Spanish Fort and Lake Railroad Company, filed the bill in this case in the Fifth District Court for the Parish of Orleans against Delamore and the Sheriff, the prayer of which was for a writ of injunction against the defendants to restrain them from advertising or selling, or offering for sale, the property so levied on, as above stated. The Fifth District Court allowed the injunction as prayed for, but on final hearing so modified it as only to restrain the seizure and sale of the rights and franchises enjoyed by the plaintiff which it acquired from Moses Schwartz, and decreed that the plaintiff be quieted in the enjoyment and possession of the [illegible] order of the bankruptcy co[illegible]

[illegible] the mortgaged property of the ba[illegible]
[illegible] free of incumbrances. The c[illegible]
[illegible] and decisive of the jurisdiction
[illegible] the present appeal.

We therefore proceed to consider the m[illegible]
[illegible] the case. They are involved in the [illegible]
[illegible] whether the right of way and fr[illegible]
[illegible] granted by the City of New Orleans [illegible]
[illegible] Canal Street, City Park and Lake R[illegible]
[illegible] Company passed by the sale thereof m[illegible]
[illegible] pursuance of the decree of the bankrupt[illegible]
[illegible] court.

The jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court [illegible] adjudicate a railroad company bankrupt and [illegible] administer its property under the Bankrupt A[illegible] has been sustained by several Circuit Cou[illegible] of the United States. Adams v. Boston, [illegible] E. R. R. Co., 1 Holmes, 30; Sweatt v. Bost[illegible] H. & E. R. R. Co., 5 N. Bk. Reg., 234; [illegible] & Chatt. R. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 N. Bk. Reg., [illegible] Winter v. The Iowa, etc., R. R. Co., 2 Di[illegible] 487. No Circuit Court before which the qu[illegible] tion has been brought has denied the jurisd[illegible] tion. As they were the courts of last res[illegible] upon this question, and valuable rights m[illegible] depend upon their judgments upon this poi[illegible] we think the question should be considered [illegible] settled by the authorities cited, and are unv[illegible] ling at this late day to re-examine it, especia[illegible] as we have no jurisdiction to do so, except [illegible] collateral proceeding like the present.

The plaintiff contends that the right of w[illegible] with the franchise to build and use a railr[illegible] thereon for profit, was surrendered by the ba[illegible] rupt corporation as a part of its property, [illegible] was sold to Handy at the bankruptcy sale, [illegible] was subsequently acquired by it by mean[illegible] the claim of title above set forth. It is not [illegible] tended in this case that Handy acquire[illegible] franchise to be a corporation or any other [illegible] chise except those just mentioned by virt[illegible] his purchase at the bankruptcy sale.

On the other hand, it is contended by t[illegible] fendant that the right of way and the fra[illegible] to build and use a railroad thereon rever[illegible] the City of New Orleans when the ra[illegible] company was adjudicated bankrupt, an[illegible] all that was surrendered in bankruptcy [illegible] railroad company and sold at the bank[illegible] sale or the mortgage sale, was the railroa[illegible] out right of way or other franchise.

The contention of the defendant, if su[illegible] would entirely destroy the value of th[illegible] erty as a railroad. For it is plain that [illegible] part, if not all the line, of the railroa[illegible] upon the streets and public grounds of [illegible] If, therefore, the franchise of the rig[illegible] copy the streets and public grounds [illegible] railroad track did not pass to the pur[illegible] the bankruptcy sale, then all that he[illegible] his purchase was a lot of ties and [illegible] which he could be compelled at any [illegible] the order of the city authorities, to re[illegible] the law be as contended by the defend[illegible] ror, a judicial sale of the railroad an[illegible] chise would be the destruction of b[illegible]

The ground upon which this view [illegible] fendant is based is that the franchis[illegible] road corporation are inalienable in [illegible] In passing upon this question it is n[illegible] bear in mind the distinction betwee[illegible] eral classes of railroad franchises.

stated by Mr. Justice Curtis in the case of Hall v. Sullivan R. R. Co., 21 Law Rep., 138, where he said: "The franchise to be a corporation is therefore not a subject of sale and transfer unless the law by some positive provision made it so and pointed out the modes in which such sale and transfer may be effected. But the franchise to build, own and manage a railroad and to take tolls thereon are not necessarily separate rights. They are capable of existing and being enjoyed by natural persons, and there is nothing in their nature inconsistent with their being assignable."

The same subject was considered by this court in the case of Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 217 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 860], where it was said that exemption from taxation was a right personal to the railroad corporation to which it was granted, and did not pass upon a sale of its property and franchises. Mr. Justice Field, who delivered the opinion of the court, distinguished such an immunity from taxation from those rights, privileges and immunities which, strictly speaking, are the franchises of a railroad company. He said: "The franchises of a railroad corporation are rights or privileges which are essential to the operations of the corporation, and without which its works and road would be of little value. * * * They are positive rights and privileges without the possession of which the road of the company could not be successfully worked. Immunity from taxation is not one of these. The former may be conveyed to the purchaser of the road as part of the property of the company; the latter is personal and incapable of transfer without express statutory direction."

We are of opinion that those franchises which in the case just cited are described as necessary to the use and enjoyment of the property of a railroad company are assignable in Louisiana, and that there is no warrant in the jurisprudence of that State for holding the contrary.

That the quality of being transferable attaches to such franchises of a railroad as are essential to its use and enjoyment by the company is conclusively shown by section 2396 of the Revised Statutes of Louisiana (Act of 1856, p. 135), which was in force when the first Canal street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company was organized, and has been in force ever since. That section provides as follows: "In addition to the powers conferred by law upon railroad companies, any railroad company established under the laws of this State may borrow, from time to time, such sum of money as may be required for the construction or repairs of any railroad, and for this purpose may issue bonds, or other obligations secured by mortgage, upon its franchises and all the property of said company."

The authority to mortgage the franchises of a railroad company necessarily implies the power to bring the franchises so mortgaged to sale and to transfer them with the corporeal property of the company to the purchaser. It could not be held that, when a mortgage on a railroad and its franchises was authorized by law, the attempt of the mortgagor to enforce the mortgage would destroy the main value of the property by the destruction of its franchises.

Since the passage of the Act of 1856, the Supreme Court of Louisiana has recognized the validity of the transfer to individuals, of those rights and franchises of a railroad company without which the road could not be successfully used.

In the case of Chaffee v. Ludeling, 27 La. Ann., 607, it was declared that the defendants, by their purchase at sheriff's sale of the property of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company, a Louisiana corporation, acquired "the privileges and franchise of the corporation, its powers to operate the railroad. The sheriff's sale made them the owners of the road, its right of way, its property, its franchise, but did not and could not make them a corporation. * * * This sale conveyed to them the rights and property of that company; it made them joint owners thereof."*

There is, therefore, nothing in the nature of a corporate franchise under the law of Louisiana which forbids its transfer with the other property of the corporation.

And such must be the conclusion whenever a railroad company is authorized by law to mortgage its tangible property and franchises. [510] When there has been a judicial sale of railroad property under a mortgage authorized by law, covering its franchises, it is now well settled that the franchises necessary to the use and enjoyment of the railroad passed to the purchasers. This was assumed to be the law by the opinion of this court pronounced by Mr. Justice Matthews in the case of Memphis R. R. Co. v. Commissioners, 112 U. S., 609 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 837], when it was said: "The franchise of being a corporation need not be implied as necessary to secure to the mortgage bondholders or the purchasers at a foreclosure sale the substantial rights intended to be secured. They acquire the ownership of the railroad and the property incident to it and the franchise of maintaining and operating it as such." See also, Hall v. Sullivan R. R. Co., 21 Law Rep., 135; Galveston R. R. Co. v. Cowdrey, 11 Wall., 459 [78 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 199].

It follows that if the franchises of a railroad corporation essential to the use of its road, and other tangible property, can by law be mortgaged to secure its debts, the surrender of its property, upon the bankruptcy of the company, carries the franchises, and they may be sold and passed to the purchaser at the bankruptcy sale.

The plaintiff, therefore, by virtue of the bankruptcy sale, and the subsequent mortgage sale and the several mesne conveyances mentioned, acquired with the tangible property of the original Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company the franchise granted by the City of New Orleans to lay its track over the streets and public grounds designated in the ordinance of August 6, 1873, and the amendatory ordinance of March 24, 1874. This right of way so vested could not be affected by the ordinance of the City of New Orleans to grant a similar right of way over the same streets and route to the second Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company, and the acceptance of the grant by the latter railroad company; for, as it was not in the power of the city to repeal the grant to the first company by an ordinance passed expressly for that purpose, it could not do so by any indirect or roundabout method.

*The sale in this case was made by virtue of a writ of seizure and sale issued upon a mortgage executed by the Railroad Company upon its property and franchises to secure its bonds. See Jackson v. Ludeling, 99 U. S., 513 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 460].

The defendants are seeking to sell, upon execution, the right of way which the City of New [511] Orleans, by its ordinance No. 4,523, dated May 21, 1878, attempted to grant to the second Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company, and which had already been granted to the first company of that name. In substance and in effect the right of way seized by the sheriff at the instance of Delamore, is the right of way owned by and in possession of the plaintiff, and forms a part of its property, giving value, and necessary to the use and enjoyment of the residue. The property thus seized in execution is claimed by the plaintiff, who is a third person, not a party to the judgment on which the execution is issued. This is the case provided for by articles 395, 396, 397 and 399 of the Code of Practice, and it is under these articles that the present suit is brought and justified. We think the injunction granted by the Fifth District Court restraining the sale of the right of way and franchises of the plaintiff should not have been dissolved.

So much of the decree of the Supreme Court of Louisiana as was appealed from in this case is, therefore, reversed, and the cause is remanded to that court, with instructions to render a decree enjoining and restraining the defendants from advertising or selling or offering for sale, upon the execution described in the bill, the right of way and franchises granted by the City of New Orleans to the Canal Street, City Park and Lake Railroad Company by ordinance No. 4,523, administration series, dated May 21, 1878.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—115 U. S., 534.

---

[555] PETER O. STRANG ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

AMARIAH H. BRADNER ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 555-562.)

Bankruptcy—force of term "fraud"—discharge does not bar claim for damages on account of fraud—partnership.

*1. The rule reaffirmed that the term "fraud" in the clause defining the debts from which a bankrupt is not relieved by a discharge under the Bankrupt Act, means positive fraud or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, not implied fraud, which may exist without bad faith.

2. A claim against a bankrupt for damages on account of fraud of deceit practiced by him, is not discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy; nor is a a debt, created by his fraud, discharged, even where it was proved against his estate, and a dividend thereon received on account.

3. If, in the conduct of partnership business, and with reference thereto, one partner makes false or fradulent misrepresentations of fact to the injury of innocent parsons dealing with him, as representing the firm, and without notice of any limitations upon his general authority as agent for the partnership, his partners cannot escape pecuniary responsibility therefor upon the ground that the misrepresentations were made without their knowledge; especially where the firm appropriates the fruits of the fraudulent conduct of such partner.

[No. 246.]

Argued April 13, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of New York.

This action was brought in the court below by the defendants in error, to recover certain amounts paid by them to take up certain accommodation notes alleged to have been fraudulently procured from them by the defendants.

The answer set up the discharge in bankruptcy of two of the defendants, as a bar.

The trial resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiffs for $17,517.86. This judgment was affirmed, on appeal, by the court below, in General Term, and by the Court of Appeals, the record being then remitted to the court below. Whereupon the defendant sued out this writ of error.

The facts of the case are stated by the court.

Messrs. George H. Forster and W. G. De Forest, for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. William F. Cogswell and James Wood, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 1st day of June, 1877, each of the appellants, who were defendants below, received from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York his discharge from all debts and demands, which, by the Revised Statutes of the United States, title Bankruptcy, were made provable against his estate, and which existed on the 3d day of July, 1875—other than such debts as were by law excepted from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy. The statute excepts from the operation of a discharge any "debt created by the fraud or embezzlement of a bankrupt, or by defalcation as a public officer, or while acting in a fiduciary capacity; but the debt may be proved, and the dividend thereon shall be payment on account of such debt." R. S. 5117. To this action, brought by appellees against appellants upon a cause of action accruing prior to July 3, 1875, the latter made defense, in part, upon the ground that their respective discharges in bankruptcy relieved them from all liability to plaintiffs. In the Supreme Court of New York there was a verdict and judgment in favor of the plaintiffs for the sum of $17,517.86. That judgment having been affirmed in the Court of Appeals, the question to be determined upon this writ of error is whether the claim or demand of the plaintiffs is one from which they were relieved by the discharges in bankruptcy. If the debt was of that character, the judgment below must be reversed; otherwise, affirmed.

The evidence before the jury tended to establish the following facts: That for some years prior to June, 1875, the plaintiffs were doing business in the City of Rochester, New York as partners, under the style of Lowery & Bradner, while during the same period the defendants were engaged in business in the City of New York, under the style of Strang & Holland Bros.; that the special business of plaintiffs was the purchase of wool, which they forwarded

*Head notes by Mr. Justice HARLAN.

[illegible] defendants, as commission merchants, to [illegible] account, that plaintiffs, for the accommodation of defendants, often furnished them with promissory notes, for the purpose of enabling them to carry on business; that the defendants took care of these notes, paying the same at maturity out of the proceeds of the property consigned, and with money remitted to the plaintiffs; that in the transactions between the parties the plaintiffs were credited with these notes, with the proceeds of property sold on their account, and with money remitted to them, and were charged with the amounts paid to take up the notes; that on or about March 1, 1873, the defendants requested the plaintiffs to furnish them with four promissory notes of about $4,000 each, to enable them to raise money thereon, and to be credited to them on their account, in accordance with a course of business existing between the parties—such notes to be of odd amounts and made up of different dates before the time they were transmitted to the defendants, so that they might appear to be given for real indebtedness; in pursuance to that request, the plaintiffs made and transmitted to defendants their four promissory notes, for $4,325.50, $4,326.25, $4,327.15 and $4,327.15, each at four months, respectively, on the 1st, 9th, 15th and 16th days of February, 1875, and each payable at the plaintiffs at the office of the defendants, in the City of New York, and indorsed by the defendants; and that, on or about April 4, 1875, they represented to plaintiffs that his firm did not need, nor been able to use, those notes, because they were made payable at their office, and requested plaintiffs to lend them four other notes of the same amount, payable at the Metropolitan National Bank, in New York City, to be used in the place of those dated in February.

There was also evidence tending to prove that the plaintiffs, relying upon the representation that the February notes had not been used, and that the defendants desired other notes to be used in their place, executed and delivered to them four other promissory notes, each at four months, for $4,850, $4,951.25, $4,860.30, and $4,870 respectively, dated 13th, 14th, 16th, and 18th of March, 1875, payable four months after date to their own order at the Metropolitan National Bank, New York, and by them indorsed; that, at the time defendants requested and received with the notes last described, they had, in fact, discounted and put in circulation the February notes, whereby the plaintiffs as makers and indorsers, were compelled to pay the same to the holders; that when they applied for the March notes, the defendants knew that they were insolvent, but that this was not known to plaintiffs; that he made false representations and procured said notes with the intent to defraud the plaintiffs; and that the latter was compelled to pay such part of those notes as amounted, principal and interest, to the sum for which they obtained judgment below.

As to the money transactions made by Strang to Bradner and Bradner there was no active participation by his partners, the Messrs. Holland. It was proven that the proceeds of the notes obtained from plaintiffs, as well as the proceeds of the February notes, all went into the business of Strang & Holland Brothers.

The present suit, brought to recover a judgment for the amount plaintiffs were compelled to pay to bona fide holders of the March notes, proceeds upon the ground that the appellees have sustained damages by reason of the false and fraudulent representations made by Strang, on behalf of his firm, whereby the appellees were induced to execute and deliver to that firm the four notes dated in March, 1875. Is that claim for damages of the class from which the bankrupts were relieved by their respective discharges in bankruptcy? [559]

In Neal v. Clark, 95 U. S., 709 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 587], it was held that, looking to the object of Congress in enacting a general law by which the honest citizen might be relieved from the burden of hopeless insolvency, the term "fraud," in the clause defining the debts from which a bankrupt is not relieved by a discharge under the Bankrupt Act, should be construed to mean positive fraud, or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, and not implied fraud or fraud in law, which may exist without the imputation of bad faith or immorality. This principle was affirmed in the recent case of Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S., 682 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 568], where will be found a reference to the leading cases in this country and in England. Under this rule it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the debt in question was created by positive fraud upon the part of Strang, representing his firm, if it be true—and the jury proceeded upon the ground that such was the fact—that he procured the notes, dated in March, by representing that the February notes had not been and could not be used by his firm, and that they desired other notes, so drawn as to be readily negotiated, to take their place, when, in fact, the February notes had been previously put into circulation by the firm, and had then become obligations upon which the appellees were liable to the holders. There is no pretense in the evidence that the course of business between Strang & Holland Bros. and the plaintiffs would have entitled the former to obtain the March notes, so long as those dated in February were outstanding obligations against the latter. Hence the necessity of deluding the plaintiffs by the false representation that the February notes had not been negotiated at the time the notes in question were obtained.

That representation—as the jury, in effect, found—was made with the intent to deceive the plaintiffs in reference to the actual state of things, and to induce them to do what defendants knew they would not otherwise have done, or been asked to do. If Strang's conduct does not constitute positive fraud, or fraud in fact, involving intentional wrong, it is difficult to conceive what circumstances would have amounted to fraud of that character. [560]

It is contended, however, that as Strang & Holland Bros. were under a legal obligation, apart from any responsibility for the alleged fraudulent representations by Strang, to protect the plaintiffs against liability on the notes dated in March, the latter could have made a claim against the estates of the several bankrupts, for such amounts as they were compelled to pay on account of their being accommodation makers and indorsers; consequently, it is argued, the defendants are released, by their respective discharges in bankruptcy, from the present claim for damages. To this proposition there are two answers: 1. While the plaintiffs might have based their claim entirely upon the legal obligation of defendants to take up the notes at their respective maturities, they were not bound to waive their right to proceed against the defendants for damages on account of fraud in procuring their execution. This action is brought to recover damages for the deceit practiced upon plaintiffs. The claim here asserted is not one from which the bankrupts are protected by their discharges; for, it is not a claim provable against their estates in bankruptcy. R. S. §§ 5067–5072, 5117–5119. 2. But had the plaintiffs waived their right to claim damages specifically for the deceit practiced upon them, and made a claim against the estate of the bankrupts based wholly upon their legal obligation to save plaintiffs harmless on account of their being the makers and indorsers of the notes in question, or if the present action had been based upon that obligation, and not upon the fraud committed by defendants, it would not follow that the defendants would be protected by their discharges in bankruptcy; for, the statute expressly declares that a discharge is subject, even in respect of claims provable in bankruptcy, to the limitation that no debt created by the fraud of the bankrupt shall be discharged by the proceedings in bankruptcy, and that a debt so created may be proved, and the dividend thereon shall be a payment on account of such debt. R. S. §§ 5117–5119. It is, therefore, clear that, whether the claim asserted by plaintiffs is regarded as one arising out of the deceit or fraud of the defendants, or as a debt created by their fraud, the discharges in bankruptcy do not constitute a defense.

[561]

The only other question to be determined is, whether the defendants, John B. Holland and Joseph Holland, can be held liable for the false and fraudulent representations of their partner, it being conceded that they were not made by their direction nor with their knowledge. Whether this action be regarded as one to recover damages for the deceit practiced upon the plaintiffs, or as one to recover the amount of a debt created by fraud upon the part of Strang, we are of opinion that his fraud is to be imputed, for the purposes of the action, to all the members of his firm. The transaction between him and the plaintiffs is to be deemed a partnership transaction because, in addition to his representation that the notes were for the benefit of his firm, he had, by virtue of his agency for the partnership and as between the firm and those dealing with it in good faith, authority to negotiate for promissory notes and other securities for its use. Each partner was the agent and representative of the firm with reference to all business within the scope of the partnership. And if, in the conduct of partnership business and with reference thereto, one partner makes false or fraudulent misrepresentations of fact to the injury of innocent persons who deal with him as representing the firm, and without notice of any limitations upon his general authority, his partners cannot escape pecuniary responsibility therefor upon the ground that such misrepresentations were made without their knowledge. This is especially so when, as in the case before us, the partners, who were not themselves guilty of wrong, r ceived and appropriated the fruits of the frau ulent conduct of their associate in busines Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall., 547–b [U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 495]; Story, Part., § 1, 120–3, 107–8, 166, 168; Chester v. Dickerso 54 N.Y., 1; Locke v. Stearns, 1 Met., 560; throp v. Adams, 133 Mass., 471; Blight v. Tobi 7 Mon., 617; Durant v. Rogers, 87 Ill., 508; Colly Part. (Wood's ed.), §§ 446, 449, 450; Lind., Pa (Ewell's ed.), § 302.

The judgment is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Ex Parte:

IN THE MATTER OF LOUIS REGGEL, Ap

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 642–653.)

Surrender of fugitives from justice—duty executive of State or Territory—sufficiency indictment—habeas corpus.

*1. The statute requiring the surrender of a fugit from justice, found in one of the Territories, to State in which he stands charged with treason, ony, or other crime, embraces every offense kno to the laws of the demanding State, including r demeanors.

2. Each State has the right to prescribe the fo of pleading and process to be observed in her cou in both civil and criminal cases, subject only those provisions of the national Constitution signed for the protection of life, liberty and pr erty in all the States of the Union; consequently a case involving the surrender, under the Act Congress, of a fugitive from justice, it may not objected that the indictment is not framed acco ing to the technical rules of criminal pleading, it conforms substantially to the laws of the manding State.

3. Upon the executive of the State or Territo in which the accused was found rests the respon bility of determining whether he is a fugitive fr the justice of the demanding State. But the Act Congress does not direct or authorize his surrend unless it is made to appear that he is, in fact, a gitive form justice.

4. If the determining of that fact, upon pr before the executive of the State where the alle fugitive is found, is subject to the judicial revi upon habeas corpus, the accused, being in custo under his warrant—which recites the requisition the demanding State, accompanied by an authe tic indictment, charging him substantially as quired by her laws with a specific crime commit within her jurisdiction—should not be discharg because, in the judgment of the court, the pr showing that he was a fugitive from justice n not be as full as might properly have been requir

[No. 250.]

Submitted Apr. 15, 1885. Decided May 4, 18

APPEAL from the Third Judicial Distr of the Territory of Utah.

The history and facts of the case fully pear in the Statement by Mr. Justice Harlan:

This is an appeal from the judgment u habeas corpus of the Third Judicial Distr Court of Utah, remanding the appellant to custody of the Marshal of the United States, whom he had been arrested.

The arrest was made under the authority a warrant of the Governor of Utah, which cited that it had been represented by the G ernor of Pennsylvania, that Louis Reggel st charged in that Commonwealth with the cri of obtaining goods by false pretenses from Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman; that he had fled from the justice of that Commonwealth, and had taken refuge in the Territory of Utah. It then proceeded:

*Head notes by Mr. Justice HARLAN.

"And whereas said representation and demand are accompanied by an indictment found against said fugitive by the grand inquest of the said State of Pennsylvania inquiring for the City and County of Philadelphia, in and before the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the said City and County of Philadelphia, March Sessions, 1862, whereby said Louis Reggel is charged with the said crime, and an affidavit taken before a notary public of said State showing said Reggel's flight from said State to and refuge in said Territory, and also the statute laws of said State defining and making said acts of said Reggel a crime, and which said indictment, affidavit and laws are certified by said Governor of Pennsylvania to be duly authenticated: You are, therefore, required to arrest the said Louis Reggel," etc.

The evidence laid before the Governor of Utah was entirely documentary, and embraced the following papers:

1. The requisition, in the customary form, of the Governor of Pennsylvania, requesting the apprehension of Reggel, and his delivery to the agent of Pennsylvania, and to which was annexed a copy of the indictment, and other papers certified by him to be authentic.

2. A duly certified copy of the indictment referred to in the foregoing requisition, as follows:

"In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the City and County of Philadelphia. March Sessions, 1862.

City and County of Philadelphia, ss.

The grand inquest of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, inquiring for the City and County of Philadelphia, upon their respective oaths and affirmations, do present Louis Reggel, late of said county, on the thirteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, at the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of this court, unlawfully and wilfully meaning and intending to cheat and defraud Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman of their goods, chattels, and property, unlawfully did falsely and designedly pretend to the said Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman, that he, the said Louis Reggel, was then and there the owner in his own right of a large stock of goods in his business as merchant at Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah, of the value of $35,000, and that he did not then and there owe to any person a single dollar on account of said goods and merchandise, or for money borrowed; and also then and there unlawfully, falsely and designedly pretend to the said Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman that he was then and there the owner in his own right of a certain lot of ground, containing thereon a store building, wherein he carried on his business, at Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah; and that he was then and there the owner in his own right of a certain other lot of ground, containing thereon a certain dwelling house, wherein he then and there resided, at Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah; and the said Louis Reggel, then and there unlawfully and falsely pretended to said Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman that said two houses and two lots were then and there together of the value of $40,000, and that said two lots and their improvements were then and there free from all incumbrances; whereas in truth and in fact the said Louis Reggel was not then and there the owner in his own right of goods and merchandise in his business of merchant, at Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah, all paid for and free of debt, for money borrowed, the said Louis Reggel being then and there in the possession of and owner of a stock of goods and merchandise in his business at Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah of the value of [illegible], instead of the value of $35,000, as [illegible] and there unlawfully, falsely and designedly [illegible] by him, the said Louis Reggel; and the said Louis Reggel, was then and there indebted in the sum of $[illegible] to the banking house of McCor[illegible] Company, at Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah, for money drawn from said banking house; and whereas in truth and in fact the said Louis Reggel was not then and there the owner in his own right of a certain lot of ground, containing thereon a store building, wherein he then and there carried on his business at Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah, and a certain other lot of ground, containing thereon a dwelling house, wherein he then and there resided, at Salt Lake City, aforesaid, together of the value of $40,000, clear of all incumbrances; that the said two lots of ground and the improvements and appurtenances thereunto belonging, were by the said Louis Reggel, on the fourteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty, by deed duly recorded in the office for the recording of deeds for Salt Lake County, in the Territory of Utah, granted, sold, conveyed and confirmed unto Robert Harkness and L. R. Jones, of said Salt Lake City, in the Territory of Utah, and the title to the said two lots of ground and improvements and appurtenances thereunto belonging, was, at the time of the making of said unlawful, false and fraudulent pretenses by the said Louis Reggel, at the county aforesaid, in the said Robert Harkness and the said L. R. Jones, and not in the said Louis Reggel; and the said Louis Reggel then and there well knew the said pretenses to be unlawful, fraudulent and false. Whereupon the said Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman, believing the said false representations and pretenses then and there made by the said Louis Reggel, sold and delivered to the said Louis Reggel, on a credit of four months [here follows a description and statement of the value of said goods, chattels and property alleged to have been obtained under false pretenses]; which said goods and chattels and property the said Louis Reggel did then and there unlawfully obtain from the said Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman, with intent to cheat and defraud the said Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman, to the great damage of the said Daniel Myers and Charles Goodman, contrary to the form of the Act of the General Assembly in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

George S. Graham,
District Attorney."

[646]

3. Duly certified copies of certain provisions of the penal laws of Pennsylvania, as follows:

"Every indictment shall be deemed and adjudged sufficient and good in law which charges the crime substantially in the language of the Act of the Assembly prohibiting the crime and prescribing the punishment, if any such there be, or, if at common law so plainly that the nature of the offense charged may be easily understood by the jury, every objection to any indictment for any formal defect apparent on the face thereof shall be taken by demurrer or on motion to quash such indictment before the jury shall be sworn, and not afterward; and every court before whom any such objection shall be taken for any formal defect may, if it be thought necessary, cause the indictment to be forthwith amended in such particular by the clerk or other officer of the court, and thereupon the trial shall proceed as if no such defect appeared. 1 Bright. Purd. Dig. 347-8; Act of March 31, 1860.

[647]

"If any person shall by any false pretense obtain the signature of any person to any written instrument, or shall obtain from any other person any other chattel, money, or valuable security, with intent to cheat and defraud any person of the same, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding $500 and undergo an imprisonment not exceeding three years; Provided, always, That if upon the trial of any person indicted for such misdemeanor it shall be proved that he obtained the property in question in such manner as to amount in law to larceny, he shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanor and no person tried for such misdemeanor shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for larceny upon the same facts." Ibid. 347-8; Act of March 31, 1860.

4. An affidavit by Frederich Gentner, as follows:

"Commonwealth of Penna. vs. Louis Reggel.

Frederick Gentner, being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says: The grand jury of the March Sessions of the City and County of Philadelphia found a true bill of indictment against Louis Reggel, charging him with the crime of false pretenses, and that the said Louis Reggel is a fugitive from justice, and now in Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

Frederick Gentner.

Sworn to and subscribed to, this 10th day of April, A. D. 1882.

Seal of Court Quarter Sessions, County Philadelphia. } Allison Hennessey, per Clerk.

Endorsed: Commonwealth vs. Louis Reggel.

[648] The foregoing constituted the evidence submitted to the Governor of Utah, on which his warrant for the arrest of appellant was granted.

From the order denying the application of the petitioner to be discharged and remanding him to the custody of the marshal, an appeal was allowed and perfected — the petitioner, pending the appeal, being placed under bond to surrender himself in execution of the judgment, if it should be affirmed, modified, or dismissed, and obey all orders made herein by this court.

Mr. Arthur Brown, for appellant:

The action of the Governor in issuing his warrant, upon the requisition of another governor, for the surrender of a person charged with the commission of a crime, is subject to review at the inquiry upon a writ of habeas corpus.

People v. Bradg, 56 N. Y., 182; Ex parte Smith, 3 McLean, 131; Jones v. Leonard, 50 Iowa, 106; Davis's Case, 122 Mass., 324; In re Greenough, 31 Vt., 279; Manchester Case, 5 Cal., 237; Ex parte Pfitzer, 28 Ind. 450. See also Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S., 624 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 541).

The Governor has not jurisdiction to incarcerate a citizen without proof that he has actually been within, and committed by actual presence a crime in, another State.

Hurd, Hab. Corp., 606, 609, 612, 615, and cases cited; Ex parte Pfitzer, supra; Kingsbury's Case, 106 Mass., 223; Jones v. Leonard, supra.

The affidavit in this case is a mere nullity. An affidavit without a venue is a nullity.

Thompson v. Burhans, 61 N. Y., 63; Lane v. Moree, 6 How. Pr., 394; Cook v. Staats, 18 Barb., 407.

The paper purporting to be an indictment in this case does not set forth any crime.

Commonwealth v. Strain, 10 Met., 521; Enders v. People, 20 Mich., 233; Commonwealth v. Goddard, 4 Allen, 312; State v. Philbrick, 31 Me., 401; State v. Orois, 13 Ind., 669; Jones v. State, 50 Ind., 473; Keller v. State, 51 Ind., 111.

(No opposing counsel appeared.)

[648] Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case arises under sections 5278 and 5279 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which provide:

"§ 5278. Whenever the executive authority of any State or Territory demands any person as a fugitive from justice of the executive authority of any State or Territory to which such person has fled, and produces a copy of an indictment found or affidavit made before a magistrate of any State or Territory, charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crime, certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the State or Territory from whence the person has fled, it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the State or Territory to which such person has fled to cause him to be arrested and secured, and to cause notice of the arrest to be given to the executive authority making such demand or to the agent of such authority appointed to receive the fugitive, and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he shall appear. If no such agent appears within six months from the time of the arrest, the prisoner may be discharged. All costs and expenses incurred in the apprehending, securing and transporting such fugitive to the State or Territory making such demand shall be paid by such State or Territory.

"§ 5279. Any agent who receives the fugitive into his custody shall be empowered to transport him to the State or Territory from which he has fled. And every person who, by force, sets at liberty or rescues the fugitive from such agent while so transporting him, shall be fined not more than $500, or imprisoned not more than one year." 1 Stat. at L., chap. 7, §§ 1, 2.

It is not necessary to consider the question suggested by counsel as to the right of the Governor of the Territory to have withheld the papers upon which he based his warrant for the arrest of the accused; for, the record shows that the requisition and the accompanying papers from the Governor of Pennsylvania constituted the evidence upon which he acted, and were submitted to the court to which the writ of habeas corpus was returned.

Under the Act of Congress, it became the duty of the Governor of Utah to cause the arrest of Reggel, and his delivery to the agent appointed to receive him, when it appeared:

That the demand by the executive authority of Pennsylvania was accompanied by a copy of an indictment, or affidavit made before a magistrate, charging Reggel with having committed treason, felony, or other crime within that State and certified as authentic by her Governor.

That the person demanded was a fugitive from justice.

The first of these conditions was met by the production to the Governor of Utah of the indictment, duly certified as authentic, of the grand jury of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the City and County of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, wherein the accused was charged with having committed the crime of obtaining by false pretenses certain goods with the intent to cheat and defraud the person therein named; which offense, as was made to appear from the statutes of that Commonwealth (a copy of which, duly certified as authentic, accompanied the indictment), is a misdemeanor under the laws of Pennsylvania, punishable by a fine not exceeding $500, and imprisonment not exceeding three years.

It was objected in the court of original jurisdiction, that there could be no valid requisition based upon an indictment for an offense less than a felony. This view is erroneous. It was declared in Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How., 66 [65 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 726], that the words "treason, felony, or other crime" in section 2 of article I. of the Constitution includes every offense, from the highest to the lowest, known to the law of the State from which the accused had fled, including misdemeanors. It was there said by Chief Justice Taney, speaking for the whole court, that, looking to the words of the Constitution, "To the obvious policy and necessity of this provision to preserve harmony between the States, and order and law within their respective borders, and to its early adoption by the Colonies, and then by the Confederated States whose mutual interest it was to give each other aid and support whenever [illegible] the conclusion is irresistible, that [illegible] compact engrafted in the Constitution in[illegible], and was intended to include, every of[illegible] made punishable by the law of the State [illegible] which it was committed." It is within the [illegible] of each State, except as her authority [illegible] limited by the Constitution of the [illegible] States, to declare what shall be offenses [illegible] her laws, and citizens of other States, [illegible] within her jurisdiction, are subject to [illegible] laws. In recognition of this right, so re[illegible] to the States, the words of the clause in [illegible] to fugitives from justice were made [illegible] comprehensive to include every of[illegible] against the laws of the demanding State, [illegible] exception as to the nature of the crime.

Although the constitutional provision in [illegible] does not, in terms, refer to fugitives [illegible] the justice of any State, who may be [illegible] in one of the Territories of the United [illegible] the Act of Congress has equal applica[illegible] in that class of cases, and the words "trea[illegible], [illegible], or other crime," must receive the [illegible] interpretation, when the demand for the [illegible] is made, under that Act, upon the [illegible] of a Territory, as when made upon [illegible] executive authority of one of the States of [illegible].

Another proposition advanced in behalf of [illegible] is, that the indictment which accom[illegible] the requisition does not sufficiently [illegible] the commission of any crime; of which [illegible] was the duty of the Governor of Utah to [illegible], and which the court may not ig[illegible] in determining whether the appellant is [illegible] in custody. In connection with this [illegible] counsel discusses, in the light of [illegible] cases, the general question as to [illegible] authority of a court of the State or Terri[illegible] in which the fugitive is found, to dis[illegible] him from arrest, whenever, in its judg[illegible], the indictment, according to the technical [illegible] of criminal pleading, is defective in its [illegible] of the crime charged. It is sufficient [illegible] purposes of the present case to say that, [illegible] laws of Pennsylvania, every indictment [illegible] deemed and adjudged sufficient and [illegible] law which charges the crime sub[illegible] in the language of the Act of Assem[illegible] prohibiting its commission and prescribing [illegible] therefor, or, if at common law, [illegible] that the nature of the offense charged [illegible] understood by the jury; and [illegible] indictment, which accompanied the [illegible] of the Governor of Pennsylvania, [illegible] the crime substantially in the lan[illegible] of her statute. That Commonwealth [illegible] to establish the forms of pleadings [illegible] to be observed in her own courts, [illegible] civil and criminal cases, subject only to [illegible] provisions of the Constitution of the [illegible] States involving the protection of life, [illegible] and property in all the States of the [illegible].

The only question remaining to be considered, [illegible] to the alleged want of competent evi[illegible] before the Governor of Utah, at the time [illegible] the warrant of arrest, to prove that [illegible] appellant was a fugitive from the justice of [illegible]. Undoubtedly, the Act of Con[illegible] did not impose upon the executive au[illegible] of the Territory the duty of surrender[illegible] the appellant, unless it was made to appear in some proper way that he was a fugitive from justice. In other words, the appellant was entitled, under the Act of Congress, to insist upon proof that he was within the demanding State at the time he is alleged to have committed the crime charged, and subsequently withdrew from her jurisdiction so that he could not be reached by her criminal process. The statute, it is to be observed, does not prescribe the character of such proof; but that the executive authority of the Territory was not required, by the Act of Congress, to cause the arrest of appellant, and his delivery to the agent appointed by [652] the Governor of Pennsylvania, without proof of the fact that he was a fugitive from justice, is, in our judgment, clear from the language of that Act. Any other interpretation would lead to the conclusion that the mere requisition by the Executive of the demanding State, accompanied by the copy of an indictment, or an affidavit before a magistrate, certified by him to be authentic, charging the accused with crime committed within her limits, imposes upon the Executive of the State or Territory where the accused is found, the duty of surrendering him, although he may be satisfied, from incontestable proof, that the accused had, in fact, never been in the demanding State, and, therefore, could not be said to have fled from its justice. Upon the Executive of the State in which the accused is found, rests the responsibility of determining, in some legal mode, whether he is a fugitive from the justice of the demanding State. He does not fail in duty if he makes it a condition precedent to the surrender of the accused that it be shown to him, by competent proof, that the accused is, in fact, a fugitive from the justice of the demanding State.

Did it sufficiently appear that the appellant was, as represented by the executive authority of Pennsylvania, a fugitive from the justice of that Commonwealth? We are not justified by the record before us in saying that the Governor of Utah should have held the evidence inadequate to establish that fact. The warrant of arrest refers to an affidavit taken before a notary public of Pennsylvania showing Reggel's flight from that Commonwealth. There was no such affidavit; but the reference, manifestly, was to the affidavit made by Frederick Gentner, which recited the finding by the grand jury of the City and County of Philadelphia, of a true bill of indictment charging Reggel with "the crime of false pretenses," and stating that he "is a fugitive from justice," and was then in Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. This is sworn to, and is attested by the seal of the Court of Quarter Sessions—the court in which the prosecution is pending. It is not entirely clear from the record, as presented to us, what is the official character of the person before whom the affidavit was made. The reasonable inference is, that the affidavit was made in the court where [653] the prosecution is pending, and that it is one of the papers accompanying the requisition of the Governor of Pennsylvania, and which he certified to be authentic.

It is contended that Gentner's affidavit that Reggel is a fugitive from justice is the statement of legal conclusion, and is materially defective in not setting out the facts upon which that conclusion rested. Although that statement presents, in some aspects of it, a question of law, we cannot say that the Governor of Utah erred in regarding it as the statement of a fact, and as sufficient evidence that appellant had fled from the State in which he stood charged with the commission of a particular crime, on a named day, at the City and County of Philadelphia; especially, as no opposing evidence was brought to his attention. If the determination of that fact by the Governor of Utah upon evidence introduced before him is subject to judicial review, upon habeas corpus, the accused, in custody under his warrant—which recites the demand of the Governor of Pennsylvania, accompanied by an authentic indictment charging him, substantially in the language of her statutes, with a specific crime committed within her limits—should not be discharged merely because, in the judgment of the court, the evidence as to his being a fugitive from justice was not as full as might properly have been required, or because it was so meager as, perhaps, to admit of a conclusion different from that reached by him. In the present case, the proof before the Governor of Utah may be deemed sufficient to make a prima facie case against the appellant as a fugitive from justice within the meaning of the Act of Congress.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—116 U. S., 96.

---

[619] UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

RICHARD R. CORSON.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 619-622.)

Dismissal of army officer—effect of revocation of order.

*1. An officer of the army dismissed from the service during the recent civil war, by order of the President, could not be restored to his position merely by a subsequent revocation of that order.

2. The vacancy so created can only be filled by a new appointment, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; unless it occurred in the recess of that body, in which case the President could have granted a commission to expire at the end of its next succeeding session.

[No. 266.]

Submitted Apr. 22, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., for appellant.

Mr. A. S. Worthington, for appellee.

[619] Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the Court of Claims in favor of appellee for the sum of $538—$328 of which represents his claim for pay as captain and assistant quartermaster of volunteers from March 27, 1865, to June 9, 1865, and $210, his claim for pay allowed by [620] the Acts of March 3, 1865, chap. 81, § 4, 13 Stat. at L., 497, and July 16, 1866, chap. 181, 14 Stat. at L., 94; the first of which Acts provides that all officers of volunteers in commission at its date, below the rank of brigadier-general who should continue in the military service t the close of the war, should be entitled to r ceive, upon being mustered out of the servic three months' pay proper; and the last of whic extended the provisions of the first Act to a officers of volunteers below the rank of brig dier-general, who were in the service on Marc 3, 1865, and whose resignations were present and accepted, or who were mustered out at the own request, or otherwise honorably discharge from the service after the 9th of April, 1865.

The facts are: Appellee enlisted as a privat soldier in the military service of the Unite States, in August, 1861. Having been pr moted from time to time, he was commissione prior to March 27, 1865, as captain and assis ant quartermaster of volunteers. His servic was continuous from August, 1861, to Marc 27, 1865, on which day he was, by order President Lincoln, dismissed the service. B on June 9, 1865, an order was issued by Pres dent Johnson revoking the order of dismissa and restoring him to his former position. B an order issued from the War Department u der date of June 19, 1865, he was assigned duty as division quartermaster of the 1st Div sion, 1st Army Corps, with the temporary ranl pay and emoluments of major in the Quarte master's Department under the Act of July 1864. He held the latter position until Octob 7, 1865, when he was honorably mustered o of the service of the United States.

It does not appear that there was any attemp between March 27, 1865, and June 9, 1865, fill the vacancy by another appointment.

In Blake v. U. S., 103 U. S., 231 [Bk. 26, ed. 462], it was said that "From the organiz tion of the government, under the present Co stitution, to the commencement of the rece war for the suppression of the rebellion, t power of the President, in the absence of st utory regulations, to dismiss from the servi an officer of the army or navy was not que tioned in any adjudged case, or by any depa ment of the government." See also McElra v. U. S., 456 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 189]; Keyes v. S., 109 U. S., 339 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 956]. B the seventeenth section of the Act of July 1 1862, chap. 200, 12 Stat. at L., 596, authori and requests the President to dismiss and d charge from the military service, either in t army, navy, marine corps, or volunteer forc any officer for any cause which, in his jud ment, either rendered such officer unsuital for, or whose dismission would promote, t public service. In accordance with these d cisions, it must be held that that Act, if n simply declaratory of the long established la invested the President with authority to ma the order of March 27, 1865, dismissing app lee from the service of the United States. restriction or limitation was imposed upon authority, in that regard, until the passage the Act of July 13, 1866, chap. 176, 14 Stat. L., 92, repealing the seventeenth section of t Act of July 17, 1862, and by which, also, was declared that "No officer in the military naval service shall, in time of peace, be d missed from the service, except upon and pursuance of a sentence of court-martial to t effect, or in commutation thereof." That A did not go into effective operation, throughc

* Head notes by Mr. Justice HARLAN.

the chair of the United States, until August 20, 1866; for not until that day was the war against the rebellion recognized by the President and Congress as having finally ceased in every part of the Union. McElrath v. U. S., 102 U. S. 426-439 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 191].

In view of these adjudications, it is not to be doubted that the effect of the order of March 27, 1865, dismissing appellee from the service, was to sever his relations with the army. Thenceforward and until, in some lawful way, reappointed, he was disconnected from that branch of the public service as completely as if he had never been an officer of the army. So that, his right to pay, as captain and assistant quartermaster of volunteers, from the date of his dismissal from the service by President Lincoln to the date of the order of President Johnson, depends entirely upon the question whether an officer of the army, once lawfully dismissed from the service, can regain his position and become entitled to its emoluments by means of a subsequent order revoking the order of dismissal and restoring him to his former position.

This question must be answered in the negative upon the authority of Mimmack v. U. S., 97 U. S. 426 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1069]. The death of the incumbent could not more certainly have made a vacancy than was created by President Lincoln's order of dismissal from the service. And such vacancy could only have been filled by a new and original appointment, to which, by the Constitution, the advice and consent of the Senate were necessary; unless the vacancy happened in the recess of that body, in which case the President could have granted a commission, to expire at the end of its next succeeding session. Const., art. II., § 2.

It results that, as the appellee was dismissed from the army during the recent war by a valid order of the President, and as he was not reappointed in the mode prescribed by law, he was not entitled, as an officer of the army, to the pay allowed by statute for the period in question.

The judgment is reversed and the cause remanded, with directions to dismiss the petition.

Reversed.

Test copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

MARTINSBURG AND POTOMAC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JAMES MARCH.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 549-555.)

Contract for construction of railroad—determination, by engineer, of questions relating to its execution—when conclusive.

In a contract for the construction of a railroad provided that the company's engineer should, in all cases, determine questions relating to its execution, including the quantity of the several kinds of work to be done, and the compensation earned by the contractor at the rates specified; that his estimate should be final and conclusive; and that "whenever the work shall be completely performed on the part of the contractor, and the said engineer shall certify the same in writing under his hand, together with his estimate aforesaid, the said company shall pay to said contractor, in current notes, the sum which according to this contract shall be due." Held, That in the absence of fraud, or such gross mistake as would necessarily imply bad faith, or a failure to exercise an honest judgment, his action in the premises is conclusive upon the parties.

[No. 272.]

Argued Apr. 24, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of West Virginia.

This action was brought in the court below, by the defendant in error, to recover the amount alleged to be due on a contract for the construction of a certain section of a railroad.

The defendant filed a general demurrer which was overruled by the court. The defendant then filed special pleas and the case was tried by a jury. The trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for $56,407.31, including interest. On a motion for a new trial the court held that the verdict was excessive. The plaintiff then remitted $13,475.97 of the principal sum and the court rendered judgment for $28,000, with interest from March 1, 1873, and costs. Whereupon the defendant sued out this writ of error.

The facts of the case are sufficiently stated by the court.

Messrs. Wayne MacVeagh and Charles J. Faulkner, for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court: [550]

This case is within the principles announced in Kihlberg v. U. S., 97 U. S., 398 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1106], and Sweeney v. U. S., 109 U. S., 618 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 1053].

Kihlberg sued the United States upon a contract for the transportation of military, Indian, and government stores and supplies from points on the Kansas Pacific Railway to posts and stations in certain States and Territories. The contract provided for payment for transportation "in all cases according to the distance [551] from the place of departure to that of delivery, the distance to be ascertained and fixed by the chief quartermaster of the District of New Mexico, and in no case to exceed the distance by the usual and customary route." One of the issues in that case was as to the authority of that officer to fix, conclusively for the parties, the distances which should govern in the settlement of the contractor's accounts for transportation. There was neither allegation nor proof of fraud or bad faith upon the part of that officer in his discharge of the duty imposed upon him by the mutual assent of the parties. This court said: "In the absence of fraud or such gross mistake as would necessarily imply bad faith, or a failure to exercise an honest judgment, his action in the premises is conclusive upon the appellant as well as upon the government."

This principle was affirmed and applied in Sweeney's Case, in which he sought to recover from the United States the price of a wall built by him around a national cemetery. The contract provided that the wall should be received and become the property of the United States, after an officer or civil engineer, to be designated by the government to inspect the work, should certify that it was in all respects such as the contractor agreed to construct. The officer designated for that purpose refused to so certify, on the ground that neither the material nor the workmanship was such as the contract required. As the officer exercised an honest judgment in making his inspections, and as there was, on his part, neither fraud nor such gross mistake as implied bad faith, it was adjudged that the contractor had no cause of action, on the contract, against the United States.

Those decisions control the determination of the claim arising out of the contract here in suit, whereby the defendant in error, who was plaintiff below, covenanted and agreed that he would furnish all the material required—which should be sound, durable, and of good quality, and approved by the Company's chief engineer —and perform all the labor necessary to construct and finish, in every respect, in the most substantial and workmanlike manner, the grading and masonry of a certain section of the Martinsburg and Potomac Railroad.

The contract provides that, to prevent all disputes, the engineer of the Company "shall, in all cases, determine" the quantity of the several kinds of work to be paid for under the con-[552] tract, and the amount of compensation that the appellee should earn at the rates therein specified; that he "shall, in all cases," decide every question which can or may arise relative to the execution of the contract, and "his estimate shall be final and conclusive"; that in order to enable the contractor to prosecute the work advantageously, the engineer "shall make an estimate from time to time, not oftener than once per month, as the work progresses, of the work done," for which the Company "will pay in current money within twenty per cent of the amount of said estimate on presentation"; that, in calculating the quantity of masonry, walling, and excavation, the most rigid geometrical rules should be applied, any custom to the contrary notwithstanding; and that "whenever this contract shall be wholly completed on the part of the said contractor, and the said engineer shall have certified the same, they [the Company] will pay for said work" the prices in the contract named.

These stipulations were emphasized by this additional provision in the agreement:

"And it is further agreed that whenever the contract shall be completely performed on the part of the contractor, and the said engineer shall certify the same in writing under his hand, together with his estimate aforesaid, the said Company shall, within thirty days after the receipt of said certificate, pay to the said contractor, in current notes, the sum which according to this contract shall be due."

The plaintiff in his declaration, which is in assumpsit, sets out the written contract in full, and counts especially upon its various provisions. The other count is the ordinary one of indebitatus assumpsit. A general demurrer by the Company to the whole declaration and to each count, was overruled. This action of the court below cannot be upheld without disregarding the express conditions of the written agreement; for, it does not appear from the declaration that the engineer ever certified in writing the complete performance of the con tract by the plaintiff, together with an estimat of the work done, and the amount of compensa tion due him according to the prices establishe by the parties. Until after the expiration o thirty days from the receipt of such a certificate the Company did not, by the terms of the agree ment, come under a liability to pay the plaintif the balance, if any, due to him under the co tract. Nor does the declaration state any fact entitling him to sue the Company, on the co tract, in the absence of such a certificate by th engineer, whose determination was made b the parties final or conclusive. And upon th supposition that the engineer made such a ce tificate as that provided by the contract, the is no allegation that entitled the plaintiff to g behind it; for, there is no averment that the e gineer had been guilty of fraud, or had mad such gross mistake in his estimates as necess rily implied bad faith; or had failed to exerci an honest judgment in discharging the du imposed upon him. The first count of the de laration was, therefore, defective for the wa of proper averments showing plaintiff's right sue on the contract, and the demurrer to th count should have been sustained.

As, for this reason, the case must be reman ed for a new trial, it is proper to say that, the declaration had been good on demurrer, should have been compelled to reverse the jud ment for errors in the instructions given to t jury. Several instructions were asked by t defendant embodying the general propositi that the final estimate of the engineer was to taken as conclusive, unless it appeared fro the evidence that, in respect thereto, he is gu ty of fraud or intentional misconduct. The instructions were modified by the court by ad ing after the words "fraud or intentional m conduct" the words "or gross mistake." T modification was well calculated to mislead t jury, for they were not informed that the mista must have been so gross, or of such a natu as necessarily implied bad faith upon the p of the engineer. We are to presume from t terms of the contract that both parties cons ered the possibility of disputes arising betwe them in reference to the execution of the c tract. And it is to be presumed that in th minds was the possibility that the engin might err in his determination of such matte Consequently, to the end that the interests neither party should be put in peril by c putes as to any of the matters covered by th agreement, or in reference to the quantity of work to be done under it, or the compensat which the plaintiff might be entitled to mand, it was expressly stipulated that the gineer's determination should be final and c clusive. Neither party reserved the righ revise that determination for mere errors mistakes upon his part. They chose to r his estimates, and to rely upon their rig which the law presumes they did not intend waive, to demand that the engineer should at all times, and in respect of every ma submitted to his determination, exercise an h est judgment, and commit no such mistakes under all the circumstances, would imply faith.

There is one other error in the instruction which it is proper to call attention. The cont provided that for "bridge masonry" the contractors should receive $7.50 per perch of twenty-five cubic feet. In reference to certain pier masonry, for which plaintiff charged, in his account, $14 per perch, the court instructed the jury as follows:

"The jury are instructed that in respect to the item of 'pier masonry,' and the charge of $14 per perch therefor by the plaintiff, as shown in his estimate or bill of particulars, that if they find that the defendant's chief engineer ordered such masonry to be made, and saw and inspected or examined the same after its completion, and considered the same in his final estimate, and therein treated the same 'pier masonry' as 'bridge masonry,' to be paid for by the defendant at the price of $7.50 per perch, under the terms of the contract, then such determination and judgment of the engineer is final and binding on the plaintiff, unless the jury find that the price and value of the masonry fixed and returned by the engineer was inadequate and unjust to the contractor, in which event the jury may presume fraud, and disregard the price fixed by the engineer in his final estimate."

This instruction, to which defendant excepted, was clearly erroneous; for, if the masonry was of the class described in the contract as bridge masonry, or if the parties by subsequent agreement, express or implied, authorized it to be put in that class—the determination of which questions might be controlled by special circumstances not appearing on the face of the agreement—then the estimate of the engineer upon the basis of the contract price, was conclusive, unless impeached on the ground of fraud, or such gross mistake as necessarily implied bad faith. The test was not whether the price and value of the masonry fixed and returned by the engineer was inadequate and unjust. Much less did the jury have the right to presume fraud and disregard the engineer's estimate, merely because the price, upon which the parties originally agreed for bridge masonry, proved to be inadequate and unjust; for that would have enabled them to make for the parties a contract which they did not themselves choose to make.

Without expressing an opinion upon other questions, of a subordinate character, discussed in the brief of the defendant's counsel, and which may not arise upon another trial, the judgment is reversed, and the case remanded with directions to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, and for such further proceedings as may be consistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

Trans. copy. Test:

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] S. BROWN ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

[illegible] D. HOUSTON, State Tax Collector, and ALLEN JUMEL, State Auditor.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., [illegible].)

Constitutional law—state taxation of imports and exports, of products of other States—regulation of interstate commerce—how far power to [illegible] in Congress.

1. The term "imports" as used in that clause in the Constitution which declare that "No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports," does not refer to articles carried from one State to another, but only to articles imported from foreign countries into the United States.

2. A duty on exports must either be a duty levied on goods as a condition or by reason of their exportation, or at least a direct tax or duty on goods which are intended for exportation. Where a general tax is laid on all property alike, it cannot be construed as a duty on exports when falling upon goods not then intended for exportation, though they should happen to be exported afterwards.

3. The power of Congress to regulate commerce among the States, is exclusive wherever the matter is national in its character or admits of one uniform system or plan of regulation. No State has power to make any law or regulation which will affect the free and unrestrained intercourse and trade between the States, as Congress has left it, or which will impose any discriminating burden or tax upon the citizens or products of other States, coming or brought within its jurisdiction.

4. So long as Congress does not pass any law to regulate commerce among the several States, it thereby indicates its will that that commerce shall be free and untrammeled; and any regulation of the subject by the States is repugnant to such freedom.

5. Coal, sent by the owners in Pennsylvania to their agents in New Orleans, to be there sold for their account, upon its arrival, becomes a part of the general mass of property of Louisiana, and is subject to taxation in common with all other property, and in precisely the same manner. The fact that some of it is subsequently sold for exportation does not alter the case.

6. Woodruff v. Parham, Bk. 19, p. 382, affirmed.

[No. 23.]

Argued Apr. 3, 1884. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana.

The petition in this case was filed in the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, by the plaintiffs in error, to restrain the defendants from the collection of certain taxes alleged to have been illegally assessed.

Upon the final hearing the court entered a judgment dismissing the petition. This judgment having been affirmed, on appeal, by the court below (33 La. Ann., 843), the plaintiffs sued out this writ of error.

The facts of the case are stated by the court.

Messrs. Charles W. Hornor and Joseph P. Hornor, for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court: [623]

This suit was brought by the plaintiffs in error in the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana, 30th December, 1880, to enjoin the defendant, Houston, from seizing and selling a certain lot of coal belonging to the plaintiffs, situated in New Orleans. They alleged in their petition that they were residents and did business in Pittsburg, State of Pennsylvania; that Houston, State Tax Collector of the upper district of the Parish of Orleans, had officially notified Brown & Jones, the agents of the plaintiffs in New Orleans, that they (Brown & Jones) were indebted to the State of Louisiana in the sum of $352.80, state tax for the year 1880 upon a certain lot of Pittsburg coal, assessed as their property, and valued at $58,800; that they (Brown & Jones) were delinquents for said tax, and that he, said Tax Collector, was about to seize, advertise and sell said coal to pay said tax, as would appear by a copy of the notice annexed to the petition. The [624] plaintiffs alleged that they were not indebted to the State of Louisiana for said tax; that they were the sole owners of the coal, and were not liable for any tax thereon, having paid all taxes legally due for the year 1880 on said coal in Pennsylvania; and that the said coal was simply under the care of Brown & Jones as the agents of the plaintiffs in New Orleans, for sale. They further allege that said coal was mined in Pennsylvania, and was exported from said State and imported into the State of Louisiana as their property, and was then, at the time of the petition, and had always remained, in its original condition, and never had been or become mixed or incorporated with other property in the State of Louisiana. That when said assessment was made, the said coal was afloat in the Mississippi River in the Parish of Orleans, in the original condition in which it was exported from Pennsylvania; and the agents, Brown & Jones, notified the board of assessors of the parish that the coal did not belong to them, but to the plaintiffs, and was held as before stated, and was not subject to taxation, and protested against the assessment for that purpose. The plaintiffs averred that the assessment of the tax and any attempt to collect the same were illegal and oppressive, and contrary to the Constitution of the United States, article I, section 8, paragraphs 1 and 3, and section 10, paragraph 2; they therefore prayed an injunction to prevent the seizure and sale of the coal, which, upon giving the requisite bond, was granted.

The notice of assessment, referred to in the petition and annexed thereto, was as follows:

"Office State Tax Collector, Upper District
Parish of Orleans, No. 24 Union Street,
New Orleans, Dec. 20, 1880.

To Brown & Jones, Gravier and Charles Street.

Sir: You are hereby officially notified, in conformity with the provisions of Act No. 77 of 1880, that the state taxes assessed to you on movable property in this parish, which amount to the sum of $852.80 (the aggregate assessed [625] value of such property being $58,800), fell due and should have been paid in full on or before the first day of the current month; that you became a delinquent for said taxes on such first day of December; that after the expiration of twenty days from the date of this notice, I, as tax collector of the upper district of the Parish of Orleans, will advertise for sale the movable property on which the said taxes are due in the manner provided by law for judicial sales; that at the principal front door of the court-house, where the Civil District Court of said parish is held, I will sell within the legal hours for judicial sales, for cash and without appraisement, such portion of the said movable property as you shall point out and deliver to me, and in case you shall not point out sufficient property that I will at once and without further delay sell for cash without appraisement the least quantity of said movable property which any bidder will buy for the amount of taxes asessed upon movable property, with interest and costs.

Respectfully, yours,
J. D. Houston,
State Tax Collector, Upper District Parish of Orleans."

The defendant answered with a general denial, but admitting the assessment of the ta and the intention to sell the property for pay ment thereof.

The plaintiffs, to sustain the allegations o their petition, produced two witnesses. Georg F. Rootes testified that he was the general agen and manager of the business of Brown & Jone in New Orleans; that when the assessment com plained of was made, the firm had paid the stat taxes due upon their capital stock, and had pai state and city licenses to do business for tha year; that, at the time of the assessment of th tax in question, the coal upon which it was levie was in the hands of Brown & Jones, as agent for the plaintiffs, for sale, having just arrive from Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, by flatboat and was on said boats in which it arrived an afloat on the Mississippi River; that it was hel by Brown & Jones to be sold for account of th plaintiffs by the boatload, and that since the more than half of it had been exported fro this country on foreign steamships and the ba ance of it sold into the interior of the State f plantation use by the flatboat load. Samu S. Brown, one of the plaintiffs, testified that th plaintiffs were the owners of the coal in que tion; that it was mined in plaintiffs' mine Allegheny County, Pennsylvania; that a tax two or more mills was paid on it in Pennsy vania as state tax thereon, in the year 1880, b ing the tax of 1880: that a tax was also paid it to the County of Allegheny for the year 188 that it was shipped from Pittsburg, Pennsy vania, in 1880, and was received in New O leans in its original condition and in its origin packages, and still owned by the plaintiffs. N other proof was offered in the case.

The Louisiana Statute of April 9, 1880, A No. 77, under which the assessment was mad provided as follows:

"Section 1. That for the calendar year 188 and for each and every succeeding calend year, there are hereby levied annual taxe amounting in the aggregate to six mills on t dollar of the assessed valuation hereafter to made of all property situated within the State Louisiana, except such as is expressly exempt from taxation by the (State) Constitution."

The exemptions from taxation under t Constitution of Louisiana do not affect t question.

Upon the case as thus made the District Co of the parish dissolved the injunction and d missed the suit. On appeal to the Supre Court of Louisiana, this judgment was affirm and the case is now here by writ of error the judgment of the Supreme Court.

The following errors have been assigned:

"The lower court erred in holding:

1st. That the tax in question did not viol article 4, section 2, clause 1, of the Fede Constitution.

2d. That it did not violate article 1, secti 8, clause 3, of the same instrument.

3d. That it did not violate article 1, secti 10, clause 2, of the same instrument."

The clauses here referred to are these:

1. "The citizens of each State shall be titled to all privileges and immunities of c zens in the several States.

2. "The Congress shall have power to re late commerce with foreign nations, and amo the several States, and with the Indian trib

1. "No State shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws."

The constitutional questions here presented were argued in the Supreme Court of Louisiana, and in what manner the subject was viewed by that court may be seen by the following extract from its opinion, filed as part of the record. The court said:

"First. This Act [Act No. 77 of 1880] does not in its terms discriminate against the products of other States or the property of the citizens of other States, but subjects all property liable to taxation found within the State, whether of its own citizens or citizens of other States, whether imported from other States or produced here, to the same rate of taxation. * * *

"Second. The coal in question was taxed in common with all other property found within the State. We held in the case of New Orleans Gaslight Company v. Hart, recently decided by us, not yet reported, * that the clause in the Federal Constitution giving to Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States had no immediate relation to or necessary connection with the taxing power of the State. Every tax upon property, it is true, may affect more or less the operations of commerce, by diminishing the profits to be derived from the subjects of commerce, but it does not for that reason amount to a regulation of commerce within the meaning of the Federal Constitution, and such is the doctrine laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States. [See for an R. R. Gross Receipts] 15 Wall., 284 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 167].

"Third. This tax cannot be regarded as a duty or impost levied by the State on imports. To give such a construction to it, and to recognize the alleged prohibition contended for, would create an exemption for all goods and merchandise and property of every kind and description brought into the State for sale or use, and by such construction destroy a main source of revenue to the State. As we had occasion to show in the case referred to, the word 'imports' used in the Constitution has been construed to refer not to property brought or imported from other States of the Union, but solely to imports from foreign countries. Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall., 123 [75 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 382]; Pervear v. Commonwealth, 5 Wall., 479 [72 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 608]".

In approaching the consideration of the case we will first take up the last objection raised by the plaintiffs in error, namely: that the tax was a duty on imports and exports.

"It was decided by this court in the case of Woodruff v. Parham [supra], that the term 'imports' as used in that clause of the Constitution which declares that "No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports," does not refer to articles carried from one State into another, but only to articles imported from foreign countries into the United States. In that case the City of Mobile had by ordinance, passed in pursuance of its charter, authorized the collection of a tax on real and personal estate, sales at auction, and sales of merchandise, capital employed in business and income within the city. Woodruff and others were auctioneers and were taxed under this ordinance for sales at auction made by them, including sales of goods, the product of other States than Alabama, received by them as consignees and agents, and sold in the original and unbroken packages; but as the ordinance made no discrimination between sales at auction of goods produced in Alabama and goods produced in other States, the court held that the tax was not unconstitutional. A contrary result must have been reached under the ruling in Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat., 449, if the constitutional prohibition referred to had been held to include imports from other States as well as imports from foreign countries; for, at the time the tax was laid, the condition of the goods, in reference to their introduction into the State, was precisely the same in one case as in the other. This court, however, after an elaborate examination of the question, held that the terms "imports" and "exports" in the clause under consideration had reference to goods brought from or carried to foreign countries alone, and not to goods transported from one State to another. [629]

It is unnecessary, therefore, to consider further the question raised by the plaintiffs in error under their third assignment of errors, so far forth as it is based on the assumption that the tax complained of was an impost or duty on imports. The other assumption made under that assignment, that some of the coal was afterwards exported, and that the tax complained of was therefore pro tanto a duty on exports, is equally untenable. When the petition was filed the coal was lying in New Orleans, in the hands of Brown & Jones, for sale. The petition states this in so many words, and Rootes testifies the same thing, and adds that it was to be sold by the flatboat load. He also adds that at the time of his examination more than half of it had been exported to foreign countries; but he probably means that it had been sold to steamers sailing to foreign ports for use on the same, and had only been exported in that way. The complainants were not exporters; they did not hold the coal at New Orleans for exportation, but for sale there. Being in New Orleans, and held there on sale, without reference to the destination, or use which the purchasers might wish to make of it, it was taxed in the hands of the owners (or their agents) like all other property in the city, six mills on the dollar. If after this, and after being sold, the purchaser thought proper to put it on board of a steamer bound to foreign parts, that did not alter the character of the taxation so as to convert it from a general tax to a duty on exports. When taxed it was not held with the intent or for the purpose of exportation, but with the intent and for the purpose of sale there, in New Orleans. A duty on exports must either be a duty levied on goods as a condition, or by reason of their exportation, or, at least, a direct tax or duty on goods which are intended for exportation. Whether the last would be a duty on exports, it is not necessary to determine. But certainly, where a general tax is laid on all property alike, it cannot be

* The judgment in this case was reversed by this court in Hart v. New Orleans, 112 U. S., 69 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 659].

[630] construed as a duty on exports when falling upon goods not then intended for exportation, though they should happen to be exported afterwards. This is the most that can be said of the goods in question, and we are therefore of opinion that the tax was not a duty on exports any more than it was a duty on imports, within the meaning of those terms in the clause under consideration.

But in holding with the decision in Woodruff v. Parham [supra], that goods carried from one State to another are not imports or exports within the meaning of the clause which prohibits a State from laying any impost or duty on imports or exports, we do not mean to be understood as holding that a State may levy import or export duties on goods imported from or exported to another State. We only mean to say that the clause in question does not prohibit it. Whether the laying of such duties by a State would not violate some other provision of the Constitution, that, for example, which gives to Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, is a different question. This brings us to the consideration of the second assignment of error, which is founded on the clause referred to.

The power to regulate commerce among the several States is granted to Congress in terms as absolute as is the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations. If not in all respects an exclusive power; if, in the absence of Congressional action, the States may continue to regulate matters of local interest only incidentally affecting foreign and interstate commerce, such as pilots, wharves, harbors, roads, bridges, tolls, freights, etc., still, according to the rule laid down in Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How., 319, the power of Congress is exclusive wherever the matter is national in its character or admits of one uniform system or plan of regulation; and is certainly so far exclusive that no State has power to make any law or regulation which will affect the free and unrestrained intercourse and trade between the States, as Congress has left it, or which will impose any discriminating burden or tax upon the citizens or products of other States, coming or brought within its jurisdiction. All laws and regula-[631] tions are restrictive of natural freedom to some extent, and where no regulation is imposed by the government which has the exclusive power to regulate, it is an indication of its will that the matter shall be left free. So long as Congress does not pass any law to regulate commerce among the several States, it hereby indicates its will that that commerce shall be free and untrammeled; and any regulation of the subject by the States is repugnant to such freedom. This has frequently been laid down as law in the judgments of this court. In Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S., 282 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 850], Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the court, said: "The fact that Congress has not seen fit to prescribe any specific rules to govern interstate commerce does not affect the question. Its inaction on this subject, when considered with reference to its legislation with respect to foreign commerce, is equivalent to a declaration that interstate commerce shall be free and untrammeled." This was said in a case where the plaintiff in error had been convicted of selling goods without a license under a law of the Sta of Missouri, which prohibited any person fro dealing as a peddler without license, and whic declared that a peddler was one dealing in goo or wares "not the growth, produce or ma ufacture of this State [Missouri], by going fro place to place to sell the same." To the san purport, and on the same subject generally, s Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat., 209; License Cas 5 How., 575, 592, 594, 600, 605; Passeng Cases, 7 How., 407, 414, 419, 445, 462–46 Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall., 35, 41–49 [73 U S., bk. 18, L. ed. 745, 746–749]; Paul v. Vi ginia, 8 Wall., 168, 182–184 [75 U. S., bk. 1 L. ed. 357, 361]; Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wal 418, 430, 431 [79 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 449, 453 State Tax on Railway Receipts, 15 Wall., 293 [U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 167]; The Lottawanna, Wall., 581 [88 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 664]; He derson v. Mayor of N. Y., 92 U. S., 259 [B 23, L. ed. 543]; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S., [Bk. 23, L. ed. 819]; R. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 S., 465 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 527]; Cook v. Penns vania, 97 U. S., 566 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1015]; G v. Baltimore, 100 U. S., 434 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 74 Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S., 123 [Bk. 26, ed. 103]; Packet Co. v. Catlettsburg, 105 U. 559 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1169]; Transportation Co. Parkersburg, 107 U. S., 701 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 58 and see Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S., [Bk. 28, L. ed. 653].

In the case of R. R. Co. v. Husen [Bk. L. ed. 529], in which another law of t State of Missouri came up for consideratio which declared that no Texas, Mexican Indian cattle should be driven, or otherw conveyed into the State between the first of M and first of November, unless carried throu the State in cars, without being unloaded, t court, through Mr. Justice Strong, said: " seems hardly necessary to argue at length th unless the statute can be justified as a legitim exercise of the police power of the State, it i usurpation of the power vested exclusively Congress. It is a plain regulation of interst commerce, a regulation extending to prohi tion. Whatever may be the power of a St over commerce that is completely internal can no more prohibit or regulate that which interstate than it can that which is with forei nations." In short, it may be laid down as settled doctrine of this court, at this day, th State can no more regulate or impede comme among the several States than it can regulate impede commerce with foreign nations.

This being the recognized law, the questi then arises whether the assessment of the tax question amounted to any interference with restriction upon the free introduction of plaintiffs' coal from the State of Pennsylva into the State of Louisiana, and the free dispo of the same in commerce in the latter State; other words, whether the tax amounted to a r ulation of, or restriction upon, commerce am the States; or only to an exercise of local ministration under the general taxing pow which, though it may incidentally affect subjects of commerce, is entirely within power of the State until Congress shall see fi interfere and make express regulations on subject.

As to the character and mode of the ass ment, little need be added to what has alre [illegible] and. It was not a tax imposed upon the [illegible] a foreign product, or as the product of another State than Louisiana, nor a tax imposed [illegible] of the coal being imported or brought [illegible] Louisiana, nor a tax imposed whilst it was [illegible] of transit through that State to some other place of destination. It was imposed after the coal had arrived at its destination and was put up for sale. The coal had come to its place of use, for final disposal or use, and was a commodity in the market of New Orleans. It might remain in that condition for a year or two [illegible] or only for a day. It had become a part of the general mass of property in the State, and [illegible] it was taxed for the current year (1880), [illegible] other property in the City of New Orleans [illegible]. Under the law, it could not be taxed [illegible] until the following year. It was subject to no discrimination in favor of goods which were the product of Louisiana, or goods which were the property of citizens of Louisiana. It was treated in exactly the same manner [illegible] such goods were treated.

It cannot be seriously contended, at least in the absence of any congressional legislation to the contrary, that all goods which are the product of other States are to be free from taxation in the State to which they may be carried for use or sale. Take the City of New York, for example. When the assessor of taxes goes his round, must he omit from his list of taxables all goods which have come into the city from the factories of New England and New Jersey, or from the pastures and grain fields of the West? If he must, what will be left for taxation? And how is he to distinguish between those goods which are taxable and those which are not? With the exception of goods imported from foreign countries, still in the original packages, and goods in transit to some other place, why may he not assess all property alike that may be found in the city, being there for the purpose of remaining there till used or sold, and constituting part of the great mass of its commercial capital—provided always, that the assessment be a general one, and made without discrimination between goods the product of New York, and goods the product of other States? Of course the assessment should be a general one, and not discriminative between goods of different States. The taxing of goods coming from other States, as such, or by reason of their so coming, would be a discriminating tax against them as imports, and would be a violation of interstate commerce, inconsistent with that perfect freedom of trade which Congress has seen fit should remain undisturbed. But if, after their arrival within the State—that being their place of destination for use or trade—of other kinds, they are subjected to a general tax and alike on all property within the city, we fail to see how such a taxing can be deemed a violation of commerce which would have the objectionable effect referred to.

We do not mean to say that if a tax collector should be stationed at every ferry and railroad depot in the City of New York, charged with the duty of collecting a tax on every wagon-load or carload of produce and merchandise brought into the city, that it would not be a regulation of and restraint upon interstate commerce, so far as the tax should be imposed on articles brought from other States. We think it would be, and that it would be an encroachment upon the exclusive powers of Congress. It would be very different from the tax laid on auction sales of all property indiscriminately, as in the case of Woodruff v. Parham [supra], which had no relation to the movement of goods from one State to another. It would be very different from a tax laid, as in the present case, on property which had reached its destination, and had become part of the general mass of property of the city, and which was only taxed as a part of that general mass in common with all other property in the city, and in precisely the same manner.

When Congress shall see fit to make a regulation on the subject of property transported from one State to another, which may have the effect to give it a temporary exemption from taxation in the State to which it is transported, it will be time enough to consider any conflict that may arise between such regulation and the general taxing laws of the State. In the present case we see no such conflict, either in the law itself or in the proceedings which have been had under it and sustained by the state tribunals, nor any conflict with the general rule that a State cannot pass a law which shall interfere with the unrestricted freedom of commerce between the States.

In our opinion, therefore, the second assignment of error is untenable.

The only remaining assignment of error to be considered is, that the tax in question violated that clause of the fourth article of the Constitution which declares that "The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States." As the applicability of this objection did not occur to us upon reading the record of the case, we [635] have carefully examined the brief of the plaintiffs' counsel for light on the subject, but so far as we can understand, the point is not urged. We are certainly unable to see how, or in what respect, any equality of privileges as citizens has been denied to the plaintiffs by the imposition of the tax. Their property was only taxed like that of all other persons, whether citizens of Louisiana or of any other State or country. Not the slightest discrimination was made.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Louisiana is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—116 U. S., 455, 527; 117 U. S., 49.

PROVIDENT SAVINGS LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF NEW YORK, Plff. in Err., [635]

v.

DANIEL W. FORD.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 635–642.)

Removal of causes—suit in State Court on judgment recovered in Federal Court—petition, allegations of.

1. In a suit in a court of New York against a corporation of that State upon a judgment recovered in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio, merely alleging in a petition for removal, that the defendant was not an inhabitant of Ohio, and was not found there, and was not personally served with process by itself or its officers, was not sufficient to raise a defense, under § 739, R. S., of want of jurisdiction in the Circuit Court, without also negativing service of process on an agent of the defendant in Ohio and the actual appearance of the defendant to the suit.

NOTE.—Removal of causes under Act of 1875—citizenship. See Meyer v. Delaware, etc., Co., 100 U. S., bk. 25, 598, note.

2. Want of jurisdiction, set up to avoid a judgment, must be shown with the greatest certainty.

3. The mere fact that a suit in a State Court is brought on a judgment recovered in a Federal Court does not entitle the defendant to removal.

4. The colorable transfer of a right of action from a person against whom the defendant would have a right of removal, to one against whom he has no such right, and made to deprive the Federal Court of jurisdiction, is not a ground for removal; but such a transfer is a matter of defense to the action.

[No. 105.]

Argued Nov. 26, 1884. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

This action was brought in the court below, by the defendant in error, on a judgment against the defendant in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio.

Before the commencement of the trial, the defendant filed a petition for the removal of the cause into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of New York. The court refused to remove the cause and proceeded with the trial, which resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff for $3,573.44, including costs.

The judgment was affirmed, on successive appeals, by the court below at General Term, and by the Court of Appeals, which court remitted the record to the court below. Whereupon the defendant sued out this writ of error.

The facts of the case are stated by the court.

Mr. Esek Cowen, for defendant in error.

Messrs. Edwin B. Smith, Stephen G. Clarke and William Stanley, for plaintiff in error.

[636] Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action brought in the Supreme Court of New York by Daniel W. Ford, the defendant in error, against the Provident Savings Life Assurance Company (the plaintiff in error) on a judgment recovered by one Charles Cochran against said Company in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio, and assigned by Cochran to the plaintiff, Ford. The complaint contained, amongst others, the following averments, to wit: "That heretofore and on or about the 12th day of December, 1876, one Charles Cochran, then a resident of the State of Ohio, in due form of law, commenced an action in the United States Circuit Court for the Northern District of Ohio against the defendant in this action, praying for a judgment against said defendant for $20,000 damages; that the defendant in said action and herein duly appeared in said action and answered the petition or complaint of said Cochran, and after trial had of the issues thus joined, at which the defendant therein and herein duly appeared, judgment was duly directed, and, subsequently, and on or about the 10th day of October, 1878, was duly entered and docketed in the office of the clerk of said United States Circuit Court for the said Northern District of Ohio, in favor of the said complainant, Cochran, and against the said The Provident Savings Life Assurance Society of New York, the defendant therein and herein, for the sum of $3,305.45 damages and costs.

This plaintiff further alleges that on or about the 30th day of November, 1878, the said Charles Cochran, the complainant in said action and the then lawful holder and owner of said judgment, duly assigned and transferred to this plaintiff the said judgment, together with all his rights and claims thereunder and the interest due thereon.

The defendant, in answer to the complaint, admitted that Cochran had taken some proceedings in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio, praying for judgment against the defendant; but averred that there was never any personal service of process, summons or petition upon the defendant; and denied any knowledge of the recovery of any judgment as alleged in the complaint, or that Cochran had assigned the alleged judgment to Ford.

The cause came on for trial in February, 1879, but before the trial commenced the defendant presented a petition for the removal of the cause to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of New York, accompanied by a bond, which was approved by the court. The petition was as follows, to wit:

"Supreme Court, Rensselaer County.
Daniel W. Ford against
The Provident Savings Life Assurance Society of New York.

"To said Supreme Court: Your petitioner respectfully shows to this honorable court that i is the defendant in the above action, and a cor poration duly incorporated under the laws o the State of New York, located and having it place of business in the City of New York, an was such corporation during all the times here inafter mentioned, and was never organized o incorporated under any law of the State o Ohio; that the above action is brought to re cover the amount of a judgment alleged to hav been obtained against your petitioner in th State of Ohio, by one Charles Cochran, on th 10th day of October, 1878, in the Circuit Cou of the United States for the Northern Distric of Ohio, for the sum of $3,305.45; that sai Cochran then resided and still resides in th State of Ohio; that this action is brought upo an alleged assignment of said judgment to th plaintiff above named by said Cochran, and now pending and undetermined; that the ma ter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of costs, th sum or value of $500, and involves questio arising under the laws of the United States, wit: under section 739 of the Revised Statut of the United States. Said section forbids 'A suit to be brought by any original process b fore either of the United States Courts again an inhabitant of the United States in any oth district than that of which he is an inhabita or in which he shall be found at the time serving the writ.' And your petitioner ave that the said suit in Ohio was by original pr ess, but that the said process was never serv personally upon the defendant in said action Ohio, or upon any of its officers, nor was defendant ever an inhabitant of Ohio or fou [illegible] as your petitioner verily believes, said circuit court never acquired jurisdiction, and said judgment is invalid and void, and that such want of personal service as aforesaid is alleged in the answer in the present action, and that the trial of this action will necessarily involve the construction and effect of the said law of the United States, to wit: the 789th section of the said United States Revised Statutes.

Secondly. And your petitioner further says, and is informed and verily believes, that the plaintiff in this action is not the real party in interest therein, but that said Cochran is the real party in interest, and that said alleged assignment is merely colorable; that it was made without any consideration and merely for the purpose of prosecuting and collecting said judgment for the benefit of said Cochran, and to avoid the necessity of said Cochran's giving security for costs as a nonresident of this State, and to embarrass, and, if possible, prevent the transfer of the action to the United States Courts, and that the controversy in this action is in reality not a substance between the defendant and the said Charles Cochran, who are citizens of different States, to wit: the defendant is in law a citizen of New York, and said Cochran a citizen of Ohio."

The petition then concluded with the proffer of a bond and a prayer for removal of the cause in the usual form. The court refused to remove the cause, and the trial proceeded and resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, which judgment is brought here by the present writ of error.

The question for our consideration is, whether upon the petition as presented, and the pleadings as they then stood, the application for removal should have been granted.

The first ground of removal set forth in the petition was, in effect, that the defendant had a defense arising under section 789 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which defense was that the judgment sued on was absolutely void for want of jurisdiction in the court, because that section forbids any suit to be brought by any original process before either of the United States Courts against an inhabitant of the United States in any other district than that of which he is an inhabitant, or in which he shall be found at the time of serving the writ; and it is averred that the suit was by original process and that said process was never served personally upon the defendant in Ohio (the defendant being a New York corporation) or upon any of its officers there, and that the defendant was never an inhabitant of Ohio.

The allegation of a defense under the section referred to is clearly evasive and inconsequential. It is not necessary that a corporation should be an inhabitant of a State, or should be found therein, or should be personally served with process through its officers, in order that the Circuit Court of the United States sitting in that State may have jurisdiction of a personal suit against it. It is well known that corporations of the character of the defendant, desirous of doing business in a State other than that in which they have their domicil, are generally required to have an agent therein to receive service of process for them. This is exacted as a condition of their doing business in such State, and such a corporation differs from an ordinary "inhabitant" of a State, as that term is used in said section 789. This mode of acquiring personal jurisdiction of a foreign corporation applies to the Federal Courts as well as to the State Courts. See Ex parte Shollenberger, 96 U. S., 369 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 853]. Again, jurisdiction may also be acquired by the actual appearance of such a corporation to a suit brought against it in the United States Circuit Court. So that merely alleging that the defendant was not an inhabitant of Ohio, and was not found there, and was not personally served with process by itself or its officers, was not sufficient to raise a defense under section 789 of want of jurisdiction in the Circuit Court, without also negativing service of process on an agent of the defendant in Ohio and the actual appearance of the defendant to the suit; for, want of jurisdiction set up to avoid a judgment must be shown with the greatest certainty. The petition of removal is very careful not to negative these important contingencies, and that, in the face of the allegation of the complaint that the defendant did appear to the suit, and did answer the petition and appear at the trial. Hence we say that the allegation of a defense under the statute is clearly evasive and inconsequential, and we are not at all surprised to find that when the record of the Ohio suit was produced it showed that the defendant's agent was served with process, and that the defendant did actually appear to the suit and answer the petition, and did appear at and contest the trial, which lasted for a fortnight.

Reading the petition for removal, therefore, in the light of the pleadings on file when it was presented, we are satisfied that the first ground of removal set out therein was insufficient.

The second ground was, in effect, that the assignment of the judgment by Cochran to Ford was colorable merely, and that the real party in interest was Cochran, who was a citizen of Ohio, and as to whom the defendant, being a citizen of New York, was entitled to removal of the cause, and should not be deprived of its right by the fraudulent assignment. The plain answer to this position is, that the action was nevertheless Ford's, and as against him there was no right of removal. If he was a mere tool of Cochran, and if the latter was the person really interested in the cause, the action could not have been sustained; for the Code of Procedure of New York declares, that "every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest," except in a few cases not including this, and not alone in New York, but anywhere, if it could be shown that the assignment was fraudulent as against the defendant, it would be void, and this fact would be a defense to the action brought by the assignee. We know of no instance where the want of consideration in a transfer, or a colorable transfer, of a right of action from a person against whom the defendant would have a right of removal to a person against whom he would not have such a right, has been held a good ground for removing a cause from a State to a Federal Court. Where an assignment of a cause of action is colorably made for the purpose of giving jurisdiction to the United States Court, the fifth section of the Act of Congress of March 3, 1875, relating to removals, has now given to the Circuit Court power to dismiss or remand the cause at any time when the fact is made to appear. And by analogy of this law, it may, perhaps, be a good defense to an action in a State Court, to show that a colorable assignment has been made to deprive the United States Court of jurisdiction but, as before said, it would be a defense to the action, and not a ground of removing that cause into the Federal Court. We think, therefore, the second ground of removal was also insufficient.

It is suggested, however, that a suit on a judgment recovered in a United States Court is necessarily a suit arising under the laws of the United States, as much so as if the plaintiff or defendant were a corporation of the United States; and hence that such a suit is removable under the Act of March 3, 1875.

It is observable that the removal of the cause was not claimed on any such broad ground as this; but so far as the character of the case was concerned, only on the ground that the defendant had a defense under section 739 of the Revised Statutes, specifying what the defense was; and we have already shown that that ground of removal, as stated in the petition, was insufficient. But, conceding that the defendant is now entitled to take its position on the broader ground referred to, is it tenable and sufficient for the purpose?

What is a judgment, but a security of record showing a debt due from one person to another? It is as much a mere security as a treasury note, or a bond of the United States. If A brings an action against B, trover or otherwise, for the withholding of such securities, it is not therefore a case arising under the laws of the United States, although the whole value of the securities depends upon the fact of their being [642] the obligations of the United States. So if A have title to land by patent of the United States and brings an action against B for trespass or waste, committed by cutting timber, or by mining and carrying away precious ores, or the like, it is not therefore a case arising under the laws of the United States. It is simply the case of an ordinary right of property sought to be enforced. A suit on a judgment is nothing more, unless some question is raised in the case (as might be raised in any of the cases specified), distinctly involving the laws of the United States—such a question, for example, as was ineffectually attempted to be raised by the defendant in this case. If such a question were raised, then it is conceded it would be a case arising under the laws of the United States.

These considerations show a wide distinction, as it seems to us, between the case of a suit merely on a judgment of a United States Court, and that of a suit by or against a United States corporation; which latter, according to the masterly analysis of Chief Justice Marshall in Osborn v. Bank, 9 Wheat., 738, is pervaded from its origin to its close by United States law and United States authority.

Without pursuing the subject further, we conclude with expressing our opinion, that this last ground of removal, like those already considered, was insufficient.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of New York is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—115 U. S., 267.

FORT LEAVENWORTH RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PERCIVAL G. LOWE, Sheriff of the COUNTY OF LEAVENWORTH.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 525-542.)

Constitutional law—jurisdiction over lands within a State, occupied by the United States—when exclusive in United States—conditional grant to United States.

1. The legislative power of Congress is exclusiv over lands within a State purchased with its con sent by the United States for a constitutional pur pose.

2. Where the United States acquires lands withi a State in any other way than by purchase with i consent, forts, arsenals or other public building erected thereon for the use of the General Govern ment, as instrumentalities for the execution of i powers, will be free from any such interference an jurisdiction of the State as would destroy or impa their effective use for the purposes designed. Bu when not used as such instrumentalities, the legi lative power of the State over the places acquire will be as full and complete as over any other place within its limits.

3. The cession of lands by a State to the Unite States may be upon such conditions as the Stat may see fit to annex not inconsistent with the fre and effective use of such lands for the purposes i tended.

4. After the admission of the State of Kansas th United States retained only the rights of an ord nary proprietor in the Fort Leavenworth Militar Reservation; except as an instrument for the ex cution of the powers of the General Governmen that part of the tract, which was actually used as fort or military post, was beyond such control o the State, by taxation or otherwise, as would defea its use for those purposes. The clause of the Act o the Legislature of Kansas of February 23, 1875, ce cede jurisdiction over said Reservation to th United States, saving to the State "the right to ta railroad, bridge and other corporations, their fra chises and property, on said Reservation" is vali and a tax upon a railroad paid to the State canno be recovered back.

[No. 243.]

Argued Apr. 9, 10, 1885. Decided May 4, 188

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of th State of Kansas.

This action was brought in the District Cou of Leavenworth, Kansas, by the plaintiff i error, to recover certain taxes paid under an a leged illegal assessment upon property situate within the Fort Leavenworth Military Reserv tion. The court rendered judgment on demu rer, for the defendant. This judgment havin been affirmed, on error, by the court below, th plaintiff sued out this writ of error.

The facts of the case are stated by the cour

Messrs. E. E. Cook, Thos. F. Withrow an M. A. Low, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. Hallett Phillips, for defenda in error.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion the court:

The plaintiff, a Corporation organized und the laws of Kansas, was in 1880, and has ev since been, the owner of a railroad in the Re ervation of the United States in that Stat known as the Fort Leavenworth Military Re ervation. In that year its track, right of wa franchises, road bed, telegraph line and instr ments connected therewith on the Reservatio was assessed by the board of assessors of the State and a tax of $394.40 levied thereon, which was paid by the Railroad Company under protest, in order to prevent a sale of the property. The present action is brought to recover back the money thus paid, on the ground that the property, being entirely within the Reservation, was exempt from assessment and taxation by the State.

The land constituting the Reservation was part of the territory acquired in 1803 by cession from France, and, until the formation of the State of Kansas and her admission into the Union, the United States possessed the rights of a proprietor, and had political dominion and sovereignty over it. For many years before that admission it had been reserved from sale by the proper authorities of the United States for military purposes, and occupied by them as a military post. The jurisdiction of the United States over it during this time was necessarily exclusive. But in 1861 Kansas was admitted into the Union upon an equal footing with the original States, that is, with the same rights of political dominion and sovereignty, subject like them only to the Constitution of the United States. Congress might undoubtedly, upon such admission, have stipulated for retention of the political authority, dominion and legislative power of the United States over the Reservation, so long as it should be used for military purposes by the Government; that is, it could have excepted the place from the jurisdiction of Kansas, as one needed for the uses of the General Government. But from some cause, inadvertence perhaps, or overconfidence that a cession of such jurisdiction could be had whenever desired, no such stipulation or exception was made. The United States, therefore, retained after the admission of the State, only the rights of an ordinary proprietor; except as an instrument for the execution of the powers of the General Government, that part of the land which was actually used for a fort or military post was beyond such control of the State, by taxation or otherwise, as would defeat its use for those purposes. So far as the land constituting the Reservation was not used for military purposes, the possession of the United States was only that of an individual proprietor. The State could have exercised, with reference to it, the same authority and jurisdiction which she could have exercised over other property held by private parties. This limit to the jurisdiction of the United States was called to the attention of the government in 1871. In April of that year the Secretary of War addressed a communication to the Attorney-General, inclosing papers touching the Reservation, and submitting for his official opinion the question, whether, under the Constitution, the reservation of the land for a site as a military post and for public buildings took it out of the operation of the law of March 3, 1859, 11 Stat. at L. 430, and, if so, what action would be required on the part of the Executive or Congress to restore the land to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. The Attorney-General replied that the Act admitting Kansas as a State into the Union had the effect to release from federal jurisdiction all the territory within the boundaries of the new State, excepting only that of the Indians having treaties with the United States, which provided that without their consent such territory should not be subject to state jurisdiction, and the Reservation was not within this exception; and that to restore Federal jurisdiction over the land included in the Reservation, it would be necessary to obtain from the State of Kansas a cession of jurisdiction, which he had no doubt would upon application be readily granted by the State Legislature. 14 Ops. Attys-Gen., 88. It does not appear from the record before us that such application was ever made; but, on the 22d of February, 1875, the Legislature of the State passed an Act entitled "An Act to Cede Jurisdiction to the United States over the Territory of the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation," the first section of which is as follows: [528]

"That exclusive jurisdiction be, and the same is hereby ceded to the United States over and within all the territory owned by the United States, and included within the limits of the United States military reservation known as the Fort Leavenworth Reservation in said State, as declared from time to time by the President of the United States, saving, however, to the said State the right to serve civil or criminal process within said Reservation, in suits or prosecutions for or on account of rights acquired, obligations incurred, or crimes committed in said State, but outside of said cession and Reservation; and saving further to said State the right to tax railroad, bridge, and other corporations, their franchises and property, on said Reservation." Laws of Kansas of 1875, p. 95.

The question as to the right of the plaintiff to recover back the taxes paid depends upon the validity and effect of the last saving clause in this Act. As we have said, there is no evidence before us that any application was made by the United States for this legislation, but, as it conferred a benefit, the acceptance of the Act is to be presumed in the absence of any dissent on their part. The contention of the plaintiff is that the Act of cession operated under the Constitution to vest in the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the Reservation, and that the last saving clause, being inconsistent with that result, is to be rejected. The Constitution provides that "Congress shall have power to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square), as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the Goverment of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dock-yards, and other needful buildings." Art. 1, § 8.

The necessity of complete jurisdiction over the place which should be selected as the seat of government was obvious to the framers of the Constitution. Unless it were conferred, the deliberations of Congress might in times of excitement be exposed to interruptions without adequate means of protection; its members and the officers of the government be subjected to insult and intimidation, and the public archives be in danger of destruction. The Federalist, in support of this clause in the Constitution, in addition to these reasons, urged that "a dependence of the members of the General Government on the State comprehending the seat [529] of the government for protection in the exercise of their duty, might bring on the national councils an imputation of awe or influence, equally dishonorable to the government and dissatisfactory to the other members of the confederacy." No. 43.

The necessity of supreme legislative authority over the seat of government was forcibly impressed upon the members of the Constitutional Convention by occurrences which took place near the close of the Revolutionary War. At that time, while Congress was in session in Philadelphia, it was surrounded and insulted by a body of mutineers of the Continental Army. In giving an account of this proceeding, Mr. Rawle, in his treatise on the Constitution, says of the action of Congress: "It applied to the executive authority of Pennsylvania for defense; but, under the ill-conceived Constitution of the State at that time, the executive power was vested in a council, consisting of thirteen members, and they possessed or exhibited so little energy, and such apparent intimidation, that the Congress indignantly removed to New Jersey, whose inhabitants welcomed it with promises of defending it. It remained for some time at Princeton without being again insulted, till, for the sake of greater convenience, it adjourned to Annapolis. The general dissatisfaction with the proceedings of the executive authority of Pennsylvania, and the degrading spectacle of a fugitive Congress, suggested the remedial provisions now under consideration." Rawle, p. 113. Of this proceeding Mr. Justice Story remarks: "If such a lesson could have been lost upon the people, it would have been as humiliating to their intelligence as it would have been offensive to their honor." 2 Story, Com. Const., § 1219.

[530] Upon the second part of the clause in question, giving power to "exercise like authority," that is, of exclusive legislation "over all places purchased by the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings," the Federalist observes that the necessity of this authority is not less evident. "The public money expended on such places," it adds, "and the public property deposited in them, require that they should be exempt from the authority of the particular State. Nor would it be proper for the places on which the security of the entire Union may depend to be in any degree dependent on a particular member of it. All objections and scruples are here also obviated by requiring the concurrence of the States concerned in every such establishment." "The power," says Mr. Justice Story, repeating the substance of Mr. Madison's language, "is wholly unexceptionable, since it can only be exercised at the will of the State, and therefore it is placed beyond all reasonable scruple."

This power of exclusive legislation is to be exercised, as thus seen, over places purchased, by consent of the Legislatures of the States in which they are situated, for the specific purposes enumerated. It would seem to have been the opinion of the framers of the Constitution that, without the consent of the States, the new government would not be able to acquire lands within them; and therefore it was provided that when it might require such lands for the erection of forts and other buildings for the defens of the country, or the discharge of other dutie devolving upon it, and the consent of the State in which they were situated was obtained fo their acquisition, such consent should carr with it political dominion and legislative au thority over them. Purchase with such co sent was the only mode then thought of for th acquisition by the General Government of tit to lands in the States. Since the adoption the Constitution this view has not generally pr vailed. Such consent has not always been ob tained, nor supposed necessary, for the purcha by the General Government of lands within th States. If any doubt has ever existed as to i power thus to acquire lands within the State it has not had sufficient strength to create an effective dissent from the general opinion. Th consent of the States to the purchase of lan within them for the special purposes named i however, essential, under the Constitution, the transfer to the General Government, wi the title, of political jurisdiction and dominio Where lands are acquired without such consen the possession of the United States, unless p litical jurisdiction be ceded to them in some oth way, is simply that of an ordinary proprieto The property in that case, unless used as means to carry out the purposes of the gover ment, is subject to the legislative authority a control of the States equally with the proper of private individuals.

But not only by direct purchase have t United States been able to acquire lands th needed without the consent of the States, b it has been held that they possess the right eminent domain within the States, using th terms, not as expressing the ultimate domini or title to property, but as indicating the ri to take private property for public uses wh needed to execute the powers conferred by t Constitution; and that the General Governm is not dependent upon the caprice of individu or the will of State Legislatures in the acqu tion of such lands as may be required for full and effective exercise of its powe This doctrine was authoritatively declared Kohl v. U. S., 91 U. S., 367 [Bk. 23, L. 449]. All the judges of the court agreed in possession by the General Government of t right, although there was a difference of op ion whether provision for the exercise of right had been made in that case. The co after observing that lands in the States are ne ed for forts, armories and arsenals, for na yards and light-houses, for custom-houses court houses, and for other public uses, sa "If the right to acquire property for such may be made a barren right by the unwilli ness of property holders to sell, or by the act of a State prohibiting a sale to the Federal G ernment, the constitutional grants of power r be rendered nugatory, and the government is pendent for its practical existence upon the of a State, or even upon that of a private citiz The right to acquire property in this way condemnation, may be exerted either thro tribunals expressly designated by Congress by resort to tribunals of the State in which property is situated, with her consent for purpose. Such consent will always be sumed in the absence of express prohibi U. S. v. Jones, 109 U.S., 513, 519 [Bk. 27, L besides these modes of acquisition, the United States acquired, on the adoption of the Constitution, an immense domain lying north and west of the Ohio River, acquired as the result of the Revolutionary War from Great Britain, by cessions from Virginia, Massachusetts and Connecticut; and since the adoption of the Constitution, they have, by cession from foreign nations, come into the ownership of a territory still larger, lying between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean, and out of these territories several States have been formed and admitted into the Union. The proprietorship of the United States in large tracts of land within these States has remained after their admission. There has been, therefore, no necessity for them to purchase or to condemn lands within these States, for forts, arsenals, and other public buildings, unless they had disposed of what they afterwards needed. Having the land they have usually reserved certain portions of their lands from sale or other disposition for the uses of the government.

Matter of Petition of U. S., 96 N.

The brief statement as to the different modes in which the United States have acquired title to lands upon which public buildings have been erected will serve to explain the nature of their jurisdiction over such places, and the consistency with each other of decisions on the subject by federal and state tribunals, and of opinions of the Attorneys-General.

When the title is acquired by purchase by consent of the Legislatures of the States, the United States jurisdiction is exclusive of all state authority. This follows from the declaration of the Constitution that Congress shall have "like authority over such places as it has over the District which is the seat of government; that is, the power of "exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever." Broader or clearer language could not be used to exclude all other authorities than that of Congress; and that no other authority can be exercised over them has been the uniform opinion of federal and state tribunals and of the Attorneys-General.

The reservation which has usually accompanied the consent of the States that civil and criminal process of the state courts may be served on the places purchased, is not considered as interfering in any respect with the Sovereignty of the United States over them; but is intended to prevent them from becoming an asylum for fugitives from justice. And Congress by statute passed in 1795, declared that exclusion from the States of the jurisdiction of places where light-houses, beacons, buoys, or public piers were or might be erected, with such reservations, should be deemed sufficient for the support and erection of such structures, and if no such reservation had been made, or a sufficient reservation for those purposes should be omitted, civil and criminal process issued under the authority of the State or of the United States might be served and executed within them. 1 Stat. at L., 436, chap. 40.

Thus in U. S. v. Cornell, 2 Mas., 60, it was held by Mr. Justice Story, that the purchase of land by the United States for public purposes, within the limits of a State, did not of itself oust the jurisdiction or sovereignty of the State over the lands purchased; but that the purchase must be by consent of the Legislature of the State, and then the jurisdiction of the United States under the Constitution became exclusive. In that case the defendant was indicted for murder committed in Fort Adams, in Newport Harbor Rhode Island. The place had been purchased by the United States with the consent of the State, to which was added the reservation mentioned, as to the service of civil and criminal process within it. The main questions presented for decision were, whether the sole and exclusive jurisdiction over the place vested in the United States without a formal Act of cession, and whether the reservation as to service of process made the jurisdiction concurrent with that of the State. The first question was answered, as above, that the purchase by consent gave the exclusive jurisdiction; and, as to the second question, the court said: "In its terms, it certainly does not contain any reservation of concurrent jurisdiction or legislation. It provides only that civil [534] and criminal process issued under the authority of the State, which must, of course, be for acts done within and cognizable by the State, may be executed within the ceded lands, notwithstanding the cession. Not a word is said from which we can infer that it was intended that the State should have a right to punish for acts done within the ceded lands. The whole apparent object is answered by considering the clause as meant to prevent these lands from becoming a sanctuary for fugitives from justice for acts done within the acknowledged jurisdiction of the State. Now, there is nothing incompatible with the exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction of one State that it should permit another State in such cases to execute its process within its limits. And a cession of exclusive jurisdiction may well be made with a reservation of a right of this nature, which then operates only as a condition annexed to the cession, and as an agreement of the new sovereign to permit its free exercise, as quoad hoc his own process. This is the light in which clauses of this nature (which are very frequent in grants made by the States to the United States) have been received by this court on various occasions on which the subject has been heretofore brought before it for consideration, and it is the same light in which it has also been received by a very learned state court. In our judgment it comports entirely with the apparent intention of the parties, and gives effect to Acts which might otherwise, perhaps, be construed entirely nugatory. For it may well be doubted whether Congress is, by the terms of the Constitution, at liberty to purchase lands for forts, dock-yards, etc., with the consent of the State Legislature, where such consent is so qualified that it will not justify the exclusive legislation of Congress there. It may well be doubted if such consent be not utterly void. Ut res magis valeat quam pereat, we are bound to give the present Act a different construction if it may reasonably be done; and we have not the least hesitation in declaring that the true interpretation of the present proviso leaves the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of Fort Adams in the United States."

The case referred to in which the subject [535] was considered by a learned state court is that of Commonwealth v. Clary, 8 Mass., 72. There the Supreme Court of Massachusetts held that the courts of the Commonwealth could not take cognizance of offenses committed upon lands in the Town of Springfield purchased with the consent of the Commonwealth by the United States for the purpose of erecting arsenals upon them. That was the case of a prosecution against the defendant for selling spirituous liquors on the land without a license, contrary to a statute of the State. But the court held that the law had no operation within the lands mentioned. "The territory," it said, "on which the offense charged is agreed to have been committed is the territory of the United States, over which the Congress have exclusive power of legislation." It added, that "the assent of the Commonwealth to the purchase of this territory by the United States had this condition annexed to it, that civil and criminal process might be served therein by the officers of the Commonwealth. This condition was made with a view to prevent the territory from becoming a sanctuary for debtors and criminals; and from the subsequent assent of the United States to the said condition, evidenced by their making the purchase, it results that the officers of the Commonwealth, in executing such process, act under the authority of the United States. No offenses committed within that territory are committed against the laws of this Commonwealth, nor can such offenses be punishable by the courts of the Commonwealth unless the Congress of the United States should give to the said courts jurisdiction thereof." In Mitchell v. Tibbets, before the same court, years afterwards, 17 Pick., 298, it was held that a vessel employed in transporting stone from Maine to the navy-yard in Charlestown, Mass., a place purchased by the United States with the consent of the State, was not employed in transporting stone within the Commonwealth, and therefore committed no offense in disregarding a statute making certain requirements of vessels thus employed. The court said that to bring a vessel within the description of the statute, she must be employed in landing stone at, or taking stone from, some place in the Commonwealth, and that the law of Massachusetts did not extend to and operate within the territory ceded, adopting the principle of its previous decision in 8 Massachusetts.

[536] In March, 1841, the House of Representatives of Massachusetts requested of the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of that State their opinion whether persons residing on lands in that State purchased by or ceded to the United States for navy-yards, arsenals, dock-yards, forts, lighthouses, hospitals and armories, were entitled to the benefits of the state common schools for their children in the towns where such lands were located; and the Justices replied that, "where the general consent of the Commonwealth is given to the purchase of territory by the United States for forts and dock-yards, and where there is no other condition or reservation in the Act granting such consent, but that of a concurrent jurisdiction of the State for the service of civil process and criminal process against persons charged with crimes committed out of such territory, the Government of the United States has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction over such territory for all purposes of legislation and jurisprudence, with the single exception expressed; and consequently that no persons are amenable to the laws of the Commonwealth for crimes and offenses committed within said territory; and that persons residing within the same do not acquire the civil and political privileges, nor do they become subject to the civil duties and obligations, of inhabitants of the towns within which such territory is situated." And accordingly they were of opinion that persons residing on such lands were not entitled to the benefit of the common schools for their children in the towns in which such lands were situated. 1 Met., 580.

In Sinks v. Reese, 19 Ohio St., 306, the question came before the Supreme Court of Ohio as to the effect of a proviso in the Act of that State, ceding to the United States its jurisdiction over lands within her limits for the purposes of a National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, which was, that nothing in the Act should be construed to prevent the officers, employees and inmates of the asylum, who were qualified voters of the State, from exercising the right of suffrage at all township, county and state elections in the township in which the National Asylum should be located. And it was held that, upon the purchase of the territory by the United States, with the consent of the Legislature of the State, the General Government became invested with exclusive jurisdiction over it and its appurtenances in all cases whatsoever; and that the inmates of such asylum resident within the territory, being within such exclusive jurisdiction, were not residents of the State so as to entitle them to vote, within the meaning of the Constitution, which conferred the elective franchise upon its residents alone.

To the same effect have been the opinions of the Attorney-General, when called for by the head of one of the departments. Thus, in the case of the Armory at Harper's Ferry, in Virginia, the question arose whether officers of the Army, or other persons, residing in the limits of the armory, the lands composing which had been purchased by consent of the State, were liable to taxation by her. The consent had been accompanied by a cession of jurisdiction with a declaration that the State retained concurrent jurisdiction with the United States over the place, so far as it could consistently with the Acts giving consent to the purchase and ceding jurisdiction; and that its courts, magistrates, and officers might take such cognizance, execute such processes, and discharge such other legal functions within it as might not be incompatible with the true intent and meaning of those Acts. The question having been submitted to the Attorney-General, he replied that the sole object and effect of the reservation was to prevent the place from becoming a sanctuary for fugitives from justice, for acts done within the acknowledged jurisdiction of the State, and that in other respects the exterritoriality of the armory at Harper's Ferry was complete, in so as regards the State; that the persons in the employment of the United States, actually residing in the limits of the armory, did not possess the civil and political rights of citizens of the State, nor were they subject to the tax other obligations of such citizens. 6 Ops. Attys-Gen., [illegible]. See also the case of New York Postoffice Site, 10 Id., 35.

These authorities are sufficient to support the proposition which follows naturally from the language of the Constitution, that no other legislative power than that of Congress can be exercised over lands within a State purchased by the United States with her consent for one of the purposes designated; and that such consent under the Constitution operates to exclude all other legislative authority.

But with reference to lands owned by the United States, acquired by purchase without the consent of the State, or by cessions from other governments, the case is different. Story, in his Commentaries on the Constitution, says: "If there has been no cession by the State of the place, although it has been constantly occupied and used under purchase, or otherwise, by the United States for a fort or arsenal, or other constitutional purpose, the state jurisdiction still remains complete and perfect;" and in support of this statement he refers to People v. [illegible], 17 Johns., 225. In that case the land on which Fort Niagara was erected, in New York, never having been ceded by the State to the United States, it was adjudged that the courts of the State had jurisdiction of crimes or offenses against the laws of the State committed within the fort or its precincts, although it had been garrisoned by the troops of the United States and held by them since its surrender by Great Britain, pursuant to the Treaties of 1793 and 1794. In deciding the case, the court said that the possession of the post by the United States must be considered as a possession for the State, not in derogation of her right. Observing that it regarded it as a fundamental principle that the rights of sovereignty were not to be taken away by implication. "If the United States," the court added, "had the right of exclusive legislation over the Fortress of Niagara they would have also exclusive jurisdiction; but we are of opinion that the right of exclusive legislation within the territorial limits of any State can be acquired by the United States only in the mode pointed out in the Constitution, by purchase, by consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings. The [illegible] of that provision is that the State shall freely cede the particular place to the United States for one of the specific and enumerated objects. This jurisdiction cannot be acquired tortiously by disseisin of the State; [illegible] it be acquired by mere occupancy, with the implied or tacit consent of the State, when such occupancy is for the purpose [illegible]."

Where, therefore, lands are acquired in any other way by the United States within the limits of a State than by purchase with her consent, they will hold the lands subject to this qualification: that if upon them forts, arsenals, or other public buildings are erected for the use of the General Government, such buildings, with their appurtenances, as instrumentalities for the execution of its powers, will be free from any such interference and jurisdiction of the State as would destroy or impair their effective use for the purposes designed. Such is the law with reference to all instrumentalities created by the General Government. Their exemption from state control is essential to the independence and sovereign authority of the United States within the sphere of their delegated powers. But, when not used as such instrumentalities, the legislative power of the State over the places acquired will be as full and complete as over any other places within her limits.

As already stated, the land constituting the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation was not purchased, but was owned by the United States by cession from France many years before Kansas became a State; and whatever political sovereignty and dominion the United States had over the place comes from the cession of the State since her admission into the Union. It not being a case where exclusive legislative authority is vested by the Constitution of the United States, that cession could be accompanied with such conditions as the State might see fit to annex, not inconsistent with the free and effective use of the fort as a military post.

In the recent case of Fort Porter Military Reservation, the opinion of the Attorney-General was in conformity with this view of the law. On the 28th of February, 1842, the Legislature of New York authorized the commissioners of its land-office to cede to the United States the title to certain land belonging to the State within her limits, "for military purposes, reserving a free and uninterrupted use and control in the canal commissioners of all that may be necessary for canal and harbor purposes." Under this Act the title was conveyed to the United States. The Act also ceded to them jurisdiction over the land. In 1880, the superintendent [540] of public works of New York, upon whom the duties of canal commissioner were devolved, informed the Secretary of War that the interests of the State required that the land, or a portion of it, should be occupied by her for canal purposes, claiming the right to thus occupy it under the reservation in the Act of cession. The opinion of the Attorney-General was, therefore, requested as to the authority of the Secretary of War to permit the State, under these considerations, to use so much of the land as would not interfere with its use for military purposes. The Attorney-General replied that the United States, under the grant, held the land for military purposes, and that the reservation in favor of the State could be deemed valid only so far as it was not repugnant to the grant; that, hence, the right of the State to occupy and use the premises for canal or harbor purposes must be regarded as limited or restricted by the purposes of the grant; that, when such use and occupation would defeat or interfere with those purposes, the right of the State did not exist; but, when they would not interfere with those purposes, the State was entitled to use so much of the land as might be necessary for her canal and harbor purposes. 16 Ops. Attys-Gen., 592.

We are here met with the objection that the Legislature of a State has no power to cede away her jurisdiction and legislative power over any portion of her territory, except as such cession follows under the Constitution from her consent to a purchase by the United States for some one of the purposes mentioned. If this were so it would not aid the Railroad Company; the jurisdiction of the State would then remain as it previously existed. But aside from this consideration, it is undoubtedly true that the State, whether represented by her Legislature, or through a convention specially called for that purpose, is incompetent to cede her political jurisdiction and legislative authority over any part of her territory to a foreign country, without the concurrence of the General Government. The jurisdiction of the United States extends over all the territory within the States, and, therefore, their authority must be obtained, as well as that of the State within which the [541] territory is situated, before any cession of sovereignty or political jurisdiction can be made to a foreign country. And so when questions arose as to the northeastern boundary, in Maine, between Great Britian and the United States, and negotiations were in progress for a treaty to settle the boundary, it was deemed necessary on the part of our government to secure the cooperation and concurrence of Maine, so far as such settlement might involve a cession of her sovereignty and jurisdiction as well as title to territory claimed by her, and of Massachusetts, so far as it might involve a cession of title to lands held by her. Both Maine and Massachusetts appointed commissioners to act with the Secretary of State, and after much negotiation the claims of the two States were adjusted, and the disputed questions of boundary settled. The commissioners of Maine were appointed by her Legislature; and those of Massachusetts by her Governor under authority of an Act of her Legislature. It was not deemed necessary to call a convention of the people in either of them to give to the commissioners the requisite authority to act effectively for their respective States. 5 Webster's Works, 99; 6 Id. 273.

In their relation to the General Government, the States of the Union stand in a very different position from that which they hold to foreign governments. Though the jurisdiction and authority of the General Government are essentially different from those of the State, they are not those of a different country; and the two, the State and General Government, may deal with each other in any way they may deem best to carry out the purposes of the Constitution. It is for the protection and interests of the States, their people and property, as well as for the protection and interests of the people generally of the United States, that forts, arsenals, and other building for public uses are constructed within the States. As instrumentalities for the execution of the powers of the General Government, they are, as already said, exempt from such control of the States as would defeat or impair their use for those purposes; and if, to their more effective use, a cession of legislative authority and political jurisdictiyn by the State would be desirable, we do not [542] preceive any objection to its grant by the Legislature of the State. Such cession is really as much for the benefit of the State as it is for the benefit of the United States. It is necessarily temporary, to be exercised only so long as the places continue to be used for the public purposes for which the property was acquired or reserved from sale. When they cease to be thus used, the jurisdiction reverts to the State.

The Military Reservation of Fort Leavenworth was not, as already said, acquired by pur chase with the consent of Kansas. And he cession of jurisdiction is not of exclusive legis lative authority over the land, except so far a that may be necessary for its use as a militar post; and it is not contended that the savin clause in the Act of cession interferes wit such use. There is, therefore, no constitutio al prohibition against the enforcement of th clause. The right of the State to subject th railroad property to taxation exists as befor the cession. The invalidity of the tax levie not being asserted on any other ground tha the supposed exclusive jurisdiction of the Uni ed States over the Reservation, notwithstan ing the saving clause, the judgment of the cou below must be affirmed. Ordered accordingly.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND AND PACIFI RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

WILLIAM McGLINN.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 542-547.)

Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation—m nicipal law of Kansas, not abrogated by cessi of, to the United States.

1. The Act of Kansas purporting to cede to t United States exclusive jurisdiction over the Fo Leavenworth Military Reservation is a valid cessi within the requirements of the Constitution.

2. It is a general rule of public law recognized a acted upon by the United States, that whenev political jurisdiction and legislative power ov any territory are transferred from one nation sovereign, municipal laws continue in force un abrogated by the new government or sovereig While there is a wide difference between a cessi of political jurisdiction from one nation to anott and a cession to the United States by a State, of leg lative power over a particular tract, for a spec purpose of the General Government, the princi which controls as to laws in existence at the tim the same in both.

3. The preceding case of the F. L. R. R. Co. Lowe, applied.

[No. 262.]

Argued Apr. 17, 1885. Decided May, 4, 18

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of State of Kansas.

The history and facts of the case appear the opinion of the court. See also the prec ing case of F. L. R. R. Co. v. Lowe, p. 264.

Messrs. Edward E. Cook, Thos. Withrow and M. A. Low, for plaintiff in ror.

Mr. W. Hallett Phillips, for defend in error.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion court:

This case comes here from the Supre Court of the State of Kansas. It is an act for the value of a cow alleged to have b killed by the engine and cars of the Chica Rock Island and Pacific Railway Compan corporation doing business in the County Leavenworth, in that State. It was brough a State District Court, and submitted for d sion upon an agreed statement of facts, in [illegible] that on the 10th of February, [illegible], the property of the plaintiff, of the [illegible] of $25, strayed upon the railroad of the defendant at a point within the limits of the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation in that county of State, where the road was not inclosed [illegible], and was there struck and killed by [illegible] passing along the road; that the Reservation is the one referred to in the Act of the [illegible] of the State, of February, 22, 1875; that a demand upon the defendant for the $25 was made by the plaintiff more than thirty days after the action was brought; and that, if the plaintiff was entitled to recover attorney's fees, [illegible] would be a reasonable fee.

The action was founded upon a Statute of Kansas of March 9, 1874, entitled "An Act Relating to Killing or Wounding Stock by Railroads" which makes every railway company in the State liable to the owner for the full value of cattle killed, and in damages for cattle wounded by its engine and cars or in any other manner in operating its railway. It provides that if the railway company fails for thirty days after demand by the owner to pay to him the [illegible] of the animal killed, or damages for an animal wounded, he may sue and recover double, together with a reasonable attorney's fee for the prosecution of the action. It further provides that it shall not apply to any railway company, the road of which is inclosed with a [illegible] lawful fence, to prevent the animal from being on the road. Laws of Kansas, 1874, [illegible].

On the 22d of February, 1875, the Legislature of Kansas passed an Act ceding to the United States jurisdiction over the Reservation, the first section of which is as follows: "That exclusive jurisdiction be, and the same is hereby ceded to the United States over and within all the territory owned by the United States, and included within the limits of the United States Military Reservation, known as the Fort Leavenworth Reservation, in said State, as now or from time to time by the President of the United States; saving, however, to the said State the right to serve civil or criminal process within said Reservation, in suits or prosecutions for or on account of rights acquired, obligations incurred, or crimes committed in said State, but outside of such cession or Reservation; and saving further to said State the right to tax railroad, bridge and other corporations, their franchises and property on said Reservation." Laws of Kansas, 1875, [illegible].

The district court gave judgment for the plaintiff, assessing his damages at $45, an amount which was made by estimating the value of the cow killed at $25, and the attorney's fee at $20, these sums having been agreed upon by the parties. The case was carried to the Supreme Court of the State, where the judgment was affirmed, that court holding that the Act of Kansas, relating to the killing and wounding of stock by railroads, continued to be in force within the limits of the Reservation, as it had not been abrogated by Congress, and was not inconsistent with the existing laws of the United States. In so holding the court assumed, for the purposes of the case, without, however, adjudicating the fact that the Act ceding jurisdiction to the United States over the Reservation was valid, and that the United States had legally accepted the cession. To review this judgment the case is brought here.

Two questions are presented for our determination: one, whether the Act of Kansas purporting to cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the Reservation is a valid cession within the requirements of the Constitution; the other, if such cession of jurisdiction is valid, did the Act of Kansas relating to the killing or wounding of stock by railroads continue in force afterwards within the limits of the Reservation?

It can hardly be the design of counsel for the Railroad Company to contend that the Act of cession to the United States is wholly invalid, for, in that event, the jurisdiction of the State would remain unimpaired, and her statute would be enforceable within the limits of the Reservation equally as in any other part of the State. What we suppose counsel desires to maintain is, that the Act of cession confers exclusive jurisdiction over the territory, and that any limitations upon it in the Act must therefore be rejected as repugnant to the grant.

This point was involved in the case of Fort Leavenworth R.R. Co. v. Lowe [ante, 264], decided herewith. We there held, that a building on a tract of land owned by the United States used as a fort, or for other public purposes of the Federal Government, is exempted, as an instrumentality of the government, from any such control or interference by the State as will defeat or embarrass its effective use for those purposes. But, in order that the United States may possess exclusive legislative power over the tract, except as may be necessary to the use of the building thereon as such instrumentality, they must have acquired the tract by purchase, with the consent of the State. This is the only mode prescribed by the Federal Constitution for their acquisition of exclusive legislative power over it. When such legislative power is acquired in any other way, as by an express Act ceding it, its cession may be accompanied with any conditions not inconsistent with the effective use of the property for the public purposes intended. We also held that it is competent for the Legislature of a State to cede exclusive jurisdiction over places needed by the General Government in the execution of its powers, the use of the places being, in fact, as much for the people of the State as for the people of the United States generally, and such jurisdiction necessarily ending when the places cease to be used for those purposes. [546]

Upon the second question the contention of the Railroad Company is that the Act of Kansas became inoperative within the Reservation upon the cession to the United States of exclusive jurisdiction over it. We are clear that this contention cannot be maintained. It is a general rule of public law, recognized and acted upon by the United States, that whenever political jurisdiction and legislative power over any territory are transferred from one nation or sovereign to another, the municipal laws of the country, that is, laws which are intended for the protection of private rights, continue in force until abrogated or changed by the new government or sovereign. By the cession public property passes from one government to the other, but private property remains as before, and with it those municipal laws which are designed to secure its peaceful use and enjoyment. As a matter of course, all laws, ordinances and regulations in conflict with the political character, institutions and Constitution of the new government are at once displaced. Thus, upon a cession of political jurisdiction and legislative power—and the latter is involved in the former—to the United States, the laws of the country in support of an established religion or abridging the freedom of the press, or authorizing cruel and unusual punishments, and the like, would at once cease to be of obligatory force without any declaration to that effect; and the laws of the country on other subjects would necessarily be superseded by existing laws of the new government upon the same matters. But with respect to other laws affecting the possession, use and transfer of property, and designed to secure good order and peace in the community, and promote its health and prosperity, which are strictly of a municipal character, the rule is general, that a change of government leaves them in force until, by direct [547] action of the new government, they are altered or repealed. Amer. Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet., 542; Halleck, Int. Law, chap. 34, § 14.

The counsel for the Railroad Company does not controvert this general rule in cases of cession of political jurisdiction by one nation to another, but contends that it has no application to a mere cession of jurisdiction over a small piece of territory having no organized government or municipality within its limits; and argues upon the assumption that there was no organized government within the limits of Fort Leavenworth. In this assumption he is mistaken. The government of the State of Kansas extended over the Reservation, and its legislation was operative therein, except so far as the use of the land as an instrumentality of the General Government may have excepted it from such legislation. In other respects, the law of the State prevailed. There was a railroad running through it when the State ceded jurisdiction to the United States. The law of the State, making the railroad liable for killing or wounding cattle by its cars and engines where it had no fence to keep such cattle off the road, was as necessary to the safety of cattle after the cession as before, and was no more abrogated by the mere fact of cession than regulations as to the crossing of highways by the railroad cars, and the ringing of bells as a warning to others of their approach.

It is true there is a wide difference between a cession of political jurisdiction from one nation to another and a cession to the United States by a State, of legislative power over a particular tract, for a special purpose of the General Government; but the principle which controls as to laws in existence at the time is the same in both. The liability of the Railroad Company for the killing of the cow did not depend upon the place where the animal was killed, but upon the neglect of the Company to inclose the road with a fence which would have prevented the cow from straying upon it. The law of Kansas on the subject, in our opinion, remained in force after the cession, it being in no respect inconsistent with any law of the United States, and never having been changed or abrogated. Th judgment is accordingly affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

WILLIAM ALLING, Surviving Partner the Firm of SAMUEL A. BELDEN & Co Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 562-564.)

Jurisdiction of Court of Claims—sec. 1066, R. —awards under Treaty with Mexico.

1. The Court of Claims has no jurisdiction o claim against the United States for moneys ceived from Mexico under the Convention Treaty of July 4, 1868, it being a claim founded and growing out of a treaty with a foreign nat within § 1066, R. S.

2. The Act of June 18, 1878, confers authority the Secretary of State to distribute the awa made by the Commission organized under Treaty.

3. Great Western Ins. Co. v. U. S., Bk. 28, 687, Frelinghuysen v. Key, Id. 71, affirmed.

[No. 219.]

Submitted Apr. 1, 1885. Decided May 4, 18

APPEAL from the Court of Claims.

The history and facts of the case app in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Charles W. Hornor, W. L. I Gary and Nathaniel Wilson, for appellant

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Asst. Atty-Gen., appellee.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinio the court:

This is an appeal from the Court of Clai

Belden and Co., having a claim for sei and confiscation of goods by the Mexic during or shortly after the Mexican war, ferred their claim to the United States presentation to the Mexican Government. goods having been imported into Matam while that city was in the possession of American forces, on which Belden & Co. paid duties to the amount of $18,847, the U ed States refunded this sum to Belden & and took an assignment pro tanto of their cl against Mexico.

By the Convention or Treaty of July 4, 1 between Mexico and the United States, 15 S at L., 679, a commission was organized fo adjustment of the claims of the citizens of respective countries against the governme the other for injuries to persons and prope

To this commission Belden & Co.'s c was submitted by the United States, an award was, that the Mexican Governm should pay to the United States, on accou this claim, the sum of $53,099.25, of which United States might retain out of this g award the sum of $35,920.81, on accou the tax which it had refunded to Belden & and its interest.

An Act of Congress provided that the d bution of the money received by the U [illegible] under all the awards made by this commission should be distributed under the order of the Secretary of State.

[illegible] in this case having received the [illegible] specifically awarded to them, appealed to the Secretary for the whole or a part of the sum [illegible] duties which was awarded to the [illegible] States under the assignment of Belden [illegible] This was refused, and this suit is brought [illegible] the claim

[illegible] clearly a claim founded on and growing [illegible] of a treaty with a foreign nation, within the provisions of section 1066 of the Revised [illegible]. It is in all respects like the case of [illegible] Western Ins. Co. v. U. S., 112 U. S., [illegible] [Bk. 28, L. ed. 687], which holds that the [illegible] of Claims had no jurisdiction by reason of that section.

That was a case of a claim submitted to the United States for reclamation against Great Britain. A treaty between the two powers provided, as in the present case, for an arbitration, under which the claim was allowed and paid to the United States. On appeal from the Court of Claims we decided that it was, within the meaning of section 1066 of this Revision, "a claim growing out of and dependent on a treaty stipulation entered into with a foreign government" of which that court could not entertain jurisdiction.

The present case is stronger than that, because the Act of Congress of June 18, 1878, 20 Stat. at L., 144, confers on the Secretary of State the authority to distribute these awards among the several claimants. Frelinghuysen v. Key, 110 U. S., 63 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 71]. Not only is the Court of Claims forbidden to entertain jurisdiction of this claim, but the Secretary of State is by law authorized and directed to do what has to be done for claimants, without further litigation.

It is apparent from the record that the Court of Claims entertained jurisdiction of the case and decided against the claimants on the merits. As that court had no such authority, its judgment must be reversed, with direction to dismiss the petition for want of jurisdiction.

[illegible] Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

RICHMOND MINING COMPANY OF NEVADA, Plff. in Err.,

v.

E. H. ROSE ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed., 576–587.)

Mining claim including more than 200 feet—right of discoverer—patent granted pending a litigation, effect of.

1. A mining claim, which includes more than two [illegible] feet, and does not affect rights already acquired, is void only as to the excess.

2. The right of a locator to hold more than 200 [illegible], as discoverer, will be sustained for the years, though there was a mistake as to the discovery of a new vein or lode, no one having [illegible] at the time the claim was made.

3. When a contest arises under § 2326, R. S., all proceedings are stayed in the Land Department until the controversy is settled by a court of competent jurisdiction, or the adverse claim is [illegible]. Delay in the proceedings in court does not amount to a waiver, and a patent issued pending such proceedings is void as to the adverse party.

4. A patent obtained pending a litigation by the defendant, for a new claim affecting the subject matter of the litigation, cannot be set up against the plaintiff. The validity of such patent must abide the result of the litigation.

5. An objection cannot be raised here which has been waived in the court below.

6. The decision of a state court as to what constitutes the commencement of a suit in that court, not presenting a federal question, is not reviewable here.

[No. 248.]

Argued Apr. 13, 14, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Nevada.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. The locations of the claims in question appear from the accompanying map which is reproduced from the transcript.

Messrs. Walter H. Smith and Thos. Wren, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. A. B. Browne, C. J. Hillyer, A. T. Britton and J. H. McGowan, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court: [578]

This is a writ of error to the Supreme Court of Nevada.

The case presents a conflict of mining claims.

The contest began in the State District Court for the County of Eureka, Nevada, by defendants in error filing in that court, as plaintiffs, a petition against the Richmond Mining Company. To save repetition and confusion, the parties will be mentioned in this opinion as they are throughout the record, and as they actually were in the state courts, namely: Rose and others as plaintiffs, and the Richmond Mining Company as defendant.

This petition or complaint was filed October 24, 1873. A demurrer was filed to it by the defendant November 1, and an answer November 26.

The complaint alleged that plaintiffs were, and ever since January 20, 1872, had been, the owners of the Uncle Sam mining claim, ledge, lode and deposit of mineral-bearing rock in the Eureka Mining District, County of Eureka, and State of Nevada, on the western slope of "Ruby Hill." A minute description of the claim is then given, with courses and distances with reference to the shaft.

It is then alleged that the defendant, unjustly and adversely to plaintiffs, claims an estate in fee in said premises, and has filed in the United States Land-Office an application for a patent thereto, under the name of the St. George ledge and mine. Plaintiffs, therefore, pray judgment that defendant be barred from all estate or interest in the premises, or any part thereof, or any right of possession.

The answer of defendant, filed November 26, 1873, denies any claim to plaintiffs' location, except as it is covered by their claim, the St. George, which does cover a small part of it.

As to so much of plaintiffs' claim as is covered by the St. George it asserts a superior right.

The next pleading is an amended answer of the defendant, which sets out the fact, that since the commencement of the suit defendant [579] has acquired title by patent from the United States to all that portion of the mining ground in controversy, covered by the application for the patent for the St. George claim. This amended answer was filed April 20, 1881, which is seven years and a half after the first or original answer.

[577]

In September, 1881, the case was tried before the court without a jury and a judgment was rendered, from which plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court. That court modified the judgment of the court below materially in favor of plaintiffs, and to that judgment the Richmond Mining Company, the defendant below, prosecutes this writ of error.

The judge of the District Court of the State made a full finding of the facts in the case on which he rendered judgment, and on those facts the case was heard and decided in the Supreme Court of the State, and so it must be here.

According to this finding, the plaintiffs sunk their shaft on a mineral lode, staked and marked out their claim, gave due notice of it, and did the necessary work on it to perfect their right to the mine. In all this they were prior in point of time to the operations of defendant on their St. George claim. It may, therefore, be assumed that unless some of the objections to the claim of plaintiffs set up by defendant are valid, the judgment of the state court must stand.

We shall examine these objections in such order as seems convenient.

1. The one much, if not chiefly, relied on is that the claim covers eight hundred lineal feet of the lode; when, there being only three locators, both by the Act of Congress and the local laws of that mining district, only two hundred feet could be appropriated to each locator, and, therefore, this excess of two hundred feet over the six hundred, which these three could locate, renders the whole claim void. The law, however, allowed to each locator, who was the discoverer of the vein on which the location was made, two hundred feet additional for his mer as discoverer.

We hardly think it needs discussion to d cide that the inclusion of a larger number lineal feet than two hundred renders a loc tion, otherwise valid, totally void. This ma occur, and often must occur, by accident of t surveyor, or other innocent mistake, where the exists no intention to claim more than the tw hundred feet. Must the whole claim be ma void by this mistake, which may injure no on and was without design to violate the law?

We can see no reason, in justice or in t nature of the transaction, why the excess m not be rejected, and the claim be held good f the remainder, unless it interferes with righ previously acquired. It appears by the fac found that one hundred and forty feet of t east end of plaintiffs' location is lost to them the superior right of the Tip-Top claim, lea ing only sixty feet of excess; and this, if were necessary, might be excluded by the go ernment at the other or western end of t claim when it comes to issue the patent; whi would leave plaintiffs only the six hundred fe in one body, in regular form. This also wou interfere with no prior rights, and would gi plaintiffs the benefit of their claim to the e tent of two hundred feet for each locator.

But, if it were necessary, we should ag with the Supreme Court of Nevada, that Ro one of the plaintiffs, was entitled to an ad tional two hundred feet, as discoverer of t vein on which the claim is located. At t time this location was made, there were ma claims asserted for veins discovered in Ru Hill, and most of the claimants believed t they were in each instance the discoverer o new vein or lode. Rose entertained the sa belief when he made his claim, and, therefo asserted his right to two hundred additio feet along this vein as discoverer.

It was supposed, some five or six years af this and after Rose and his companies spent their money and labor in developing th

[illegible] that the whole Ruby Hill deposit was [illegible] or lode of great width, and it has [illegible] in the Eureka Case, 4 Sawy., 302, that, [illegible] there were many small, detached fis[illegible] or veins, distinct from each other, com[illegible] this zone, it is, within the meaning of [illegible] Act of Congress concerning locations, to be [illegible] as one lode or vein.

[illegible] Rose, or his vendor, Phillips, was the [illegible] of this vein within the lode, and [illegible] asserted in good faith his right to an ad[illegible] two hundred feet.

We do not see any reason, within the spirit [illegible] law, where the claim as discoverer in[illegible] to one at the time it is made, and it has [illegible] made in good faith in reliance on the ac[illegible] discovery of one of these constituent veins, [illegible] for five years before knowledge [illegible] mistake, it should not justify the claim [illegible] two hundred feet as discoverer.

The next objection to be noticed is that [illegible] should have held that the patent ob[illegible] by defendant from the United States, [illegible] covered all that defendant claimed, [illegible] prevail, as it conveyed the legal title.

This proposition goes to the merits of the [illegible], and, if sound, covers the field of contro[illegible]. Its soundness depends on the statutes [illegible] United States, and mainly on sections [illegible] of the Act of Congress of May 10, [illegible] Stat. at L., 92, which are embodied [illegible] Revised Statutes in sections 2325 and [illegible]

By the first of these sections the applicant [illegible] patent for a mining claim is required to [illegible] with his application the evidence of his right [illegible], and the register is to cause a publication [illegible] application to be made for sixty days, [illegible] which time any adverse claimant to any [illegible] of the location described in this application [illegible] required to give notice of contest by filing a [illegible] in the land-office.

No question is raised in this case that de[illegible] had his claim properly, and plaintiffs [illegible] the protest within the sixty days; and as [illegible] controversy arises out of the subsequent [illegible] under the next section, that is [illegible] here in full:

"When an adverse claim is filed during the [illegible] of publication, it shall be upon oath of [illegible] or persons making the same, and [illegible] the nature, boundaries and extent of [illegible] adverse claim, and all proceedings, except [illegible] publication of notice and making and filing [illegible] affidavit thereof, shall be stayed until [illegible] controversy shall have been settled or de[illegible] by a court of competent jurisdiction, or [illegible] adverse claim waived. It shall be the duty [illegible] the adverse claimant, within thirty days [illegible] filing his claim, to commence proceedings [illegible] a court of competent jurisdiction, to de[illegible] the question of the right of possession, [illegible] prosecute the same with reasonable dili[illegible] to final judgment; and a failure so to do [illegible] be a waiver of his adverse claim. After [illegible] judgment shall have been rendered, the [illegible] entitled to the possession of the claim, or [illegible] portion thereof, may, without giving fur[illegible] notice, file a certified copy of the judgment [illegible] with the register of the land-office, together [illegible] the certificate of the Surveyor-General, [illegible] the requisite amount of labor has been ex[illegible] or improvements made thereon, and the description required in other cases, and shall pay to the receiver $5 per acre for his claim, together with the proper fees; whereupon the whole proceedings and the judgment roll shall be certified by the register to the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, and a patent shall issue thereon for the claim, or such portion thereof as the applicant shall appear, from the decision of the court, to rightly possess. If it appears from the decision of the court that several parties are entitled to separate and different portions of the claim, each party may pay for his portion of the claim, with the proper fees, and file the certificate and description by the Surveyor-General, whereupon the register shall certify the proceedings and judgment roll to the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, as in the preceding case, and patents shall issue to the several parties according to their respective rights. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the alienation of the title conveyed by a patent for a mining claim to any person whatever."

Under this provision plaintiffs filed with the register, on the 24th of September, 1873, their protest, to which no objection is perceived. On October 21 their complaint was filed in the proper court of Nevada in support of their protest. But they did not pay any docket fee, nor any other fee, and no fees were paid by them until August, 1874.

It is argued that, by reason of the failure to pay these fees within the time required by the Statute of Nevada, the court acquired no jurisdiction of the case until after the thirty days within which, by the foregoing section, the action was to be commenced; and also that, because no process to appear was issued or served on the defendants within thirty days, the whole proceeding is void. [583]

There are several sufficient answers to these suggestions.

1. We do not doubt that within the meaning of the Act of Congress the plaintiffs did commence proceedings by filing their complaint on the 21st of October, eight days inside of the thirty days which it allowed.

2. Defendants, having demurred within a few days after this commencement of the suit, and answered and gone to trial without raising this objection in the proper time, cannot be permitted to do it now.

3. What constitutes the commencement of an action in a state court being matter of state law, the decision of that court on this point is not a federal question, and is not therefore reviewable here.

These propositions also answer the objection of non-payment of fees to the State, which is purely a matter of state concern, and if it could in any manner avail the defendant it must have been by motion at the time, and before demurring or answering to the merits.

It may also be added that, as the clerk paid the fees into the county treasury in due time, it became simply a matter of debtor and creditor between him and plaintiffs.

A question of more difficulty arises out of the facts, that, after the answer of defendant in 1873, the cause was put on the calendar for trial, but no trial was had for several terms by reason of negotiations for a settlement of the controversy; and the last order for continuance was had in March Term, 1874, on motion of counsel for defendant. In September, 1876, the defendant produced before the register and receiver of the land-office, the certificate of the clerk of the court to the effect that this action had not been placed upon the trial calendar, nor any proceedings been had thereon from the March Term, 1874, to the date of the certificate.

The section already cited, regulating the proceedings in this class of cases, enacts that, after the protest shall have been duly filed in the land-office, "all proceedings, except the publication of notice, and making and filing of the affidavit [584] thereof, shall be stayed until the controversy shall have been settled or decided by a court of competent jurisdiction, or the adverse claim waived." The land officer to whom the defendant presented this certificate of the clerk, holding it to be sufficient evidence that "the adverse claim had been waived," proceeded to prepare the necessary papers on which the Commissioner issued the patent, whose effect is now under consideration.

It must be admitted that, if the land officer had the right, while this action was pending in the courts, never dismissed, and yet undecided, to determine that plaintiff's claim, adverse to defendants, had been waived, and to resume action in the case on that decision, the court was in error in holding the patent void as to the interfering claims. For, though the court of first jurisdiction finds facts sufficient to show that this delay was not the fault of plaintiffs, and in no way implied a waver of their claim, these facts could only be shown, probably, in some proceeding directly to impeach the patent, or set it aside. At all events, if the Land Department had any right to decide that there was a waiver while the action was still pending and undecided, the presumption that it decided rightly must be conclusive in an action at law, and if this action is of that character it must be conclusive here. Whether this patent can be thus impeached under the course of proceedings in the Nebraska courts, we need not inquire here, for we are of opinion that the land officers had no such power.

Looking at the scheme which this statute presents, and which relates solely to securing patents for mining claims, it is apparent that the law intended, in every instance where there was a possibility that one of these claims conflicted with another, to give opportunity to have the conflict decided by a judicial tribunal before the rights of the parties were foreclosed or embarrassed by the issue of a patent to either claimant. The wisdom of this is apparent when we consider its effect upon the value of the patent, which is thereby rendered conclusive as to all rights which could have been asserted in this proceeding, and that it enabled this to be done in the form of an action in a court of the vicinage, where the witness could be produced, and a jury, largely of miners, could pass upon [585] the rights of the parties, under instruction as to the law from the court.

It is in full accord with this purpose that the law should declare, as it does, that when this contest is inaugurated the land officers shall proceed no further until the court has decided, and that they shall then be governed by that decision; to which end a copy of the record is to be filed in their office. They have no further act of judgment to exercise. If the court de cides for one party or the other, the Land De partment is bound by the decision. If it decide that neither party has established a right to th mine or any part of it, this is equally bindin as the case then stands. With all this these of ficers have no right to interfere. After the de cision they are governed by it. Before th decision, once the proceeding is initiated, thei function is suspended.

What, then, is meant by the phrase, "all pro ceedings shall be stayed until the controvers is settled or decided by a court of competen jurisdiction, or the adverse claim waived"?

We can imagine several ways in which it ca be shown that the adverse claim is waived with out invading the jurisdiction of the court whil the case is still pending. One of these woul be the production of an instrument signed b the contestant, and duly authenticated, that h had sold his interest to the other party, or ha abandoned his claim and his contest. Or, sinc the Act says that all proceedings shall be staye in the land-office from the filing of the adver claim, and not from the commencement of th action in the court, within thirty days, such d lay of thirty days is made, by the statute, co clusive of a waiver. A filing in the records c the court, by the plaintiff, of a plea that he aba dons his cause or waives his claim, might a thorize the land-office to proceed.

But all these are very far removed from th assumption by that officer that, because the have been delays in the court, plaintiff h waived his claim. It is for the court, while has jurisdiction of the case, that is, until it decided or dismissed, to pass upon the rights the parties—to decide whether either party h lost his right by laches or failure to proce with diligence, and to act accordingly. If d fendant in this case was dissatisfied with th delay, he had all the remedies usual in cour in such cases. A motion to dismiss for wa of prosecution would have relieved him if h was entitled to treat the case as abandoned. C he could, in all the ordinary ways, require th plaintiff to go to trial or show good cause f continuance.

But, while all this was in the hands of th court, with full power to do what was nece sary to establish judicially the rights of the pa ties, the land-office could not resume control the case upon the idea which might be the entertained of an implied waiver of the clai from delay in the court.

It had no power over the case, and its actio and its patent, so far as it affects the rights plaintiffs, are void. The rejection of the paten as influencing the judgment of the court, w not therefore an error.

3. Another error is assigned, growing out the fact that the defendant, during the tin this litigation was pending, located anoth claim, called the Victoria, on this lode, outsi of and parallel with the St. George. Witho notice to plaintiffs, and with no opposition, th procured a patent for this claim, and set it against plaintiffs on the trial of this action.

It is insisted that, though this claim does n come on the surface in conflict with the Un Sam location, it is in the same vein, and giv the right to pursue that vein under the Un Sam claim, and, being a patent about whi [illegible] was no contest, it must prevail in this [illegible].

[illegible] without deciding the question of their [illegible] to pursue the vein under ground as against [illegible] prior valid location, by reason of the earlier [illegible] of patent, we concur with the Supreme [illegible] that the right to that part of this very [illegible] being in contest between these parties in [illegible] to the Uncle Sam and the St. George [illegible], the decision of this controversy cannot [illegible] rendered nugatory by the introduction of a [illegible] claim by one of the parties, whose claim [illegible] from the government for this same loca[illegible] initiated while this litigation is go[illegible]. The parties were all in court. The [illegible] matter was before the court. The [illegible] to be decided was the right to the con[illegible] claims to this lode. This was within [illegible] jurisdiction of the court, and any patent is[illegible] to one, or the other, or both these parties, [illegible] this proceeding, for this property, must [illegible] back to the date of their claims, and over[illegible] the new patent. This result cannot be de[illegible] by producing this new patent to destroy [illegible]. The claim was initiated by a party to this [illegible] pendente lite, and must abide the result of [illegible] litigation in this case.

These are the principles which control the de[illegible] of the case. There may be others sug[illegible] by counsel which are not here specially [illegible], but they are not deemed sufficient to [illegible] the result.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Nevada [illegible] affirmed.

[illegible] copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Su[illegible] Court, U. S.

PHILIP S. WALES, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 564-575.)

Habeas corpus, when a proper remedy—actual imprisonment, or the present means of enforcing it necessary.

[illegible] The writ of habeas corpus is not a writ of error. [illegible] is to enable the court to inquire whether [illegible] petitioner is restrained of his liberty, and, if so, [illegible] such restraint is unlawful.

[illegible] The Acts of Congress concerning this writ con[illegible] a proceeding against some person who [illegible] the immediate custody of the party detained, [illegible] the power to produce the body of such party [illegible] the court or judge, that he may be liberated, [illegible] sufficient reason is shown for his detention.

[illegible] Neither the Supreme Court of the District of [illegible], nor this court, has any appellate juris[illegible] over a naval court-martial, nor over of[illegible] which such a court has power to try.

[illegible] Something more than moral restraint is necessary [illegible] make a case for habeas corpus. There must [illegible] imprisonment, or the present means of en[illegible].

[illegible] The record in this case does not present such a [illegible] as to call for discharge by a writ [illegible] corpus.

[illegible] The court does not now decide whether the [illegible] to which the petitioner is required to an[illegible] before the naval court-martial are within the [illegible] of which such a court has jurisdiction.

[No. 1303.]

[illegible] Apr. 21, 22, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. J. M. Wilson, F. P. B. Sands and S. Shellabarger, for appellant.

Mr. John S. Blair, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court: [565]

This is an appeal from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, which refused to make an order on a writ of habeas corpus relieving appellant from the custody of the appellee, who, it is alleged, held the appellant in restraint of his liberty, unlawfully.

Upon the decision of the Supreme Court of the District, adverse to petitioner, an application for an original writ of habeas corpus was made to this court by counsel for appellant; but, on a suggestion from the court that an Act of Congress, at its session just closed, had restored the appellate jurisdiction of this court in habeas corpus cases over decisions of the Circuit Courts, and that this necessarily included jurisdiction over similar judgments of the Supreme [566] Court of the District of Columbia, counsel, on due consideration, withdrew their application, and, appealing from the judgment of that court, bring here the record of it for review.

Section 846 of the Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia, which makes the jurisdiction of this court over judgments and decrees of the Circuit Courts of the United States the measure of its jurisdiction (except as regards the sum in controversy) over judgments and decrees of the Supreme Court of the District in similar cases, justifies the exercise of our appellate jurisdiction of the present case.

The original petition for the writ was addressed to Mr. Justice Cox of the Supreme Court of the District, and alleged that on the 2d day of March, 1885, the petitioner was arrested and imprisoned, and ever since had so remained in arrest and imprisonment and restrained of his liberty in the District of Columbia, illegally. The petition sets out an order of the Secretary of the Navy, under which this restraint is exercised, which order is in the following terms:

"Washington, February 28, 1885.

Sir: Transmitted herewith you will receive charges, with specifications, preferred against you by the department.

A general court-martial has been ordered to convene in rooms numbered 32 and 33, at the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., at 12 o'clock, noon, on Monday, the 9th proximo, at which time and place you will appear and report yourself to Rear Admiral Edward Simpson, United States Navy, the presiding officer of the court, for trial. The Judge Advocate will summon such witnesses as you may require for your defense.

You are hereby placed under arrest, and you will confine yourself to the limits of the City of Washington.

Very respectfully,
Wm. E. Chandler,
Secretary of the Navy.

Medical Director
Philip S. Wales,
U. S. N., Washington, D. C." [567]

It also makes an exhibit to the petition, a copy of the charges and specifications accompanying this order. It is unnecessary to say more of these charges at present than that they relate to derelictions of duty on the part of the appellant while he was Surgeon-General of the Navy and as such had charge of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in the Navy Department, which office he held from August 20, 1879, to January 26, 1884. He had therefore ceased to be Surgeon-General, and was in the exercise of his functions as Medical Director of the Navy, when this order was served on him.

Judge Cox issued the writ directed to William C. Whitney, Secretary of the Navy, who had become such by succession to Secretary Chandler. To this writ Secretary Whitney made return, stating the action of Secretary Chandler and the history of the appellant's connection with the Navy since he was appointed Medical Inspector in June, 1878; the charges preferred against him as Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, and the order of arrest of Secretary Chandler, and closes his return as follows:

"Your respondent respectfully submits that the said Philip S. Wales is not now, nor was at the time of issuing the annexed writ, in the custody or possession of, or confined or restrained of his liberty by, your respondent, other than as appears by the papers marked A, B, and C. attached hereto and made part of this return, and that the cause of such detention, if any there be, is fully shown in said exhibits.

And your respondent further answers that neither he nor anyone by his authority has exercised any physical restraint over the said Philip S. Wales before or since the issue of said writ.

[568] Your respondent further answers that by virtue of his office as Secretary of the Navy the said Philip S. Wales, being a Medical Director in the Navy, was, at the time of the issuing of the said writ, and has since continually been, in the power of your respondent so far as the statutes of the United States and the regulations of the Navy, not inconsistent therewith, have vested him with authority over the said Philip S. Wales.

Your respondent further says that he knows of no obstacle or impediment to prevent the said Philip S. Wales from being present before your honor at the time and place fixed in the said writ; but in order to comply with the order of your honor and under and by virtue of his authority as Secretary of the Navy, he has ordered the said Philip S. Wales to be present at the time and place so fixed. Wherefore the said William C. Whitney, Secretary of the Navy, has here, before your honorable court, the body of the said Philip S. Wales, together with the said writ, as therein he is commanded. W. C. Whitney,

Secretary of the Navy."

To this return the petitioner, by his counsel, demurred, when, on this demurrer and after motion of the respondent to discharge the writ, Mr. Justice Cox certified the case into the court in General Term. That court, after full hearing and due consideration, made the following order:

"Habeas Corpus. Ex relatione Philip S. Wales—No. 15,780.

This cause coming on for hearing, and having been argued by counsel and duly considered, it is, this 14th day of April, 1885, ordered and adjudged that the petition be dismissed with costs, the court being of opinion that th relator has not been, nor is he at this present, de prived of his personal liberty by order of th Secretary of the Navy set out in the petition.

By the court: A. Wylie."

It is from this order that the present appea is taken.

The only other matter apparent in the recor necessary to be stated at this time is, that th court-martial referred to in the order of arres was duly appointed, assembled and organized and that appellant appeared before it, and, a his request, it has been adjourned, from tim to time, to await the result of these proceeding in habeas corpus.

Two questions have been elaborately argue before us, namely:

1. Does the return of the Secretary of th Navy to the writ and its accompanying exhibi show such restraint of the liberty of the pet tioner by that officer as justifies the use of th writ of habeas corpus?

2. If there is a restraint, which, in its cha acter, demands the issue of the writ, are th charges for which the petitioner is required t answer before the naval court-martial of th class of which such a court has jurisdiction?

The latter is a question of importance, ar not free from difficulty, since its solution r quires the court to decide whether the Surgeo General of the Navy, as Chief of the Bureau Medicine and Surgery in the Department of th Navy, under the immediate supervision of th Secretary, is liable for any failure to perfor his duties as Surgeon-General, to be tri by a military court, under the Articles of W governing the Navy, or has a right for such c fenses to be tried alone by the civil courts, ar according to the law for offenses not mi tary. Is he, in that character, in the civil military service of the United States? The d ficulty of stating the question shows the er barrassment attending its decision.

The other question, however, has preceden both because it is the one on which the court the District decided it, and because, if the was no such restraint, whether legal or illeg as to call for the use of the writ, there is no c casion to inquire into its cause.

It is obvious that petitioner is under no phy cal restraint. He walks the streets of Wa ington with no one to hinder his movemen just as he did before the Secretary's order w served on him. It is not stated as a fact in t record, but it is a fair inference from all th is found in it, that, as Medical Director, he w residing in Washington and performing th the duties of his office. It is beyond disp that the Secretary of the Navy had a right direct him to reside in the city in performa of these duties. If he had been somewh else the Secretary could have ordered him Washington as Medical Director, and in or to leave Washington lawfully he would h to obtain leave of absence. He must, in su case, remain here until otherwise ordered or p mitted. It is not easy to see how he is under restraint of his personal liberty by the order arrest, which he was not under before. Nor it be believed that, if this order had made reference to a trial on charges against him bef a court-martial, he would have felt any restr whatever, though it had directed him to rem in the city until further orders. If the order had directed him so to remain and act as a member of such court, can any one believe he would have set himself a prisoner, entitled to the benefit of a writ of habeas corpus?

On the other hand, there is an obvious motive on the part of the petitioner for construing the order as making him a prisoner in the custody of the Secretary.

That motive is to have himself brought before a civil court, which, on inquiry into the cause of his imprisonment, may decide that the charge with which the Secretary charges him is not of a military character, is not one of which a naval court-martial can entertain jurisdiction, and, releasing him from the restraint of the order of arrest, it would incidentally release him from the power of that court.

But neither the Supreme Court of the District nor this court has any appellate jurisdiction over the naval court-martial, nor over offenses which such a court has power to try. Neither of these courts is authorized to interfere with the performance of its duty, by way of a writ of prohibition or any order of that nature. The civil courts can relieve a person from imprisonment under order of such court only by writ of habeas corpus, and then only when it is made apparent that it proceeds without jurisdiction. If there is no restraint, there is no right in the civil court to interfere. Its power then extends no further than to release the prisoner. It cannot remit a fine, or restore to an office, or reverse the judgment of the military court. Whatever effect the decision of the court may have on the proceedings, orders or judgments of the military court, is incidental to the order releasing the prisioner. Of course if there is no prisoner to release, if there is no custody to be discharged, if there is no such restraint as requires relief, then the civil court has no power to interfere with the military court or other tribunal over which it has by law no appellate jurisdiction.

The writ of habeas corpus is not a writ of error, though in some cases in which the court having it has appellate power over the court by whose order the petitioner is held in custody, it may be used with the writ of certiorari for that purpose. In such case, however, as in one before us it is not a writ of error. Its purpose is to enable the court to inquire, first, if the petitioner is restrained of his liberty. If he is not, the court can do nothing but dismiss the writ. If there is such restraint, the court can then inquire into the cause of it, and if the alleged cause be unlawful it must then discharge the prisoner.

There is no very satisfactory definition to be found in the adjudged cases, of the character of the restraint or imprisonment suffered by a party applying for the writ of habeas corpus, which is necessary to sustain the writ. This can hardly be expected from the variety of restraints for which it is used to give relief. Confinement under civil and criminal process may be released. Wives restrained by husbands, children withheld from the proper parent or guardian, persons held under arbitrary custody by private individuals, as in a mad-house, as well as those under military control, may all become proper subjects of relief by the writ of habeas corpus. Obviously, the extent and character of the restraint which justifies the writ must vary according to the nature of the control which is asserted over the party in whose behalf the writ is prayed.

In the case of a man in the military or naval service, where he is, whether as an officer or a private, always more or less subject in his movements, by the very necessity of military rule and subordination, to the orders of his superior officer, it should be made clear that some unusual restraint upon his liberty of personal movement exists to justify the issue of the writ; otherwise every order of the superior officer directing the movements of his subordinate, which necessarily to some extent curtails his freedom of will, may be held to be a restraint of his liberty, and the party so ordered may seek relief from obedience by means of a writ of habeas corpus.

Something more than moral restraint is necessary to make a case for habeas corpus. There must be actual confinement or the present means of enforcing it. The class of cases in which a sheriff or other officer, with a writ in his hands for the arrest of a person whom he is required to take into custody, to whom the person to be arrested submits without force being applied, comes under this definition. The officer has the authority to arrest and the power to enforce it. If the party named in the writ resists or attempts to resist, the officer can summon bystanders to his assistance, and may himself use personal violence. Here the force is imminent and the party is in presence of it. It is physical power which controls him, though not called into demonstrative action. [572]

It is said in argument that such is the power exercised over the appellant under the order of the Secretary of the Navy. But this is, we think, a mistake. If Dr. Wales had chosen to disobey this order, he had nothing to do but take the next or any subsequent train from the city and leave it. There was no one at hand to hinder him. And though it is said that a file of marines or some proper officer could have been sent to arrest and bring him back, this could only be done by another order of the Secretary, and would be another arrest, and a real imprisonment under another and distinct order. Here would be a real restraint of liberty, quite different from the first. The fear of this latter proceeding, which may or may not keep Dr. Wales within the limits of the city, is a moral restraint which concerns his own convenience, and in regard to which he exercises his own will.

The present case bears a strong analogy to Dodge's Case in 6 Martin (La.), 569. It appeared there that the party who sued out the writ had been committed to jail on execution for debt, and having given the usual bond by which he and his sureties were bound to pay the debt if he left the prison bounds, he was admitted to the privilege of those bounds. The plaintiff in execution failing to pay the fees necessary to the support of the prisoner, the latter sued out a writ of habeas corpus.

That eminent jurist, Chief Justice Martin, said, on appeal to the Supreme Court: "It appears to us that the writ of habeas corpus was improperly resorted to. The appellee was under no physical restraint, and there was no necessity to recur to a court or judge to cause any [573] moral restraint to cease. The sheriff did not retain him, since he had admitted him to the benefit of the bounds; the doors of the jail were not closed on him, and if he was detained it was not by the sheriff or jailer. If his was a moral restraint it could not be an illegal one. The object of the appellee was not to obtain the removal of an illegal restraint from a judge, but the declaration of the court that the plaintiffs in execution had by their neglect lost the right of detaining him. A judgment declaring such neglect, and pronouncing on the consequences of it, was what the appellee had in view." The judgment awarding the writ was reversed. The analogy to the case before us is striking.

A very similar case was passed upon by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in Republica v. Arnold, 3 Yeates, 263. A party who had been indicted for arson, and had given bail for his appearance to answer the indictment, applied, while out under bail, to be discharged by writ of habeas corpus, on the ground of delay in the prosecution. The court held that the Statute of Pennsylvania, which was a re-enactment of the Habeas Corpus Act of 31 Charles II., chap. 2, spoke of persons committed or detained, and clearly did not apply to a person out on bail. And Mr. Justice Yeates very pertinently inquires "Would not a habeas corpus directed to the bail of a supposed offender be perfectly novel?" And Smith, J., said that the inclination of his mind was that habeas corpus could lie to the bail.

In a note to the cases of Rex v. Dawes, 1 Burr., 686 and Rex v. Kessel, 1 Burrow, 638, the same principle is stated, though by whom the note is made noes not appear. Both these persons were brought before Lord Mansfield, in the King's Bench, on a rule against the commisioners to enforce an Act of Parliament to increase the army. In both cases the ground on which the discharge was asked was, that they were illegally pressed into the service. Lord Mansfield discharged one because his statement was found to be correct, and refused the other because his statement was not true.

The note to the report, apparently in explanation of the fact that they were not brought [574] before the court by writ of habeas corpus, and that no objection was taken to the rule by the commissioner, says: "Neither of these could have brought a habeas corpus; neither of them was in custody. Dawes had deserted and absconded, and Kessel had been made a corporal. No objection was made by the commissioner to the propriety of the method adopted." Chief Baron Comyn cites the cases as showing that the parties could not bring habeas corpus, because they were not in custody. 4 Comyn, Dig. 813, Habeas Corpus B.

While the Acts of Congress concerning this writ are not decisive, perhaps, as to what is a restraint of liberty, they are evidently framed in their provisions for proceedings in such cases on the idea of the existence of some actual restraint. Section 754, Revised Statutes, says the application for the writ must set forth "in whose custody he (the petitioner) is detained, and by virtue of what claim or authority, if known"; section 755, that "the writ must be directed to the person in whose custody the party is"; section 757, that this person shall certify to the court of justice before whom the writ is returnable the true cause of the detention; and by section 758 he is required "at the same time to bring the body of the party before the judge who granted the writ."

All these provisions contemplate a proceeding against some person who has the immediate custody of the party detained, with the power to produce the body of such party before the court or judge, that he may be liberated if no sufficient reason is shown to the contrary.

In case of a person who is going at large, with no one controlling or watching him, or detaining him, his body cannot be produced by the person to whom the writ is directed, unless by consent of the alleged prisoner, or by his capture and forcible traduction into the presence of the court.

The record in the present case shows that no such thing was done. The Secretary denies that Wales is in his custody, and he does not produce his body; but Wales, on the direction of the Secretary, appears without any compulsion, and reports himself to the court and to Justice Cox as he did to the court-martial.

We concur with the Supreme Court of the District in the opinion that the record does not present such a case of restraint of personal liberty as to call for discharge by a writ of habeas corpus.

In thus deciding we are not leaving the appellant without remedy if his counsel are right in believing the court-martial has no jurisdiction of the offense of which he is charged. He can make that objection to that court before trial. He can make it before judgment after the facts are all before that court. He can make it before the reviewing tribunal.

If that court finds him guilty, and imposes imprisonment as a part of a sentence, he can then have a writ to relieve him of that imprisonment. If he should be deprived of office, he can sue for his pay and have the question of the jurisdiction of the court which made such an order inquired into in that suit. If his pay is stopped, in whole or in part, he can do the same thing. In all these modes he can have relief if the court is without jurisdiction, and the inquiry into that jurisdiction will be more satisfactory after the court shall have decided on the nature of the offense for which it punished him, than it can before. And this manner of relief is more in accord with the orderly administration of justice and the delicate relation of the two classes of courts, civil and military than the assumption in advance by the one court that the other will exercise a jurisdiction which does not belong to it.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—115 U. S., 497, 500; 116 U. S., 177.

Ex Parte:

[illegible] THE MATTER OF ELLIS G. HUGHES, Petitioner.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 548.)

Costs, taxation of.

[illegible] original proceeding in this court for a writ of mandamus, the docket fee and disbursements for printing objections in the nature of pleadings are [illegible] costs. Disbursements for printing briefs [illegible] cannot be included.

[No. 8, Orig.]

[illegible] Apr. 20, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

[illegible] for a writ of mandamus.

[illegible] to tax, as costs, (1) a docket fee, and [illegible] disbursements of respondent for printing [illegible] of counsel, and objections to filing a reply [illegible] to the return of the respondent.

[illegible] the report of the opinion in this case [illegible] the merits, see ante, 134.

[illegible] J. H. Dolph, for respondent, in support of motion.

[illegible] John H. Mitchell, contra.

[illegible] Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

[illegible] never been the practice of this court, [illegible] brought before it under its appellate [illegible], to tax, as costs, disbursements by [illegible] or parties for printing briefs. We see [illegible] for adopting a different rule in cases [illegible] our original jurisdiction.

[illegible] proceeding in this court, under its original [illegible], against a judge of an inferior court [illegible] United States to obtain a writ of man[illegible] requiring him to proceed in a cause [illegible] in court before him, is a civil cause, [illegible] a docket fee is, therefore, taxable in favor [illegible] attorney of the prevailing party, as part [illegible] costs. The objections to the filing of the [illegible] in the nature of pleadings in the [illegible]. The disbursements for printing such [illegible] are therefore taxable, as costs of [illegible] the record.

[illegible], so far as it relates to the printing of [illegible] is denied, but in all other respects granted.

[illegible] copy. Test:

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] TENNESSEE BOND CASES.

[illegible] AMORY STEVENS ET AL., Appts.

v.

[illegible] AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD COMPANY ET AL. No. 42.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

[illegible] Clarksville and Louisville Railroad Company et al. No 43.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

[illegible] Nashville and Great Southern Railroad Company. No. 44.

Calvin Amory Stevens, Appt.,

v.

[illegible] St. Louis and New Orleans Railroad Company et al. No. 163.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

Mississippi and Tennesee Railroad Company. No. 164.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company et al. No. 165.

Appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Tennessee.

CALVIN AMORY STEVENS ET AL., Appts., [664]

v.

LOUISVILLE, NASHVILLE and GREAT SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY. No. 45.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company et al. No. 46.

Calvin Amory Stevens, Appt.,

v.

Nashville and Decatur Railroad Company et al. No. 47.

Calvin Amory Stevens, Appt.,

v.

Nashville and Decatur Railroad Company et al. No. 48.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

McMinnville and Manchester Railroad Company et al. No. 49.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company et al. No. 50.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

Winchester and Alabama Railroad Company et al. No. 51.

Appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Tennessee.

CALVIN AMORY STEVENS et al., Appts.,

v.

THE CINCINNATI, CUMBERLAND GAP and CHARLESTON RAILROAD COMPANY et al. No. 52.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

Knoxville and Kentucky Railroad Company et al. No. 53.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

East Tennessee, Virgina and Georgia Railroad Company. No. 54.

Calvin Amory Stevens et al., Appts.,

v.

East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad Company. No. 55.

Appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Tennessee.

(See S. C., "Tennessee Bond Cases," Reporter's ed., 663-705.)

Tennessee internal improvement bonds—holders not entitled to benefit of mortgages taken by the State—construction of statutes.

1. The statutory lien with which the State of Tennessee was invested, upon the issue of its bonds to railroad companies under the Internal Improvement Act of February 11, 1852, and the several Acts amendatory thereof, was created solely for the security of the State. Under the Acts creating said lien, the holders of the bonds are not entitled to its benefit.

2. When a State lends its own bonds, taking back security for their payment, the presumption is strong that it intends by means of such security to indemnify itself against loss by reason of the loan of its credit, rather than to protect those who may afterwards become holders of such bonds against the consequences of its own repudiation or inability to pay. In this case this presumption is supported by express provisions of the legislation under which the bonds were issued and by which the lien was created.

3. Hand v. S. C. R. Co., 12 S. C., 314, and The Sinking Fund Cases, bk. 25, L. ed., 725, distinguished.

Argued Oct. 23, 24, 27, 28, 29, 30, 1884. Decided May 4, 1885.

The history and facts of the cases fully appear in the opinion of the court.

The argument in these cases was exhaustive, twenty-one briefs being filed, which contained over eighteen hundred printed pages. Only a few of the main points and authorities of the counsel for appellants can be here given.

Messrs. George Hoadley, Wager Swayne, Edward L. Andrews, John C. F. Gardner, Edgar M. Johnson, Edward Colston and W. S. Pierce, Jr., for appellants.

Mr. Charles O'Connor, also of counsel for appellants, died before the hearing in this court. He took part in the argument in the court below.

I. The object of the Act was to indemnify the State by payment to the creditor.

The contract written in the law, and which the statutory lien secures, is payment, not indemnity.

See Brandt, Sur. & Guar., § 177, p. 255.

Rice v. Southgate, 16 Gray, 142; Planters' Bk. v. Douglass, 2 Head, 699; Wicker v. Hoppock, 6 Wall., 99 (73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 753); Port v. Jackson, 17 Johns., 239.

II. Sovereignty does not protect the State. A State, otherwise sovereign, when entering into commercial relations of this kind occupies a position legally indentical with that of any trader or other private person.

Moodalay v. Morton, 1 Bro. Ch., 471; Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. St., 175; U. S. Bk. v. Planter's Bk., 9 Wheat., 904; Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall., 666 (74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 169); U. S. v. R. R. Co., 98 U. S., 613 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 154); White v. R. R. Co., 7 Heisk., 546.

The State is, in this case, at least so far as the railroad companies are concerned, a surety.

"When property of any kind is mortgaged or pledged by the owner to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage, of another person, such property occupies the position of a surety or guarantor, and anything which would discharge an individual surety or guarantor who was personally liable, will, under similar circumstances, discharge such property."

Brandt, Sur. & Guar., § 21; Robinson v. Gee, 1 Ves. 251; Bowker v. Bull, 1 Sim. (N. S.), 29; Lord Harberton v. Bennett, Beatty, 386; Rowan v. Mfg. Co., 33 Conn., 1; Barnes v. Mott, 64 N. Y., 397; Hoy v. Bramhall, 19 N. J. Eq., 563; Hill v. Witmer, 2 Phila., 72; Lowry v. McKinney, 68 Pa. St., 294; White v. Ault, 1 Ga., 551; Ryan v. Trustees of Shawneetown, 1 Ill., 20; Christner v. Brown, 16 Iowa, 130.

It by no means follows that, because the State is not liable on its bonds, the companies are free from responsibility under the statutory mortgages.

R. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S., 118 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 327).

A promise made by A to B, to pay C, may be sued upon directly by C against A.

Moore v. Stovall, 2 Lea, 543; Hendrick v. Lindsay, 93 U. S., 143 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 853); Pom., Rem., § 139.

It matters not that the contract is embodied in or required by a statute.

Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. (75 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 370); Keith v. Clark, 97 U. S., 454 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1077); Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How., 190; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How., 304.

But here the bondholder is in direct legal privity, both with the company, the promisor, and the State, the promisee or mortgagee.

Furman v. Nichol, supra; Miller v. Billingsly, 41 Ind., 489; Bassett v. Hughes, 43 Wis., 319; Trimble v. Strother, 25 Ohio St., 3; Halsey v. Reed, 9 Paige, 446; Blyer v. Mallholland, 2 Sandf. Ch., 478; Marsh v. Pike, 10 Paige, 595; Hartley v. Harrison, 24 N. Y., 1; Price v Trusdell, 28 N. J. Eq., 200; Anthony v. Herman, 14 Kan., 494; Schmucker v. Sibley, 13 Kan., 104; Opdyke v. R. R. Co., 3 Dill., 1; Bagaley v. Waters, 7 Ohio St., 359; Rabberman v. Wiskamp, 54 Ill., 179; Wilson v. Bevans, 51 Ill., 232; Bird v. Lanius, 7 Ind., 615; Martin v. Wilson, 80 Ind., 240; Helms v. Kearns, 7 Ind., 124.

The Railroad Companies are the principal debtors.

In the Circuit Court it was much insisted that the contract of lien must necessarily be treated as one between the State and the company, because it related to "the payment of a debt in which the party is x, an unknown quantity."

The answer to this is furnished by the cases already cited of Curran v. Arkansas, Woodruff v. Trapnall, Furman v. Nichol and Keith v. Clark.

III. A mortgage to a surety, conditioned to pay the creditor, creates a trust for the creditor.

In such cases mortgagor and mortgagee cannot, without the consent of the creditor, release the surety to his disadvantage.

Breedlove v. Summerville, 3 Yerg., 257; Lessey v. McDearmon, 5 Cold., 392; Saylors v. Saylors, 3 Tenn., 525; Brandt, Sur. & Guar., § 9; Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch., 119; Chancellor Kent; Price v. Trusdell, 28 N. J. Eq., 204; Ware v. Otis, 3 Greenl., 387; Paris v. Ellis, 26 Vt., 308; Eastman v. Foster, 8 Met., 19; Hand v. Hand, 1 Paige, 329; Curtis v. Tyler, 9 Paige, 432; Kramer and Rahm's Appeal, 37 Pa. St., 79; Boyd v. Parker, 43 Md., 182; Robertson v. Colvin, 3 Gratt. 358; Carpenter v. Boyd, 1 Miss., 28; Ross v. Wilson, 7 Sm. & M. 1; Osborn v. Noble, 46 Miss., 449.

Private rights do not perish because a State [illegible] her duty as trustee.

[illegible] v. Bk. of U. S., 9 Wheat., 738; Davis v. [illegible], 16 Wall., 203 (83 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. [illegible]); Tenny v. R. R. Co., 2 Woods, 606.

It is a familiar principle of federal law, that [illegible] whose absence is complained of is an indispensable party, the federal court will proceed to a decree without him.

Papy v. Hook, 7 Wall., 431 (74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. [illegible]); Oler v. Gallagher, 93 U. S., 204 (bk. [illegible], L. ed. [illegible]); Hotel Co. v. Wade, 97 U. S. (bk. 24, L. ed. 919).

Mr. Wm. M. Ramsey, for John B. Smith, trustee of the L. N. & G. S. R. R. Co., the M. C. & L. R. R. Co. and the M. & O. R. R. Co., appellees.

Mr. John A. Campbell, for the M. & O. R. R. Co., the C. St. L. & N. O. R. R. Co. and the Ill. Cent. R. R. Co., appellees.

Mr. P. Hamilton, for the M. & O. R. R. Co. et al., appellees.

Mr. Chas. P. Southmayd, for the E. Tenn., Va. & Ga. R. R. Co., the C. C. G. & [illegible] R. R. Co. and the M. & C. R. R. Co., appellees.

Mr. D. H. Poston and W. K. Poston, for the M. & C. R. R. Co. and the E. Tenn., Va. & Ga. R. R. Co., appellees.

Mr. L. W. Humes, W. Y. C. Humes and Jno. J. Heiskell, for the M. & C. R. R. Co., appellee.

Mr. Wm. H. Baxter, for the K. & Ky. R. R. Co. and the K. & O. R. R. Co., appellees.

Mr. E. Baxter and Russell Houston, for the L. N. & G. S. R. R. Co., the N. & C. R. R. Co. and the M. C. & L. R. R. Co., appellees.

Mr. Edward H. East, for the N. & C. R. R. Co., the N. & N. W. R. R. Co., the [illegible] & M. R. R. Co. and the W. & Ala. R. R. Co., appellees.

Mr. George Brown, James T. Shields and John K. Shields, for the E. Tenn., Va. & Ga. R. R. Co., appellee.

Mr. James Pentress, for the C. St. L. R. R. & I. C. R. R. Co., appellee.

Mr. R. L. Russell, for the M. & O. R. R. Co., appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

These suits are brought by the holders of unsold bonds of the State of Tennessee, issued to certain railroad companies under the Act of January 11, 1852, "to establish a system of railroad improvements," to enforce the lien which was vested in the State by that Act, on the property of the companies respectively, as security for the payment of the bonds and the accruing interest thereon. The sections of the Act on which the rights of the parties depend are 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 12, 13 and 14. These are as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee, That whenever the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company shall have procured bona fide subscriptions for the capital stock in said company to an amount sufficient to grade, bridge and prepare for the iron rails the whole extent of the main trunk line proposed to be constructed by said company, and it shall be shown by said company to the Governor of the State that said subscriptions are good and solvent, and whenever said company shall have graded, bridged, and shall have ready to put down the necessary timbers for the reception of rails, and fully prepared a section of thirty miles of said road at either terminus, in a good and substantial manner, with good materials, for putting on the iron rails and equipments, and the Governor shall be notified of these facts, and that said section, or any part thereof, is not subject to any lien whatever, other than those created in favor of the State by the Acts of 1851–2, by the written affidavit of the the chief engineers and president of said company, together with the written affidavit of a competent engineer by him appointed, at the cost of the company, to examine said section, then said Governor shall issue to said company coupon bonds of the State of Tennessee, to an amount not exceeding eight thousand dollars per mile on said section, and on no other condition, which bonds shall be payable at such place in the United States as the president of the company may designate, bearing an interest of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, and not having more than forty nor less than thirty years to mature. [660]

Sec. 2. Be it enacted, That the bonds before specified shall not be used by said company for any other purpose than for procuring the iron rails, chairs, spikes and equipments for said section of said road, and for putting down said iron rails; and the Governor shall not issue the same unless upon the affidavit of said president, and a resolution of a majority of the board of directors for the time being, that said bonds shall not be used for any other purpose than for procuring the said iron rails, chairs, spikes and equipments for said section, and for putting down said iron rails; and the Governor shall have power to appoint a commissioner to act under oath, in conjunction with said president, in negotiating said bonds for the purposes aforesaid, and to act in any other matters pertaining to said company, where the interest of the State, in the opinion of the Governor, may require it.

Sec. 3. Be it enacted, That so soon as the bonds of the State shall have been issued for the first section of the road as aforesaid, they shall constitute a lien upon said section so prepared as aforesaid, including the road-bed, right of way, grading, bridges and masonry, upon all the stock subscribed for in said company, and upon said iron rails, chairs, spikes and equipments, when purchased and delivered; and the State of Tennessee, upon the issuance of said bonds, and by virtue of the same, shall be invested with said lien or mortgage without a deed from the company, for the payment by said company of said bonds, with the interest thereon as the same becomes due. [667]

Sec. 4. Be it enacted, That when said company shall have prepared as aforesaid a second section, or any additional number of sections, of twenty miles each of said road, connecting with a section already completed for the iron rails, chairs, spikes and equipments, as provided in the first section of this Act, and the Governor shall be notified of the facts as before provided, he shall, in like manner, issue to said company like bonds of the State of Tennessee, to an equal amount with that before issued under the first section of this Act, for each and every section of twenty miles of said road so prepared as aforesaid, but upon the terms and conditions hereinbefore provided; and upon the issuance of the said bonds the State of Tennessee shall be invested with a like mortgage or lien without a deed from said company, upon said stock, and upon said first and additional section or sections of said road so prepared, upon the rails and equipments put, or to be put, upon the same, for the payment of said bonds and the accruing interest thereon; Provided, That if the last section of said road shall be less than twenty miles, or if the railroad proposed to be constructed by any company hereinafter specified shall be less than thirty miles in extent, bonds of the State shall be issued for such section or such railroad as may be less than thirty miles in extent for an amount in proportion to the distance, as provided in this Act, but upon the same terms and conditions in all respects as required in regard to the bonds to be issued for the other sections of said road. And when the whole of said road shall be completed the State of Tennessee shall be invested with a lien, without a [668] deed from the company, upon the entire road, including the stock, right of way, grading, bridging, masonry, iron rails, spikes, chairs, and the whole superstructure and equipments, and all the property owned by the company as incident to or necessary for its business, and all depots and depot stations, for the payment of all of said bonds issued to the company as provided in this Act, and for the interest accruing on said bonds. And after the governor shall have issued bonds for the first section of the road, it shall not be lawful for the said company to give, create or convey to any person or persons, or body corporate whatever, any lien, incumbrance or mortgage of any kind which shall have priority over, or come in conflict with, the lien of the State herein secured, and any such lien, incumbrance or mortgage shall be null and void as against said lien or mortgage of the State, and the said lien or mortgage of the State shall have priority over all other claims existing or to exist against said company.

Sec. 5. Be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of said company to deposit in the Bank of Tennessee, at Nashville, at least fifteen days before the interest becomes due, from time to time, upon said bonds issued as aforesaid, an amount sufficient to pay such interest, including exchange and necessary commissions, or satisfactory evidence that said interest has been paid or provided for; and if said company fail to deposit said interest as aforesaid, or furnish the evidence aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the comptroller to report that fact to the Governor, and the Governor shall immediately appoint some suitable person or persons, at the expense of the company, to take possession and control of said railroad, and all the assets thereof, and manage the same and receive the rents, issues, profits and dividends thereof, whose duty it shall be to give bond and security to the State of Tennessee, in such penalty as the Governor may require, for the faithful discharge of his or their duty as receiver or receivers, to receive said rents, issues, profits and dividends, and pay over the same under the direction of the Governor, toward th liquidation of such unpaid interest. And i said company fail or refuse to deliver up sai road to the person or persons so appointed b the Governor, the person so appointed shall r port that fact to the Governor, who shall forth with issue his warrant, directed to the sherif of the counties through which said road sha run, commanding them to take possession c said road, fixtures and equipments, and every thing pertaining thereto, and place the said r ceiver in full and complete possession of th same, and said receiver so appointed shall co tinue in the possession of said road, fixtures an equipments, and run the same, and manage th entire road, until a sufficient sum shall be rea ized, exclusive of the costs and expenses inc dent to said proceedings, to pay off and di charge the interest as aforesaid, due on sa bonds; which being done, the receiver sha surrender said road and fixtures and equi ments to said company. The comptroller sha from time to time settle the accounts with th receiver, and the balance shall be deposited the treasury of the State. The comptroller authorized, and it is made his duty, upon h warrant to draw from the treasury any sum money necessary to meet the interest on su bonds, as may not be provided for by the co pany, as provided for in this Act, and the com troller shall report thereof to the General Asse bly from time to time.

Sec. 6. Be it enacted, That if said compa shall fail or refuse to pay any of said bonds wh they fall due, it shall be the duty of the Gov nor to notify the Attorney-General of the distr in which is situated the place of business of sa company, of the fact; and thereupon said Att ney-General shall forthwith file a bill agai said company, in the name of the State of Te nessee, in the Chancery or Circuit Court of t county in which is situated said place of bu ness, setting forth the facts; and thereupon sa court shall make all such orders and decrees said cause as may be deemed necessary by t court, to secure the payment of said bonds, wi the interest thereon, and to indemnify the St of Tennessee against any loss on account of t issuance of said bonds, by ordering the sa railroad to be placed in the hands of a recei ordering the sale of said road, and all the pro erty and assets attached thereto or belonging said company or in such other manner as t court may deem best for the interest of t State.

Sec. 7. Be it enacted, That at the end of fi years after the completion of said road, sa company shall set apart one per centum per a num upon the amount of bonds issued to t company, and shall use the same in the p chase of bonds of the State of Tennessee, whi bonds the company shall pay into the treasu of the State, after assigning them to the Go ernor, and for which the Governor shall gi said company a receipt, and as between t State and said company, the bonds so paid shall be a credit on the bonds issued to t company; and bonds so paid in, and the int est accruing thereon, from time to time, sh be held and used by the State as a sinking fu for the payment of the bonds issued to t company; and should said company repurch

[illegible] of the bonds issued to it under the provi[illegible] of this Act, they shall be a credit as afore[illegible] and canceled. And should said company [illegible] comply with the provisions of this sec[illegible] shall be proceeded against, as provided [illegible] in fifth section of this Act.

[illegible] 11. Be it enacted, That the provisions [illegible] Act shall extend to and embrace the Chat[illegible] Harrison, Georgetown and Charles[illegible] Railroad Company, the Nashville and [illegible] Railroad Company, the Louis[illegible] and Nashville Railroad Company, the [illegible] Railroad Company, the McMinn[illegible] and Manchester Railroad Company, the [illegible] and Charleston Railroad Company, [illegible] Nashville and Southern Railroad Company, [illegible] and Ohio Railroad Company, the [illegible] and Memphis Railroad Company, the [illegible] and Cincinnati Railroad Company, [illegible] East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Com[illegible] Memphis, Clarksville and Louisville [illegible] Company, and the Winchester and [illegible] Railroad Company, so far as the main [illegible] to be constructed by said companies [illegible] the limits of this State, and not other[illegible] said companies shall have all the [illegible] and privileges and be subject to all the [illegible] and liabilities contained in this Act.

[illegible] 12. Be it enacted, That the State of Ten[illegible] expressly reserves the right to enact by [illegible] thereof, hereafter, all such laws [illegible] be deemed necessary to protect the in[illegible] of the State, and to secure the State [illegible] any loss in consequence of the issuance [illegible] under the provisions of this Act; but [illegible] manner as not to impair the vested [illegible] of the stockholders of the companies.

[illegible] 13. Be it enacted, That it shall be the [illegible] of the Governor, from time to time, when [illegible] shall be reliable information given to him [illegible] any railroad company shall have fraudu[illegible] obtained the issuance of bonds of the [illegible] shall have obtained any of said bonds [illegible] to the provisions of this Act, he shall [illegible] the Attorney-General of this State, whose [illegible] shall be forthwith to institute, in the [illegible] of the State, a suit in the Circuit or [illegible] Court of the county of the place of [illegible] of the company, setting forth the facts. [illegible] when the fact shall satisfactorily appear [illegible] that any of said bonds shall have [illegible] fraudulently obtained, or obtained con[illegible] to the true intent, meaning and provisions [illegible] Act, then, and in such case, the court [illegible] order, adjudge and decree, that said road [illegible] in the State, with all the property and [illegible] of said company, or a sufficiency thereof, [illegible] to sold, and the proceeds shall be paid [illegible] the treasury, and it shall be the duty of [illegible] immediately to vest the same in [illegible] creating a sinking fund, as provided [illegible] in the seventh section of this Act. And [illegible] company shall forfeit all rights and privi[illegible] under the provisions of this Act, and the [illegible] thereof shall be individually liable [illegible] the payment of the bonds so fraudulently [illegible] by such company, and for all other [illegible] that may fall upon the State in conse[illegible] of the commission of any other fraud [illegible] such company, excepting such stockholders [illegible] to the said court that they were ignorant of or opposed to the perpetration of such frauds by the company.

Sec. 14. Be it enacted, That in the event any of the roads, fixtures or property belonging to any of said roads shall be sold under the provisions of this Act, it shall be the duty of the governor to appoint an agent for the State, who shall attend said sale and protect the interests of the State, and shall, if necessary to protect said interest, buy in said road or property, in the name of the State; and in case said agent shall purchase said road for the State, the Governor shall appoint a receiver, who shall take possession of said road and property, and use the same as provided for in the fifth section [672] of this Act, and said receiver shall settle with the comptroller semi-annually until the next meeting of the General Assembly."

On the 21st of February, 1852, an Act was passed providing for the identification of the bonds to be issued to the several companies under the Act of February 11, the material parts of which are secs. 7, 8 and 9, as follows:

"Sec. 7. Be it further enacted, That the different internal improvement companies, to whom the bonds of the State may be lent under the different Acts of the present Legislature, shall pay the expenses of engraving and preparing the same.

Sec. 8. Be it enacted, That the Governor of the State shall cause to be engraved and printed the bonds which may be issued under the Acts of the present General Assembly, as a loan made to internal improvement companies, and the said bonds shall bear date on the first day of January prior to their issuance, and the coupons thereto shall be payable on the first days of January and July of each year.

Sec. 9. Be it enacted, That the coupons shall be signed and numbered by the comptroller, and the bonds shall be countersigned, sealed and numbered by the Secretary of State, and upon delivering said bonds to the company authorized to receive the same, the Secretary of State shall take a receipt, reciting the number, date, and amount of said bonds, in a well bound book to be deposited in his office, and the comptroller and Secretary of State shall each be entitled to receive twenty-five cents for each bond so prepared, to be paid by the party receiving the said bond."

By sections 5 and 6 of an Act of February 21, 1856, the sinking fund provisions of the Act of 1852 were changed as follows:

"Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the several railroad companies in this State, who have received, or may hereafter receive, bonds of the State, or the indorsement of their bonds by the State to aid in the construction of their several roads, under the provisions of the Act of 1851-1852, and the Acts amendatory thereto, at the expiration of five years from the issuance or indorsement of their [673] said several bonds, annually to set apart and pay over to the treasurer of the State two per cent per annum upon all bonds which have been or may hereafter be issued or indorsed as aforesaid, as a sinking fund for the ultimate redemption of the bonds issued or indorsed as aforesaid; which sinking fund, when paid over, the Governor, comptroller of the treasury, and president of the Bank of Tennessee shall invest in the bonds of the State, and reinvest all accruing interest in like securities; and they are hereby constituted a board of commissioners for the management, government, and control of said sinking fund.

Sec. 6. Be it further enacted, That should any of said railroad companies fail, or refuse to comply with the provisions of the fifth section of this Act, it shall be the duty of the Governor forthwith to notify the Attorney-General of the district in which is situated the place of business of said company failing or refusing as aforesaid, of the fact; and thereupon the Attorney-General shall immediately proceed against said company to collect said sinking fund, in the manner prescribed in the sixth section of an Act entitled 'An Act to Establish a System of Internal Improvements in this State,' passed February 11, 1852."

By another Act, passed March 20, 1860, the same provisions were further amended as follows:

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Tennessee, That the money or bonds that have heretofore or may be paid by the cities or railroad companies in this State to the sinking fund commissioners by the 1st of January, 1860, together with the accruing interest thereon to that date, shall be passed directly to the credit of the party having so paid the same, and be a release to said party for that amount on the debt due by them to the State of Tennessee.

Sec. 2. Said bonds shall all be canceled by said commissioners, and, if indorsed bonds of any railroad company, shall be canceled as hereinafter provided for the cancellation of state bonds, and shall be delivered over to said company or corporation, taking the president's of said company, or the officers' of said company receipt for the same, which receipt shall be filed and the copy of the same placed upon a book which the said commissioners shall keep [674] for that purpose. If state bonds, they shall be canceled and filed in the office of the Secretary of State as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. That after the first day of January, 1860, all railroad companies or city corporations who have or may hereafter receive the bonds of the State, or its indorsement of their own bonds under the general internal improvement law of this State, or any other law, shall be required to pay two and one half per cent per annum as a sinking fund on the amount of the bonds so issued or indorsed by the State for said company or corporation, to be paid in equal installments on the first days of April and October, five years after the date of said bonds, and annually thereafter.

Sec. 4. All bonds issued during any one year shall be dated on the first day of January of that year.

Sec. 5. Said companies or corporations may pay said sinking fund in cash or in the like character of bonds that may have been issued or indorsed by the State for said company, at their face or par value.

Sec. 6. If paid in money, the commissioners shall invest it immediately in the bonds of the State, and shall have the same canceled and filed as heretofore provided. Such bonds are to be of the same character as those issued to such company or corporation.

Sec. 7. The sinking fund, when paid, in all cases shall be passed directly to the credit c said company or corporation, and be a release t said company or corporation from that amoun due by them to the State. The commissioner shall issue a receipt to each company or corpo ration for such payment, retaining a duplicat in a well bound book kept for that purpose.

Sec. 8. Each and every railroad company c city corporation shall provide the interest sem annually, as now provided by law, on th amount of bonds unpaid at the time said inte est falls due, and not on the original amou issued to or indorsed by the State for said con pany as heretofore provided.

Sec. 9. The comptroller of the State sha keep a regular account against each compar or corporation, charging them with the amou of bonds originally issued to or indorsed f said company or corporation by the State, ar crediting them by the amount of sinking fu paid, and shall furnish the treasurer of state statement of the amount due by each compa or corporation on the first of June and Dece ber of each year, that he may know how mu interest each company or corporation has to pa

Sec. 10. The commissioners of the sinki fund shall cancel all bonds of the State as so as paid in or purchased, by cutting out the Go ernor's and Secretary of State's names, and defacing each coupon that it cannot by pos bility be used or circulated, and shall file t same in the Secretary of State's office.

Sec. 11. This law shall be in full force fr and after its passage, and shall repeal all la in conflict with it, but shall not be so constru as otherwise to affect any law on the subject the sinking fund or the payment of interest d on state or indorsed bonds."

Under these statutes state bonds were fr time to time issued to the several enumera railroad companies in the following form:

"$1,000. $1,0

No. United States of America. No

Know all men by these presents: That State of Tennessee acknowledges to owe to , or order, One Thousand Doll of the lawful money of the United States America, which the said State promises to in the City of New York, on the day , 18 , with interest thereon, at rate of six per cent per annum, according the tenor, and upon the presentation of the c pons hereunto attached. For the payment said sums of money and the interest there at the times and places and in the manner af said, the faith of the said State of Tennesse irrevocably pledged, this bond being issue pursuance and by authority of an Act of General Assembly of said State, passed Fe ary 11th, 1852, to establish a system of Inte Improvements in said State.

In testimony whereof and in pursuance of Acts aforesaid, I , G ernor of the State of Tennessee, have here subscribed my name officially, and caused same to be countersigned by the Secretar State, with the great seal of the State affi [ ] Done at the Executive Departm at the City of Nashville, this day of , 18

To which was attached the following f of coupon:

"30. The Treasurer of the State of Treasurer.

will pay the bearer Thirty Dollars, in the City of New York, on the first day of January, [illegible] being the semi-annual interest then falling due on bond No. . J. C. Suttrell, 30 Comptroller."

Upon the issue of the bonds, receipts were [illegible] by the companies respectively, in the [illegible] required by the statute, in a well bound [illegible] deposited in the office of the Secretary of State. The bonds, after their delivery, were [illegible] in the market by the respective companies, [illegible] in conjunction with the state commissioner, and [illegible] proceeds used in the way contemplated by [illegible] Act.

No complaint is now made of any default on [illegible] of the several companies whose roads [illegible] involved in these suits prior to the late civil war. After the beginning of the war, however, but few payments were made, and various expedients were resorted to, from time [illegible] for relieving the companies from their [illegible]. In 1866, another Act was [illegible] authorizing a further issue of state [illegible], under which some of the bonds em[illegible] in these suits were put out. In this Act [illegible] provisions as to the lien for the security of [illegible] payment of the bonds was substantially the [illegible] as in the Act of 1852. None of these de[illegible], however, accomplished the purpose the [illegible] had in view, and on the 25th of February, [illegible] "An Act to Liquidate the State Debt, [illegible] in Aid of Railroad Companies in [illegible] State of Tennessee" was passed. That Act [illegible] as follows.

"Whereas, under the general internal im[illegible] laws of the State, passed from time [illegible], aid has been granted to various rail[illegible] companies by the loaning of the six per [illegible] bonds of the State, to enable said com[illegible] to lay, equip, build and bridge, and for [illegible] purposes, which is now secured to the [illegible] by a first mortgage or lien on the fran[illegible], property and fixtures of respective rail[illegible] companies; and

"Whereas, it is desirable for the general wel[illegible] of the State that the State shall be reim[illegible] such amounts as have been advanced to [illegible] railroad companies, as fast as may [illegible], therefore,

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the General As[illegible] of the State of Tennessee, That the re[illegible] railroad companies, or either of them [illegible] indebtedness to the State, are [illegible] authorized to repay any amount of the [illegible] of such indebtedness as they have re[illegible] in the bonds of the State, in [illegible] and at such times as may be prac[illegible]. Provided, however, That nothing in this [illegible] be so construed as to release said rail[illegible] companies from any lien which the State [illegible] on the same for any unpaid interest [illegible] said bonds of the State authorized [illegible] by this Act.

"Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, That any rail[illegible] company or companies repaying any in[illegible] to the State under the provisions [illegible] Act, are authorized to issue bonds of [illegible] and denomination with the bonds [illegible] paid and delivered up for cancella[illegible] as hereinafter provided, which said rail[illegible] bonds, so issued in lieu of any equal [illegible] of state bonds, shall be certified to by [illegible] and entered in a book to be kept for that purpose, with date, number and amount, and shall be a lien, pro rata in amount and of equal validity and effect with the unretired part of the State indebtedness upon such railroad, and all its property, franchises, fixtures and material.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, That in order to facilitate the railroad companies that may wish to avail themselves of the provisions of this Act in repaying the indebtedness due to the State respectively, they, or any of them, are hereby authorized to consolidate their property, [678] in whole or in part, with other railroad companies, and issue bonds and stock as provided for in the second section of this Act, and may adopt the corporate franchise of either of the roads as the stockholders may elect; and each railroad company paying its indebtedness, and such railroad companies as may consolidate under the provisions of this Act, are hereby authorized to determine, by a vote of the stockholders of said company or consolidated companies, the number of directors of such company, and elect the same under the new organization, and that the said directors, so elected, shall, according to the by-laws and rules of said corporation, elect one of their number president of said company.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, That the comptroller of the State shall receive from the railroad companies, or any of them, bonds of the State in such amounts as may be presented, and cancel the same in the presence of the officer or agent of the railroad company paying them in, and execute to the said railroad company or companies duplicate receipts for the amount and number of said bonds so paid in; and it shall further be the duty of the comptroller to certify on the bonds of any railroad company or companies repaying indebtedness due to the State, that the same has been paid, and that the so certified [bonds] are secured by first mortgage; Provided, That said railroad companies shall liquidate their indebtedness prior to the maturity of the bonds that have caused said indebtedness; and be it further provided, that said bonds, when executed by the respective railroad companies, or either of them, shall be deposited with the comptroller of the State, whose duty it shall be to deliver said bonds, or any number of them, to the president and directors of the company, on the deposit by said president and directors or authorized agent of an equal amount of the six per cent bonds of the State of Tennessee, with unpaid coupons attached; and the company's first mortgage bonds, authorized to be issued by this Act, shall have no validity or value except the comptroller's certificate is affixed on the face of each bond, that said bond is executed, and issued and by virtue of law taken the place of a bond of the State and is the first mortgage bond.

Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, That the comptroller shall be entitled to a fee of one dollar on each thousand dollars of the bonds certified as aforesaid, to be paid by the railroad company for which the same is done; and it shall be lawful for the comptroller to discharge the duties imposed by this Act, by and through an agent in the City of New York; and all the provisions of this Act shall attach to and become a part of the charter of any railroad company or companies acting under it. [679]

Sec. 6. Be it further enacted, That by and with the consent of the board of directors of any railroad company in this State under the general improvement law passed the 11th of February, 1852, and all the amendments thereto, that any person or corporation may, by paying the indebtedness of such railroad company to the State in the bonds of the State, as provided for by law, be, and they are hereby substituted and entitled to all the liens against said company for the payment of said debt that the State had or has by law, and the Governor and Secretary of State shall give such party or parties paying such indebtedness a certificate showing the facts, which shall be evidence against said company of such indebtedness to said individuals or corporations.

Sec. 7. Be it further enacted, That any person or persons may, with the consent and approbation of any railroad company, which is indebted to, and for which the State of Tennessee holds a lien, pay the said debt, so far as the State is concerned, in the bonds of the State, or any coupons of bonds at par, and the person or persons so paying the debt of any railroad company with the consent of such railroad company, shall, upon filing with the treasurer of this State the written assent of said railroad company, under the corporate seal of said railroad company, be entitled to have and hold all the lien or liens which the State of Tennessee had or has upon said railroad or its property, and shall have the same right to enforce the same which the State of Tennessee had, the object and intent being to place the person or persons so paying with the consent of said railroad company in the same position and with the same rights which the State of Tennessee had previous to and before the said payment, and with full power to enforce the same.

Sec. 8. Be it further enacted, That any person or persons who may, with the consent and approbation of any railroad company, pay any part or portion of the indebtedness of such company, as provided in sec. —, shall have, hold, and [be] subrogated in all the rights, privileges, and lien or liens of the State, to the extent of, and in proportion to, the amount of such indebtedness, with the same rights and privileges the State now has, to the extent of such payment or payments; Provided, The passage of this Act shall not decrease the lien of the State upon any railroad of the State until the entire claim of the State is fully liquidated, or affect the interest of the present bondholders of the State; Provided, That railroad companies which have issued second mortgage bonds, availing themselves of the provisions of this Act, shall file with the comptroller bonds of the same series as those loaned to such company, for which the State holds a first mortgage lien; Provided, The bonds to be issued by the company, under the provisions of this Act, shall not have a longer time to run than the bonds of the State thus released and canceled.

[680]

Sec. 9. Be it further enacted, That this Act shall take effect from and after its passage."

At the next session of the General Assembly, January 20, 1870, this Act was amended as follows:

"An Act for the Payment of the State Debt.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee, That an Act en tled 'An Act to Liquidate the State Debt, Co tracted in Aid of Railroad Companies in the Su of Tennessee,' passed February 25, 1862, b and the same is hereby amended so as to allo any railroad company which may be indebt to the State by reason of the bonds of the Su loaned to said railroad company, to pay into t State, in liquidation of the principal of said debtedness, any of the legally issued six p cent bonds of the State of Tennessee outstan ing, without regard to series or number; a such payment shall, to the extent made, b full and perfect discharge of the lien which t State holds upon the property of such railro company, held by virtue of the bonds of t State issued to such railroad company, whet they be the same bonds or the same series bonds issued to said company under the A passed February 11, 1852, and Acts amendat thereof, or not.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, That railro companies issuing their own mortgage bo under the provisions of the Act which thi intended to amend, be allowed to fix the rate interest which the said bonds of the railro company are to bear, and all laws in conf are hereby repealed; Provided, That when s railroad companies owe interest already d coupons past due shall be taken by the co troller or treasurer in discharge of such ind edness for interest.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, That when company, under the provisions of this Act, s pay into the treasury of the State bonds wh have been issued by the State to said compa the said bonds shall be canceled; but should company, in discharge of its own debts, into the treasury any bonds that were issue other companies that may still be indebte the State, such bonds so paid in shall no canceled, but shall be held by the State as chased bonds, retaining a lien for the State u the road to which said bonds were origin issued until the debt of said road to the S shall be fully discharged, when the bond held shall be canceled; Provided, That the visions of this Act shall not be so construe to allow the payment and satisfaction of d created by bonds issued by the State, and u which the State is secondarily liable, nor to payment of the sinking fund, now require law, of the railroad companies of this S

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, That this shall take effect from and after its passage

Under these statutes the companies w roads are involved in the present suits ag the Memphis and Charleston Railroad C pany, the Louisville, Nashville and C Southern Railroad Company, the Nashville Decatur Railroad Company, the Nash Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad Comp the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia road Company, the Chicago, St. Louis and Orleans Railroad Company, the Memphis Tennessee Railroad Company, and the M and Ohio Railroad Company, by the use of stitution bonds or otherwise, obtained fro State a discharge of the liens upon their erty under the Act of February 11, 1852 the Acts amendatory thereof, so far as the had the right to execute such a discharge doing so, however, they used, to some e other state bonds than those which were issued to them originally under the provisions of the Act. The bonds, so issued and not returned to the State, constitute the causes of action on which these suits are brought against the companies above named.

To provide for cases where the companies failed to meet their obligations to the State under the Act of 1852, and did not comply with the provisions of the Acts of 1869 and 1870, an Act of December 21, 1870, was passed, in which after reciting as follows: "Whereas, in the recent attempt to sell the State's interest in said roads, various legal questions arose, presenting serious obstacles to a sale under the Act of 1870, which it is deemed expedient and necessary to obviate before the interest of the State in said roads shall be again offered for sale; and whereas, by the Act of 1852, chap. 151, § 12, the right is expressly reserved to the State to enact all such laws in the future as should be deemed necessary to protect the interest of the State, and to secure the State against any loss in consequence of the issuance of bonds under the provisions of said Act, in such manner as not to impair the vested rights of stockholders of the companies,"—provision was made for a summary proceeding to foreclose the lien vested in the State, under the Act of 1852 and the several mandatory Acts, by filing a bill in equity, in the Court of Chancery at Nashville, against the delinquent companies, to obtain a decree for the sale of the interest of the State in their property. In the Act it was provided, that the purchase money might "be discharged in any of the outstanding legal bonds of the State," and that, upon the sale of any of the franchises of either of the companies, "all the rights, privileges and immunities appertaining to the franchises so sold under its Act of incorporation and the amendments thereto, and the general improvement law of the State, and Acts amendatory thereof, shall be transferred to and vest in such purchaser, and the purchaser shall hold said franchises subject to all liens and liabilities in favor of the State, as now provided by law, against the railroad companies."

Under the provisions of this Act the liens on the roads involved in the suits against the Memphis, Clarksville and Louisville Railroad Company, the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company, the McMinnville and Manchester Railroad Company, the Winchester and Alabama Railroad Company, the Cincinnati, Cumberland Gap and Charleston Railroad Company, and the Knoxville and Kentucky Railroad Company were all foreclosed, and the property sold under decrees which reserved the rights the State referred to in the statute, "as shall be necessary to secure the purchase money to accrue, and the other rights of the State under the decree in this cause and the said Act of the Legislature." Payments of the purchase money were made in bonds of the State of Tennessee without distinction. Bonds of the State issued to the companies that constructed the railroad roads, not taken up at these sales of forfeiture by the State, are the causes of action in the suits against the last named companies, and the defendants in those suits claim the property under the purchases at the foreclosure sales, free of all liens in favor of the State or its bondholders.

The Circuit Courts dismissed the bills in all the suits, and these appeals were taken from the several decrees to that effect.

The question which lies at the foundation of all these suits is, whether the statutory lien with which the State of Tennessee was invested, upon the issue of its bonds to railroad companies [685] under the Internal Improvement Act of February 11, 1852, and the several Acts amendatory thereof, bound the property of the company to which the issue was made for the payment of the bonds so issued, and the interest thereon, to the several holders thereof, or only to the State; for, if to the State alone, it is conceded the lien has been discharged, and is no longer operative. The precise point of the inquiry is, for whose benefit the lien was created? Was it the State, or the bondholders, or both the State and the bondholders?

The lien which was vested in the State was as security for the payment by the company of "all of said bonds issued to the company, as provided in this Act, and for the interest accruing on said bonds." This is the language of the provision for the final lien which was to attach, on the completion of the whole road, to "all the property owned by the company, as incident to, or necessary for, its business." Sec. 4. To whom this payment was to be made is nowhere stated in express terms. In the absence of anything to the contrary, the implication would undoubtedly be that it must be to the holder of the bond, as he was the person to whom the bond, as a bond, was payable; but if, on an examination of the whole statute in the light of surrounding circumstances, and interpreting it with reference to the subject matter of the legislation, it appears that the intention was to secure only a payment to the State of the debt incurred by the company on the loan of the bonds, there is nothing in the language employed to express the legislative will which necessarily extends the operation of the statute beyond what [686] is required to give effect to such an intention. It may be that the Legislature used the phrase "payment of the bonds and the accruing interest thereon" to express the idea of "payment to the State for the bonds," and, if it did, the statutory lien will stand only as security for such a payment.

The liability of the companies to the bondholders, if any there be, rests alone on the statute, which contemplated loans by the State of its own bonds to the several companies in aid of the public works they were respectively engaged in constructing. The bonds were to be "coupon bonds of the State of Tennessee." This implies state bonds with coupons for interest attached, in the ordinary form then in use, whereby the faith of a State of the United States was pledged for their payment. Such must have been the understanding of all parties at the time, for the bonds actually issued were of that kind, and on their face bound only the State. The law made no provision for naming, either in or upon a bond, the particular company in whose favor it was issued. Neither did the bonds themselves, as issued, contain, by indorsement or otherwise, any obligation whatever on the part of the companies. They were state bonds, pure and simple, "issued in pursuance and by authority of an Act of the General Assembly of said State, passed February 11, 1852." They were not even made payable to the companies to which they were respectively issued, but went on the market as coupon bonds of the State of Tennessee, payable to the bearer thereof, and apparently nothing else. In this form they were bought and sold by dealers and investors in public securities. So that the point to be determined, from an examination of the statute, is, whether a State, when lending its own bonds and taking back security for their payment, intended to protect those who might afterwards become the holders of the bonds against the consequences of its own repudiation or inability to pay, or only to indemnify itself against loss by reason of the loan of its credit to those who were engaged in constructing its great works of internal improvement. To say the least, the strong presumption is that, in such a transaction, the purpose [687] of a State would be to protect itself, and not to secure its own pledge of faith to the bondholders by a mortgage from those to whom its credit was loaned.

Such being the subject matter of the legislation, we proceed to inquire what the payment was which the State intended to secure by the statutory lien with which it was to be invested. It was to be a payment. This implies a debt from him who pays to him who is to receive, and that when the payment is complete the debt will be discharged. It is not claimed that a borrowing company was to incur two debts by accepting a loan under the statute, one to the State and the other to those who might become the purchasers or holders of the borrowed bonds. The obligation was to pay the bonds once, not twice, and the payment was to be made at the time and in the way provided by the law. Who, then, became the creditor of the borrowing company when it incurred its debt for the borrowed bonds? Was it the State or the bondholders?

Much stress was laid in the argument on the provision in § 3, "that so soon as the bonds of the State shall be issued * * * they shall constitute a lien," etc.; and it was insisted that, as the bond constitutes the lien, and the lien is but an incident of the debt, the lien must continue and follow the bond in the hands of the holder thereof until it is finally paid and taken up by the company. From this it was argued that the bondholder must be the creditor, within the meaning of the statute, and that a payment would not be complete so as to discharge the debt of the company until it was made to him.

Similar language was used in a statute of South Carolina, passed December 20, 1856, to aid in the construction of the Charleston and Savannah Railroad, under which the State guaranteed, by indorsement, the bonds of the railroad company, and it was provided "that so soon as any such bonds shall have been indorsed as aforesaid * * * they shall constitute a lien," etc. This, it was held by the Supreme Court of that State in Hand v. R. R. Co., 12 S. C., 314, vested in the State a lien, not merely for its own protection against the guaranty, but also for the [688] better security of the bonds themselves into whosesoever hands they might fall. But, as this court had occasion to say in R. R. Cos. v. Schutte, 103 U. S., 140 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 335], "Contracts created by, or entered into under, the authority of statutes, are to be interpreted according to the language used in each particular case to ex press the obligation assumed. * * * Every sta ute, like every contract, must be read by itsel and it no more follows that one statutory co tract is like another, than that one ordinary co tract means what another does. * * * It must b determined from the language used in each pa ticular case, what has been done, or agreed t be done, in that case." Under the South Car lina Statute the primary liability for the pa ment of the bonds to the respective holde thereof rested on the company, and the Sta was bound only as surety. This was shown c the face of the bonds themselves, and the la guage of the statute was, therefore, to be co strued with that as the subject matter of t legislation, that is to say, a guaranty by t State of the obligations of the railroad compan Here the State is the primary obligor, and t legislation is with reference to a loan of sta bonds, on which the railroad companies are no way to appear as bound. The liability the companies grows out of the borrowing state bonds, to be sold in the market as sta bonds, and apparently nothing but state bon The loans were to be by the State to the co panies, and the object was to secure the pa ment of the loans. It may well be that t same language, when applied to one class of curity means one thing, and when applied another class something else. The questi now is, what does it mean in this case?

The fact which establishes the lien is the iss of bonds by the State to a company; that is say, the delivery of bonds by the State to a co pany under the contract of loan. The lien taches as soon as the delivery is complete, a when there is no obligation on the part of company to the holders for the payment of bonds, because the company is itself the hold and there can be no obligation of payment itself to itself. But the delivery of the bo by the State to, and their acceptance by, a co pany, created at once an obligation on the p of the company to pay the loan, or, what is same thing, pay the bonds to the State. T it was the purpose of the statute to secure performance of this obligation on the par the company is shown by the fact, that, fr the moment of the delivery of the first bon the company, and before the bond could negotiated by a sale or transfer to a third p son, a lien was vested in the State by the v act of delivery, upon all the property of the c pany then acquired, or thereafter to be acqui superior to any other lien or incumbrance wh could be created by the company afterwa This is the express provision of the last p graph in § 4; and while it is said once in entire Act that the bonds shall constitute lien, it is repeated again and again that, u the issue of the bonds, the State shall be vested with a lien, etc. The only place whe is stated that the bonds shall constitute a is that in which provision is made for the i on the completion of the first section of th miles, and, before the sentence in which expression appears is completed, it is decl that the lien is to vest "upon the issuan the bonds, and by virtue of the same." when the whole road is completed, and the is established on all the property owned by company as incident to, and necessary fo [illegible] of the bonds issued to it under the provi[illegible] of this Act, they shall be a credit as afore[illegible] and cancelled. And should said company [illegible] to comply with the provisions of this sec[illegible] shall be proceeded against, as provided [illegible] in the fifth section of this Act.

[illegible] Be it enacted, That the provisions [illegible] Act shall extend to and embrace the Chat[illegible] Harrison, Georgetown and Charles[illegible] Railroad Company, the Nashville and [illegible] Railroad Company, the Louis[illegible] and Nashville Railroad Company, the [illegible] Railroad Company, the McMinn[illegible] and Manchester Railroad Company, the [illegible] and Charleston Railroad Company, [illegible] and Southern Railroad Company, [illegible] and Ohio Railroad Company, the [illegible] and Memphis Railroad Company, the [illegible] and Cincinnati Railroad Company, [illegible] East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Com[illegible] the Memphis, Clarksville and Louisville [illegible] Company, and the Winchester and [illegible] Railroad Company, so far as the main [illegible] to be constructed by said companies [illegible] the limits of this State, and not other[illegible] said companies shall have all the [illegible] and privileges and be subject to all the [illegible] and liabilities contained in this Act.

[illegible] Be it enacted, That the State of Ten[illegible] expressly reserves the right to enact by [illegible] thereof, hereafter, all such laws [illegible] deemed necessary to protect the in[illegible] of the State, and to secure the State [illegible] any loss in consequence of the issuance [illegible] under the provisions of this Act; but [illegible] manner as not to impair the vested [illegible] of the stockholders of the companies.

[illegible] Be it enacted, That it shall be the [illegible] of the Governor, from time to time, when [illegible] shall be reliable information given to him [illegible] any railroad company shall have fraudu[illegible] obtained the issuance of bonds of the [illegible] shall have obtained any of said bonds [illegible] the provisions of this Act, he shall [illegible] the Attorney-General of this State, whose [illegible] shall be forthwith to institute, in the [illegible] of the State, a suit in the Circuit or [illegible] Court of the county of the place of [illegible] of the company, setting forth the facts. [illegible] that the fact shall satisfactorily appear [illegible] that any of said bonds shall have [illegible] fraudulently obtained, or obtained con[illegible] to the true intent, meaning and provisions [illegible] Act, then, and in such case, the court [illegible] order, adjudge and decree, that said road [illegible] the State, with all the property and [illegible] of said company, or a sufficiency thereof, [illegible] be sold, and the proceeds shall be paid [illegible] the treasury, and it shall be the duty of [illegible] immediately to vest the same in [illegible] creating a sinking fund, as provided [illegible] the seventh section of this Act. And [illegible] company shall forfeit all rights and privi[illegible] under the provisions of this Act, and the [illegible] thereof shall be individually liable [illegible] the payment of the bonds so fraudulently [illegible] by such company, and for all other [illegible] that may fall upon the State in conse[illegible] of the commission of any other fraud [illegible] such company, excepting such stockholders [illegible] to the said court that they were ignorant of or opposed to the perpetration of such frauds by the company.

Sec. 14. Be it enacted, That in the event any of the roads, fixtures or property belonging to any of said roads shall be sold under the provisions of this Act, it shall be the duty of the governor to appoint an agent for the State, who shall attend said sale and protect the interests of the State, and shall, if necessary to protect said interest, buy in said road or property, in the name of the State; and in case said agent shall purchase said road for the State, the Governor shall appoint a receiver, who shall take possession of said road and property, and use the same as provided for in the fifth section [672] of this Act, and said receiver shall settle with the comptroller semi-annually until the next meeting of the General Assembly."

On the 21st of February, 1852, an Act was passed providing for the identification of the bonds to be issued to the several companies under the Act of February 11, the material parts of which are secs. 7, 8 and 9, as follows:

"Sec. 7. Be it further enacted, That the different internal improvement companies, to whom the bonds of the State may be lent under the different Acts of the present Legislature, shall pay the expenses of engraving and preparing the same.

Sec. 8. Be it enacted, That the Governor of the State shall cause to be engraved and printed the bonds which may be issued under the Acts of the present General Assembly, as a loan made to internal improvement companies, and the said bonds shall bear date on the first day of January prior to their issuance, and the coupons thereto shall be payable on the first days of January and July of each year.

Sec. 9. Be it enacted, That the coupons shall be signed and numbered by the comptroller, and the bonds shall be countersigned, sealed and numbered by the Secretary of State, and upon delivering said bonds to the company authorized to receive the same, the Secretary of State shall take a receipt, reciting the number, date, and amount of said bonds, in a well bound book to be deposited in his office, and the comptroller and Secretary of State shall each be entitled to receive twenty-five cents for each bond so prepared, to be paid by the party receiving the said bond."

By sections 5 and 6 of an Act of February 21, 1856, the sinking fund provisions of the Act of 1852 were changed as follows:

"Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the several railroad companies in this State, who have received, or may hereafter receive, bonds of the State, or the indorsement of their bonds by the State to aid in the construction of their several roads, under the provisions of the Act of 1851-1852, and the Acts amendatory thereto, at the expiration of five years from the issuance or indorsement of their [673] said several bonds, annually to set apart and pay over to the treasurer of the State two per cent per annum upon all bonds which have been or may hereafter be issued or indorsed as aforesaid, as a sinking fund for the ultimate redemption of the bonds issued or indorsed as aforesaid; which sinking fund, when paid over, the Governor, comptroller of the treasury, and president of the Bank of Tennessee shall invest was accepted and kept as and for state funds. Neither the bank nor the State was bound, either to the companies or to the bondholders, to use the deposits made by a particular company to pay the interest on bonds issued to that company. The bank is nowhere made by the law the agent of the company. It was to take, keep, and pay out according to law, for the State, all moneys deposited or set apart for the liquidation of accruing interest. If the deposits made by the various companies were not enough for that purpose, it was the duty of the comptroller to draw from the treasury, on his own official warrant, a sufficient amount to make up the deficiency. No special provision was made in the statute as to the way in which coupon holders were to be paid. That was all left to be determined by such regulations as might from time to time be adopted for the government of state officers and state agencies in the payment of state debts. The money, when deposited, became at once the money of the State, and was in no way thereafter subject to the control of the depositor. When used to pay [693] maturing interest, it was paid by, and on behalf of, the State, through its own agencies, to redeem its own pledges of faith to the holders of its own obligations. The company performed its whole duty to the State when it deposited in bank, subject to the control of the State, a sufficient amount of money to meet the interest which was to accrue on the ttate obligations fifteen days thereafter, and the expenses incident to such payment. It is true an option was given the company to pay the interest instead of making the deposit, but this was clearly intended for the convenience of the company, and not because of any obligation the company was supposed to be under to the bondholders. Payment, therefore, by a company, into the bank, of a sufficient amount of money to enable the State to meet its accruing interest, was, and was intended by the Legislature to be, not only a payment of the interest on the bonds by the company, but the payment, and the only payment, of interest the lien created by the statute was to secure. To hold otherwise would be to decide that the Legislature, while providing for a loan of the bonds of the State to corporations engaged in works of internal improvement, required the corporations to secure by liens on their own property, not only the payment to the State of the interest on the loan, but also the redemption by the State of its own pledges of faith to the future holders of the state bonds that were lent. Certainly no such construction will be given to the statute unless it is imperatively demanded; and when provision is made in express terms for a payment to the State, no second payment of the same debt will be presumed to have been in the contemplation of the parties, in the absence of some positive requirement to the contrary. The lien must be held to be for the security of the payment which is expressly provided for and no other.

But the correctness of this view of the statute is made still more apparent by another important provision of the same section 5, to the effect that if a company failed to deposit the interest at the time required, or furnish the necessary evidence that payment of the interest had been made or otherwise provided for, the Governor should appoint a receiver to take possession, and run and manage the railroad of the company until a sufficient sum was realized from the earnings to discharge such "unpaid interest." The failure of a company to make its deposit did not relieve the State from the obligation to keep its faith and pay the interest to its bondholders at maturity. Consequently, the "unpaid interest" here referred to must have been the interest for which a deposit had not been made, and this clearly implies that the deposit was the payment which the lien was intended to secure. Interest on the lent bonds deposited for was paid, within the meaning of the statute, and that not deposited for was unpaid. A receiver was to be appointed, and possession taken, only when there was default on the part of the company in making its deposit. Nonpayment of interest by the State, after the deposit, created no such default. As the statutory remedy for the enforcement of the statutory lien must be presumed to have been intended to be commensurate with the lien itself, and this remedy was confined to cases of default in making deposits, there cannot be a doubt that it was the understanding of the Legislature that a deposit for interest was a payment of interest on the bonds, so far as the company was concerned, and released the company as well as its property from all further liability to the State, or to any one else, which had been assumed for interest. The pledge of state faith for the performance of all state obligations under the Act constituted the only security of the bondholders for the prompt payment of the interest due to them. The lien on the property of the companies stood only as security for the payment of the interest on the bonds to the State.

2. As to the principal. This is provided for in three ways: 1, by the establishment of a sinking fund; 2, by foreclosure if the company failed to pay the bonds at maturity; and 3, by foreclosure and proceedings against guilty stockholders, before maturity, if an issue of bonds was obtained by fraud, or contrary to the provision of the Act.

The sinking fund was first established by section 7 of the original Act, which required each company, at the end of five years after the completion of its road, to set apart annually one per centum of the amount of bonds issued to such company, and use it in the purchase of bonds of the State of Tennessee, which bonds the company was to pay into the treasury of the State, taking a receipt therefor, and, as between the State and the company, the bonds so paid in were to be a credit on the bonds issued. The bonds paid in, and the accruing interest thereon, were to be held and used by the State as a sinking fund for the payment of the bonds issued to the company. If in this way a company repurchased and paid in any of the bonds issued to it, they were to be canceled. Should a company fail to comply with these provisions it was to be proceeded against, as in section 5, for a failure to pay, or deposit for, interest. This provision was changed by the Act of 18[illegible] so as to increase the annual payments to two per cent on the amount of the issue of bonds and to require them to be made in money, and to begin at the end of five years after the date of the several issues. The money, when pa in the treasury, was to be invested by a board of sinking fund commissioners in bonds of the State, and all accruing interest was to be reinvested in like securities. If a company failed to comply with these provisions of the amending Act, it was to be proceeded against as for a default in the payment of the bonds at maturity under section 6 of the Act of 1852. Under the statutes of 1852 and 1856 the companies were not released from their obligations to provide semi-annually for the payment of the accruing interest on the entire issue of bonds. That was still to be kept up, notwithstanding the debt of the company to the State had been reduced by the annual payments required by section 7.

By the Act of 1860 other changes were made, which increased the amount of annual payments to two and one half per cent, on the original issues, and allowed them to be made in money or in bonds of a like character with those issued to the company, at their face value. If paid in money, the sinking fund commissioners were to invest it immediately in bonds of a like character with those issued to the company, and have them canceled. By this Act the company was released from the obligation under the Act of 1852 to provide for the interest on the whole issue of bonds, and required to deposit only for that which would accrue on the amount of bonds "unpaid" at the time the interest fell due. What was here meant by the word "unpaid" is shown by sections 1, 2 and 9 of the Act, which provide that all sinking fund payments, in money or bonds, made before January 1, 1860, with the accruing interest thereon to that date, "shall be credited directly to the credit of the party having made the same, and be a release to said party of the amount of the debt due by them to the State of Tennessee." The Comptroller of the State was also required to open and keep a separate account with each company, charging it with the total amount of bonds originally issued to such company, and crediting it with the amount of the sinking fund paid. It was also made his duty to furnish to the Treasurer of State a statement of the amount due by each company on the first days of June and December in every year, "that he may know how much interest each company has to pay," that is to say, "as now provided by law, on the amount of bonds unpaid at the time said interest falls due, and not on the original amount issued to * * * said company." Act of 1860, § 9.

While it is true that neither the Act of 1856 nor that of 1860 can change any contracts the companies may have made with bondholders under the Act of 1852 before their passage, they may be resorted to in aid of construction to show what had been the legislative understanding for a long series of years, of the meaning of the words "payment of said bonds and the accruing interest thereon," as used in the original Act.

The provision of section 7 is that the company shall pay the bonds purchased into the State treasury, and that for the purchased bonds a receipt shall be given and a credit allowed, as between the State and the company, of the bonds issued. Thus the company was required to make a payment to the State, and for the payment the State was to give a credit on the bonds. This clearly implies that the loan of the bonds was to create a debt on the bonds by the company to the State, and that this debt was to be discharged pro tanto on the payment annually into the state treasury of the amount required by the sinking fund section. If there were nothing else in the statute, no one would doubt that the payment of the bonds which the company was required to make was a payment to the State for the bonds at the [697] times and in the manner provided.

It is contended, however, that, as the credit to be secured by these payments was only "as between the State and said company," the liability of the company to the bondholders is not affected by what may be done by and with the State. This would be true if there were any such liability to the bondholders, but the very point to which our inquiries are now directed is as to whether or not that liability exists. The phrase relied on and quoted above is undoubtedly suggestive of some other liability of the company on the bonds than one to the State, but it does not of itself create such a liability. If it exists at all, it must be by virtue of some other provision of the statute. As has already been seen, there is but one debt, and whatever pays that debt cancels all the obligations of the company upon the bonds. Whenever, therefore, it appears that payment of the bonds must be made to one, the idea of a debt on the bonds to another is excluded. Here a payment to the State is absolutely required. This obligation to pay is express, and has not been left to implication. The provision is that the sinking fund bonds must be bought and paid in at the appointed times and to the prescribed amount. If this is not done, the payment is to be enforced by putting the railroad of the company into the hands of a receiver, and running and managing it until the requisite amount of money is realized by the State from the earnings. Under the Act of 1856 the payments were required to be made in money, and in case of default proceedings for foreclosure and sale were to be instituted to collect the amount to be paid, as in cases of nonpayment of bonds at maturity. If the statutes of 1852 and 1856 stood alone, it would be clear to our minds that payments into the sinking fund were to be treated as a release pro tanto of all the liability of the company on, or on account of, the bonds. But the Act of 1860 shows, beyond all question, that such was the legislative understanding at that time of the operation of this provision of the original Act. It is there declared, in positive language, that by the loan of the bonds a debt [698] was incurred by the company to the State, and that payments to the sinking fund should release and discharge the companies pro tanto from their liability on that debt.

It is argued, however, that as these payments under all the statutes were to be held and used by the State as a sinking fund for the ultimate redemption of the issued bonds themselves from the several holders thereof, the obligation of the company to pay the bonds would not be discharged in that way; and some remarks of this court in the Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S., 725 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 503], are cited as authority to that effect. The decision in that case was that the contributions to the sinking fund then under consideration did not pay the debts of the several companies by which the contributions were made, because that fund was established, not to secure the payment of the bonds of the United States which had been lent to the companies, but the repayment to the United States, in the manner and at the time required by law, of "the amount of said bonds so issued and delivered to said company, together with the interest thereon which shall have been paid by the United States." But here the sinking fund is to be held and used by the State, not to discharge the debt of the company to the State, but that of the State to its bondholders. It was established, not to secure the State, but to enable the State to pay its own debts at maturity. In this way all payments made by the companies to the State on account of the principal of the bonds were set apart and laid by under investment, so that at the appointed time they might be used by the State to redeem its own obligations. The fund in the treasury belonged to the State, and was not in any manner subject to the control of the company, or to be used to pay its debt. That debt was discharged by the payments which under the law were put into the fund. All payments out of the sinking fund were to be made by the State on its own debts and not on the debt of the company. A sinking fund may be, and generally is, intended as a cumulative security for the payment of the debt with which it is connected. In this case the debt to which it belongs is that of the State, and not that of the company, which was paid so as to furnish the State with the means to create such a fund.

Reference was made in the argument to the way in which, under the Act of 1852, and perhaps that of 1856, the sinking fund was to be kept and invested, and it was urged that the [699] fund must have been intended as security for the payment of the bonds to the bondholders by the company, because if a bond issued to a particular company was brought by that company and paid into the fund, it was canceled, while all other bonds were kept alive to be held and used by the State to take up at maturity the bonds issued to the company which had not been so paid in. The argument seems to be, that, as the purchase of a bond issued to a particular company, and its payment into the fund by that company, would of itself be a payment of that bond by the company both to the State and the holder, the special provision for the cancellation of such a bond, while others are to be kept alive, is indicative of a purpose not to cancel the obligation of the company under the statute until the company had not only provided the State with the means to take up all the other outstanding bonds, but until the State had itself performed its own obligations and actually taken them up. This is undoubtedly a circumstance to be considered in determining what the payment was which the State intended the company should make, and for the security of which the lien was created; but it is not to our minds enough to overcome the many provisions found in the other parts of the statute, which so clearly show that there was to be but one creditor of the company on account of the contemplated loans of the bonds, and that creditor the State. Whatever, therefore, satisfies that creditor, under the law, satisfies the debt. We cannot accede to the proposition, so muc relied on by the counsel for the bondholder that on putting out the bonds the company o cupied towards the bondholder the relation c principal debtor, and the State that of suret only, until the company made the prescribe payments to the State, and that after these pa ments were made the relations of the partie changed, so that thereafter the State was pri cipal and the company a surety only. The del of the company, whatever it was, continue the same in its relation to all the parties fro the time it was created until it was paid. The is nothing in the statute which contemplat any change in the obligations of the parties t wards each other There may have been r good reason for keeping some of the state s curities paid into the fund alive, and directi that others should be canceled, inasmuch as s were to represent State debts, for which t State was equally bound; but that was the wi of the Legislature, and it was consequently enacted. Afterwards this policy was change and all State bonds, of whatever character, we canceled by mutilation as soon as they we paid in, or bought for the sinking fund. A of 1860. In this way all danger of a misappr priation of securities in the sinking fund w avoided. As bonds issued to railroad co panies under the Act could alone be used f the investment of the fund under this Act, the cancellation did not affect the liability of t several companies thereon to the State, becau that was to continue until payment was ma to the State by the company to which it w issued. Payment by the State to the bon holder did not discharge the liability of t company on the bond so paid.

The provision for a foreclosure in case of t failure of the company to pay at maturity t bonds issued to it is found in section 6, whi makes it the duty of the Governor, when suc default occurs, to notify the Attorney-Gener who must thereupon file a bill against the co pany in the name of the State of Tennessee the Chancery or Circuit Court of the pro county. Upon the filing of this bill, the co is authorized to make such judicial orders, cluding the appointment of a receiver, an sale of the road and all the property of t company, as may be necessary and proper secure the payment of the bonds, with the terest thereon, and to indemnify the St against loss by their issue. We see no spec significance, so far as the present question concerned, in the direction to the Attorn General to file the bill in the name of the Sta Without such a direction there might be do whether the suit to be instituted should be the name of the Attorney-General or of the St It was probably unimportant whether the form or the other was adopted, for, in event, the object would be to enforce the ligation of the company and collect the mo which was due. The Legislature, howe saw fit to avoid all doubt on this subject, to direct that the proceeding should be in name of the State. Taken by itself, theref this section adds little, if anything, to the o evidence in the statute as to who the cred was for whose benefit the money was to be lected. The proceeds of the foreclosure [illegible] to pay the bonds, within the meaning of the statute, and also to indemnify the State against loss. To whom the payment was to be made must be determined by looking elsewhere. There is nothing to show that the author of the statute had the security of the bondholder in his mind when drafting this section [illegible] than when drafting the others. Payment of the bonds meant in this section what it did in the others; no more, no less. It is true that here payment of the bonds and indemnity to the State are both spoken of, but payment of the bonds through a proceeding for foreclosure might not be enough to indemnify the State against all loss incident to the loan of the bonds. There might be expenses incurred in the foreclosure which would not be reimbursed by a simple payment of the amount of the bonds. Indemnity of this and a like character was evidently the purpose of this particular provision in the section. It was, in the language of counsel for the bondholders, to secure the State against "a money loss * * * in the way of counsel charges, or receiver's charges, or betterment expenses, or debts not included in the words 'to secure the payment of said bonds.'"

Proceedings for foreclosure before the maturity of the bonds, and the liability of guilty stockholders in case of issues of bonds obtained by fraud, or contrary to the provisions of the Act, are provided for in section 13. This section makes it the duty of the Governor, as soon as he receives reliable information of such fraud or irregularity, to notify the Attorney-General, who must at once institute a suit in the Circuit or Chancery Court of the proper county. In such a suit the court is given authority to order a sale of the road, and the property and assets of the company, or so much thereof as may be necessary. When such a sale is made, the proceeds are to be paid into the treasury and invested by the comptroller in "the same manner, creating a sinking fund, as provided in the seventh section." The guilty company is also made to forfeit all its rights and privileges under the Act, and its guilty stockholders are made individually liable "for the payment of the bonds so fraudulently obtained by such company, and for all other losses that may fall upon the State in consequence of the commission of any other fraud by such company." This is manifestly for the benefit of the State alone. The bondholder can have no direct interest in such a proceeding. His rights are in no way affected by the fraud of the company in obtaining the bond he owns. The State is his debtor, and he has no right to call for the money owing to him until the maturity of the bond, which will not be until thirty or forty years after the commission of the fraud which gave the State the right to call at once on the company and its implicated stockholders for the payment of the bond he holds. It will hardly be contended that it was intended to make the stockholder individually liable to the bondholder, yet his liability is for "the payment of the bonds" just as is that of the company. If in one case payment of the bonds does not mean payment to the bondholder, it does not in the other case. The language of the Act is the same in both cases, and there is nothing [illegible] to show that as to one it meant one thing, and as to the other something else. The evident purpose of this section was to give the State the power, immediately on the discovery of a fraud, to demand of the company "payment of the bonds," that is, payment of an amount of money equal to that called for by the bonds, and a remedy at once against the company and its implicated stockholders for the enforcement of such a payment in case it was not voluntarily made. The money when collected was to be set apart and invested "as a sinking fund for the payment of the bonds" by the State.

By section 14 it was made the duty of the Governor to appoint an agent for the State, to attend all sales, made either under section 6 or section 13, to protect the interest of the State, and, if necessary for that purpose, to buy the road or property in the name of the State. If bought, it was to be put in the hands of a receiver to manage and run in the way provided in section 5, until the next meeting of the General Assembly. The receiver was to settle his accounts with the comptroller semi-annually, but no directions were given in relation to the manner in which the net earnings were to be used in case of a sale under section 6. He was to take possession of "the said road and property and use the same as provided for in the fifth section," and, on the settlement of his accounts with the comptroller, the balances remaining in his hands would necessarily go into the treasury, there to be dealt with as the General Assembly should direct. If a purchase was made by the State under section 13, the presumption would be that the earnings must go into the sinking fund, as such was the provision made for the proceeds of a sale to another purchaser, but all that would necessarily be under the control of the General Assembly when it met. [703]

Having thus gone over the other sections, we are prepared to consider section 12, in its bearing on the question which is now under discussion. This section reserves to the State in express terms the right to enact "all such laws as may be deemed necessary to protect the interest of the State, and to secure the State against all loss in consequence of the issuance of bonds under the provisions of this Act, but in such manner as not to impair the vested rights of the stockholders of the companies." This reservation includes, and was undoubtedly intended to include, full power in the State, as against every one except stockholders, to do whatever might be deemed necessary by the Legislature, with the lien reserved for the security of the obligations assumed by the companies. Nothing is said about bondholders. It will, of course, be conceded that if bondholders actually had any vested right or interest as against the State in the security created by the statute, nothing could be done under this section by the State to impair that right. But the same was probably true of stockholders, and the special care taken to preserve the rights of stockholders, without referring to bondholders at all, raises a strong presumption that it was never intended to vest in them any right which would interfere in the remotest degree with the free exercise of all the power of the State to deal with the borrowing companies in reference to the bonds and the security created therefor, [704] just as might, under any circumstances that should arise, be deemed most for the interest of the State and the companies, they being the only parties to the contract of the companies that were to be at all interested in what was to be done. As has been seen, the bonds to be issued were on their face to bind only the State. At that time repudiation of state faith was not thought of. No purchaser of state bonds ever asked whether anything else than the faith of a State was pledged for their payment promptly at maturity. Repudiation was looked upon as dishonorable, and something that would never occur. Security to the State against loss by the loans of its bonds which were provided for must, therefore, be presumed to have been the sole purpose of the liens which were to be created on the issue of the bonds. Bondholders were never thought of in this connection, for they had the security of the faith of the State and could not have been supposed to look for anything else. Hence this reservation of power by the State was made broad enough to allow the State to deal with the securities which were taken from the companies at its own discretion, and in any way that might be deemed just. No such power could be exercised if the bondholders held an interest in the securities adverse to the State. Under these circumstances this section is to be looked upon as excluding any such possible intent, and operating as a standing notice to all who might, from time to time, become the holders of any of the lent bonds, that the payment of the bonds, and the interest thereon, which the several companies bound themselves for, was to be made to the State, and not to them, and that the security which was taken by the State was for the performance of this obligation, and might be dealt with by the State in any manner its own Legislature should direct or provide. This reservation of power is entirely inconsistent with the idea of a debt from the company to the bondholders on account of the bonds; and, if there could have been any doubt on this subject without section 12, there certainly is none with it.

This disposes of all the cases; for the State, in the exercise of its legislative discretion, has released each of the companies whose property [705] is involved in these suits from all its obligations growing out of the original loans, and has canceled the liens created for their security. The companies have either voluntarily paid their debts to the satisfaction of the State, or the State has foreclosed the lien which was reserved, and sold the property, free of that incumbrance, either to the present defendants, or to those under whom they claim.

Some reliance was placed, in the argument for the bondholders, upon the legislative history of the passage of the Act of 1852, which showed an offer and rejection of certain proposed amendments, and also upon the construction which had been put on the Act by certain state officers of high authority in the administration of the public affairs, but we have deemed it unnecessary to add to the length of this opinion by particular reference to that branch of the argument, because, as we think, the statute contains within itself unmistakable evidence of its meaning. The same is true of the reference which has been made to other statutes of Tennessee, and to statutes of the States and of the United States upon the sam general subject. This statute differs in it phraseology from some, and perhaps all, o the others, but its own language furnishes a the aid which is required for its true interpre tation.

The decree in each of these cases is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

I am of opinion that, while the object of th statutes in question was to protect the Stat against liability, they were also designed t create a lien for the payment of the bonds then selves, by whomsoever held. That lien, so fa as the holders of bonds were concerned, coul not be discharged, except by payment of th interest and principal, according to the term of the bonds, and in the mode prescribed b the statute under which they were issued. Fo these reasons, I am compelled to withhold m assent to the opinion and judgment.

Mr. Justice Matthews and Mr. Justi Blatchford took no part in these decision

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court U.

FRANCIS DODGE ET AL., Appts.,
v.
THOMAS KNOWLES.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 436–439.)

Practice—appeal bond; when taken—citation jurisdiction.

1. Where, upon the face of the record, the val of the property involved is sufficient to give t court jurisdiction, and the appellee declines to a pear in this court, it is too late to present extrin evidence of the actual value of the property upo motion to set aside the judgment.
2. The giving of an appeal bond is not essential the taking of an appeal, though it is essential to prosecution.
3. The judicial allowance of an appeal in op court at the term in which the decree has been re dered, is sufficient notice of the taking of an a peal.
4. The citation is for the purpose of notice. Wh omitted, a motion to dismiss will not be grant until an opportunity to give the notice has be given.
5. An order of this court, served upon the app lee, to appear and argue the cause if he sees fit, itself the legal equivalent of a citation.

[No. 156.]

Motion to set aside filed Apr. 20, 1885. Su mitted Apr. 24, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of t District of Columbia.

On motion to set aside the judgment ente April 13, 1885, and to dismiss the appeal.

The history and facts of the case appear the opinion of the court, and in the opinion the merits, ante, 144.

Mr. Charles M. Matthews, for appell in support of motion.

Mr. J. Holdsworth Gordon, for app lants, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the op ion of the court;

The facts on which this motion rests these:

The final decree in the cause was rende February 23, 1881. At the foot of the decr

[illegible] part of the original entry, is the follow-[illegible]

"From this decree the defendants pray an [illegible] to the Supreme Court of the United [illegible], which appeal is hereby allowed.

[illegible] order of the court: D. K. Cartter, Ch'f Just."

[illegible] upon the appeal was not taken until [illegible] 5, 1881, which was after the term [illegible] the decree was rendered. No citation [illegible] served on the appellee, but the appeal was [illegible] docketed in this court November 11, 1881. [illegible] was filed in its regular order for the [illegible] January 9, 1885, and on that day sub-[illegible] printed brief by the counsel for the [illegible], no one appearing for the appellee. [illegible] of January, the court, of its own [illegible], ordered "that this cause be reargued, [illegible] or on printed briefs, to be filed on [illegible] the first Monday in March next." [illegible] purpose of this order was to allow the ap-[illegible] opportunity to be heard. A copy was [illegible] on him personally on or about January [illegible] he wrote the clerk, under date of Feb-[illegible], as follows:

"[illegible] been advised by counsel that no ap-[illegible] has ever been perfected to the Supreme [illegible] of the U. S. in the case of which you [illegible] I would inform you that I respectfully de-[illegible] to authorize an appearance to be entered [illegible] court for me in that case for any purpose [illegible]."

[illegible] March 2, the appellants again submitted [illegible] on a printed brief, no one appearing [illegible] appellee. The case was taken under [illegible] and held until April 13, when the [illegible] of the court below was reversed, and an [illegible] made to that effect. On the of 20th April, [illegible] appellee came, and entering an appearance [illegible] for the purposes of his motion, moved to [illegible] and annul the judgment of reversal, [illegible] to dismiss the appeal (1) because no cita-[illegible] had been issued or served, and (2) because [illegible] of the matter in dispute did not ex-[illegible].

[illegible] the last ground of the motion, it is suf-[illegible] to say that the decree appealed from was [illegible] than $2,500, and it charged the prop-[illegible] of the appellants with the full amount. [illegible] the face of the record, therefore, our ju-[illegible] is complete. Such being the case, we [illegible] willing to consider extrinsic evidence at [illegible] day for the purpose of ascertaining [illegible] the actual value of the property from [illegible] the collection must be made is sufficient [illegible] the whole debt or not.

[illegible] allowance of the appeal by the court [illegible] a session and acting judicially at the [illegible] which the decree was rendered, consti-[illegible] a valid appeal, of which the appellee was [illegible] to law to take notice. The docketing [illegible] in time, perfected the jurisdiction of this court. The giving of the bond was not essential to the taking, though it was to the due prosecution, of the appeal. It was furnished and accepted in this case before the cause was docketed here. Had this not been done we would have given the appellants leave to supply the omission before dismissing the appeal. All this was decided, on full consideration, in Peugh v. Davis, 110 U.S., 227 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 127].

It has also been decided that if an appeal was allowed in open court during the term in which the decree was rendered a citation was required, as matter of procedure, if the security was not furnished until after the term; but in R. R. Co. v. Blair, 100 U. S., 662 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 587], it was said: "Still, an appeal, otherwise regular, would not probably be dismissed absolutely for want of a citation, if it appeared, by clear and unmistakable evidence, outside of the record, that the allowance was made in open court at the proper term, and that the appellee had actual notice of what had been done."

The citation is intended as notice to the appellee that an appeal has been taken and will be duly prosecuted. No special form is prescribed. The purpose is notice, so that the appellee may appear and be heard. The judicial allowance of an appeal in open court at the term in which the decree has been rendered is sufficient notice of the taking of an appeal. Security is only for the due prosecution of the appeal. The citation, if security is taken out of court, or after the term, is only necessary to show that the appeal which was allowed in term has not been abandoned by the failure to furnish the security before the adjournment. It is not jurisdictional. Its only purpose is notice. If by accident it has been omitted, a motion to dismiss an appeal allowed in open court, and at the proper term, will never be granted until an opportunity to give the requisite notice has been furnished, and this, whether the motion was made after the expiration of two years from the rendition of the decree or before. Here, before the cause came on for final hearing notice was given the appellee, by order of the court, that the appeal taken in open court was being prosecuted, and that a reargument at an appointed time was desired. In response to this notice, the appellee declined to appear, not because he had not been served with a citation, but because no appeal had been perfected. Had he complained of a want of citation, the omission might have been supplied if, on consideration, it should have been deemed necessary. But the order which was served on him to appear and argue the cause if he saw fit, was of itself the legal equivalent of a citation for all the purposes of this appeal.

[439]

The motions are denied.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.S.

END OF VOL. 114.

NOTE.

The Extra Annotation here following is arranged in the order of the cases in the [illegible] reporter's volume which precede it. At the upper outside corner of the page is [illegible] the volume and pages of the cases to which the Annotation refers. After the official [illegible] volume and page in the heading of each case is given book and page of the [illegible] edition, the abbreviation L being used for Lawyers Edition, or Law. Ed. for brev- [illegible] is throughout in the duplicate citations of cases from the Supreme Court.

ABBREVIATIONS.

F. C. appended to a citation from the regular reports of the U. S. Circuit and Dis- [illegible] refers to the series of reprints called the Federal Cases and gives, as its [illegible] do and recommend, the number of the case in that series.

Fed. Cas. is used when the case is contained in the series of Federal Cases but is [illegible] in the regular series of U. S. Circuit and District Court Reports, and the [illegible] of such cases is to the volume and page of Fed. Cas., not to the number of [illegible]

Fed. or Fed. Rep. refers to the well known series Federal Reporter, containing re- [illegible] Circuit and District Court decisions since 1880.

L. R. A. will be readily recognized as the abbreviation for the Lawyers Reports [illegible] and particular attention should be given to these citations, as in a large [illegible] of cases the citing case will be found accompanied by a note on its principal [illegible] exhaustive of the authorities thereon.

Am. Dec., Am. Rep. and Am. St. Rep. will be readily recognized as the abbreviations for the well known trinity of selected case reports, The American Decisions, [illegible] Reports and American State Reports.

Pennsylvania State Reports (Pa. St.) The New Jersey Law Reports (N. J. L.) and [illegible] Reports (N. J. Eq.) are distinguished by the number of the series, not by the [illegible] the reporter, while the North and South Carolina Reports, Law and Equity, are [illegible] the name of the reporter where the reports are so titled and it has been the [illegible] custom.

[illegible] citations are given to the National Reporter System where cases are therein [illegible] and to the Reporter System alone of cases not, at the date of the preparation [illegible] officially reported. The usual abbreviations are used, as follows:

At. Atlantic Reporter,	So. Southern Reporter,
Pac. Pacific Reporter,	S. E. Southeastern Reporter,
N. E. Northeastern Reporter,	S. W. Southwestern Reporter,
N. W. Northwestern Reporter,	S. Ct. Supreme Court Reporter.

It is [illegible] that in all other respects the abbreviations used are clear and familiar to [illegible] are accustomed to the use of legal reports and text-books.

EDITOR.

CXIV UNITED STATES.

---

114 U. S. 1–14, 29 L. 76. THOMPSON v. BOISSELIER.

Patent.— Carr improvement in water-closets, held not patentable invention, pp. 1–13.

Patents.— It is not enough that a thing be new in shape or form, but it must amount to an invention or discovery, p. 11.

Approved in Gardner v. Herz, 118 U. S. 191, 30 L. 163, 6 S. Ct. 1033, and Vulcanized Fiber Co. v. Taylor, 49 Fed. 745, both holding improved chair seats not patentable; Pomace-Holder Co. v. Ferguson, 119 U. S. 338, 30 L. 408, 7 S. Ct. 384, patent for improvement in cheese formers for cider presses, held void; Thatcher Heating Co. v. Burtis, 121 U. S. 295, 30 L. 946, 7 S. Ct. 1039, patent of fireplace heater void for want of novelty; Hendy v. Miners' Iron Works, 127 U. S. 375, 32 L. 209, 8 S. Ct. 1278, holding mere putting of rollers under article, to make it movable, not patentable; Watson v. Cincinnati Ry., 132 U. S. 167, 33 L. 298, 10 S. Ct. 47, holding new combination of rigid and flexible grain doors, did not involve invention; Hill v. Wooster, 132 U. S. 701, 33 L. 506, 10 S. Ct. 231, refusing patent for "cabinet creamery;" Howe Mach. Co. v. National Co., 134 U. S. 397, 33 L. 968, 10 S. Ct. 573, annulling Spring lathe patent; Consolidated Roller-Mill Co. v. Walker, 138 U. S. 182, 34 L. 923, 11 S. Ct. 295, affirming S. C., 43 Fed. 579, improvement in roller-grinding mills held not patentable; Patent Clothing Co. v. Glover, 141 U. S. 563, 35 L. 859, 12 S. Ct. 80, holding patent for improvement in pantaloons, void; Lovell Mfg. Co. v. Cary, 147 U. S. 636, 37 L. 312, 13 S. Ct. 477, patent for tempering springs not involving invention.

The following also hold patents invalid for want of novelty: Hartford Woven-Wire, etc., Co. v. Peerless Wire, etc., Co., 23 Blatchf. 233, 23 Fed. 591, woven-wire fabrics; Fond du Lac Co. v. May, 137 U. S. 406, 34 L. 718, 11 S. Ct. 102, May's prison patent; J. L. Mott Iron Works v. Cassidy, 24 Blatchf. 290, 31 Fed. 48, patent for water-closet bowls; Scott Mfg. Co. v. Sayre, 26 Fed. 154, improvement in ice-creepers; Calkins v. Oshkosh Carriage Co., 27 Fed. 298, patent for carriage body; Consolidated Fruit-Jar Co. v. Bellaire, etc., Co., 28 Fed. 94, patent for fruit-jar caps; Leonard v. Lovell, 29 Fed. 314, patent for improvement in refrigerators; Puetz v. Bransford, 31 Fed. 462, holding two patents for a machine identical, and both covered by an assignment; Landesmann v. Jonasson, 32 Fed. 591, patent for ladies' cloaks; Brahn v. Ramapo Iron Works, 35 Fed.

68, claim for improvements in switch-stands; Williams Mfg. Co. v. Franklin, 41 Fed. 395, patent for stave basket; Heine Safety-Boiler Co. v. Anheuser, etc., Assn., 43 Fed. 790, limiting claim for improvement in steam generators; Simmonds v. Morrison, 44 Fed. 761, patent for dash-rail; American Road, etc., Co. v. Pennock, etc., Co., 45 Fed. 255, improvement in road machines; Johnson Co. v. Pacific Rolling, etc., Co., 47 Fed. 589, citing authorities, and holding patent for rails for street railroads void; Haughey v. Lee, 48 Fed. 384, patent for "striker;" Johnson Co. v. Tidewater Steel Works, 50 Fed. 94, claim for method of rolling rails; Bromley Bros. Carpet Co. v. Stewart, 51 Fed. 914, claim for power loom; Deere v. J. I. Case Plow Works, 56 Fed. 844, 9 U. S. App. 567, claims for corn cultivator; Bowman v. De Grauw, 60 Fed. 911, claim for method of making flags; Bonnell v. Stoll, 61 Fed. 768, 17 U. S. App. 543, improvement in bed bottoms; Brunswick, etc., Co. v. Phelan, etc., Co., 76 Fed. 979, patent for pool-ball frames; Klein v. Seattle, 77 Fed. 204, 44 U. S. App. 741, patent for pins for holding insulators; Olmsted v. Andrews, 77 Fed. 840, 46 U. S. App. 608, patent for map case; Schwarzwælder & Co. v. Detroit, 77 Fed. 891, improvement in folding-chairs; Interior Lumber Co. v. Perkins, 80 Fed. 531, 55 U. S. App. 95, claims for improvements in shingle machine; J. J. Warren Co. v. Rosenblatt, 80 Fed. 542, 53 U. S. App. 240, luggage-carriage for cycles; Tiemann v. Kraatz, 85 Fed. 439, 56 U. S. App. 332, case for exhibiting decorative art; Kelly v. Clow, 89 Fed. 303, 60 U. S. App. 364, improvement in water-closets; Antisdel v. Chicago Hotel-Cabinet Co., 89 Fed. 313, 60 U. S. App. 588, patent for hotel cabinet; Chuse v. Ide, 89 Fed. 497, 60 U. S. App. 646, engine frames and lubricating devices; Christy v. Hygeia, etc., Saddle Co., 92 Fed. 970, patent for bicycle saddle; Johnston v. Woodbury, 96 Fed. 424, improvement in ore concentrators. Cited generally in Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Comstock, etc., Co., 27 Fed. 360.

Distinguished in Hoe v. Kahler, 23 Blatchf. 362, 369, 25 Fed. 277, 282, holding patent for "improvement in printing press" involved invention.

Miscellaneous.— Miscited in Kates v. Atlanta Baggage, etc., Co., 107 Ga. 649, 34 S. E. 377.

Patents.— Bartholomew improved water-closet patent, construed and limited, pp. 13, 14.

114 U. S. 15–47, 29 L. 47, MURPHY v. RAMSEY.

Appeal and error.— Action at law not tried by jury should be brought to Supreme Court by appeal, p. 35.

Elections.— Utah commissioners, under act of 1882, were not authorized to prescribe rules for registration officers, or qualification of voters, but only to appoint election officers, canvass returns and issue certificates of election, p. 36.

Distinguished in Bloomer v. Todd, 3 Wash. Ter. 621, 19 Pac. 142, 1 L. R. A. 117, holding legislative act of territory did not confer suffrage upon women.

Elections.— Bigamist or polygamist, within meaning of § 8, act of March 22, 1882, is one who, having become husband of two or more wives, maintains that relation when he offers to be registered as a voter, without reference to cohabitation, which constitutes punishable crime, pp. 41, 42.

Approved in Cannon v. United States, 116 U. S. 72, 29 L. 567, 6 S. Ct. 287, affirming S. C., 4 Utah, 142, 144, 7 Pac. 382, 383, where defendant was convicted of bigamy; Davis v. Beason, 133 U. S. 344, 33 L. 640, 10 S. Ct. 301, prosecution for violation of provisions of act of 1882; Innis v. Bolton, 2 Idaho, 415, 417, 17 Pac. 268, 269, holding territorial statute valid, disfranchising bigamists and polygamists; United States v. Simpson, 4 Utah, 229, 7 Pac. 258, holding marriage established without proof of cohabitation; Wenner v. Smith, 4 Utah, 243, 9 Pac. 297, holding defendant a polygamist and not entitled to hold office; dissenting opinions in United States v. Langford, 2 Idaho, 526, 21 Pac. 411, majority rejecting evidence of general repute of bigamous relations; United States v. Musser, 4 Utah, 175, 7 Pac. 404, indictment for unlawful cohabitation.

Constitutional law.— Act excluding bigamists from voting in Utah is not ex post facto, because not seeking by disfranchisement to punish for crime, and not retrospective; nor does it amount to an unlawful mode of prosecution for crime, pp. 42, 43.

Approved in Garrett v. Weinberg, 54 S. C. 144, 31 S. E. 343, holding act disqualifying as juror one previously convicted of crime, not ex post facto. See explanatory note in 37 Am. St. Rep. 590.

Territories.— People of United States have sovereign power over territories, and Congress may take from their inhabitants any right of suffrage previously conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it, pp. 44, 45.

Followed in United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 380, 30 L. 230, 6 S. Ct. 1112, holding act of Congress valid, giving territorial courts jurisdiction of crimes committed by Indians; Mormon Church v. United States, 136 U. S. 43, 34 L. 491, 10 S. Ct. 803, holding Congress had power to repeal charter of Mormon Church of territory of Utah; Boyd v. Thayer, 143 U. S. 169, 36 L. 112, 12 S. Ct. 385, construing naturalization laws of Congress for territory of Nebraska; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 48, 38 L. 349, 14 S. Ct. 566, reviewing authorities, and holding Congress has power to grant lands below high-water mark of navigable river in territory; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. 1066, 18 S. Ct. 622, provisions of Federal Constitution, relating to criminal prosecutions, apply to territories; Endleman v. United States, 86 Fed. 459, 57 U. S. App. 7, holding Congress could regulate sale of liquors in Alaska; Innis v. Bolton, 2 Idaho, [illegible], 17 Pac. 268, holding territorial legislature, under authority of Congress, could disfranchise voters of certain class; Shepherd v. Grimmett, 2 Idaho, 1129, 31 Pac. 795, holding territorial law prescribing "test oath" for voters, valid; dissenting opinion in Morris v. Powell, 125 Ind. 299, 25 N. E. 229, 9 L. R. A. 334, majority holding act invalid requiring additional qualifications of voter absenting himself from State for certain period; Ferguson v. Allen, 7 Utah, [illegible], 26 Pac. 574, generally; dissenting opinion in Mackey v. Ensminger, 11 Utah, 170, 39 Pac. 546, arguendo. See 97 Am. Dec. [illegible], note.

Election officers, in exacting oath from voters required by statute, are required to exercise diligence and good faith in their inquiries, and are responsible in damages for rejection made without reasonable cause, or maliciously, pp. 46, 47.

114 U. S. 47-51, 29 L. 61, BOHALL v. DILLA.

Pleading.— California code permits an equitable defense by way of cross-complaint, in answer to an action for possession of lands, p. 50.

Followed in South End Min. Co. v. Tinney, 22 Nev. 27, 35 Pac. [illegible], answer setting up fraud in securing patent, allowed in an action of ejectment.

Public lands.— To charge patentee as trustee, claimant must show himself entitled to the patent and that it was erroneously refused him by land department. It is not sufficient to show possible error in adjudging title to patentee, pp. 50-51.

Followed in Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 418, 29 L. 430, 6 S. Ct. 105, holding mere occupant of public lands without title not entitled to compensation for improvements; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 50, 29 L. 571, 6 S. Ct. 249, holding alleged fraud in securing patent could not avail claimant; American Mtge. Co. v. Hopper, 64 Fed. 557, 29 C. C. App. 12, and California Redwood Co. v. Litle, 79 Fed. 856, both holding burden upon plaintiff to show that he was entitled to patent before patentee; Carter v. Thompson, 65 Fed. 331, holding townsite patent could be set aside only by direct proceeding by government; Savage v. Worsham, 66 Fed. 853, protecting patentee against alleged homestead entry; Savage v. Worsham, 72 Fed. 602, protecting patentee from claimed preference right of entry; Driver v. Evans, 47 Ark. 300, 1 S. W. 519, holding plaintiff bound to prove title derived from State; De Toro v. Robinson, 91 Cal. 377, 27 Pac. [illegible], alleged fraudulent extension of patent; Janes v. Wilkinson, 2 Kan. App. 369, 42 Pac. 738, reviewing authorities, and holding mere naked possessor could not attack voidable patent; Bangs v. Stephenson, 68 Mich. 669, 30 N. W. 320, where bill failed to aver good faith and compliance with statute; Horsky v. Moran, 21 Mont. 348, 53 Pac. 1065, holding townsite patentee entitled over locator of placer claim; South End Min. Co. v. Tinney, 22 Nev. 33, 35 Pac. 93 (see dissenting opinion in 22 Nev. 57, 35 Pac. 102), majority holding plaintiff failed to show location superior to that of defendant; Parker v. Lynch, 7 Okl. 660, 56 Pac. 1091, holding one merely offering to contest homestead entry cannot maintain action against patentee; South, etc., Ala. R. R. v. Gilliam, 85 Ala. 175, 4 So. 695, and Sanford v. Sanford, 19 Or. 5, 13 Pac. 603, where evidence established fraud in patentee and title in plaintiff; American Mtge. Co. v. Hopper, 56 Fed. 72, and Chism v. Price, 54 Ark. 258, 15 S. W. 885, arguendo; Monroe Cattle Co. v. Becker, 147 U. S. 57, 37 L. 77, 13 S. Ct. 221, without particular application.

Modified in Duluth, etc., R. R. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 590, 19 S. Ct. 550, holding one entitled to complete his claim against another holding patent obtained by mistake.

Public lands.— To obtain patent as pre-emptioner, it is necessary to prove continuous and personal residence after filing of declaratory statement, p. 51.

Approved in Kirby v. Lewis, 39 Fed. 72, holding actual occupancy barred settlement by another; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amacker, 53 Fed. 53, holding land abandoned by pre-emption claimant; Duncan v. Newcomer, 9 S. Dak. 379, 69 N. W. 582, holding land not taxable until settler had a perfect equity.

Public lands.— Pre-emption settler may be excused for temporary absences caused by well-founded apprehensions of violence, sickness, epidemic, etc., p. 51.

114 U. S. 52-57, 29 L. 63, LOUISVILLE, ETC., R. R. v. IDE.

Removal of causes.— Suit against all defendants jointly, upon alleged joint contracts for transportation, is not removable by one defendant, who makes separate defense, since it does not introduce separate controversy, pp. 55, 56.

Approved and followed in Putnam v. Ingraham, 114 U. S. 59, 29 L. 66, 5 S. Ct. 747, and Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 511, 30 L. 485, 7 S. Ct. 303, both holding partners jointly sued could not remove suit; St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Wilson, 114 U. S. 62, 29 L. 67, 5 S. Ct. 739, and Weller v. J. B. Pace Tobacco Co., 32 Fed. 862, where actions to compel transfer of stock were held inseparable and not removable; Pirie v. Tœdt, 115 U. S. 42, 29 L. 332, 5 S. Ct. 1035, joint actions for malicious prosecution held inseparable. The following also hold controversy not removable: Crump v. Thurber, 115 U. S. 61, 29 L. 329, 5 S. Ct. 1156, and Rogers v. Van Nortwick, 45 Fed. 514, both suits to recover shares of stock; Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 259, 29 L. 391, 6 S. Ct. 32, suit to restrain use of landing places by different companies; Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 278, 29 L. 900, 6 S. Ct. 732, action for wrongful seizure of property; Fidelity Ins. Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 281, 29 L. 899, 6 S. Ct. 734, creditor's bill to subject incumbered property to payment of judgment; Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 601, 602, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 35, 36, and Rumsey v. Gill, 28 Fed. 771, both reviewing authorities, bills to quiet title, alleging conspiracy; Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 588, 33 L. 468, 10 S. Ct. 262, citing authorities, bill to reach partnership property; Torrance v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 531, 36 L. 531, 12 S. Ct. 727, suit for partition; Merchants' Cotton-Press Co. v. North American Ins. Co., 151 U. S. 384, 38 L. 204, 14 S. Ct. 372, action by insurance companies against railroad, in nature of creditor's bill; Winnemans v. Edgington, 27 Fed. 326, and Sexton v. Seelye, 39 Fed. 705, both actions to recover personal property; Thompson v. Dixon, 28 Fed. 6, and Thurber v. Miller, 67 Fed. 373, 32 U. S. App. 209, both suits to foreclose mortgage; Hax v. Caspar, 31 Fed. 500, bill to set aside decree; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brown, 32 Fed. 338, action on bond remanded under act of March, 1887; Anderson v. Appleton, 32 Fed. 52, action to establish will; Woodrum v. Clay, 33 Fed. 899, and Deere, etc., Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 85 Fed. 881, actions for damages; Patchin v. Hunter, 38 Fed. 52, suit on note against partners; Kaiel v. Wylie, 38 Fed. 866, trespass on the case; Bissell v. Canada, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 226, and Ames v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 883, both actions to enforce lien and obtain priority; State v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 628, mandamus against railroads to compel them to lower grade; Fox v. Mackey, 60 Fed. 6, action in tort against directors, etc.; Barth v. Coler, 60 Fed. 468, 19 U. S. App. 646, to set aside deeds; In re The Jarnecke Ditch, 69 Fed. 170, petition to establish drain; Moore v. Los Angeles Iron, etc., Co., 89 Fed. 78, suit for damages against corporation and stockholders; National Docks Ry. v. Pennsylvania R. R., 52 N. J. Eq. 63, 28 Atl. 74, joint action against lessor and owner to establish right of way; Foundry Co. v. Howland, 99 N. C. 206, 6 Am. St. Rep. 517, 5 S. E. 767, action upon contract; Douglas v. Railroad, 106 N. C. 80, 10 S. E. 1052, suit by stockholder in resident corporation, against it and a non-resident corporation for relief.

Approved in Blacklock v. Small, 127 U. S. 105, 32 L. 73, 8 S. Ct. 1099, holding suit substantially between two defendants, residents of same State, not within Federal jurisdiction; Evans v. Durango Land, etc., Co., 80 Fed. 437, 49 U. S. App. 330, holding claim for continuing trespass stated but one cause of action; Hicklin v. Marco, 38 Fed. 556, 15 U. S. App. 55, dissenting opinion, majority holding party to foreclosure not indispensable, and jurisdiction, therefore, not defeated.

Distinguished in Chicago, etc., Ry. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 24 Fed. 517, holding plaintiff could not convert a several liability into joint, and defeat removal of cause; Beuttel v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 26 Fed. 51, holding action against railroad and engineer for personal injuries separable, and one defendant entitled to removal; Stanbrough v. Cook, 38 Fed. 373, 3 L. R. A. 402, holding action to recover realty, etc., separable as to defendant owners and tenants;

Bacon v. Felt, 38 Fed. 871, denying motion to remand in suit quiet title; Arrowsmith v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 57 Fed. 169, ho ing plaintiff could not join defendant for sole purpose of defeati Federal jurisdiction; Fergason v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 63 Fed. 17 action against railroad and plaintiff's co-servants held separabl Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 66 Fed. 371, where all defendants we non-residents, case held removable; Rich v. Gross, 29 Neb. 340, N. W. 468, removing distinct and separate cause of action, set in answer of one defendant.

Action.— Defendant has no right to say that an action shall several which plaintiff elects to make joint, although his separa defense may defeat joint recovery, p. 56.

Approved in Pirie v. Tvedt, 115 U. S. 42, 29 L. 332, 5 S. Ct. 103 holding defendants could not object to joint action for maliciou prosecution; Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 531, 36 L. 531, 12 S. C 727, bill for partition of tract of land; Connell v. Smiley, 156 U. 340, 39 L. 445, 15 S. Ct. 354, where petition for removal was hel sufficient, plaintiff seeking relief against one party alone; Texas Day Land, etc., Co., 49 Fed. 597, holding plaintiff could rely upo two counts and proceed in its own way; Brown v. Coxe, 75 Fed 689, joint action against tortfeasors.

114 U. S. 57-60, 29 L. 65, PUTNAM v. INGRAHAM.

Removal of causes.— On suit against several defendants on a alleged joint liability, answer by one, a non-resident, denying such joint or any liability, does not introduce a separable controversy p. 59.

Approved in following, holding controversies not separable or re movable: Crump v. Thurber, 115 U. S. 61, 29 L. 329, 5 S. Ct. 1157 Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 259, 29 L. 391, 6 S. Ct. 32, Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 278, 29 L. 900, 6 S. Ct. 732, Fidelity Ins. Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 281, 29 L. 899, 6 S. Ct. 734, Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 509, 511, 30 L. 484, 485, 7 S. Ct. 302, 303, collecting authorities; Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 588, 33 L. 468, 10 S. Ct. 202, Thompson v. Dixon, 28 Fed. 6, Hax v. Caspar, 31 Fed. 500, Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brown, 32 Fed. 338, Patchin v. Hunter, 38 Fed. 52, Ames v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 883, 884, In re The Jarnecke Ditch, 69 Fed. 169, and Foundry Co. v. Howland, 99 N. C. 206, 6 Am. St. Rep. 517, 5 S. E. 747.

Removal of causes.— Fact that one of several parties jointly sued, defaults, places the parties in no different position with reference to removal, p. 59.

Approved in Wilson v. Oswego Twp., 151 U. S. 66, 38 L. 75, 14 S. Ct. 263, denying removal, notwithstanding default of one defendant; Sinclair v. Pierce, 50 Fed. 852, and Tate v. Douglas, 113 N. C. 196, 18 S. E. 203, both holding default of co-defendants did not alter situation as to removal.

114 U. S. 60-62, 29 L. 66, ST. LOUIS, ETC., RY. v. WILSON.

Removal of causes.— Action by citizen of one State against domestic corporation and non-residents, to compel company to transfer stock standing in name of latter, is on a single cause of action, and not removable, p. 62.

Approved in following, denying removal: Crump v. Thurber, 115 U. S. 61, 29 L. 329, 5 S. Ct. 1156, and Weller v. J. B. Pace Tobacco Co. 22 Fed. 862, both actions to compel transfer of stock by non-residents; Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 511, 30 L. 485, 7 S. Ct. 303, holding joint action against partners not separable, and, therefore, not removable; Swan Land, etc., Co. v. Frank, 148 U. S. 611, 37 L. 583, 13 S. Ct. 694, where joining of indispensable parties defeated Federal jurisdiction; Wilson v. Oswego Twp., 151 U. S. 67, 38 L. 73, 14 S. Ct. 264, suit seeking cancellation of bonds; Merchants' Cotton-Press Co. v. North America Ins. Co., 151 U. S. 381, 38 L. 203, 14 S. Ct. 371, affirming S. C., 91 Tenn. 541, 19 S. W. 756, action by insurance companies against railroad and other insurance companies, to recover on account of loss by fire; Perrin v. Lepper, 26 Fed. 548, where controversy was between resident administrator and non-resident heirs and resident legatee; Thompson v. Dixon, 28 Fed. 6, 8, suit to foreclose mortgage, mortgagors and mortgagees being residents of same State; Anderson v. Appleton, 32 Fed. 859, action to establish will; Brenson v. St. Croix Lumber Co., 35 Fed. 635, replevin between citizens of same State; Yearian v. Horner, 36 Fed. 131, holding suit to compel partnership accounting involved single controversy; Perkins v. Hunter, 38 Fed. 52, action on note against partners; State v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., 48 Fed. 628, mandamus against railroads to compel lowering of grades; Missouri v. New Madrid Co., 73 Fed. 17 holding county necessary party in suit to set aside disposition of swamp lands, thus defeating Federal jurisdiction; Scoutt v. Lark, 73 Fed. 904, 36 U. S. App. 586, bill for specific performance of contract for sale of land, where agent was held a necessary party; Foundry Co. v. Howland, 99 N. C. 206, 6 Am. St. Rep. 517, 12 S. E. 747, action on contract; Douglas v. Railroad, 106 N. C. 80, 10 S. E. 1052, action by stockholder against resident corporation and non-resident corporation, holding majority of its stock, to enjoin issuance of mortgage bonds; dissenting opinion in Williamson v. Irvin, 66 Fed. 663, 31 U. S. App. 325, majority holding bridge company not necessary party in suit to compel assignment of its stock.

Distinguished in Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 66 Fed. 371, where single controversy was between citizens of different States.

Parties.— Corporation is necessary party to action to compel transfer of its stock, p. 62.

Distinguished in Hamilton v. Savannah, etc., Ry., 49 Fed. 420, holding contractors for construction of railroad, not necessary parties to action to avoid conveyance and establish trust.

114 U. S. 63-86, 29 L. 67, SARGENT v. HALL SAFE, ETC., CO.

Patents.— Sargent patent, for improvement in time-locks, construed, and held not infringed by structure in which combinatio has not a revolving bolt, pp. 63-86.

Approved in Brown v. Davis, 116 U. S. 249, 29 L. 663, 6 S. Ct. 38 holding use of band, instead of lever described in patent for grai drill, not an infringement; Hendy v. Miners' Iron Works, 127 U. 1 376, 32 L. 209, 8 S. Ct. 1279, claim describing cylinder as havin chambers, in patent for ore-stamp feeder, is not infringed by use c smooth cylinders.

Patents.— In patents for combination of mechanism, limitation and provisos, especially when introduced into application after i had been persistently rejected, must be strictly construed in favo of public, and regarded as disclaimers, p. 86.

Approved in Shepard v. Carrigan, 116 U. S. 597, 598, 29 L. 724 6 S. Ct. 495, holding patent for skirt protector limited to plaited o fluted bands; Crawford v. Heysinger, 123 U. S. 607, 31 L. 274, 8 S Ct. 408, patent for staple-fastener limited to reciprocating clinche and stationary staple-supporting anvil; Rœmer v. Peddie, 132 U. S 317, 33 L. 383, 10 S. Ct. 99, citing authorities, and holding patent dispensing with bottom plate for lock-case not infringed by one having such plate; Knapp v. Morss, 150 U. S. 229, 37 L. 1062, 14 S. Ct. 84, patent for dress form held not infringed where one of its essential elements was left out; Otis Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Crane Bros. Mfg. Co., 27 Fed. 555, holding improvement in brakes for hoisting apparatus, not infringed; Falls Rivet Co. v. Wolfe, 40 Fed. 470, improvement in friction clutches limited to device described; Smith v. Pittsburgh Gas Co., 42 Fed. 150, holding defendant's process for producing illuminating gas from natural gas, not an infringement; Heine Safety-Boiler Co. v. Anheuser, etc., Assn., 43 Fed. 790, limiting claim to mud-drum having but one chamber; Johnson Co. v. Pacific Rolling, etc., Co., 47 Fed. 589, restricting patent to form of rail specified; Lane v. Park, 49 Fed. 458, holding restricted claim did not cover mere flat metal blanks in rough state; J. L. Mott Iron Works v. Standard Mfg. Co., 53 Fed. 821, 3 U. S. App. 386, affirming S. C., 51 Fed. 84, where patent for waste valves, etc., was strictly construed, and held not infringed; Frank v. Wm. P. Mockridge Mfg. Co., 65 Fed. 524, holding cuff-fastener covered only specific form described; Walter A. Wood Mowing, etc., Co. v. William Deering & Co., 66 Fed. 550, limiting patent to single-jointed sheaf-carriers; Wheaton v. Norton, 70 Fed. 842, 44 U. S. App. 118, and Norton v. Jensen, 90 Fed. 422, 61 U. S. App. 359, affirming S. C., 81 Fed. 497, both holding can-heading device not infringed by device omitting an essential element; Carter Mach. Co. v. Hanes, 70 Fed. 866, confining patentee to machine described in his patent; Craig v. Michigan Lubricator Co., 72 Fed. 176, sight-feed lubricator held not infringed; Engle Sanitary, etc., Co. v. Elwood, 73 Fed. 485, im-[illegible] in furnace for burning wet material, not infringed by [illegible] improvement; Muller v. Lodge, etc., Tool Co., 77 Fed. 629, [illegible] U. S. App. 189, holding patent for tool-holder for lathes, not in[illegible]; Truman v. Holmes, 87 Fed. 747, 56 U. S. App. 748, limiting [illegible] for breaking cart to braces which extended beneath the [illegible]; Griffith v. Shaw, 89 Fed. 318, restricting patent for calf-wean[illegible] and holding no infringement; Warren v. Casey, 93 Fed. 965, [illegible] improvement for eyeglass case limited and not infringed; [illegible]burgh v. Jackson, 37 Fed. 884, arguendo.

Distinguished in Wirt v. Brown, 32 Fed. 286, holding patent for [illegible] pen infringed by use of equivalent element; Consolidated [illegible] Co. v. Coombs, 39 Fed. 29, holding patent for roller-[illegible] mill infringed by use of equivalents; Reece Button, etc., [illegible] v. Globe Button, etc., Co., 61 Fed. 965, 969, 21 U. S. App. 244, [illegible] authorities, and holding button-hole machine infringed [illegible] of machine merely changing movement of parts.

[illegible] U. S. 87-103, 29 L. 96, ELECTRIC-SIGNAL CO. v. HALL SIGNAL CO.

Patents.— To constitute infringement, result attained and ele[illegible] combined must be the same, so that each element shall per[illegible] same function, provided differences alleged are not merely [illegible], p. 96.

Approved in Kinzel v. Luttrell Brick Co., 67 Fed. 927, 31 U. S. [illegible] App. 682, holding patent for brick-kiln not infringed by one omit[illegible] use of side walls made of dirt or of plank covering.

Patents.— Pope railroad-signal patent is not infringed by Hall [illegible] patent, operated by wheels of passing train and using [illegible] arrangement of batteries and currents, pp. 96-103.

Cited in Electric Ry. v. Jamaica, etc., R. Co., 61 Fed. 672, obiter.

[illegible] U. S. 104-120, 29 L. 105, THOMSON v. WOOSTER.

Equity.— Decree pro confesso regards statement of bill as con[illegible] and proved, and is conclusive, unless shown to be erroneous [illegible] other statements contained in bill itself, pp. 110, 112.

Approved in Dobson v. Hartford Carpet Co., 114 U. S. 446, 29 L. [illegible] S. Ct. 948, holding decree conclusive of validity of patent, in [illegible] for infringement; Hefner v. Northwestern Life Ins. Co., 123 [illegible] U. S. 756, 31 L. 313, 8 S. Ct. 341, holding party defaulting concluded [illegible] decree of foreclosure; Sheffield Furnace Co. v. Witherow, 149 U. [illegible] 574, 37 L. 855, 13 S. Ct. 987, sustaining decree pro confesso en[illegible] after filing of demurrer, which was fatally defective; Wooster [illegible] Thornton, 26 Fed. 275, holding interlocutory decree, declaring [illegible] valid, conclusive; Austin v. Riley, 55 Fed. 836, 837, denying [illegible] to set aside default in foreclosure; Southern Pac. R. Co. v.

Temple, 59 Fed. 18, but holding defendant, who has appeared b his solicitor, entitled to notice of application for decree pro co fesso; Schofield v. Horse Springs Cattle Co., 65 Fed. 436, holdin showing did not warrant court in setting aside decree pro confess Sturtevant v. National Foundry, etc., Works, 88 Fed. 614, 60 U. S App. 238, holding, from allegations in the bill, that decree pro co fesso, establishing stockholder's liability, was erroneous; Price v Boden, 39 Fla. 222, 22 So. 658, holding defendants not entitled t notice of proceedings after default; Welsh v. Solenberger, 85 Va 443, holding, where allegations of bill were indefinite, proof was re quired after default.

Distinguished in Harmon v. Struthers, 48 Fed. 261, holding in terlocutory decree did not preclude inquiry into question of validity of patent.

Equity.— History of English chancery practice, as to bills pr confesso and its relation to our practice, discussed, pp. 110–112, and note.

Cited in Partee v. Thomas, 27 Fed. 430, Romaine v. Union Ins Co., 28 Fed. 632, Richmond v. Atwood, 52 Fed. 25, 5 U. S. App. 151 17 L. R. A. 620, Hazleton Tripod, etc., Co. v. Citizens, etc., Ry., 72 Fed. 328, Continental Trust Co. v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 82 Fed. 646 National Folding-Box, etc., Co. v. Dayton Paper, etc., Co., 91 Fed 825. Deck v. Whitman, 96 Fed. 875, and Starr Cash, etc., Car Co. v. Starr, 69 Conn. 446, 37 Atl. 1059, all holding, as in English chancery practice, plaintiff, after default, must prove allegations ex parte.

Equity.— Decree pro confesso is not a decree as of course according to prayer of bill, nor such as complainant chooses to take it, but is made by court according to what is proper to be decreed upon statement of bill, assumed to be true, p. 113.

Approved in Central R. R. v. Central Trust Co., 133 U. S. 90, 33 L. 563, 10 S. Ct. 237, holding deficiency decree pro confesso improvidently entered; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Temple, 59 Fed. 19, vacating decree where defendant, appearing by his solicitor, had no notice of application for decree pro confesso; Price v. Boden, 39 Fla. 223, 22 So. 658, holding decree for attorney's fee, not prayed for, erroneous in default case; Dotterer v. Freeman, 88 Ga. 498, 14 S. E. 865, reversing decree ordering cancellation of deed, where bill did not state facts sufficient to give relief granted; Aull v. Day, 133 Mo. 349, 34 S. W. 581, holding court could correct erroneous ruling any time before final order of distribution.

Equity.— Evidence that reissued patent was void is inadmissible after decree pro confesso establishing infringement, p. 114.

Patents.— Court cannot say, as matter of law, because reissue was applied for and granted fourteen years after date of original patent, [illegible] delay was unreasonable and not susceptible of explanation, p. [illegible].

Approved in Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 323, 325, 326, 30 L. 392, [illegible] S. Ct. 217, 218, sustaining reissue involved in principal case, where there was no evidence of expanded claim.

Distinguished in Hubel v. Dick, 24 Blatchf. 140, 28 Fed. 657, holding reissue after delay of five years, void on ground that it was for new combination.

Appeal and error.— Affidavits presented to master as grounds of application to reopen proofs upon hearing for taking account of profits from infringement of patent, cannot be examined on appeal to Supreme Court, p. 117.

Patents.— Defendants cannot complain of being accountable for profits realized in using complainant's machine, although it might have been more profitable to have bought of others, p. 118.

Approved in Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 147, 148, 149, 31 L. [illegible] S. Ct. 900, 901, holding actual advantage to infringer measure of profits to be accounted for; Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, 43 [illegible] 678, measuring profits by gain in economy of manufacture by infringer; Tuttle v. Claflin, 76 Fed. 233, 45 U. S. App. 105, measuring profits by saving of expense to infringers, but making allowance for improvements made in machine by defendants.

114 U. S. 120–127, 29 L. 81, HAYES v. HOLLY SPRINGS.

Municipal corporations.— Mississippi act of 1872, ratifying municipal railroad-aid subscriptions, except where in violation of Constitution, held not to validate subscription made at unauthorized special election, pp. 125, 126.

Approved in Bell v. Farmville, etc., R. Co., 91 Va. 108, 20 S. E. [illegible], holding Virginia statute, February 8, 1888, ratified railroad bonds.

Distinguished in Erskine v. Nelson Co., 4 N. Dak. 70, 58 N. W. [illegible] 27 L. R. A. 700, and n. (see dissenting opinion in 4 N. Dak. 85, [illegible] W. 355, 27 L. R. A. 708, and n.), holding that act of March 13, [illegible] of State legislature, validated Nelson county warrants.

Municipal corporations.— Bona fide holder of municipal bond must show legislative authority in issuing body to create the bond, laches or acts in pais may cure irregularities in execution of statutory power, but cannot create it, pp. 126, 127.

Approved in Hopper v. Covington, 118 U. S. 151, 30 L. 192, 6 S. Ct. [illegible], holding complaint bad on demurrer which failed to show authority of town to issue bonds; Merrill v. Monticello, 138 U. S. 682, [illegible] L. 1073, 11 S. Ct. 444, holding town not estopped to set up defense, want of authority to issue bonds; Brenham v. German, etc., Bank, 144 U. S. 188, 36 L. 396, 12 S. Ct. 565, holding bona fide holder could not recover on bonds issued under authority to borrow money Barnett v. Denison, 145 U. S. 139, 36 L. 653, 12 S. Ct. 820, holding city bonds in aid of slaughter-houses, etc., invalid, even in hand of innocent holder; Moulton v. Evansville, 25 Fed. 386, reviewing authorities, and holding want of petition of freeholders, etc., did not render bonds invalid in hands of innocent purchaser; Dartmouth Sav. Bank v. School Dist., 6 Dak. 343, 43 N. W. 825, holding school bonds invalid for want of petition by citizens, etc.; Myers v. Jeffersonville, 145 Ind. 438, 44 N. E. 454, holding bonds issued to defray expense of litigation over county seat, unauthorized and void; Keehn v. Wooster, 13 Ohio C. C. 274, refunding bonds have invalidity of originals, notwithstanding recitals; Commissioners v Call, 123 N. C. 326, 31 S. E. 487, 44 L. R. A. 258, holding county railroad bonds invalid; dissenting opinion in West Plains Twp. v Sage, 69 Fed. 952, majority holding town estopped to deny validity of bonds containing lawful, but false, recitals.

Distinguished in Waite v. Santa Cruz, 89 Fed. 632, 633, protecting innocent purchaser, where bonds falsely recited authorized purpose See 98 Am. Dec. 686, note.

114 U. S. 127-128. 29 L. 117, MOWER v. FLETCHER.

Appeal and error.— Judgment is final and appealable which terminates litigation between parties on merits of case, so that, if affirmed, court below would only have to execute its judgment already rendered, p. 128.

Approved in Dainese v. Kendall, 119 U. S. 55, 30 L. 306, 7 S. Ct. 66, holding amounts due on notes, rents, etc., not ascertained, and decree ratifying sale not appealable; Talley v. Curtain, 58 Fed. 5, 8 U. S. App. 424, holding decree setting aside deed of assignment upon creditor's bill, not final; Merriman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 64 Fed. 547, 24 U. S. App. 428, holding decree leaving amount of certain credits undetermined, not appealable; Whitaker v. Sparkman, 30 Fla. 357, 11 So. 545, decree depriving administrator of lawful possession, final and appealable; Young v. Thrasher, 123 Mo. 312, 27 S. W. 327, holding inferior court bound to carry out judgment of appellate court as conclusive; Tourville v. Wabash R. R., 148 Mo. 623, 71 Am. St. Rep. 654, 50 S. W. 311, holding no error to issue execution on judgment of appellate court; Hall v. Swann, 39 W. Va. 356, 19 S. E. 510, holding decree releasing land from forfeiture, final; Williamson v. Jones, 39 W. Va. 263, 19 S. E. 444, 25 L. R. A. 235, and n., arguendo.

114 U. S. 128-133, 29 L. 119, BUTTERWORTH v. HILL.

Courts — Patents.— Rule that suit in Federal court must be in district where defendant resides or is found, applies to suit to obtain issue of patent, pp. 131, 132.

Approved in United States v. Amer
[illegible] fact that defendant owned te
Federal court of that district jurisdi Fed. 145, holding New Jersey Federal commissioner of patents; Union Swit
6 Fed. 626, dismissing suit for infrin residents, and not brought in their States Cordage Co., 66 Fed. 615, ho could not be sued in Massachusetts f etc. Co. v Metropolitan, etc., Co., 31

Patents.— Official residence of con pass of suit, is in Washington, D. C.

Appearance.— Acceptance of servi thrown by patent commissioner at W jection to jurisdiction, and amount t uit Court, which was without jurisd

Followed in Romaine v. Union Ins.
Co. and holding special appearanc jurisdiction; Spencer v. Travelers' In holding acceptance of service of cop transcript, did not waive objection made.

114 U. S. 133-137, 29 L. 118, DETRO

Courts.— Supreme Court's jurisdi highest State court depends on decis specified in R. S., § 709, and in the w

Courts.— Supreme Court's jurisdic upon record before it can proceed.
question was actually raised and dec essary to judgment, p. 136.

Approved in Jacks v. Helena, 115 U where State decision was put on gro of Federal question; Simmerman v.
325, 6 S. Ct. 333, where no Federal was Endowment Assn. v. Kansas, 12 [illegible], where it did not appear that qu tion was involved; New Orleans Wa
Co., 125 U. S. 30, 31 L. 612, 8 S. Ct. 7
tion was not involved in decision; Kr 44, 31 L. 678, 8 S. Ct. 755, where dec upon grounds independent of co
De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 2 tions based on independent grounds
[illegible] L. 446, 10 S. Ct. 175, and Walles
[illegible], 15 S. Ct. 626, decisions not invo

114 U. S. 138–146, 29 L. 114, FARMINGTON v. PILLSBURY.

Courts.— Old rule, requiring objection to citizenship, unless ap pearing on face of record, to be taken by plea in abatement, wa changed by act of 1875, under which Federal court can dismiss fo want of jurisdictional citizenship at any time, p. 144.

Approved in Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 590, 33 L. 469, 10 S. Ct 202, remanding case to State court, after its successful prosecutio in Federal court; Nashua R. R. v. Lowell R. R., 136 U. S. 374, 3 L. 368, 10 S. Ct. 1008, holding objection to jurisdiction could b taken in answer; Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 119, 42 L. 683, 18 S Ct. 295, holding affidavits, etc., failed to show that property wa not of sufficient value to give jurisdiction; Keeney v. Roberts, 1 Sawy. 39, 39 Fed. 629, court remanding case to State court on it own motion; Hardin v. Cass Co., 42 Fed. 656, and Simon v. House 46 Fed. 319, where amount involved was under jurisdictiona amount, and suit was dismissed; Indiana v. Lake Erie, etc., Ry. 85 Fed. 2, remanding application for mandamus to State court upo plaintiff's motion. Approved in Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Carroll 84 Fed. 780, 52 U. S. App. 458, without applying rule.

Distinguished in Cuthbert v. Galloway, 35 Fed. 469, holding ob jection to jurisdiction waived by plea in bar; Southern Exp. Co. v. Todd, 56 Fed. 105, 12 U. S. App. 351, holding objection that suit wa brought in wrong district came too late, when made for first time by motion in arrest of judgment. Denied in Imperial Refining Co v. Wyman, 38 Fed. 576, 578, 3 L. R. A. 505, 506, and n., holding special plea to jurisdiction necessary, and directing issue to be made by pleadings.

Courts.— Act of 1875 expressly prohibits collusive transfers of negotiable paper in order to confer jurisdiction upon Federal court, where assignor himself could not have brought action, pp. 144–146.

The following cases apply rule, and dismiss for want of jurisdiction: Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 601, 603, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 35, 36, where deed was made to non-resident for purposes of jurisdiction; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 326, 32 L. 694, 9 S. Ct. 292, holding change of domicile pretended, and not actual; Lehigh Min., etc., Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 341, 40 L. 449, 16 S. Ct. 313, where foreign corporation was created and property transferred to it for jurisdictional purposes; Lake Co. Commrs. v. Dudley, 173 U. S. 253, 19 S. Ct. 402, reviewing authorities, and holding transfer of note to non-resident a mere device, and collusive; Norton v. European, etc., Ry., 32 Fed. 875, suit on railroad bonds colorably transferred; Industrial, etc., Guaranty Co. v. Electrical Supply Co., 58 Fed. 743, 16 U. S. App. 196, bill filed to enable filing of cross-bill and litigation among co-defendants. Approved in Andes v. Millard, 70 Fed. 516, but holding objection that action was fictitious could not be taken after judgment; Wonderly v. Lafayette Co., 150 Mo. 648, 649, 51 S. W. 748, 749, 45 L. R. A. 390, holding judgment fraudulently obtained by alleging [illegible] ownership. Cited in Farmington Vill. Corp. v. Bank, 85 Me. [illegible] 28 Atl. 966, generally, as to subject-matter of suit.

Distinguished in Hartog v. Memory, 116 U. S. 590, 29 L. 726, 6 S. [illegible] 332, reversing S. C., 23 Fed. 837, holding defendant estopped by [illegible] silence from denying jurisdiction on account of citizenship; Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 533, 35 L. 847, 12 S. Ct. 69, where transfer of note and mortgage was made for valuable consideration; Lawton v. [illegible], 30 Fed. 642, denying motion to remand, where transfer of note was bona fide.

114 U. S. 147–149, 29 L. 184, EX PARTE HUGHES.

Mandamus does not lie to compel judge of inferior court to pay over money deposited in registry of court, where court has expressly adjudged that litigation was not at an end, and fund should remain there until suit was prosecuted to final decree, p. 149.

Not cited.

114 U. S. 149–158, 29 L. 58, STEPHENSON v. BROOKLYN R. R.

Patents of O'Haire, Jones, and Stephenson, for improvements "in operating car doors" and "in signalling devices for street cars," are void for want of patentable novelty, pp. 151–158.

Patents.— Combination is patentable, only when its several elements produce, by their joint action, a new and useful result, or an old result, cheaper or more advantageously, p. 157.

Approved in following, holding combinations not patentable: Beecher Mfg. Co. v. Atwater Mfg. Co., 114 U. S. 524, 29 L. 232, 5 S. Ct. 1006, use of two pairs of dies; Pomace-Holder Co. v. Ferguson, 119 U. S. 338, 30 L. 408, 7 S. Ct. 384, guide-frame and pomace-rack for cheese-formers; Watson v. Cincinnati Ry., 132 U. S. 167, 33 L. 304, 10 S. Ct. 47, use of outside and inside rigid doors in grain cars; Hill v. Wooster, 132 U. S. 701, 33 L. 506, 10 S. Ct. 231, addition of over compartment to box creamery on legs; Florsheim v. Schilling, 137 U. S. 77, 34 L. 579, 11 S. Ct. 25, patent for corset; Fond du Lac Co. v. May, 137 U. S. 406, 407, 34 L. 718, 11 S. Ct. 102, citing authorities, improvement in construction of prisons; Union Edge Setter Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 539, 35 L. 264, 11 S. Ct. 624, sole-edge burnishing machine; Cluett v. Claflin, 24 Blatchf. 416, 30 Fed. 924, improvement in shirt-bosoms; Leonard v. Lovell, 29 Fed. 314, collecting authorities, and holding improvement in ice-chest of refrigerator not patentable; Holmes Electric, etc., Co. v. Metropolitan, etc., Alarm Co., 33 Fed. 256, improvement in electric linings for safes; Nat. Progress, etc., Mach. Co. v. John R. Williams Co., 44 Fed. 192, 12 L. R. A. 109, and n., improved cigar-bunching machine; Johnson Co. v. Pacific Rolling-Mills Co., 47 Fed. 589, 592, improvement in street-car rails; Western Elec. Co. v. Capital Tel., etc., Co., 86 Fed. 777, use of multiple boards and "means" to ascertain what lines in telephone exchange are in use. The following apply rule, and sustain patents: Railway Register Mfg. Co. v. North Hudson, etc., R. Co., 24 Fed. 795, and S. C., 26 Fed. 412, holding invention of fare-register new and patentable; Niles Tool Works v. Betts Machine Co., 27 Fed. 305, improvement in boring mills; Bowers v. Von Schmidt, 63 Fed. 583, claims for improvements in dredging machines and apparatus; Rubber-Tire Wheel Co. v. Columbia, etc., Wheel Co., 91 Fed. 990, patent for new rubber-tired wheel.

Distinguished in Hoe v. Kahler, 23 Blatchf. 362, 25 Fed. 277, holding certain adjustment of rollers in printing presses patentable.

114 U. S. 158–173, 29 L. 83, CHAPMAN v. BREWER.

Bankruptcy.— Where Federal bankruptcy proceeding was commenced before attachment in State court, the assignment in bankruptcy, though subsequently made, related back, vesting title in assignee, and attachment four months before commencement of proceeding was dissolved by the assignment, pp. 167, 168.

Approved in Sullivan v. Rabb, 86 Ala. 441, 5 So. 750, holding bankruptcy proceedings dissolved attachment levied less than four months before adjudication.

Distinguished in Witters v. Sowles, 33 Fed. 540, where first petition in bankruptcy was held ineffective because of control retained by attorneys, and on account of delay.

Judgment.— Adjudication of bankruptcy in District Court, correct in form, and court having jurisdiction of subject-matter and parties, is conclusive, and cannot be collaterally attacked in suit by assignee against person claiming adverse interest in property, p. 169.

Approved in Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 532, 39 L. 522, 15 S. Ct. 432, holding evidence insufficient to set aside decree of Federal court; Mount v. Manhattan Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 214, 3 Atl. 728, holding decree of bankruptcy conclusive in an action brought by bankrupt's administratrix.

Courts.— Circuit Court of United States, having otherwise jurisdiction in case, will, as a general rule, administer same relief in equity which State courts can grant, pp. 170, 171.

Approved in More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 84, 32 L. 56, 8 S. Ct. 1073, holding plaintiff out of possession, by virtue of California statute, could bring action to determine adverse claim; Greeley v. Lowe, 155 U. S. 75, 39 L. 76, 15 S. Ct. 28, holding, by virtue of Florida statute, court, in bill in equity, for partition, could settle questions of title; Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 325, 39 L. 173, 15 S. Ct. 133, bill in equity, to quiet title, brought by persons in possession of lands in Iowa, sustained; Roberts v. Northern Pac. R. R., 158 U. S. 30, 39 L. 883, 15 S. Ct. 766, holding actual possession of part, and constructive possession of rest of land, under Wisconsin law, sufficient to [illegible] bill to quiet title; Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Miner, 11 Sawy. [illegible], 25 Fed. 536, holding right of interpleader, conferred by California statute, could be enforced in Federal court of equity; Land, etc., Imp. Co. v. Bardon, 45 Fed. 707, equitable action to quiet title by [illegible] in possession, brought under provision of Wisconsin statute; Bigelow v. Chatterton, 51 Fed. 616, 10 U. S. App. 267, treating action to try title to unoccupied lands as an equity case; Grether v. Wright, 3 Fed. 746, 43 U. S. App. 770, entertaining bill in equity to enjoin [illegible] levied upon bonds of District of Columbia by State of Ohio; Murragh v. H. Wetter Mfg. Co., 78 Fed. 14, 49 U. S. App. 14, sustaining bill by contract creditor against insolvent corporation, permitted by Arkansas statute; California Oil, etc., Co. v. Miller, 96 Fed. 20, arguendo.

Distinguished in Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Cannon, 46 Fed. 232, dismissing bill to quiet title, by one holding legal title, and out of possession.

Courts — Bankruptcy.— Circuit Court has general power, irrespective of citizenship, to grant equitable relief in suit in equity, by assignee in bankruptcy, against adverse claimants on assigned property, and may enjoin him from throwing cloud on title by levy of execution from State court, after commencement of bankruptcy proceeding, or from making further levies, pp. 171–173.

Approved in Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 270, 38 L. 985, 14 S. Ct. 1022, admiralty proceeding, restraining State court, where its jurisdiction had not attached; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 73 Fed. 124, arguendo.

Distinguished in Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 351, 29 L. 413, 6 S. Ct. 80, holding Federal court could not enjoin proceedings of State court, at instance of purchaser at bankruptcy sale; United States v. Wilson, 118 U. S. 89, 30 L. 112, 6 S. Ct. 993, holding Federal court could not remove cloud by bill in equity, without requiring complainant to obtain prior possession; Baird v. Warwick Machine Co., 40 Fed. 386, holding purchaser at execution sale could not restrain foreclosure of mortgage as a fraudulent conveyance.

114 U. S. 174–176, 29 L. 135, EX PARTE MORGAN.

Mandamus may be used to require inferior court to decide matter within its jurisdiction, and pending before it, but not to control decision, p. 175.

Approved in Ex parte Brown, 116 U. S. 402, 29 L. 677, 6 S. Ct. 387, denying mandamus to review order dismissing an appeal; Parker, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 226, 33 L. 124, 9 S. Ct. 709, allowing mandamus directing Supreme Court of territory to reinstate an appeal; In re Morrison, 147 U. S. 26, 37 L. 65, 13 S. Ct. 250, refusing mandamus directing lower court to vacate order of dismissal upon the merits; In re Hawkins, 147 U. S. 490, 37 L. 252, 13 S. Ct. 527, holding mandamus did not lie to compel court to receive certain depositions;

Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 124, 37 L. 392, 13 S. Ct. 542, holding question whether good cause was shown for granting writ of habeas corpus, could not be reviewed by habeas corpus; American Const. Co. v. Jacksonville Ry., 148 U. S. 379, 37 L. 489, 13 S. Ct. 761, denying petitions for mandamus to dismiss certain appeals; Hudson v. Parker, 156 U. S. 289, 39 L. 428, 15 S. Ct. 455, allowing mandamus to District Court to admit petitioner to bail on giving proper bond; United States v. Judges, 85 Fed. 180, 56 U. S. App. 37, refusing mandamus to compel inferior court to admit prisoner to bail; State v. Young, 31 Fla. 601, 34 Am. St. Rep. 44, 12 So. 675, 19 L. R. A. 638, holding mandamus proper to compel judge to hear a case, who refuses on ground of disqualification; State v. King, 32 Fla. 419, 13 So. 892, denying mandamus to reinstate an appeal; State v. Philips, 97 Mo. 343, 10 S. W. 859, 3 L. R. A. 480, and n., reviewing authorities, and allowing mandamus to reinstate an appeal, where there was a duty admitting of no discretion; State v. Eddy, 10 Mont. 324, 25 Pac. 1037, directing justice of peace to issue order commanding garnishee to appear. See 89 Am. Dec. 739, note.

Mandamus.— Judgment of lower court, on motion to amend original judgment so as to conform to complaint and verdict, cannot be reviewed by mandamus, p. 176.

Cited in State v. Philips, 97 Mo. 343, 10 S. W. 859, 3 L. R. A. 480, and n., granting writ of mandamus to reinstate an appeal.

114 U. S. 176–189, 29 L. 121, CHESAPEAKE, ETC., RY. v. MILLER.

Taxation.— West Virginia act of 1866 was personal to corporation incorporated by it, and clause exempting it from taxation did not confer immunity upon company purchasing its property at foreclosure sale, notwithstanding general law of State, transferring rights to such purchasers, pp. 183–185.

Approved in Norfolk, etc., R. R. v. Pendleton, 156 U. S. 673, 39 L. 576, 15 S. Ct. 415, holding purchaser of railroad at foreclosure sale subject to general law of State, prescribing rates; Keokuk, etc., R. R. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 311, 38 L. 455, 14 S. Ct. 596, holding legislature had no power to grant exemption to consolidated corporation, after Constitution of 1865; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 180, 40 L. 662, 16 S. Ct. 473, reviewing authorities, and holding immunity from taxation did not pass to legal successor of insurance company; Covington, etc., Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 587, 41 L. 563, 17 S. Ct. 202, holding turnpike company not entitled to immunity from taxation, granted to its predecessor; Baltimore, etc., Ry. v. Ocean City, 89 Md. 98, 42 Atl. 923, holding purchaser of railroad not entitled to prior exemption from taxation; Adams v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., — Miss. —, 24 So. 210, reviewing authorities, and holding exemption could not pass into consolidated company, without express declaration; Hoard v. Chesapeake, etc., Ry., 123 U. S. 226, 31 L. 132, 8 S. Ct. 76, purchasers at foreclosure not bound to specifically perform original railroad's contract; Frank v. New York, etc., R. R., 22 N. Y. 217, 25 N. E. 337, holding purchasing company acquired only such property as was transferred under direction of court; Railroad v. Alsbrook, 110 N. C. 153, 14 S. E. 655, holding charter did not extend exemption to branch roads; Pennison v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 88 Wis. 347, 67 N. W. 702, holding a liability for tort did not pass to purchaser of offending railroad; dissenting opinions in Traverse Co. v. St. Paul, etc., Ry., 73 Minn. 433, 76 N. W. 222, majority holding exemption appurtenant to line of road, and existing in favor of purchaser; New Orleans City, etc., Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 196, 36 L. 122, 12 S. Ct. 407, obiter.

Distinguished in Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 146, 29 L. 835, 6 S. Ct. 651, holding consolidated company entitled to exemption of one of the uniting companies; International, etc., Ry. v. State, 75 Tex. 373, 12 S. W. 681, holding exemption adhered to property, and passed to successors. Explained in State Board v. Morris, etc., R. R., 49 N. J. L. 203, 204, 7 Atl. 830, holding immunity from taxation passed to lessee by force of lease, and statute validating it.

Railroads.— Franchises of railroad corporation are rights or privileges essential to its operation. Immunity from taxation is not one of them, and is incapable of transfer without express statutory direction. p. 186.

Approved in St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 656, 39 L. 570, 15 S. Ct. 487, holding right to fix rates of fare did not accompany transfer of railroad property; Norfolk, etc., R. R. v. Pendleton, 156 U. S. 667, 39 L. 576, 15 S. Ct. 415, holding purchaser of railroad at foreclosure sale not entitled to exemption from State law regulating fare; Keokuk, etc., R. Co. v. County Court, 41 Fed. 308, holding grant of franchises and privileges of another corporation did not include immunity from taxation; Chadwick v. Old Colony R. R., 171 Mass. 301, 50 N. E. 630, holding right to operate railroad and take tolls passed by foreclosure sale to a natural person; State Board v. Morris, etc., R. R., 49 N. J. L. 200, 206, 207, 7 Atl. 829, 831, 832, holding immunity from taxation passed to lessee by force of statute, and terms of lease; International, etc., Ry. v. State, 75 Tex. 373, 12 S. W. 686, holding immunity from taxation not a franchise, within meaning of Texas statute, respecting quo warranto proceedings; Commercial Electric-Light, etc., Co. v. Judson, — Wash. —, 56 Pac. 332, relating to assessment and taxation of franchises; State v. Anderson, 90 Wis. 561, 63 N. W. 748, holding franchises taxable.

Constitutional law.— Corporation created by West Virginia acts of 1870 and 1871, with same powers as its predecessor, created in 1863, is subject to provisions of act of 1869, reserving right to alter charter. pp. 187–189.

Approved in Bibb v. Hall, 101 Ala. 99, 14 So. 104, holding corporations created under old law not affected by repeal of that law;

Adams v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., — Miss. —, 24 So. 211, holding consolidated corporation subject to constitutional provision, adopted prior to consolidation, prohibiting exemptions.

Miscellaneous.— Virginia Coupon Cases, 114 U. S. 296, 29 L. 194, 5 S. Ct. 917, generally, as to jurisdiction.

114 U. S. 190-195. 29 L. 132. LITCHFIELD v. BALLOU.

Equity.— Bill against city, for money had and received, for illegal bonds, fails for want of equitable jurisdiction, there being an appropriate remedy at law, p. 192.

Approved in Buzard v. Houston, 119 U. S. 352, 30 L. 454, 7 S. Ct. 252, dismissing bill where judgment for pecuniary damages would adjust rights under contract; Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Middleport, 124 U. S. 547, 31 L. 541, 8 S. Ct. 629, dismissing bill in equity, brought by holder of invalid city bonds; Zeringue v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 34 Fed. 243, denying equitable relief in action on contract to enforce building of bridges, and for damages; Paton v. Majors, 46 Fed. 211, dismissing bill in equity to obtain decree for payment of money received through fraud of agent; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Cannon, 46 Fed. 232, holding equity had no jurisdiction of bill, brought by one out of possession, to quiet title; Walker v. Brown, 58 Fed. 27, bill for discovery, brought by creditor, against administrator, dismissed for want of equity; Alger v. Anderson, 92 Fed. 699, 709, where vendee waived fraud of vendor, equity had no jurisdiction.

Municipal corporations.— Prohibition in State Constitution, limiting indebtedness for any purpose, incurrable by municipal corporation, is as effectual against an implied, as an express promise, and is as binding in equity as at law, pp. 192, 193.

Approved in Doon Twp. v. Cummins, 142 U. S. 374, 35 L. 1047, 12 S. Ct. 222, holding township bonds void as against constitutional prohibition limiting indebtedness; Hedges v. Dixon Co., 150 U. S. 191, 37 L. 1048, 14 S. Ct. 74, and Anderson v. Orient Fire Ins. Co., 88 Iowa, 592, 55 N. W. 352, both holding similarly as to county bonds; Andrews Bros. Co. v. Youngstown Coke Co., 39 Fed. 354, refusing equitable relief on contract not legally binding; Morton v. Nevada, 41 Fed. 586, action for money had and received, held ineffectual to recover on void bonds; Weber v. Spokane Nat. Bank, 50 Fed. 737, holding contract creating debt in excess of limitation fixed by charter of bank, void; Brazoria Co. v. Youngstown Bridge Co., 80 Fed. 17, 52 U. S. App. 18, holding equity could not enforce void bridge contract with county; Gillette, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Canyon Co., 85 Fed. 398, denying recovery on void bridge contract with county; Gamewell v. Laporte, etc., Tel. Co., 96 Fed. 666, affirming S. C., 146 Ind. 469, 58 Am. St. Rep. 361, 45 N. E. 589, 35 L. R. A. 688, holding contract with city, for use of fire alarms, void as in excess of powers; People v. May, 9 Colo. 99, 10 Pac. 652, county warrants held void; Prince v. Quincy, 128 Ill. 458, 21 N. E. 771, contract for supply of water held within constitutional prohibition; Lovejoy v. Foxcroft, 91 Me. 383, 40 Atl. 147, excessive loans to town for building road; Water-Works Co. v. Ironwood, 99 Mich. 459, 58 N. W. 373, holding city could not avoid restriction upon its indebtedness, by buying property subject to mortgage; Mister v. Kansas City, 18 Mo. App. 228, holding appropriation by council for retaining wall illegal, and contract unenforceable; Raton Water-Works Co. v. Raton, 9 N. Mex. 87, 49 Pac. 904, 908, dismissing bill seeking to recover more than amount of two-mill levy provided by law; England v. Dinnie, 8 N. Dak. 12, 76 N. W. 297, illegal contract by city to construct electric-light plant; McAleer v. Angell, 19 R. I. 694, 36 Atl. 580, contract for stone held void, where town had reached its debt limit; Huron Water-Works Co. v. Huron, 7 S. Dak. 34, 58 Am. St. Rep. 834, 62 N. W. 982, 30 L. R. A. 859, holding sale of water-works by city unauthorized, and therefore it entitled to possession; Davis v. County Court, 38 W. Va. 108, 18 S. E. 375, holding county orders binding future levies, void; Earles v. Wells, 94 Wis. 296, 59 Am. St. Rep. 889, 68 N. W. 967, reviewing authorities, and holding city contract for purchase of water-works void; Crogster v. Bayfield Co., 89 Wis. 15, 74 N. W. 640, as to executory contract to issue bonds in aid of railroad; Buck v. Eureka, 119 Cal. 45, 50 Pac. 1065, without particular application. See 44 Am. St. Rep. 233, and 45 Am. St. Rep. 259, notes.

Distinguished in Weber v. Spokane Nat. Bank, 64 Fed. 211, 29 U. S. App. 97, holding indebtedness incurred by national bank in excess of powers, not void; Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Lyon Co., 82 Fed. 99, where excessive indebtedness of county was used to discharge prior indebtedness; Thomas v. Burlington, 69 Iowa, 143, 28 N. W. 462, allowing recovery of taxes illegally exacted, though city was indebted beyond constitutional limitation.

Municipal corporations.— When money received from bonds, void because in excess of constitutional limit of indebtedness, was expended with other funds in erecting city water-works, it would be equally within the prohibition to impose a lien upon such works in favor of bondholders, p. 194.

Approved in Randolph v. Allen, 73 Fed. 40, 41 U. S. App. 117, holding no lien existed upon stock purchased in part with money fraudulently obtained, and in part with other moneys; O'Brien v. Wheelock, 95 Fed. 909, holding no lien existed in favor of bondholders, on lands assessed to pay for invalid bonds. See 51 Am. St. Rep. 861, note.

Municipal corporations.— Holders of illegal bonds are participes criminis with agent of city issuing them, and equity will not raise a resulting trust in favor of bondholders, p. 194.

Approved in Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Campbell Com. Co., 77 Fed. 708, 709, holding creditor had no preference, where misappropriated trust funds could not be clearly followed; O'Brien v. Wheelock, 95 Fed. 909, denying relief to bondholders against landowners assessed to pay for illegal bonds; Anderson v. Orient Fire Ins. Co., 88 Iowa, 592, 55 N. W. 352, holding bondholders bound to take notice of illegality of bonds; Goose River Bank v. Willow Lake, etc., Twp., 1 N. Dak. 29, 26 Am. St. Rep. 607, 44 N. W. 1002, holding teacher without lawful certificate could not recover on warrant.

Municipal corporations.— If complainants seek money given to city for illegal bonds, they must clearly identify it, or fund or other property which represents that money, so that it can be reclaimed and delivered without interfering with rights of other persons, p. 195.

Cited in 98 Am. Dec. 691, note.

114 U. S. 196-218, 29 L. 158, GLOUCESTER FERRY CO. v. PENNSYLVANIA.

Commerce.— A tax upon receiving and landing of passengers and freight, is a tax upon their transportation, p. 203.

Commerce among the States consists of intercourse and traffic between their citizens, and includes transportation of persons and property, and navigation of public waters for that purpose, as well as the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, p. 203.

Approved in Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 217, 38 L. 968, 14 S. Ct. 1092, holding traffic across bridge connecting two States, to be interstate commerce; Addyston Pipe, etc., Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 241, 20 S. Ct. 107, holding combination for monopoly of iron pipe, etc., in the several States, a restraint upon interstate commerce; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Sessions, 28 Fed. 593, holding transportation of goods through several States constitutes interstate commerce; The Katie, 40 Fed. 492, 7 L. R. A. 65, and n., holding navigation of Savannah river in Georgia and South Carolina within jurisdiction of Congress; In re Grand Jury, 62 Fed. 841, and United States v. Cassidy, 67 Fed. 705, instructions to grand jury at time of great railroad strike; Ex parte Jervey, 66 Fed. 959, holding South Carolina law void, so far as it prohibited importation of liquors into State, without being unloaded; United States v. Coal Dealers' Assn., 85 Fed. 265, holding contracts regulating sale of coal in California, brought from other States, in violation of act of Congress, July 2, 1890; McNaughton v. McGirl, 20 Mont. 131, 63 Am. St. Rep. 614, 49 Pac. 653, 38 L. R. A. 370, holding agent in Montana buying wool and consigning it to foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Hardee, 4 N. Mex. 177, 16 Pac. 607, selling of machines, by agent in New Mexico, shipped from New Jersey, constitutes interstate commerce; Bateman v. Western Star Milling Co., 1 Tex. Civ. App. 92, 20 S. W. 932, holding sale of merchandise in Texas, belonging to Kansas corporation, constituted interstate commerce; dissenting opinions in O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 346, 36 L. 461, 12 S. Ct. 702, majority holding commerce clause of Constitution not in question; United States v. E. C. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 22, 39 L. 832, 15 S. Ct. 257, majority holding monopoly of refined sugar was not in restraint of commerce, contrary to act of July 2, 1890; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 167, 41 L. 969, 17 S. Ct. 538, majority holding bridge company taxed did not itself actually carry on interstate commerce; Dueber, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Howard Watch, etc., Co., 66 Fed. 650, 35 U. S. App. 16, majority holding complaint failed to show case within act of Congress of July 2, 1890; In re Greene, 52 Fed. 113, arguendo.

Distinguished in Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 597, 19 S. Ct. 6[illegible], reversing S. C., 82 Fed. 538, 540, holding Kansas City Live-Stock Exchange, soliciting consignments from other States, not engaged in interstate commerce.

Commerce.— Power of Congress includes power to prescribe rules by which it is to be governed, and control instrumentalities by which it may be carried on, pp. 203, 204.

Approved in Cuban Steamship Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 66 Fed. 67, holding State law prohibiting sailors of foreign vessels from working on wharves, unconstitutional; Clyde Steamship Co. v. City Council, 76 Fed. 48, holding State could not exact license tax from vessel landing wharf, and having office at one of its ports; North Bloomfield, etc., Min. Co. v. United States, 88 Fed. 675, 59 U. S. App. 385, reviewing authorities, and sustaining act of Congress regulating hydraulic mining in California in its relation to navigable rivers; Cann v. White, etc., Mach. Co., 57 Ark. 34, 38 Am. St. Rep. 225, 20 S. W. 582, 18 L. R. A. 207, holding contract of agent selling for principal residing in another State, not affected by State statute requiring certificate to be filed with secretary of State, etc.; Bullard v. Northern Pac. R. R., 10 Mont. 180, 25 Pac. 122, act of Congress of February 4, 1887, prohibiting unjust discrimination by carriers; Missouri, etc., Ry. v. Fookes, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 40 S. W. 859, holding State could not compel railroad to redeem unused tickets in interstate transportation; Baltimore v. Baltimore Trust Co., 166 U. S. 684, 41 L. 1164, 17 S. Ct. 701, holding, under power to "regulate," city could compel street railroad to use but one track; Hershfield v. Rocky Mt., etc., Co., 12 Mont. 118, 29 Pac. 887, holding power of city to license telephone company, carried with it power to grant privilege of using telephone poles.

Commerce.— States may prescribe regulations as to subjects of commerce, local and limited in their nature, until Congress intervenes and assumes control, p. 204.

Approved in The City of Norwalk, 55 Fed. 107, reviewing authorities, and holding State statute valid, conferring damages for death caused by collision on navigable waters, within State; Cotting v.

Kansas City, etc., Co., 82 Fed. 844, holding State statute regulating Kansas City stockyards, valid; dissenting opinions in Potter v. Rio Arriba, etc., Co., 4 N. Mex. 333, 17 Pac. 620, majority holding act prohibiting acquisition of land by aliens, did not apply to pre-existing contracts of sale; Wabash, etc., Ry. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 564, 30 L. 246, 7 S. Ct. 6, arguendo.

Commerce.— When subjects are national in their character, requiring uniformity, power of Congress is exclusive, and its non-action is a declaration that commerce shall remain free, p. 204.

Approved in Pickard v. Pullman, etc., Car Co., 117 U. S. 49, 29 L. 790, 6 S. Ct. 642, holding sleeping-car tax void, so far as it affected interstate transit; Wabash, etc., Ry. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 575, 30 L. 250, 7 S. Ct. 12, holding State statute prohibiting discriminations in rates, invalid as to transportation beyond its limits; Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 492, 30 L. 696, 7 S. Ct. 594, holding State tax on drummers, void; Philadelphia Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 344, 30 L. 1204, 7 S. Ct. 1124, State tax on gross receipts of domestic steamship company transporting beyond the State, held void; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 357, 30 L. 1189, 7 S. Ct. 1128, holding Indiana statute invalid, regulating delivery of telegraph messages outside of State; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 648, 32 L. 314, 8 S. Ct. 1384, holding State license tax on telegraph company, unconstitutional; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 58, 35 L. 652, 11 S. Ct. 854, holding Kentucky statute taxing agents of foreign express companies, void; State v. Woodruff Sleeping, etc., Coach Co., 114 Ind. 158, 15 N. E. 815, holding tax on earnings of sleeping-car company, transporting from one State to another, void; Commonwealth v. Smith, 92 Ky. 46, 36 Am. St. Rep. 583, 17 S. W. 189, holding arbitrary tax on business of foreign express companies, void; State v. Stephens, 146 Mo. 682, 69 Am. St. Rep. 637, 48 S. W. 934, and Bain v. Railroad, 105 N. C. 367, 18 Am. Rep. 916, 11 S. E. 312, 8 L. R. A. 301, and n., both holding rolling-stock of foreign railroad company in transitu, not taxable by State; McNaughton v. McGirl, 20 Mont. 131, 63 Am. St. Rep. 614, 44 Pac. 653, 38 L. R. A. 370, holding State act, imposing terms upon foreign corporations, void as to transactions of agent buying wool for, and consigning it to, such corporation; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Hardee, 4 N. Mex. 178, 16 Pac. 608, holding law requiring foreign corporation to file articles, etc., void as to corporation selling machines by its agents; People v. Hawkins, 157 N. Y. 16, 68 Am. St. Rep. 747, 51 N. E. 261, 42 L. R. A. 497, holding State act making it penal to sell any convict-made goods without a label, void; Missouri, etc., Ry. v. Fookes, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 40 S. W. 859, holding State statute requiring railroads to redeem unused tickets invalid, as to interstate transportation; concurring opinion in Bowman v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 125 U. S. 508, 31 L. 715, 8 S. Ct. 1066, majority holding Iowa statute requiring certificate of carrier bringing liquors into State, void; dissenting opinions in Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 676, 31 L. 215, 8 S. Ct. 305, majority sustaining Kansas "prohibition law;" Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 234, 41 L. 700, 17 S. Ct. 314, majority holding State law valid, taxing property of express company within State in proportion to whole capital employed in several States; Roper v. California, 155 U. S. 653, 39 L. 300, 15 S. Ct. 209, generally. Cited in 59 Am. Rep. 269, and 27 Am. St. Rep. 550, notes.

Distinguished in Western Union Tel. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 661, 40 L. 1109, 16 S. Ct. 938, sustaining Georgia statute, imposing penalty on telegraph company for failure to deliver messages coming from points outside of State; Rhea v. Newport, etc., R. Co., 50 Fed. 22, holding State had right to authorize bridge across navigable stream within its borders, where Congress had not intervened; Seawell v. Kansas City, etc., Ry., 119 Mo. 235, 237, 24 S. W. 1005, holding State could prohibit discriminating rates between different points within the State, although line of transportation was partly without; Providence Coal Co. v. Providence, etc., R. R., 15 R. I. 310, 4 Atl. 31, holding State statute prohibiting discriminations in transportation to points without the State, not a regulation of commerce; Gulf, etc., Ry. v. Dwyer, 75 Tex. 579, 16 Am. St. Rep. 928, 12 S. W. 1002, 7 L. R. A. 479, holding State law, imposing penalty upon carrier, for failure to deliver, not a regulation of commerce; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Tyler, 90 Va. 299, 44 Am. St. Rep. 912, 18 S. E. 281, holding State act requiring telegraph companies to deliver messages promptly, not a burden upon commerce.

Commerce.— Corporations, as well as individuals, are within protection of commercial power of Congress, pp. 204, 205.

Approved in Philadelphia Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 342, 344, 30 L. 1206, 1204, 7 S. Ct. 1123, 1124, holding State tax upon gross receipts of domestic steamship company engaged in interstate transportation, unconstitutional; Stockton v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. 14, where Congress granted to New York corporation right to build bridge over river from one State to another; McNaughton v. McGirl, 20 Mont. 128, 63 Am. St. Rep. 612, 49 Pac. 652, 38 L. R. A. 33, foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce in Montana.

Commerce.— Power of State to interfere with landing and receiving of passengers and freight, is confined to such measures as will prevent confusion among vessels, and collision between them, and facilitate discharge of passengers and freight, which fall under head of port regulations, p. 206.

Approved in Madison v. Abbott, 118 Ind. 339, 341, 21 N. E. 29, sustaining State statute designating time and place of landing for ferry plying between different States; Carroll v. Campbell, 108 Mo. 32, 17 S. W. 888, holding city could grant ferry privilege to boats on navigable rivers between two States; dissenting opinion in Norfolk, etc., R. R. v. Commonwealth, 88 Va. 111, 13 S. E. 345, 13 L. R.

A. 113, and n., majority holding State could not forbid interstate trains to run on Sunday. See 29 Am. St. Rep. 714, note.

Commerce.— Ferry-boat plying between two States, can only be taxed at its home port, p. 210.

Cited in State v. State Board, 3 S. Dak. 351, 53 N. W. 196, holding real and personal property of foreign express company, within the State, taxable.

Commerce.— Tax by Pennsylvania, upon capital stock of New Jersey ferry company, and upon transportation of passengers and freight from New Jersey to Pennsylvania, is unconstitutional and void, pp. 210, 211.

Approved in Pickard v. Pullman, etc., Car Co., 117 U. S. 49, 29 L. 790, 6 S. Ct. 642, holding State tax on sleeping cars, used in interstate commerce, void; Philadelphia Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 344, 30 L. 1204, 7 S. Ct. 1124, holding State tax on domestic company doing transportation business in different States, void; Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 244, 30 L. 894, 7 S. Ct. 863, holding State tax upon gross receipts of foreign transportation company, void; Norfolk, etc., R. R. v. Penn, 136 U. S. 120, 34 L. 397, 10 S. Ct. 961, holding license tax upon railroad doing interstate business, and having office in Pennsylvania, invalid; Central R. R. v. State Board, 49 N. J. L. 23, 7 Atl. 317, New Jersey act, taxing engines, cars, etc., of Pennsylvania corporation, according to time used in State, held unconstitutional; People v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 14, 15, 33 N. E. 724, 19 L. R. A. 699, holding tax on business of railroad exclusively engaged in interstate commerce, void; dissenting opinions in Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 232, 233, 234, 41 L. 699, 700, 17 S. Ct. 313, 314, majority holding "unit rule" of taxation upon property of foreign express company within State, valid; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 169, 41 L. 960, 17 S. Ct. 539, majority holding tax on intangible property of company owning bridge between Kentucky and Indiana, valid; Pullman's Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 23, 35 L. 616, 11 S. Ct. 878, arguendo.

Distinguished in Pullman's Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 24, 25, 35 L. 617, 11 S. Ct. 878, 879 (see dissenting opinion in 141 U. S. 33, 36, 35 L. 620, 621, 11 S. Ct. 881, 883), holding State tax on proportion of capital stock of foreign corporation, invested in cars used within the State, valid; Carroll v. Campbell, 108 Mo. 565, 17 S. W. 888, holding city had right to grant franchise to ferry doing interstate business; People v. Wemple, 131 N. Y. 71, 27 Am. St. Rep. 546, 29 N. E. 1003, holding State statute valid, imposing tax upon foreign manufacturing corporation for privilege of doing business; Tugwell, etc. v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co., 74 Tex. 490, 9 S. W. 122, holding State could grant exclusive ferry privilege over river between United States and Mexico. Questioned in Telegraph Co. v.

Sav. 71 Miss. 560, 562, 42 Am. St. Rep. 477, 479, 14 So. 37, 38, reviewing conflicting authorities, and holding State privilege tax on foreign telegraph company, valid.

Commerce.— Freedom of commerce from imposition of State taxes, does not imply exemption from charges, as compensation for use of property, or for facilities afforded for its use, or ordinary taxes upon value of property within jurisdiction of State, p. 217.

Approved in Ficklen v. Shelby Co., 145 U. S. 22, 36 L. 607, 12 S. Ct. 862, holding tax on commission merchants, though buying and selling goods outside of State, valid; Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 222, 38 L. 970, 14 S. Ct. 1093, holding company might make reasonable charges for use of bridge connecting two States; Pullman's Car Co. v. Twombly, 29 Fed. 663, 668, holding sleeping cars, used continuously on a single run, subject to State tax; Beyer v. Odd Fellows, etc., Assn., 157 Mass. 373, 34 Am. St. Rep. 293, 32 N. E. 472, holding State may prescribe mode of service of process of its courts upon foreign corporation doing business there; J. S. Keator Lumber Co. v. St. Croix, etc., Corp., 72 Wis. 94, 7 Am. St. Rep. 857, 38 N. W. 541, holding State could grant privilege of constructing boom in navigable river constituting its boundary; dissenting opinions in Wabash, etc., Ry. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 589, 30 L. 255, 7 S. Ct. 20, majority holding State law prohibiting discriminating rates invalid, as to transportation from that to other States; Bain v. Railroad, 105 N. C. 365, 18 Am. St. Rep. 914, 11 S. E. 812, 8 L. R. A. 300, and n., arguendo; Commonwealth v. Roswell, 173 Mass. 121, 53 N. E. 133, obiter; Jack v. Walker, 79 Fed. 141, generally, with approval. See 27 Am. St. Rep. 555, note.

Distinguished in Tugwell, etc. v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co., 74 Tex. 494, 12 S. W. 655, holding State had power to grant license to operate ferry across stream constituting its boundary.

114 U. S. 218-223, 29 L. 94, LAMAR v. MICOU.

Domicile.— Marriage of widow to second husband does not necessarily change the domicile of infant children by first marriage, p. 219.

Cited, arguendo, in Marks v. Marks, 75 Fed. 325.

Guardian, appointed in State not the domicile of his ward, should err in accounting for his investments, be held to a narrower range of securities than was allowed by law of ward's domicile, pp. 220-222.

Cited without particular application in Liverpool Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 458, 32 L. 796, 9 S. Ct. 476.

Domicile.— Infants, who, after the death of both their parents, move to the home of their paternal grandmother, and next of kin, in another State, acquire her domicile, p. 223.

Approved in In re Benton, 92 Iowa, 205, 54 Am. St. Rep. 542, 60 N. W. 615, holding paternal grandfather and next of kin, guardian by nature; Woodward v. Woodward, 87 Tenn. 657, 11 S. W. 886, holding adopted child acquired domicile of its adoptive parent.

Evidence.— Federal courts are bound to take judicial notice of the law of any State, whether depending upon statutes or judicial opinions, p. 223.

Followed in Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 657, 40 L. 295, 16 S. Ct. 134, taking judicial notice of convention to revise State Constitution; Newberry v. Robinson. 36 Fed. 843, as to Constitution and statutes of Ohio; State v. Coosaw Min. Co., 45 Fed. 808, taking notice of acts not fully pleaded; Merchants' Exch. Bank v. M'Graw, 59 Fed. 977, 15 U. S. App. 332, holding pleading of wrong statute immaterial; Davidow v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 85 Fed. 944, examining laws of Pennsylvania, giving cause of action for injury causing death.

Qualified in Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 6, 29 L. 537, 6 S. Ct. 245, holding, on writ of error from State court, Federal Supreme Court will not take judicial notice of law of another State, unless made part of record. Distinguished in Liverpool Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 445, 32 L. 793, 9 S. Ct. 473, holding law of Great Britain must be pleaded and proved.

114 U. S. 224-233, 29 L. 101, XENIA BANK v. STEWART.

Evidence.— Declarations made by officer or agent of corporation, in response to timely inquiries, properly addressed to him, and relating to matters under his charge, in respect to which he is authorized, in usual course of business, to give information, may be given in evidence against corporation, p. 229.

Followed in Richelieu, etc., Nav. Co. v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 26 Fed. 600, declaration of master of vessel before notary, that compass was "a little out;" St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Weaver, 35 Kan. 431, 11 Pac. 418, collecting authorities, and admitting conversation of civil engineer and roadmaster, before the accident, respecting dangerous place on road.

Distinguished in Tuthill Spring Co. v. Shaver Wagon Co., 35 Fed. 646, declarations, as to transfer of note, made by officer of corporation, held not part of res gestæ, and inadmissible; Williams v. Lewis, 115 Ind. 50, 7 Am. St. Rep. 407, 17 N. E. 265, holding declaration of partner that firm property belonged to one partner individually, not binding on firm.

Evidence.— Statement by cashier to person, who was in treaty to purchase, that bank was not owner of certain security in manual possession of cashier, was in line of his duty, and binding on bank, p. 229.

Cited in Pouilin v. Canadian Pac. Ry., 47 Fed. 860, railroad company held liable for negligence of ticket agent.

Distinguished in Consolidated Milling Co. v. Fogo, 104 Wis. 96, 80 N. W. 105, holding declarations of officer of bank, made without scope of his authority, not binding on bank.

Evidence.— Letter written by cashier of bank, admitting cancellation of note, and holding of securities, is admissible against bank, as evidence of certain disposition of securities, p. 230.

Distinguished in Clark v. Ford, 7 Kan. App. 336, 51 Pac. 939, rejecting letters, where there was no showing as to how they were exchanged.

Evidence.— Proof of insolvency of debtor is not competent evidence to show non-payment of debts, p. 231.

Approved in Bridgewater Gas Co. v. Horne Gas, etc., Co., 59 Fed. 42, 16 U. S. App. 569, holding evidence of expense of pipe line, too remote to prove good faith in performing contract; Triplett v. Goff, 83 Va. 787, 3 S. E. 527, habits of defendant as to becoming surety, held inadmissible in action on bond; Devere v. State, 5 Ohio C. C. 517, 523, evidence of indigence of one accused of forgery, held inadmissible.

Evidence.— Question calling for information, and not for knowledge of teller of bank, as to certain payment, is incompetent, p. 232.

Payment.— Creditor, in possession of debtor's property as agent, trustee or bailee, cannot, without reducing debt to judgment, without order of court, or consent of debtor, apply its proceeds to payment of his debt, p. 233.

114 U. S. 233-244, 29 L. 110, UNITED STATES v. MINOR.

Courts.— Question presenting whole case, without showing distinct point of division, cannot be certified to Supreme Court for answer, p. 238.

Public lands.— United States, in bill in equity, to set aside patent for fraud, is not bound to offer return of purchase money. It is forfeited under provisions of § 2262, R. S., p. 238.

Approved in Mery v. Brodt, 121 Cal. 338, 53 Pac. 820, holding owners of mining claim, in action against fraudulent patentee, not required to reimburse him for money forfeited to government.

Distinguished in People v. Bryan, 78 Cal. 377, 14 Pac. 893, holding State must offer return of purchase money, in suit to cancel swamp-land patent, on account of defective application.

Public lands.— United States may, by bill in chancery, vacate land patent, obtained by fraud, if there are no innocent purchasers for value, pp. 239-241.

Approved in United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 282, 284, 31 L. 750, 751, 8 S. Ct. 855, 856, holding, if government has an interest, it may file bill to set aside patent for fraud; United States

v. [illegible] Co., 125 U. S. 366, 32 L. 461, 9 S. Ct. 96, reviewing authorities, and sustaining bill to revoke patent for invention, obtained by fraud; Smith v. Ewing, 11 Sawy. 64, 23 Fed. 747, where innocent purchaser of certificate of purchase took right to patent purged of fraud; United States v. Rose, 11 Sawy. 85, 24 Fed. 197, bill to set aside patent for fraud; United States v. Curtner, 11 Sawy. 412, 415, 26 Fed. 297, 299, sustaining bill by United States, to annul patents issued by mistake; United States v. Williams, 12 Sawy. 149, 30 Fed. 315, suit to cancel listing of lands to State of Nevada, alleging fraud or mistake; United States v. Hancock, 12 Sawy. 385, 386, 30 Fed. 853, 854, holding no satisfactory proof of fraud sufficient to annul patent; United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co., 24 Fed. 569, bill to set aside patents for placer mines, dismissed on the merits. The following also hold bills to set aside patents maintainable by the government; Brewster v. Kansas City, etc., Ry., 25 Fed. 243, and United States v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., 26 Fed. 123, to correct mistake in survey; United States v. Central Pac. R. Co., 84 Fed. 219, mistake as to character of land; United States v. San Pedro, etc., Agua Co., 4 N. Mex. 290, 17 Pac. 402 (see concurring opinion in 4 N. Mex. 310, 17 Pac. 422), wrongful survey obtained by fraud; Steele v. Walker, 115 Ala. 490, 67 Am. St. Rep. 65, 21 So. 943, as to right of government to recover lands forfeited by State; Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 207, 40 L. 123, 16 S. Ct. 160, holding judgment obtained in France could be impeached for fraud; Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 348, 27 Am. St. Rep. 145, 28 Pac. 564, 16 L. R. A. 363, and n., sustaining bill to set aside judgment obtained upon fraudulent claim, and without actual notice to defendant; United States v. Reed, 12 Sawy. 104, 28 Fed. 485, generally; Laughton v. Nadeau, 75 Fed. 793, generally; Horsky v. Moran, 21 Mont. 356, 53 Pac. 1068, generally; United States v. Bell Tel. Co., 167 U. S. 240, 42 L. 154, 17 S. Ct. 810, arguendo; Noble v. Union River, etc., R. R., 147 U. S. 176, 37 L. 127, 13 S. Ct. 274, obiter.

Distinguished in Colorado Coal Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 313, 31 L. 185, 8 S. Ct. 133, where patented land had passed to bona fide purchasers; United States v. Ball, 12 Sawy. 516, 31 Fed. 668, holding certificate of purchase not subject to collateral attack; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Cannon, 46 Fed. 230, dismissing bill in equity by private parties having legal title, to determine adverse title of patentee; Jones v. Meyers, 2 Idaho, 798, 35 Am. St. Rep. 262, 26 Pac. 217, where commissioner of land office cancelled final receipt and certificate before patent issued.

Public lands.— Patent issued on confirmation of grant, after proceedings prescribed by act of Congress, judicial in character, is an execution of such decree of confirmation, and conclusive, pp. 241, 242.

Approved in United Land Assn. v. Knight, 85 Cal. 469, 472, 24 Pac. 827, 828, holding patent should conform to decree fixing boundary of pueblo grant to San Francisco.

Public lands.— Though decisions of land department, on facts before them, are conclusive, rule does not apply to proceedings only ex parte, pp. 243, 244.

Approved in Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 585, 34 L. 1068, 11 S. 2 34, holding decision of land department that lands were not "swamp lands," conclusive; Bishop of Nesqually v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 39 L. 936, 15 S. Ct. 784, collecting authorities, decision of secretary of interior, as to existence of missionary station, and amount of land occupied, held final; Wisconsin Cent. R. R. v. United States, 164 U. S. 207, 41 L. 405, 17 S. Ct. 50, holding mistake of postmaster-general in making overpayment, could be rectified by his successor; Calhoun v. Violet, 173 U. S. 63, 19 S. Ct. 325, decision of land department that party had made entry prior to time fixed by statute, held final; United States v. Hancock, 12 Sawy. 384, 30 Fed. 6, holding decree of commissioners, confirming designated tract of land, final; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Wright, 51 Fed. 72, holding, not discretion of land department to determine whether land was mineral or non-mineral; Stimson Land Co. v. Hollister, 75 Fed. 944, cancellation of entries by land department, by proceedings based on extortion and fraud, held not conclusive; Forbes v. Driscoll, 4 Dak. 357, 31 N. W. 644, holding court of law could not hear contest's right to pre-emption; Porter v. Bishop, 25 Fla. 760, 6 So. 8, holding decision of secretary of interior, as to settlement and improvements, final: Horsky v. Moran, 21 Mont. 352, 53 Pac. 1066, holding patentee presumably entitled under decision of land office; Bissell v. Bush, 6 Wyo. 354, 45 Pac. 490, cancellation of entry by commissioner held conclusive, in absence of fraud or want of power; United States v. San Pedro, etc., Agua Co., 4 N. Mex. 308, 17 Pac. 420, majority holding facts showed fraud, and United States entitled to have survey set aside, etc.

114 U. S. 244-247, 29 L. 143, WEAVER v. FIELD.

Mortgages.— In suit to foreclose, held, that plaintiff never acquired title to notes as owner, and under laws of Louisiana they were extinguished by confusion, pp. 245-247.

Not cited.

114 U. S. 248-252, 29 L. 142, DOE v. HYDE.

Bankruptcy.— Suit by creditor, against assignee, to recover securities surrendered to assignee, held barred, § 5057, R. S., p. 250.

Not cited.

114 U. S. 252-262, 29 L. 126, BISSELL v. FOSS.

Tenancy in common.— Purchase of outstanding title or incumbrance, by one or more tenants in common, inures to benefit of all,

[illegible] 150 U. S. 586, 37 L. 1191, 14 [illegible] of legal title from land office, inured [illegible] Chapman, 24 Fed. 678, holding tena[illegible] to save running of statute again[illegible] 15 Mont. 211, 38 Pac. 1070, holdin[illegible] of patent obtained upon payment [illegible] Am. Dec. 767, note.

[illegible] mining.— Member of mining partnership may pu[illegible] for his own benefit, without being require[illegible] partnership for property, pp. 260–262.

[illegible] Harris v. Lloyd, 11 Mont. 404, 28 Am. St. Rep. 48[illegible] where one mining partner received higher sum for hi[illegible] his co-owners.

[illegible] Kimberly v. Arms, 129 U. S. 529, 32 L. 770, 9 S[illegible] holding member of partnership for purchase and sale o[illegible] liable to account as in ordinary partnerships.

[illegible] and mining.— There is no relation of trust between min[illegible] violated, by sale by one partner to a stranger, or to on[illegible] of his share in property and business of associa[illegible] p. 261.

[illegible] Mills v. Hurd, 29 Fed. 411, holding "car trust associa[illegible]" similar to mining partnerships; Thomas v. Hurst, 73 Fed. [illegible] statute of limitations does not commence to run against repre[illegible] of mining partner at his death, for an accounting; Meag[illegible] v. Reed, 14 Colo. 354, 24 Pac. 687, 9 L. R. A. 462, mining part[illegible] organized to lease and operate mine; Harris v. Lloyd, 11 [illegible] 404, 28 Am. St. Rep. 482, 28 Pac. 739, where one mining partner sold his interest for more than was paid to his co-owners; Congdon v. Olds, 18 Mont. 491, 46 Pac. 263, holding members of mining partnership not necessarily liable on note signed by one; G. V. B. Min. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 95 Fed. 39, generally, without particular application. See 69 Am. St. Rep. 418, note.

114 U. S. 262–264, 29 L. 176, BRADSTREET CO. v. HIGGINS.

Costs.— Where writ of error was dismissed on motion of defendant in error, for want of jurisdiction, Supreme Court has authority to adjudge costs of motion to dismiss, against plaintiff in error, p. 264.

Approved in Miller v. Clark, 47 Fed. 851, Circuit Court refusing to proceed until costs of appeal to Supreme Court were paid; Patter[illegible] v. Cilley, 50 Fed. 337, 5 U. S. App. 9, judgment for costs awarded to defendant in error, on motion to dismiss in Circuit Court of Appeals; Kinnear v. Flanders, 17 Colo. 14, 28 Pac. 328, taxing costs of intervention against intervenor, upon judgment of dismissal; Walko v. Walko, 64 Conn. 77, 29 Atl. 244, awarding costs to party properly pleading to jurisdiction; Kent v. Commrs. Labette Co., 4[illegible]

Kan. 857, 22 Pac. 611, costs given to appellee upon dismissal of appeal; Cereghino v. Third Dist. Court, 8 Utah, 459, 32 Pac. 699, taxing costs to appellee where appeal was dismissed for want of jurisdiction of lower court.

Distinguished in Tug River Coal, etc., Co. v. Brigel, 67 Fed. 630, 31 C. C. A. App. 665, dividing costs, where jurisdiction of lower court was questioned for first time on appeal.

114 U. S. 265-269, 29 L. 174, BOATMAN'S BANK v STATE SAVINGS ASSN.

Courts.— Question whether presentation of check drawn on banker, by customer having funds to his credit, two months before commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, amounted to an equitable transfer of that amount, presents no Federal question, and Supreme Court is without jurisdiction, pp. 268, 269.

Not cited.

114 U. S. 269-340, 29 L. 185, VIRGINIA COUPON CASES.

114 U. S. 270-306, 29 L. 185, POINDEXTER v. GREENHOW.

Constitutional law.— Virginia funding act of 1871, declaring coupons of State bonds receivable for State taxes, was a contract, and acts of 1882 and 1884, requiring taxpayer to pay taxes in money under protest, and file coupons in suit against collector, impairs its obligation, and are void, pp. 278-306.

Reaffirmed in following cases, involving same matter: White v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 308, 29 L. 199, 5 S. Ct. 923, Chaffin v. Taylor, 114 U. S. 310, 29 L. 199, 5 S. Ct. 924, Allen v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 314, 29 L. 201, 5 S. Ct. 926, Chaffin v. Taylor, 116 U. S. 570, 571, 29 L. 728, 6 S. Ct. 519, 520, and McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 106, 108, 19 S. Ct. 135, 136. Approved also in Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 578, 583, 29 L. 737, 738, 6 S. Ct. 513, 515, holding coupons receivable in payment of license; United States Exp. Co. v. Allen, 39 Fed. 713, holding Tennessee could not require payment of tax under protest alleged to be unconstitutional; Carr v. State, 127 Ind. 207, 22 Am. St. Rep. 626, 26 N. E. 779, 11 L. R. A. 771 and n., holding State could not repudiate certificates issued; Canal Co.'s Case, 83 Md. 626, 35 Atl. 365, holding State could not impair its contract to give bondholders first lien on tolls of canal; Marye v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 337, 29 L. 209, 5 S. Ct. 966, generally, in dissenting opinion to principal case. Cited historically in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 664, 668, 675, 676, 677, 684, 34 L. 305, 306, 309, 312, 10 S. Ct. 973, 974, 977, 980, and First Nat. Bank v. Treasurer, 25 Fed. 731, without particular application.

Distinguished in Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 599, 35 L. 277, 11 S. Ct. 649, holding bill in equity did not lie to restrain collection of illegal tax; Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry., 161 U. S. 663, 40 L. 844, 16 S. Ct. 709, holding general power given to railroad to consolidate, unexecuted, may be revoked as to parallel lines. Criticised in Commonwealth v. McCullough, 90 Va. 598, 611, 19 S. E. 114, 118, holding coupon feature of act of March 30, 1871, unconstitutional and void.

Taxation.— It being legal duty of collector to receive coupons in payment of taxes, on equal footing with gold or silver, lawful tender of payment is equivalent to actual payment, for purpose of affecting proceedings to enforce payment of taxes, making every subsequent step by collector illegal, pp. 279-283.

Reaffirmed in Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 579, 29 L. 736, 6 S. Ct. 513, tender of coupons to pay license fee; Norfolk Trust Co. v. Marye, 25 Fed. 663, involving Virginia coupons; Commonwealth v. Latham, 85 Va. 637, 8 S. E. 490, majority denying jurisdiction of suit to enjoin execution of judgment by State. See 77 Am. Dec. 489, note.

Explained in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 495, 31 L. 226, 8 S. Ct. 177, holding tender insufficient to extinguish all subsequent claim of State for taxes.

Detinue lies, where tax collector, without authority of law, has unlawfully seized personal property of natural private person, pp. 282, 283.

Distinguished in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 500, 31 L. 228, 8 S. Ct. 180, holding acts complained of to be acts of State of Virginia.

States.— Coupons of Virginia, negotiable by delivery merely, and receivable in payment of taxes, were not "bills of credit" within prohibition of Constitution, not being issued as substitute for money, p. 284.

Approved in Bragg v. Tuffts, 49 Ark. 563, 6 S. W. 162, treasury warrants of Arkansas held void; Hunt, Appellant, 141 Mass. 520, 6 N. E. 556, holding certificates of deposit of national banks, valid.

Distinguished in Wesley v. Eells, 90 Fed. 157, 160, holding bond scrip of South Carolina, to be "bills of credit," and void.

Constitutional law — States.— State and government of State are not identical. Immunity from suit does not exempt State from operation of constitutional provision, respecting impairment of contracts, and collector, distraining property without authority of law, cannot assert his official character as defense to suit, by party injured, pp. 286-292.

Approved in Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 16, 33 L. 847, 10 S. Ct. 507, but dismissing direct suit against State; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 10, 14, 35 L. 365, 366, 11 S. Ct. 701, 703, affirming S. C., 14 Sawy. 588, 589, 43 Fed. 199, 200, holding suit maintainable against land commissioners to restrain certain illegal acts; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 389, 38 L. 1021, 14 S. Ct. 1051, and Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Dey, 35 Fed. 871, 1 L. R. A. 748, and n.,

suits to restrain railroad commission from enforcing unjust rates, sustained; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Texas, etc., Ry., 51 Fed. 542 holding similarly; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 112, 41 L. 653, 17 S. Ct. 262, equity will enjoin constables from seizing property under unconstitutional statute; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 220, 42 L. 142, 17 S. Ct. 776, secretary of State denied defense in suit to recover real property; Head v. Porter, 48 Fed. 485, 486, 487, 488, sustaining action for infringement against officer of United States; President, etc. v. Sanger, 62 Fed. 180, action against State treasurer to enjoin diversion of funds under unconstitutional act; Mills v. Green, 67 Fed. 824, restraining registration officer from carrying out provisions of unconstitutional registration laws; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Henderson, 68 Fed. 594, reviewing authorities, and holding suit to restrain auditor in certifying certain valuations, not suit against State; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. M'Nall, 81 Fed. 893, action against superintendent of insurance held not suit against State; Taylor v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 88 Fed. 356, 60 U. S. App. 181, action against board of equalization, to enjoin them from certifying tax valuation; Scottish Union, etc., Ins. Co. v. Herriott, — Iowa, —, 89 N. W. 666, holding action against State treasurer to recover back taxes, not suit against State; Warren v. Kelley, 80 Me. 532, 15 Atl. 54, holding State officer liable for taking property by process in rem, issuing from State court against foreign vessel; Water-Power Co. v. Electric Co., 43 S. C. 169, 20 S. E. 1007, holding State not indispensable party in action between power companies for damages; Grunert v. Spalding, 104 Wis. 212, 78 N. W. 613, holding act of governor as to certain grants of land, not act of State; dissenting opinions in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 510, 513, 31 L. 231, 232, 8 S. Ct. 185, 187, majority holding suit virtually against State, and not maintainable; Robertson v. State, 109 Ind. 100, 10 N. E. 592, majority holding court had no jurisdiction to settle title to office of lieutenant-governor; generally in In re Comingore, 96 Fed. 562, and Brown v. Epps, 91 Va. 736, 21 S. E. 122, 27 L. R. A. 679.

Distinguished in Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 70, 29 L. 811, 6 S. Ct. 617, holding comptroller-general could not enter appearance of State and defend for it in his name; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 501, 31 L. 224, 8 S. Ct. 180, where acts of auditor, etc., were held acts of State of Virginia; Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 19, 20, 21, 40 L. 602, 603, 16 S. Ct. 446, holding United States necessary party to bill to enjoin infringement from use of patent in navy yard; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 527, 529, 19 S. Ct. 273, 274, dismissing suit against governor and attorney-general to test constitutionality of law reducing tolls; Manchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Herriott, 91 Fed. 715, dismissing bill by foreign corporation, effect of which was to compel State to allow it to carry on business there; Ball v. Rutland R. Co., 93 Fed. 218, dismissing action against State officers, to test validity of statute requiring sale of mileage books by railroad; State v. Auditor, 47 La. Ann. 1695, 18 So. 752, holding auditor could not question constitutionality of act in action against him, to compel performance of duty; Lowry v. Thompson, 25 S. C. 421, 1 S. E. 145, suit against commissioners of sinking fund, held suit against State.

States.— Question whether suit is against State, and within prohibition of eleventh amendment, is not always determined by reference to nominal parties on record, but provision is to be substantially applied in furtherance of its intention, p. 287.

Approved in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 487, 31 L. 223, 8 S. Ct. 173, holding bill in equity against auditor, and other State officers, in reality suit against State; Railroad Commrs. v. Pensacola, etc., R. R., 24 Fla. 461, 12 Am. St. Rep. 224, 5 So. 131, 2 L. R. A. 506, holding suit against State, though not named in record.

Taxation laws of State are often adjudged void, in particular cases, as regulating commerce or impairing contracts, p. 295.

Approved in Wade v. Kimberley, 5 Ohio C. C. 44.

United States.— Individual cannot plead State statute, which violates Federal Constitution, as his authority for taking or holding property to which citizen asserts title or possession, p. 292.

Cited in Wolfe v. Pearson, 114 N. C. 632, 19 S. E. 266, without particular application.

Detinue against collector, for unlawful seizure, is itself purely defensive, its object being to restore status in quo as it was wh right to be vindicated was invaded, like preventive remedy of junction in equity, p. 295.

Set-off may be subject of contract, and it is not then depend upon law of lex fori, nor can it be impaired by subsequent legi tion, p. 300.

Cited generally in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 685, 34 L. 10 S. Ct. 980.

Constitutional law.— To take all remedy for enforcement of is to take right itself, p. 303.

Courts.— Unconstitutional laws of State are not within st making State laws rules of decision in Federal court, in cases they apply, pp. 303, 304.

Statutes.— One part of statute may be enforced as valid another declared void, but parts must be so distinctly sep that each can stand alone, pp. 304, 307.

Approved in Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 688, 689, 30 L. 7 7 S. Ct. 660, 661, holding whole of § 5519, R. S., invalid, so applicable to facts of case; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan, etc., U. S. 636, 39 L. 1125, 15 S. Ct. 920, holding income tax inva whole; Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed. 895, holding ordinance valid certain provisions were invalid; In re Wong Hane, 108 Cal.

t. Rep. 141, 41 Pac. 694, holding penal ordinance could only sidered as an inseparable whole; State v. Indiana, etc., Min. 0 Ind. 579, 22 N. E. 779, 6 L. R. A. 582, and n., holding respecting sinking of wells, and transportation of gas, in-le, and wholly void; Logan v. Stogsdale, 123 Ind. 375, 24 136, 8 L. R. A. 60, and n., whole act, providing for establish-f highways, held void; State v. Thomas, 138 Mo. 100, 39 492, collecting authorities, and holding repealing clause of t fell, as part of that act; State v. Stewart, 52 Neb. 250, 71 1001, where two amendatory sections were held inseparable d; Johnson v. State, 59 N. J. L. 539, 37 Atl. 950, 38 L. R. A. tire act, establishing new court in place of old, held void; y-General v. Dover, 62 N. J. L. 50, 40 Atl. 643, 644, holding act for government of towns and cities, fell with void pro-State v. O'Connor, 5 N. Dak. 632, 67 N. W. 826, act in viola-commerce clause held invalid also as to residents; Robertson ton, 97 Va. 301, 33 S. E. 619, holding act invalid, so far as it to persons without limits of town; dissenting opinion in . Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 490, 44 N. E. 485, 33 L. R. A. 330, majority section of liquor statute separable, and one proviso valid. obiter in The Katie, 40 Fed. 482, 7 L. R. A. 58, and n., and t v. Columbus Const. Co., 49 N. J. Eq. 42, 23 Atl. 492. See St. Rep. 505, note.

8. 307-308, 29 L. 198, WHITE v. GREENHOW.

1.— Circuit Court has jurisdiction of case arising under Constitution, regardless of citizenship of parties, where controversy exceeds $500, p. 308.

d in Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 559, 29 L. 732, 6 S. Ct. ing validity of Virginia coupons; Crystal Springs Land, Los Angeles, 76 Fed. 154, taking jurisdiction in case of en without due process of law; Cox v. Gilmer, 88 Fed. party alleged imprisonment under statute, void as de-of liberty without due process of law; dissenting opin-s Falls v. Fergus Falls Water Co., 72 Fed. 877, 878, 480, majority holding Circuit Court had no jurisdic-on contract, obligation of which was alleged to be nessee v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. S. 472, 38 L. 518, arguendo, in dissenting opinion.

al law.— Poindexter v. Greenhow followed, p. 308.

in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 676, 34 L. 309, holding Virginia coupons not receivable for special uor license.

29 L. 199, CHAFFIN v. TAYLOR.

law.— Poindexter v. Greenhow followed, pp. 308,

Distinguished in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 676, 34 L. 309, 10 S. Ct. 977, where Virginia coupons were held not receivable in payment of school tax or liquor license; Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 21, 40 L. 603, 16 S. Ct. 446, holding government officer could not be restrained by injunction from infringing patent.

114 U. S. 311–317, 29 L. 200, ALLEN v. BALTIMORE, ETC., R. R.

Constitutional law.— Decided in accordance with Poindexter v. Greenhow, p. 314.

Reaffirmed in Virginia Coupon Cases, 25 Fed. 660. Approved in Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 220, 42 L. 142, 17 S. Ct. 776, holding suit to which secretary of State was a party, not suit against State; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. M'Nall, 81 Fed. 893, and Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Boyle, 82 Fed. 710, where suits against superintendent of insurance were held not suits against State.

Distinguished in Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 69, 29 L. 811, 6 S. Ct. 616, holding comptroller-general could not defend in name of State, action for specific performance; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 676, 34 L. 309, 10 S. Ct. 977, holding coupons not receivable in payment of certain school taxes and liquor licenses; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 527, 529, 19 S. Ct. 273, 274, holding suit against attorney-general and solicitor, to restrain reduction of tolls, a suit against State; Manchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Herriott, 91 Fed. 715, dismissing bill to compel auditor to issue certificates to foreign corporation to do business in State; Ball v. Rutland R. Co., 93 Fed. 518, holding suit against State's attorney, to test validity of statute requiring railroad to sell mileage tickets, a suit against State; Lowry v. Thompson, 25 S. C. 422, 1 S. E. 145, holding suit against governor, etc., for recovery of title deed, action against State, and not maintainable.

Injunction to restrain collection of taxes by distraint of rolling-stock and other property of railroad, after tender of payment in tax-receivable coupons, is proper remedy, there being no adequate remedy at law, pp. 314–317.

Approved in Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 10, 14, 19, 35 L. 365, 367, 368, 11 S. Ct. 701, 703, 704, affirming S. C., 14 Sawy. 588, 591, 43 Fed. 199, 201, sustaining suit in equity to enjoin land commissioners from selling land; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., 154 U. S. 389, 38 L. 1021, 14 S. Ct. 1051, reviewing authorities, and holding court had jurisdiction of suit to enjoin railroad commission from enforcing unjust rates; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 112, 41 L. 653, 17 S. Ct. 263, equity will enjoin constables from seizing property under authority of unconstitutional statute; President, etc. v. Sanger, 62 Fed. 181, sustaining suit by Yale College, to restrain State treasurer from diverting certain funds; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Henderson, 68 Fed. 597, holding court had jurisdiction of bill to restrain auditor from making valuations under alleged void statute;

Southern Ry. v. Asheville, 69 Fed. 360, allowing railroad remedy of injunction, where legality of tax was disputed; dissenting opinion in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 510, 514, 31 L. 231, 232, 8 S. Ct. 185, 187, majority denying injunction to restrain bringing of suits to enforce collection of taxes; Tennessee v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. S. 452, 38 L. 518, 14 S. Ct. 660, obiter; In re Tyler, 149 U. S. 188, 37 L. 697, 13 S. Ct. 792, arguendo.

Distinguished in Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 71, 29 L. 811, 6 S. Ct. 617, action to compel specific performance of contract by State; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 500, 31 L. 228, 8 S. Ct. 180, refusing injunction which, in effect, was intended to prevent State from violating its contract; Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 598, 35 L. 277, 11 S. Ct. 649, holding injunction did not lie to restrain collection of illegal tax; Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 18, 21, 40 L. 602, 603, 16 S. Ct. 445, 446, dismissing bill to enjoin infringement from use of patent by government officers in navy yard; Bates v. Taylor, 87 Tenn. 330, 11 S. W. 268, 3 L. R. A. 319, and n., holding court could not coerce governor in matter of issuing certificates of election.

114 U. S. 317-323, 29 L. 202, CARTER v. GREENHOW.

Courts.— Sixteenth clause of R. S., § 629, giving Circuit Court jurisdiction irrespective of amount or citizenship, where State law infringes Federal rights, does not embrace trespass against collector in Virginia, who, having rejected tender of tax-receivable coupons, seeks to collect tax by seizure and sale of personal property of plaintiff, pp. 320-322.

Cited in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 677, 678, 34 L. 309, 310, 10 S. Ct. 977, 978, and McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 106, 19 S. Ct. 135, historically.

States.— In any judicial proceeding necessary to vindicate rights under contract with States, individual has right to judicial determination declaring nullity of legislative attempt to impair its obligation, but no direct action for denial of right secured by contract will lie, p. 322.

Approved in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 504, 31 L. 229, 8 S. Ct. 182, holding State could not be sued through its officers on contract to receive coupons for taxes.

114 U. S. 323-324, 29 L. 204, PLEASANTS v. GREENHOW.

Constitutional law.— Decided in accordance with Carter v. Greenhow, supra, p. 324.

Cited in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 678, 34 L. 310, 10 S. Ct. 978, historically.

114 U. S. 325-338, 29 L. 205, MARYE v. PARSONS.

States.— Since there is no remedy by suit to compel State to pay its debts, one holding unpaid Virginia coupons cannot maintain action for breach of same, p. 328.

Cited in Christian v. Atlantic, etc., R. R., 133 U. S. 243, 33 L. 593, 10 S. Ct. 263, dismissing action on bonds, when State was indispensable party.

States.— Damages suffered by creditor, from known inability or unwillingness of debtor to perform his obligations, is damnum absque injuria, and not actionable; accordingly, complainant held not entitled to relief as holder of Virginia coupons, where he owed no taxes or other debts to State, but was simply prevented from selling same by State's refusal to accept, p. 329.

Cited in Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 64, 29 L. 809, 6 S. Ct. 613, holding general refusal to accept revenue bond script, not actionable; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 496, 31 L. 226, 8 S. Ct. 178, refusing injunction in favor of assignor of Virginia coupons; Parsons v. Slaughter, 63 Fed. 880, dismissing Parsons' bill after he had tendered the coupons in payment of other parties' taxes.

Distinguished in Virginia Coupon Cases, 25 Fed. 656, 664, enjoining levy for taxes after tender of Virginia coupons.

States.— It is only when in hands of taxpayers or other debtors that Virginia coupons are receivable in payment of taxes and debts due the State, p. 329.

Courts.— No court sits to determine questions of law in thesi; there must be litigation upon actual transactions between real parties, growing out of controversy affecting legal or equitable rights as to person or property, p. 330.

State cannot be compelled to perform its contracts with individuals unless State consents to be sued, per Bradley, J., dissenting, p. 332.

Approved in State v. Jumel, 38 La. Ann. 340, refusing to compel auditor to assess tax to pay interest on bonds.

States.— Citizen cannot be harassed, injured or destroyed by unconstitutional laws without having some legal means of resistance or redress; but this is when State is moving party; right to these means of redress is very different thing from right to coerce State into fulfilment of its contracts, per Bradley, J., dissenting, p. 336.

Approved in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Henderson, 68 Fed. 595, reviewing authorities, entertaining suit to restrain auditor from acting under alleged unconstitutional statute.

Distinguished in Parsons v. Slaughter, 63 Fed. 879, dismissing bill relating to same coupons.

Miscellaneous.— Carter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 323, 29 L. 204, Pleasants v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 324, 29 L. 205, and McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 106, 19 S. Ct. 135, citing historically; McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 678, 34 L. 310, 10 S. Ct. 978, in statement of case by court.

114 U. S. 338-340, 29 L. 240, MOORE v. GREENHOW.

States.— Mandamus to compel officers of Virginia to receive coupons in payment of license taxes, refused because, under decision of Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. 468, 2 S. Ct. 91, remedy by Virginia act of January 14, 1882, is adequate, pp. 339, 340.

Cited in Virginia Coupon Cases, 25 Fed. 662, holding coupons of Virginia must be received for verification in manner provided by act of January 14, 1882; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 106, 19 S. Ct. 135, historically.

114 U. S. 340-353, 29 L. 136, EAST ALABAMA RY. v. DOE.

Railroads.— Grant of right of way to railroad and its "assigns," conveys mere easement, not an estate capable of sale on execution, separate from the franchise to run the railroad, p. 350.

Approved in Louisville, etc., Ry. v. Boney, 117 Ind. 507, 20 N. E. 424, 3 L. R. A. 438, and n., annulling order to sell roadbed to pay contractor's judgment; Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Canada, etc., Ry., 127 Ind. 261, 26 N. E. 786, 11 L. R. A. 745, and n., laborer's lien must be enforced against railroad as an entirety; Fort Worth, etc., Ry. v. Jennings, 76 Tex. 377, 13 S. W. 271, 8 L. R. A. 182, and n., railroad cannot convey part of its right of way to additional road over the same; Railway v. Railway, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 655, 22 S. W. 169, right of way still remains property of grantee, notwithstanding forfeiture of its charter; Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Wood Co., 81 Wis. 562, 51 N. W. 1006, 17 L. R. A. 95, and n., dams of river improvement company not taxable as realty; State v. Anderson, 89 Wis. 563, 63 N. W. 749, transfer franchises and necessary property of electric-light company to street railway does not release them from taxation; Eufaula Water Co. v. Addyston Pipe, etc., Co., 99 Ala. 560, 8 So. 28, query, whether materialman can satisfy his lien out of water company's necessary property.

Distinguished in Gardner v. Mobile, etc., R. R., 102 Ala. 647, 48 Am. St. Rep. 91, 15 So. 274, right of way owned in fee by abandoned railroad is subject to execution; Purifoy v. Lamar, 112 Ala. 132, 20 So. 977, permitting sale for taxes of railroad lands owned in fee.

Courts.— Federal courts possess an independent jurisdiction and exercise their own judgment on meaning of State laws, and adopt their own interpretation thereof in applying them to contracts and transactions prior to interpretation by State courts, p. 353.

114 U. S. 353-378, 29 L. 152, THE BELGENLAND.

Admiralty.— Any court of admiralty which first obtains jurisdiction can adjudicate salvage or collision case arising on high seas, though both the vessels and those interested belong to foreign countries, p. 362.

Cited in Christian v. Atlantic, etc., R. R., 133 10 S. Ct. 263, dismissing action on bonds, wh pensable party.

States.— Damages suffered by creditor, fr unwillingness of debtor to perform his o absque injuria, and not actionable; accord not entitled to relief as holder of Virginia no taxes or other debts to State, but wa selling same by State's refusal to accept,

Cited in Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S holding general refusal to accept rever able; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 496, 31 L. 2 junction in favor of assignor of V
Slaughter, 63 Fed. 880, dismissing P dered the coupons in payment of oth

Distinguished in Virginia Coupon
ing levy for taxes after tender of V

States.— It is only when in han that Virginia coupons are receival due the State, p. 329.

Courts.— No court sits to de there must be litigation upon a ties, growing out of controver as to person or property, p.

State cannot be compelle viduals unless State consen ing, p. 332.

Approved in State v. Ju auditor to assess tax to p

States.— Citizen cann constitutional laws wit or redress; but this is means of redress is v into fulfilment of its

Approved in West reviewing authoriti acting under allege

Distinguished in bill relating to sa

Miscellaneous.-
Pleasants v. Gr
v. Virginia, 172
v. Virginia, 13
case by court.

...
...
...
...en, 79 Fed.
...for cruelty on
...oint that sen-
...Topsy, 44 Fed.
...libel at consul's

...controversies between
...where governed by com-
...appear against it, p. 365.
...r. Co., 42 Fed. 236, uphold-
...xecuted in South America on
...arine Ins. Co., 94 Fed. 687, up-
...urance policy between foreigners.

...ccretionary with trial court to take ...between foreigners arising on high
...be disturbed on appeal unless clearly

...arising on high seas between for-
...admiralty law as understood
...so far as the law of both na-
...makes same variation from

129 U. S.
-e rule
yee's
S. Ct.
. States;
tort, al-
Fed. 754, governed by

-s revised and
p. 370, note.
951, 15 S. Ct. 811,
s. Co., 136 U. S. 422,
essel; The New York,
between Canadian and ight collision with bark,

duce speed, pp. 371, 372.
4, steamer liable for want of d by lower court clearly indicate unding of negligence is immaterial, ed States, 137 U. S. 136, 34 L. 598, 11 S. tain finding was of law or fact.

7, WALDEN v. KNEVALS.
ad route is "definitely fixed" under land
e withdrawn from entry when map of route pted by secretary of interior, p. 374.
City, etc., Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 38, 36
3, St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, 47 Minn. 44, 49 uri, etc., Ry. v. Cook, 163 U. S. 497, 41 L. 241, 16
St. Paul, etc., Ry. v. Sage, 71 Fed. 49, 50, 36 U. S. pproved in Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Price Co., 64 Wis.
3, 26 N. W. 98, where title passed upon completion of ed States v. McLaughlin, 12 Sawy. 191, 30 Fed. 155, ap-
Central Pacific; Wineman v. Gastrell, 53 Fed. 706, 2 U. S.
49, in deciding when swamp land title passed.
tinguished in Hamblin v. Western Land Co., 147 U. S. 535, 37 71, 13 S. Ct. 355, where location did not conform to requirents of act; Western Land Co. v. Hamblin, 79 Iowa, 545, 44 N.
W. 800, rule has no application where location unauthorized.

4 U. S. 376–381, 29 L. 168, PENN BANK v. FURNESS.
Partnership.—Where it is agreed to pay retiring partner in firm, erroneously believed to be solvent, a certain sum as his share, and Approved in The Noddleburn, 12 Sawy. 228, 30 Fed. 143, affirming 12 Sawy. 133, 28 Fed. 857, taking jurisdiction of libel for tort to British seaman; Panama R. R. v. Napier Shipping Co., 166 U. S. 285, 41 L. 1006, 17 S. Ct. 574, domestic court will try libel for tort in foreign harbor; The Lamington, 87 Fed. 757, approving rule.

Admiralty Court will not take jurisdiction of controversies between foreigners arising on high seas, where governed by laws of country to which they belong, or parties have agreed to resort only to domestic tribunal, p. 363.

Admiralty Courts will often not take jurisdiction of suit for foreign seamen's wages or ill-treatment, except on consent of their consul; but where voyage is completed or seamen have been dismissed or treated with great cruelty, it will entertain jurisdiction sometimes even against consul's protest, p. 364.

Approved in The Sirius, 47 Fed. 827, taking jurisdiction of seamen's libel for wages, British consul so requesting; The Walter D. Wallet, 66 Fed. 1011, refusing jurisdiction of seaman's libel, in conformity with consul's request; The City of Carlisle, 39 Fed. 815, 5 L. R. A. 60, upholding seamen's claim against British ship for tort; Wilson v. The John Riston, 35 Fed. 664, upholding libel for foreign seaman's wages; Camille v. Couch, 40 Fed. 176, refusing to take jurisdiction of seaman's claim for tort, where settled by consul; The Noddleburn, 12 Sawy. 229, 30 Fed. 143, allowing damages to British seaman for tort on British vessel; Bolden v. Jensen, 70 Fed. 509, sustaining jurisdiction of foreign seaman's libel for cruelty on Chilian ship; The Egyptian Monarch, 36 Fed. 775, to point that seamen's wages controlled by lex loci contractus; The Topsy, 44 Fed. 635, refusing to relinquish jurisdiction of seaman's libel at consul's request.

Admiralty Court will take jurisdiction of controversies between foreigners arising outside its own territory, where governed by common law of nations, unless special reasons appear against it, p. 365.

Approved in Slocum v. Western Assur. Co., 42 Fed. 236, upholding jurisdiction on insurance policy executed in South America on cargo traded there; Fairgrieve v. Marine Ins. Co., 94 Fed. 687, upholding jurisdiction of suit on insurance policy between foreigners, but issued in Chicago.

Admiralty.— Where it is discretionary with trial court to take jurisdiction over controversy between foreigners arising on high seas, this discretion will not be disturbed on appeal unless clearly abused, p. 368.

Admiralty.— In controversy arising on high seas between foreigners, court will administer general admiralty law as understood by country in which it sits, except in so far as the law of both nations represented in the controversy makes same variation from maritime law of forum, pp. 369, 370.

Approved in Liverpool Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 444, 32 L. 793, 9 S. Ct. 473, American courts do not recognize rule of maritime law sustaining exemption from liability for employee's negligence; The John G. Stevens, 170 U. S. 127, 42 L. 975, 18 S. Ct. 530, administering maritime lien law as understood in United States; The Brantford City, 29 Fed. 383, upholding liability for tort, although not allowed by British law; The Lamington, 87 Fed. 754, holding British seaman's libel for tort of British ship, governed by English law; Card v. Hine, 39 Fed. 820, arguendo.

Collision.— International rules of navigation, as revised and adopted by Congress, 1885, are generally accepted, p. 370, note.

Approved in The Oregon, 158 U. S. 201, 39 L. 951, 15 S. Ct. 811, a collision case; Richelieu Nav. Co. v. Boston Ins. Co., 136 U. S. 422, 34 L. 408, 10 S. Ct. 937, case of stranding of vessel; The New York, 175 U. S. 197, 20 S. Ct. 71, collision case between Canadian and United States vessel.

Collision.— Steamer held liable for night collision with bark, for failure to keep proper lookout and reduce speed, pp. 371, 372.

Followed in The Patria, 92 Fed. 414, steamer liable for want of proper lookout, etc.

Collision.— Where facts as found by lower court clearly indicate negligence, lack of express finding of negligence is immaterial, p. 372.

Cited in Williams v. United States, 137 U. S. 136, 34 L. 598, 11 S. Ct. 51, arguendo, whether certain finding was of law or fact.

114 U. S. 373–376, 29 L. 167, WALDEN v. KNEVALS.

Public lands.— Railroad route is "definitely fixed" under land grant act, and lands are withdrawn from entry when map of route is filed with and accepted by secretary of interior, p. 374.

Followed in Sioux City, etc., Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 38, 36 L. 65, 12 S. Ct. 363, St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, 47 Minn. 44, 49 N. W. 406, Missouri, etc., Ry. v. Cook, 163 U. S. 497, 41 L. 241, 16 S. Ct. 1095, and St. Paul, etc., Ry. v. Sage, 71 Fed. 49, 50, 36 U. S. App. 340. Approved in Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Price Co., 64 Wis. 391, 392, 398, 26 N. W. 98, where title passed upon completion of road; United States v. McLaughlin, 12 Sawy. 191, 30 Fed. 155, applied to Central Pacific; Wineman v. Gastrell, 53 Fed. 706, 2 U. S. App. 449, in deciding when swamp land title passed.

Distinguished in Hamblin v. Western Land Co., 147 U. S. 535, 37 L. 271, 13 S. Ct. 355, where location did not conform to requirements of act; Western Land Co. v. Hamblin, 79 Iowa, 545, 44 N. W. 809, rule has no application where location unauthorized.

114 U. S. 376–381, 29 L. 168, PENN BANK v. FURNESS.

Partnership.— Where it is agreed to pay retiring partner in firm, erroneously believed to be solvent, a certain sum as his share, and new firm discounts its paper at bank to pay such share, bank cannot hold old firm for such debt, p. 379.

Partnership.— Where retiring partner withdraws part of capital, with agreement that others pay debts, he must restore it so far as necessary to pay existing creditors, though transaction was bona fide, p. 380.

Not cited.

114 U. S. 381-387, 29 L. 170, AURRECOECHEA v. BANGS.

Public lands.— Lands embraced in Mexican claim, although not included in its final survey, were excepted from confirmation under act of 1866, confirming grants by California under its attempted disposal of school lands before government survey, p. 385.

Cited in United States v. Curtner, 14 Sawy. 548, 38 Fed. 10, construing railroad grant and State selection of lieu lands; United States v. Garretson, 42 Fed. 24, as distinguishing between reserve lands and those subject to entry; Lockhart v. Wills, — N. Mex. —, 54 Pac. 340, arguendo.

Public lands.— Pre-emptor making due entry on land embraced in Mexican claim, but not included within limits of its final survey, has better title than claimant who has patent under invalid selection of said lands by State of California, p. 386.

Cited in United States v. Curtner, 14 Sawy. 546, 38 Fed. 9, to point that California could not select lands before survey.

114 U. S. 387, 29 L. 172, AURRECOECHEA v. SINCLAIR.

Adjudged in conformity with preceding case, q. v.

114 U. S. 387-394, 29 L. 172, AMY v. SHELBY CO. TAXING DIST.

Set-off and counterclaim.— Tax debt due a municipality, and its bonds expressly made receivable for taxes, come clearly within doctrine of set-off, p. 392.

Constitutional law.— Right of a debtor to procure obligations of his creditor and use them as set-off is undeniable, and statute so providing in behalf of debtors of a municipality impairs no contract of bondholders and divests no vested rights, p. 393.

Constitutional law.— Tennessee acts of 1883, providing for optional surrender and refunding of Memphis bonds, and making them receivable for back taxes at same rate as Flippin bonds, did not divest rights of holders of unpreferred debts of the city to use them as set-off for back taxes, nor impair their contract obligation, pp. 392-394.

Cited in Bank v. Commissioners, 116 N. C. 362, 21 S. E. 417, to point that municipality may compromise with its debtors.

114 U. S. 394–401, 29 L. 130, HUNTLEY v. HUNTLEY.

Frauds, statute of.— Verbal agreement by one-third owner in stage company to sell one-sixth interest to A., applying his debt to A. in payment, thereafter recognized in an agreement of the stage company reciting A. as one-sixth owner, is a contract executed, and not within the statute, p. 400.

Cited in Bibb v. Allen, 149 U. S. 497, 37 L. 826, 13 S. Ct. 955, upholding stockholder's contract as complete.

114 U. S. 401–410, 29 L. 149, STATE BANK v. UNITED STATES.

United States.— Where treasury disbursing clerk gave government moneys to brokers for speculation, and latter, by fraud, obtained from a bank sufficient to cover defalcations, paying it to disbursing clerk, who did not know the fraud, government was not liable to refund amount to bank, pp. 409, 410.

Cited in Holly v. Domestic, etc., Soc., 92 Fed. 748, holding innocent holder of misappropriated trust funds could not be compelled to pay them to owner; Atlantic Mills v. Indian, etc., Mills, 147 Mass. 275, 9 Am. St. Rep. 702, 17 N. E. 502, holding corporation could not retain moneys fraudulently obtained by its defaulting agent.

114 U. S. 411–417, 29 L. 147, THE LAURA.

United States.— Constitutional provision investing president with pardoning power, does not prohibit remission of penalties under R. S., § 5294, by secretary of treasury, p. 414.

Approved in Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 601, 40 L. 822, 16 S. Ct. 644, upholding power of Congress to grant immunity from penal proceedings on evidence offered before interstate commerce commission.

Constitutional law.— Contemporaneous construction and long acquiescence thereunder are of great weight; applied in construing president's pardoning power, p. 416.

Approved in Auffmordt v. Hedden, 137 U. S. 329, 34 L. 679, 11 S. Ct. 109, following practice as to merchant appraisers of imports; Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 691, 36 L. 309, 12 S. Ct. 504, upholding act authorizing president to take certain imports from free list; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 36 Fed. 285, in construing railroad land grant; Rand v. United States, 38 Fed. 667, determining fees of United States commissioners; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Barden, 46 Fed. 622, following land office practice as to mineral patents; Hovey v State, 119 Ind. 409, 21 N. E. 26, upholding legislature's power to appoint asylum trustees; France v. Connor, 3 Wyo. 463, 27 Pac. 894, construing Edmunds-Tucker act as affecting dower in Wyoming; dissenting opinion in Trout, etc., Club v. Mather, 68 Vt.

363, 35 Atl. 329, 33 L. R. A. 574, arguing as to meaning of "boatable waters." See 13 Am. St. Rep. 143, note.

Distinguished in Hilburn v. St. Paul, etc., Ry., — Mont. —, 58 Pac. 812, rule only applicable where vested rights have been acquired.

Penalties given by R. S., § 4399 et seq., to informers against vessel carrying more than licensed number of passengers, are expressly made subject to possibility that secretary of treasury will remit same before trial, p. 416.

114 U. S. 417-429, 29 L. 89, EX PARTE WILSON.

Courts.— Supreme Court, having no jurisdiction of criminal cases by error or appeal, cannot discharge, on habeas corpus, one imprisoned under sentence of Circuit or District Court, unless in excess of its jurisdiction, or there is no authority to hold him under the sentence, p. 421.

Approved in Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 784, 30 L. 825, 7 S. Ct. 781, refusing writ, where objection was to formation of grand jury and refusal to grant compulsory process to bring in witnesses; Nielsen, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 184, 33 L. 120, 9 S. Ct. 675, discharging prisoner where it appeared that there was double conviction; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 578, 36 L. 269, 12 S. Ct. 525, citing cases, denying writ where question below was whether scheme constituted lottery; In re Schneider, 148 U. S. 166, 37 L. 408, 13 S. Ct. 572, denying petition for writs when objections were to selection of jury; In re Frederich, 149 U. S. 75, 37 L. 656, 13 S. Ct. 795, collecting authorities, denying application where writ of error might have been prosecuted; United States v. Doherty, 27 Fed. 733, disallowing recovery of penalty for refusal to answer appraiser's question found incompetent; Ex parte Farley, 40 Fed. 68, issuing writ where grand jury was impanelled without authority; Ex parte Ulrich, 43 Fed. 663, remanding prisoner where complaint was that jury was irregularly discharged; In re King, 51 Fed. 436, collecting authorities, refusing writ when complaint was as to misconduct and disqualification of jurors; Ex parte Buskirk, 72 Fed. 22, 25 U. S. App. 613, discharging prisoner held for contempt of void order of court; In re Rowe, 77 Fed. 166, 40 U. S. App. 516, citing cases, remanding prisoner where there was mere defect in indictment; Ex parte Brandon, 49 Ark. 144, 4 S. W. 452, denying writ where prisoner had been denied trial by jury; In re Thompson, 9 Mont. 389, 23 Pac. 934, remanding prisoner when verdict was alleged to be contrary to evidence; In re McVey, 50 Neb. 483, 70 N. W. 52, discharging prisoner sentenced, though found not guilty of crime charged; Ex parte Tice, 32 Or. 184, 49 Pac. 1039, discharging prisoner where jury was discharged without authority; Ex parte Crawford, 36 Tex. Cr. 182, 36 S. W. 93, denying writ where sentences were cumulative; Ex parte Rollins, 80 Va. 317, discharging prisoner held under unconstitutional statute; dissenting opinion in Ex parte Wood, 36 Tex. Cr. 13, 34 S. W. 969, majority refusing writ where verdict failed to designate place of confinement, as required; Ward v. Suter, 70 Tex. 346, 8 Am. St. Rep. 607, 8 S. W. 52, arguendo.

Indictment and information.— R. S., § 1022, authorizing certain offenses to be prosecuted either by indictment or information, does not preclude prosecution, by information, of other offenses of such grade as may be so prosecuted consistently with Federal Constitution and laws, p. 421.

Criminal law.— General verdict and sentence on two counts, one of which is good, are valid, p. 421.

Approved in In re Haynes, 30 Fed. 772, where one of two indictments was good, defendant was denied writ of habeas corpus.

Criminal law.— Misrecital of verdict, in statement of intermediate inquiry whether prisoner had aught to say why sentence should not be pronounced, is mere irregularity, not ground for habeas corpus, p. 421.

Approved in Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 478, 34 L. 463, 10 S. Ct. 913, failure to read examination of poor debtor to him, etc., not jurisdictional.

Habeas corpus.— Certified copy of record of sentence to imprisonment, if valid upon its face, is sufficient to authorize keeper to hold prisoner without any warrant or mittimus, pp. 421, 422.

Approved in Howard v. United States, 75 Fed. 989, 43 U. S. App. 678, 24 L. R. A. 513, and n., reviewing authorities, refusing to release prisoner held under defective mittimus; In re Greenwald, 77 Fed. 508, warden justified in holding prisoner under judgment valid on its face; Newberry v. State, 15 Ohio C. C. 218, court properly committed one under indictment for murder who failed to object to indictment's sufficiency; In re Thayer, 69 Vt. 316, 37 Atl. 1042, holding certified copy of judgment and sentence sufficient, though mittimus defective.

Constitutional law.— Scope and effect of many constitutional provisions is best ascertained by bearing in mind what law was before, p. 422.

Approved in United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 312, 36 L. 446, 12 S. Ct. 609, construing 26 Stat. 827, 828, as to appeal and error, in light of common law; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 654, 42 L. 893, 18 S. Ct. 459, holding native-born Chinaman a citizen, under fourteenth amendment to Constitution.

Indictment and information.— In England, informations by attorney-general, without intervention of grand jury, were not allowed for capital crimes, nor for any felony, p. 423.

Cited in State v. Ah Jim, 9 Mont. 171, 23 Pac. 77, quashing information for murder.

Criminal law.— Felony, at common law, was any crime which occasioned total forfeiture of offender's lands or goods, p. 423.

Approved in Bannon, etc. v. United States, 156 U. S. 468, 39 L. 496, 15 S. Ct. 469, holding that infamous punishment provided did not make crime a felony; Reagan v. United States, 157 U. S. 303, 39 L. 710, 15 S. Ct. 610, holding crime of receiving smuggled goods not a felony; Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 499, 29 L. 460, 6 S. Ct. 152, arguendo.

Criminal law.— Rulings of certain Circuit and District Courts as to what constitutes infamous crime, discussed and rejected, pp. 425, 426.

Approved in Andrews v. Hovey, 124 U. S. 717, 31 L. 563, 8 S. Ct. 685, holding construction of statute, by commissioner of patents, not conclusive; Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 41, 19 S. Ct. 596, refusing to follow line of decisions in courts of District of Columbia.

Indictment and information.— Test of infamous crime, under fifth amendment to Constitution, is whether statute authorizes court to award infamous punishment; e. g., imprisonment for term of years at hard labor. In such case, he may not be put upon trial, except on accusation of grand jury, pp. 425, 429.

Approved in United States v. Petit, 114 U. S. 430, 29 L. 94, 5 S. Ct. 1190, where prisoner was sentenced to five years' hard labor, for counterfeiting; Mackin v. United States, 117 U. S. 350, 351, 29 L. 910, 911, 6 S. Ct. 778, reviewing authorities, where prisoner was charged with fraudulent altering of poll-book, etc.; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 13, 30 L. 853, 7 S. Ct. 787, conviction for making false report as bank cashier; Parkinson v. United States, 121 U. S. 282, 30 L. 960, 7 S. Ct. 896, conviction for fraudulent voting; Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 169, 33 L. 839, 10 S. Ct. 386, law changing punishment to solitary confinement, held ex post facto; In re Mills, 135 U. S. 267, 34 L. 109, 10 S. Ct. 763, conviction for selling liquor to Indians; In re Claasen, 140 U. S. 204, 35 L. 411, 11 S. Ct. 737, citing cases, conviction under R. S., § 5209; Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 234, 237, 41 L. 142, 143, 16 S. Ct. 979, 981, holding imprisonment of Chinese at hard labor, under act of May 5, 1892, unlawful; United States v. Tod, 25 Fed. 815, 816, offenses, under §§ 4746, 5418, and 5479, R. S., must be prosecuted by indictment; United States v. Harmon, 34 Fed. 873, holding indictment for sending obscene matter through mail did not sufficiently specify same; United States v. Johannesen, 35 Fed. 413, informations for violations of revenue laws, held demurrable; Ex parte M'Clusky, 40 Fed. 72, 73, 74, holding prisoners could not waive right to be prosecuted for larceny by indictment; Ex parte Brown, 40 Fed. 83, assault with intent to kill; United States v. Smith, 40 Fed. 757, 758, 759, 760, refusing to allow information to be filed for intimidating voters;

United States v. Cobb, 43 Fed. 571, sustaining demurrer to information for violation of Federal election laws; United States v. Sutton, 47 Fed. 130, holding adultery an infamous crime within act of March 3, 1891, as to appeals; Ex parte Van Vranken, 47 Fed. 889, releasing civilian prisoner convicted by court-martial; United States v. Wong Dep Ken, 57 Fed. 209, annulling decree sentencing Chinese to State prison, under Geary act of 1892; United States v. Cadwallader, 59 Fed. 679, embezzlement, etc., from national bank, described in R. S., § 5209; Stokes v. United States, 60 Fed. 598, 23 U. S. App. 289, construing term "infamous crime," used in fifth section judiciary act of 1891; In re Kirby, 84 Fed. 607, disbarring attorney convicted of receiving stolen goods; People v. Kipley, 171 Ill. 73, 49 N. E. 239, 41 L. R. A. 785, disqualification for holding public office is an infamous punishment; Crum v. State, 148 Ind. 469, 47 N. E. 836, larceny held infamous crime, justifying disfranchisement; State v. Clark, 60 Kan. 455, 56 Pac. 769, conviction of grand larceny rendered witness incompetent, as one convicted of infamous crime; Bright v. Patton, 5 Mack. 534, 60 Am. Rep. 399, officer should not arrest without warrant, where punishment only fine and imprisonment; Butler v. Wentworth, 84 Me. 32, 24 Atl. 458, 17 L. R. A. 766, 767, and n., illegal transportation of liquors, punishable by one year's imprisonment; Danner v. State, 89 Md. 226, 228, 42 Atl. 967, holding one accused of petit larceny, maximum punishment eighteen months, entitled to jury trial; Fuller v. United States, 3 N. Mex. 444, 9 Pac. 597, quashing information for larceny; Harris v. Terry, 98 N. C. 134, 3 S. E. 746, disqualification to hold office is infamous punishment; dissenting opinion in O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 340, 36 L. 459, 12 S. Ct. 700, majority sustaining sentence to hard labor, for selling liquor; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 45, 40 L. 611, 16 S. Ct. 481, majority holding obscene matter sufficiently set out in indictment for sending it through mail; United States v. Clark, 31 Fed. 713, and The Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 682, 20 S. Ct. 293, generally; United States v. Van Leuven, 42 Fed. 68, arguendo. See 10 Sawy. 135, note.

Distinguished in Bannon v. United States, 156 U. S. 467, 39 L. 494, 15 S. Ct. 469, holding infamous punishment affixed did not raise crime to grade of felony; United States v. Cobb, 43 Fed. 573, sustaining information where possible punishment did not exceed one year's imprisonment; State v. Whisner, 35 Kan. 278, 10 Pac. 857, holding violations of prohibition law might be prosecuted by information; State v. Nolan, 15 R. I. 531, 10 Atl. 482, when maximum penalty was three months in county jail, punishment was not infamous.

Criminal law.— Imprisonment at hard labor, compulsory and unpaid, is involuntary servitude for crime, within provision of ordinance of 1787, and thirteenth amendment to Constitution, p. 429.

Approved in concurring opinion in Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U. S. 242, 41 L. 145, 16 S. Ct. 983, holding imprisonment of Chinese at hard labor, under act of May 5, 1892, illegal; Topeka v. Boutwell, 53 Kan. 31, 35 Pac. 822, 27 L. R. A. 603, and n., obiter.

Distinguished in People v. Hanrahan, 75 Mich. 621, 42 N. W. 1127, 4 L. R. A. 755, sustaining ordinance which provided for payment of fine, or imprisonment until paid; concurring opinion in Topeka v. Boutwell, 53 Kan. 38, 35 Pac. 825, 27 L. R. A. 613, and n., sustaining ordinance requiring prisoners to work out fines.

Habeas corpus.— Conviction of and sentence for crime punishable by infamous punishment, without presentment or indictment by grand jury, is without jurisdiction, and one held under such sentence may be released upon habeas corpus, pp. 422, 429.

Approved in United States v. Petit, 114 U. S. 430, 29 L. 94, 5 S. Ct. 1190, discharging prisoner convicted of counterfeiting; In re Snow, 120 U. S. 286, 30 L. 663, 7 S. Ct. 562, releasing prisoner, where record showed court's want of jurisdiction to convict; Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 14, 30 L. 853, 7 S. Ct. 788, discharging prisoner when court changed indictment; In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 221, 31 L. 409, 8 S. Ct. 493, writ issued when prisoners were committed for contempt of injunction issued without jurisdiction; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 308, 36 L. 445, 12 S. Ct. 632, granting new trial, where list of witnesses was not furnished, under R. S., § 1033; Ex parte M'Clusky, 40 Fed. 72, 73, 74, reviewing authorities, holding person accused of larceny must be prosecuted by indictment; In re Taylor, 7 S. Dak. 388, 58 Am. St. Rep. 849, 64 N. W. 256, 45 L. R. A. 148, and n., remanding prisoner, where term fixed was greater than court had right to impose.

114 U. S. 429–430, 29 L. 93, UNITED STATES v. PETIT.

Indictment and information.— Offense of counterfeiting, punishable under R. S., § 5457, is an infamous crime, requiring prosecution by indictment, p. 430.

See note to Ex parte Wilson, supra.

114 U. S. 430–439, 29 L. 144, DODGE v. KNOWLES.

Appeal and error.— On equity appeal, both law and fact are reviewable by Supreme Court, p. 434.

Husband and wife.— Obligation to pay for family supplies is, ordinarily, debt of husband; promissory notes given by him for wife, though describing him as her trustee, bind him personally and not her estate, unless his authority to give them on her behalf is clearly proved. In this case authority was not shown, pp. 435, 436.

Approved in Chaffee v. Browne, 109 Cal. 220, 41 Pac. 1031, holding insolvency of husband did not affect rule as to charging wife's separate estate.

Appeal and error.— Jurisdiction of Supreme Court, being complete on the record, appellee's objection that required amount was not involved comes too late, p. 437.

Appeal and error.— Judicial allowance of appeal at term in which decree was rendered, constitutes valid appeal; docketing cause in this perfects jurisdiction of Supreme Court; bond is essential to prosecution, but not to taking of appeal, and when not furnished before docketing of cause, appeal will not be dismissed until appellant is given opportunity to supply omission, p. 438.

Cited in The Natchez, 27 Fed. 310, refusing to dismiss appeal for defect in bond; Noonan v. Chester Park, etc., Club Co., 93 Fed. [illegible] refusing to dismiss appeal where bond was not filed within six months after decree.

Appeal and error.— Judicial allowance of appeal in open court during term is sufficient notice of taking appeal; security is only for due prosecution of appeal; purpose of citation, where security is taken out of court or after term, is notice only; it is not jurisdictional, and if, by accident, omitted, motion to dismiss appeal so allowed will not be granted until opportunity to give requisite notice has been furnished, p. 438.

Approved in Richardson v. Green, 130 U. S. 114, 32 L. 875, 9 S. Ct. 446, directing issuance and service of citation, where security was taken after term; Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Fed. 317, 34 U. S. App. 626, refusing to dismiss, where citation was not signed by judge granting appeal; Central Trust Co. v. Continental Trust Co., 86 Fed. 524, holding no citation necessary where appeal taken and perfected during term; Noonan v. Chester Park, etc., Club Co., 93 Fed. 577, refusing to dismiss, where citation was not issued within six months of decree.

Distinguished in Hewitt v. Filbert, 116 U. S. 144, 29 L. 582, 6 S. Ct. 330, dismissing appeal for want of citation, where appeal was allowed after term.

Appeal and error.— Notice by order of Supreme Court, served on appellee, that appeal taken in open court was being prosecuted and argument was desired, is equivalent of citation, p. 439.

Approved in Goodwin v. Fox, 120 U. S. 778, 30 L. 816, 7 S. Ct. 780, where counsel's indorsement of approval of bond was equivalent to citation.

114 U. S. 439–447, 29 L. 177, DOBSON v. HARTFORD CARPET CO.

Patents.— In infringement suit, plaintiff may recover, in addition to profits, actual damages sustained, assessed by court, or under its direction, and with same power to increase damages as in case of verdicts, p. 443.

Patents.— In suit for infringement of design for carpets, allowance of entire profits from manufacture and sale of carpets, as damages or profits, is not proper, unless shown by reliable evidence that entire profit is due to figure or patent, p. 444.

Patentee must, in infringement suit, give reliable and tangible evidence apportioning defendant's profits and patentee's damages between patented and unpatented features; or he must show that profits and damages are to be calculated on whole machine, because its value is properly and legally attributable to patented feature, p. 445.

Approved in Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 16, 17, 30 L. 65, 6 S. Ct. 949, holding award of entire profits from manufacture and sale of carpets, erroneous; Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 151, 31 L. 669, 8 S. Ct. 902, sustaining master's calculation of profits upon saving in manufacture; Fay v. Allen, 24 Blatchf. 276, 30 Fed. 447, refusing to allow profits from sale and manufacture, where invention was of improvement; Rœmer v. Simon, 24 Blatchf. 397, 31 Fed. 42, nominal damages allowed for infringement of locks to travelling-bags; Everest v. Buffalo, etc., Oil Co., 24 Blatchf. 465, 31 Fed. 744, 745, proof of higher price paid for oil tested by infringed method did not justify more than nominal damages; Bostock v. Goodrich, 25 Fed. 819, nominal damages allowed for infringement of improvements in "tuck-markers;" Tuttle v. Gaylord, 28 Fed. 97, infringement of improvement in harrow teeth; Reed v. Lawrence, 29 Fed. 918, 920, 921, holding patentee of improved harrow teeth entitled only to proportion of profits on sale of harrows; Bell v. United States Stamping Co., 32 Fed. 551, evidence of sales to persons not customers of licensee not proof that sales were lost to him; Tomkinson v. Willets Mfg. Co., 34 Fed. 537, patentee entitled only to proportionate profits for infringement of design for dish; Fischer v. Hayes, 39 Fed. 618, nominal damages, when, on evidence, the profits could not be computed; Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, 43 Fed. 675, awarding difference in cost of producing carpet on infringing and non-infringing loom; Royer v. Shultz Belting Co., 45 Fed. 53, refusing to presume that patentee's damages equalled infringer's gains; Mosher v. Joyce, 51 Fed. 445, 6 U. S. App. 107, nominal damages for infringement of improvement of lifting-jack, being no evidence to segregate; Hunt Bros. Fruit, etc., Co. v. Cassidy, 53 Fed. 261, 7 U. S. App. 424, when refusal to instruct for nominal damages was erroneous; Untermeyer v. Freund, 50 Fed. 78, and Untermeyer v. Freund, 58 Fed. 211, 20 U. S. App. 32, both sustaining, as constitutional, act of 1887, creating liability of $250 against infringer of design patent.

Distinguished in Warren v. Keep, 155 U. S. 268, 39 L. 145, 15 S. Ct. 84, Welling v. La Bau, 34 Fed. 43, and Creamer v. Bowers, 35 Fed. 208, allowing entire profits from manufacture and sale, where invention was new article of manufacture sold separately; Avery v. Meikle, 85 Ky. 450, 7 Am. St. Rep. 611, 3 S. W. 613, allowing profits on sales in case of imitation of trademark.

Patents.— When bill for infringement of "invention" is taken pro confesso, patent will be held valid for purposes of case, p. 446.

Patents.— Mere joinder of claims for constituent members, with claim for design, does not per se invalidate patent, on any particular claim, at objection of a defendant, p. 446.

Approved in Britton v. White Mfg. Co., 61 Fed. 95, holding separate claims for entire design and separate parts properly allowed.

Patent which claims design "substantially as shown," refers to description, as well as drawing, and is valid in form, p. 446.

Approved in Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 14, 30 L. 64, 6 S. Ct. 948, design patent for carpets, claim held sufficient; Whittall v. Lowell Mfg. Co., 79 Fed. 789, reaffirming rule.

Distinguished in New York Belting, etc., Co. v. New Jersey Car, etc., Co., 53 Fed. 817, 11 U. S. App. 637, holding carpet design not infringed under the description.

Costs.— Upon reversal of interlocutory decree, for plaintiff, on question of damages, costs were allowed to plaintiff until the interlocutory decree, and thereafter to defendant, p. 447.

Distinguished in Du Bois v. Kirk, 158 U. S. 67, 39 L. 899, 15 S. Ct. 732, full costs awarded plaintiff, where interlocutory decree was affirmed.

114 U. S. 447–453, 29 L. 210, WESTERN ELEC. MFG. CO. v. ANSONIA BRASS, ETC., CO.

Patents covering old process, applied to same subject, with no change in manner of applying it, and with no result substantially distinct in its nature, are invalid; hence, Olmstead patent process for compressing insulation of telegraph wires is void, p. 451.

Approved in Ansonia Co. v. Electrical Supply Co., 144 U. S. 18, 36 L. 339, 12 S. Ct. 604, citing cases, Cowles patent for insulated electric conductor, invalid.

Patents.— Scope of letters-patent should be limited to invention covered by claim, and though claim be illustrated, it cannot be enlarged by language in other parts of specifications; e. g., where process is not described, court will not infer it from quality of patent product, pp. 452, 453.

Approved in Grant v. Walter, 148 U. S. 554, 37 L. 557, 13 S. Ct. 701, feature not covered by claim cannot be protected; Johnson Co. v. Pacific, etc., Mills Co., 47 Fed. 589, collecting authorities, holding defendant's rail did not infringe form claimed by plaintiff; Ashton Valve Co. v. Coale Muffler, etc., Co., 52 Fed. 318, 8 U. S. App. 169, holding patent for improvement in safety valve did not cover use of vent holes; Stutz v. Robson, 54 Fed. 508, holding specification did not cover sulphur-deposit chamber; H. W. Johns Mfg. Co. v. Robertson, 60 Fed. 905, holding feature of improvement in packing for steam joints, not sufficiently described; Thomasson v. Bumpass, 78 Fed. 492, 42 U. S. App. 295, holding new features in poultry crates not covered by claim.

114 U. S. 453–463, 29 L. 216, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COMMRS. v. BALTIMORE, ETC., R. R.

District of Columbia.— Title to streets of Washington city is in United States, not in city or owners of adjacent lots, and right to use them for any other than ordinary use of streets, must proceed from Congress, pp. 460, 461.

Cited in Daly v. Georgia, etc., R. R., 80 Ga. 801, 12 Am. St. Rep. 292, 7 S. E. 150, holding, where fee of streets was in State, their use for railway must be by State's authority; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 565, 42 L. 280, 17 S. Ct. 973, historically.

114 U. S. 463–464, 29 L. 221, PACIFIC BANK v. MIXTER.

Banks and banking.— No bond is required, on writs of error, or appeals issuing from, or brought to, Supreme Court, by direction of comptroller of currency, in suits by or against insolvent national banks, or receivers thereof, p. 464.

Approved in Gibson v. Peters, 150 U. S. 344, 37 L. 1105, 14 S. Ct. 135, receiver of national bank is officer of United States, within § 380, R. S.; Robinson v. Southern Nat. Bank, 94 Fed. 22, dispensing with bond in such an appeal.

Appeal and error.— Where record shows that comptroller directed receiver of national bank to take out writ of error, case will not be dismissed for mere clerical mistake in name, p. 464.

Approved in Walton v. Marietta Chair Co., 157 U. S. 347, 39 L. 727, 15 S. Ct. 628, allowing amendment to correct mistake in name of plaintiff in error; Citizens' Bank v. Farwell, 56 Fed. 572, 12 U. S. App. 409, holding mere clerical errors in spelling, or arrangement of plaintiffs' names, immaterial; United States, etc., Accident Assn. v. Weller, 30 Fla. 219, 11 So. 788, use of "guardian" for "next friend," held immaterial error.

114 U. S. 464–474, 29 L. 212, CAVENDER v. CAVENDER.

Equity.— If statements of answer supply material facts, omitted from bill, the defect is thereby waived, p. 471.

Approved in Provisional Municipality v. Lehman, 57 Fed. 330, 18 U. S. App. 411, holding defects in bill cured by allegations of answer; Richardson v. Green, 61 Fed. 431, 15 U. S. App. 488, regarding demurrer as waived, where answer supplied defect.

Trusts.— Where trustee's acts show want of reasonable fidelity, equity will remove him; e. g., failure to invest funds as directed, pp. 471, 473.

Trustee, who not only fails to discharge any duty of the trust, but denies receipt of trust property, will be removed upon application, pp. 473, 474.

Approved in Kintner v. Jones, 122 Ind. 153, 23 N. E. 702, removal of trustee for failure to sell property as directed.

114 U. S. 474–477, 29 L. 215, BURTON v. WEST JERSEY FERRY CO.

Appeal and error.— General exception to charge, which does not direct attention of court to portions objected to, raises no question for review in Supreme Court, p. 476.

Approved in Anthony v. Louisville R. R., 132 U. S. 173, 33 L. 302, 10 S. Ct. 54, Holder v. United States, 150 U. S. 92, 37 L. 1010, 14 S. Ct. 10, Baltimore, etc., R. R. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 92, 39 L. 631, 15 S. Ct. 497, M'Clellan v. Pyeatt, 50 Fed. 687, 4 U. S. App. 319, and Price v. Pankhurst, 53 Fed. 313, 10 U. S. App. 497, collecting authorities, Walker v. Windsor Nat. Bank, 56 Fed. 78, 5 U. S. App. 423, and Masonic Ben. Assn. v. Lyman, 60 Fed. 500, 18 U. S. App. 507, citing cases; Thom v. Pittard, 62 Fed. 236, 8 U. S. App. 597, St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Spencer, 71 Fed. 95, 36 U. S. App. 229, Shelp v. United States, 81 Fed. 700, 48 U. S. App. 385, Ohio, etc., Ry. v. McCartney, 121 Ind. 388, 23 N. E. 259, and Morrill v. Palmer, 68 Vt. 17, 33 Atl. 834, 33 L. R. A. 417, and n., all holding general exception of no avail, where part of charge was sound. Approved also in Van Stone v. Stillwell, etc., Mfg. Co., 142 U. S. 135, 35 L. 964, 12 S. Ct. 183, and Black v. Lewiston, 2 Idaho, 257, 13 Pac. 81, reviewing authorities refusing to consider general exception to charge as a whole; Chateaugay Iron Co. v. Blake, 144 U. S. 488, 36 L. 514, 12 S. Ct. 734, and Pittsburgh, etc., Ry. v. Thompson, 82 Fed. 728, 54 U. S. App. 236, both holding exception to refusal to charge series of propositions as requested, insufficient.

Negligence.— Mere failure of ferry company to provide passenger with seat, is not, in law, negligence, without proof of habitual failure to provide those customarily travelling thereon, pp. 476, 477.

114 U. S. 477–488, 29 L. 179, CLAWSON v. UNITED STATES.

Jury.— Venire to summon jurors is writ, proper and necessary to exercise of jurisdiction of the court, where affirmative provisions of law, so far as they extend, have been first observed, p. 487.

Approved in Lovejoy v. United States, 128 U. S. 173, 32 L. 390, 9 S. Ct. 58, holding act of June 30, 1879, did not change rule; Territory v. Harding, 6 Mont. 330, 12 Pac. 754, holding court might appoint special attorney, in absence of prosecutor, to sign indictment; Territory v. Carmody, 8 N. Mex. 384, 45 Pac. 882, where failure to resort to open venire was held error; State v. Hart, 19 Utah, 450, 57 Pac. 418, holding court retained power to impanel by open venire, State's admission to Union; Carter v. Territory, 3 Wyo. 195, 18 Pac. 751, 752, approving practice under Wyoming statutes.

Jury.— Act of March 22, 1882 (22 Stat. 30), providing that belief in certain doctrines of Mormon church should be cause for challenging jurors in prosecutions for bigamy, polygamy, and unlawful cohabitation, is valid, and applies to grand juries, pp. 478-484.

Approved in Jenkins v. State, 99 Tenn. 575, 42 S. W. 265, sustaining act excluding from jury service, all persons engaged in conspiracy against law and order. See 12 Am. St. Rep. 907, note.

Miscellaneous.— In re Wilson, 11 Utah, 118, 39 Pac. 498, miscited.

114 U. S. 488-492, 29 L. 183, HOPT v. UTAH.

Criminal law.— Under Utah criminal code, record of conviction of murder must either set forth charge in writing, or defendant's waiver of such charge; failing in this, new trial will be granted, without formal bill of exceptions, pp. 490, 491.

Cited in Bassett v. United States, 137 U. S. 502, 34 L. 763, 11 S. Ct. 166, generally.

Distinguished in Territory v. Christensen, 4 Dak. 421, 422, 424, 31 N. W. 853, 854, holding, under local statute, charge was not necessary part of judgment-roll.

Criminal law.— Lawfulness of conviction and sentence is determined by formal record of what was done at trial, in open court, and ex parte affidavits of subsequent private conversation in defendant's absence, will not be considered on appeal, pp. 491, 492.

Miscellaneous.— Hopt v. Utah, 120 U. S. 431, 30 L. 709, 7 S. Ct. 614, historically; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 672, 41 L. 306, 16 S. Ct. 1195, miscited.

114 U. S. 492-501, 29 L. 221, ATLANTIC PHOSPHATE CO. v. GRAFFLIN.

Sales.— Where contract of sale is executed by vendor, by delivery of goods, liability of vendee to pay for them accrues, and law raises implied contract to pay interest from delivery, on purchase money, which was liquidated by terms of invoices in name of plaintiff, received and retained by defendant, pp. 499, 500.

Not cited.

114 U. S. 501-511, 29 L. 244, NEW ORLEANS, ETC., R. R. v. DELAMORE.

Courts.— Supreme Court has jurisdiction on error to State court judgment, adverse to title based on sale in bankruptcy, p. 506.

Cited in Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 534, 29 L. 469, 6 S. Ct. 156, taking jurisdiction when dispute was as to validity of transfer by trustee in bankruptcy.

Distinguished in Merritt v. American, etc., Barge Co., 75 Fed. 816, 6 U. S. App. 127, holding Circuit Court of Appeals has jurisdiction of question whether full faith and credit has been given judgment of sister State.

Bankruptcy.— Court has jurisdiction to adjudicate railway company bankrupt, and to administer its property under the bankrupt act, p. 506.

Corporations.— Franchise to be a corporation is not subject of sale and transfer, unless so made by positive law; but franchises to build, own and manage railroad, and to take tolls thereon, are not necessarily corporate rights, and have nothing in their nature inconsistent with their being assignable, p. 508.

Approved in New Orleans v. Railroad, 40 La. Ann. 588, 4 So. 513, holding business of street railroad, subject to license tax; dissenting opinion in Citizens, etc., R. Co. v. City Ry., 64 Fed. 656, majority holding city council could not limit franchise to use street to less term than life of company. See 7 Am. St. Rep. 725, and 35 Am. St. Rep. 402, notes.

Limited in Detroit v. Detroit City Ry., 56 Fed. 882, 888, reviewing authorities, holding franchises, though assigned, terminate with life of corporation; State v. Railway, 140 Mo. 548, 62 Am. St. Rep. 745, 41 S. W. 957, 38 L. R. A. 220, holding quo warranto proper remedy to enforce forfeiture of street railroad franchise; dissenting opinion in Railroad v. Gibbes, 27 S. C. 404, 4 S. E. 57, majority sustaining income tax on railroad companies.

Railroads.— Upon judicial sale of railroad property, under mortgage covering franchises, those franchises necessary to use and enjoyment of road pass to purchaser; hence, where they may be mortgaged, those franchises are carried by surrender of company's property in bankruptcy, and pass to purchaser at bankruptcy sale, p. 510.

Approved in Nat. Foundry, etc., Works v. Oconto Water Co., 52 Fed. 58, decreeing sale of water company's franchises, under lien law; Baltimore Trust, etc., Co. v. Mayor, etc., 64 Fed. 160, collecting authorities, grant of right to build double track, accepted and acted upon, could not be repealed; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 76 Fed. 239, 47 U. S. App. 36, holding mortgagee succeeded to railroad's franchises; Burrus v. Columbus, 105 Ga. 45, 31 S. E. 125, where franchise to operate side track passed by judicial sale; Chadwick v. Old Colony R. R., 171 Mass. 243, 50 N. E. 630, collecting cases, holding franchise to operate road passed to assignee of mortgage; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 43, 7 Am. St. Rep. 697, 18 N. E. 700, 2 L. R. A. 262, and n., holding indefinite grant of franchise to use streets for railroad, survived corporation; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Warner, etc., Ry., 139 Ind. 306, 47 Am. St. Rep. 268, 38 N. E. 606, 28 L. R. A. 338, obiter. See 7 Am. St. Rep. 722, 25 Am. St. Rep. 477, and 35 Am. St. Rep. 398, 403, notes.

Constitutional law.— City of New Orleans, having granted right of way to one railroad, could not repeal said grant by subsequent attempt to confer same right on another, any more than by special repealing ordinance, p. 510.

Approved in Africa v. Board of Mayor, etc., 70 Fed. 734, 738, reviewing authorities, and holding repealing ordinance void.

Distinguished in Lake Roland, etc., Ry. v. Mayor, etc., 77 Md. 368, 26 Atl. 512, 20 L. R. A. 130, sustaining repealing ordinance, after track laid.

114 U. S. 511-523, 29 L. 240, STURGES v. CARTER.

Taxation.— Where taxpayer, in attendance before auditor, was told of latter's purpose to increase his assessment, this was substantial compliance with Ohio statute, requiring notice of increase, p. 516.

Approved in Lee v. Dawson, 8 Ohio C. C. 371, 372, involving same legislation.

Distinguished in Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. 720, holding notice, under § 2782 of said statute, did not cover proceedings under § 2781.

Constitutional law.— Ohio act of 1878, authorizing tax auditor to go back for period of four years to correct false returns, merely gives new remedy for enforcing existing right to taxes, and is not retroactive, within constitutional prohibition, pp. 516-519.

Cited in Reynolds v. Bowen, 138 Ind. 445, 36 N. E. 760, and Gager v. Prout, 48 Ohio St. 107, 26 N. E. 1015, sustaining similar statutes; Mergenthaler v. Crites, 4 Ohio C. C. 488, amendment of 1886, having an added penalty, is invalid if retrospective; Wade v. Kimberley, 5 Ohio C. C. 39, judgment for taxes, which omits penalties, is not invalid under amendment of 1886.

Constitutional law.— Every statute which takes away or impairs vested rights, acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation, imposes a new duty, or attaches a new disability, in respect to transactions already past, must be deemed retrospective, p. 519.

Approved in Commissioners v. Rosche, 50 Ohio St. 112, 40 Am. St. Rep. 656, 33 N. E. 409, 19 L. R. A. 585, statute authorizing recovery of taxes already paid, without protest, held unconstitutional; Wade v. Kimberley, 5 Ohio C. C. 39, construing Ohio tax legislation.

Taxation of both capital stock, and shares in stockholders' hands, is not necessarily double taxation, p. 521.

Approved in Herrman v. Guttenberg, 62 N. J. L. 616, 43 Atl. 707, bond issue for improvements, for which assessment had been paid, not double taxation.

Taxation.— Exemption from taxation must be express and clear, p. 521.

Taxation.— Statute providing that no person shall be taxed for certificates of stock in corporation, capital stock of which is taxed in name of company, does not exempt shares held in foreign corporations, only a small part of the property of which is subject to taxation in that State, p. 522.

Approved in Ogden v. St. Joseph, 90 Mo. 529, 3 S. W. 27, sustaining tax on shares in foreign corporation; Lee v. Sturges, 46 Ohio St. [illegible], 170, 19 N. E. 565, 568, 2 L. R. A. 560, 562, holding § 8, act of April 5, 1859, did not apply to stock of foreign corporations.

Appeal and error.— There being nothing in record to contrary, Supreme Court will presume that amount of judgment was right, until contrary is shown, pp. 522, 523.

114 U. S. 523-524, 29 L. 232, BEECHER MFG. CO. v. ATWATER MFG. CO.

Patents.— Use in succession of two distinct pairs of dies, of well-known kinds, not combined in one machine, nor co-operating to one result, is not patentable invention, p. 524.

Approved in Thatcher Heating Co. v. Burtis, 121 U. S. 295, 30 L. [illegible], 7 S. Ct. 1039, citing cases, holding patent for improvement in fire-place heaters, void; Florsheim v. Schilling, 137 U. S. 77, 34 L. [illegible], 11 S. Ct. 24, improvement in corsets held not patentable; Gunn v. Savage, 25 Fed. 103, reissued patent for ox-shoe dies, held void; National, etc., Mach. Co. v. John R. Williams Co., 44 Fed. 192, 12 L. R. A. 109, and n., cigar-bunching machine held not to be patentable combination; Johnson Co. v. Pacific, etc., Mills Co., 47 Fed. [illegible] holding Johnson's improved form of street railroad rails, not patentable.

Distinguished in Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. American, etc., Co., 31 Fed. [illegible] sustaining patent for process and apparatus for making celluloid; Brickill v. Hartford, 49 Fed. 374, sustaining patent for water-heater for fire-engine; Consolidated Fastener Co. v. Columbian, etc., Co., 79 Fed. 797, sustaining Raymond patent stud; Von Schmidt v. Bowers, 80 Fed. 150, 48 U. S. App. 188, affirming S. C., 63 Fed. 583, sustaining Bowers patents for dredgers.

114 U. S. 525-542, 29 L. 264, FORT LEAVENWORTH R. R. v. LOWE.

United States.— Where State land is purchased by United States, for forts, arsenals, etc., with consent of State legislature, Federal jurisdiction over same is exclusive of State authority, pp. 531, 532, [illegible]

Approved in Sharon v. Hill, 11 Sawy. 130, 24 Fed. 731, holding Federal jurisdiction over appraisers' building in San Francisco, exclusive; Martin v. House, 39 Fed. 695, holding process of State court on judgment lien, could not affect title to such land; Bannon v. Barnes, 39 Fed. 899, holding Kansas City post-office site not subject to taxation; In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 35, reviewing authorities, holding State had no jurisdiction over crime committed at Fort Robinson; State v. Mack, 23 Nev. 363, 62 Am. St. Rep. 813, 47 Pac. 764, holding Federal jurisdiction over courthouse and post-office, exclusive; Foley v. Shriver, 81 Va. 572, Federal jurisdiction exclusive over Soldiers' Home, so purchased; United States v. American Water-Works Co., 37 Fed. 748, arguendo.

Distinguished in State v. Board of Commrs., 153 Ind. 308, 54 N. E. 811, holding State had jurisdiction over Soldiers' Home; Exum v. State, 90 Tenn. 506, 25 Am. St. Rep. 702, 17 S. W. 108, 15 L. R. A. 382, 383, State could punish perjury committed in its court, while sitting in Federal building.

Eminent domain.— United States may acquire needed lands by purchase, without consent of State within which they lie, or may, by exercise of right of eminent domain, where needed to execute powers conferred by Constitution, p. 531.

Approved in Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U. S. 155, 29 L. 846, 6 S. Ct. 672, reviewing authorities, holding land purchased by United States at tax sale, not subject to State taxation; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 510, 40 L. 514, 16 S. Ct. 400, holding land might be condemned for purpose of lighthouse.

United States.— Reservation, accompanying consent of State to purchase of lands by United States, that process of State courts may be served in the places purchased, intended to prevent them from becoming asylums for fugitives from justice, and is not invalid as interfering with supremacy of United States, p. 533.

Approved in United States v. Meagher, 37 Fed. 878, such reservation did not affect Federal jurisdiction of crime committed within limits of the land; In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 36, 37, 38, this reservation did not extend State's jurisdiction to offenses committed at Fort Robinson; State v. Mack, 23 Nev. 367, 62 Am. St. Rep. 817, 47 Pac. 766, as to courthouse and post-office site.

Public lands.— Where lands within limits of State are acquired by United States, in any other way than purchase, with State's consent, they are subject to qualification, that forts, arsenals, and other public buildings erected thereon, for uses of general government, will be free from any such State interference as would impair their effective use for designated purpose; but when not so used, legislative power of State will be complete, p. 539.

Approved in Chicago, etc., Ry. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 545, 29 L. 271, 5 S. Ct. 1006, holding law as to killing of animals by railroad, continued in effect after cession; Palmer v. Barrett, 162 U. S. 403, 40 L. 1016, 16 S. Ct. 838, holding State jurisdiction extended to land leased by Federal government to city, for market purposes; Crook, etc., Co. v. Old Pt., etc., Hotel Co., 54 Fed. 608, 609, 610, title of Old Point Comfort held to be subject to restrictions of act of cession;

In re Kelly, 71 Fed. 549, 551, 552, 553, Federal court had no jurisdiction over prosecution for assault, committed at Soldiers' Home, Milwaukee; In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 36, but holding State had given up jurisdiction over Fort Robinson; Ex parte Gaines, 56 Ark. 230, 19 S. W. 608, interest of lessee in Hot Springs reservation, subject to State tax; Barrett v. Palmer, 135 N. Y. 340, 31 Am. St. Rep. 837, 32 N. E. 1018, 17 L. R. A. 723, and n., holding State had jurisdiction of civil action, arising within ceded territory.

United States.— Cession of land by State, to United States, may be accompanied by such conditions as State may see fit to annex, not inconsistent with its free and effective use for intended purposes, pp. 539, 540.

Approved in Palmer v. Barrett, 162 U. S. 403, 40 L. 1016, 16 S. Ct. 838, holding State jurisdiction extended to land leased by Federal government to city, for market purposes; United States v. Bateman, 13 Sawy. 215, 34 Fed. 88, murder committed in Presidio reservation, San Francisco, not an offense against United States; United States v. Carter, 34 Fed. 624, Federal court had jurisdiction of prosecution for murder committed on battleship, at Cob Dock. See 31 Am. St. Rep. 837, note.

Distinguished in Territory v. Burgess, 8 Mont. 67, 19 Pac. 561, 1 L. R. A. 810, reviewing authorities, holding State had jurisdiction over prosecution for murder, committed within Fort Maginnis; United States v. Schwalby, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 683, 29 S. W. 92, holding act did not authorize cession of jurisdiction over land not owned by United States.

United States jurisdiction extends over all territory within the States, and their authority, as well as that of State within which property is situated, is necessary, before cession of sovereignty or political jurisdiction can be made to foreign country, pp. 540, 541.

Distinguished in Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 267, 33 L. 645, 10 S. Ct. 297, holding treaty power extended to provision for ownership and transfer of property by foreigners.

United States.— Cession to the general government of legislative authority and political jurisdiction over lands within State, used for forts, or other public buildings, being of necessity temporary, subject to revert to State, when the public use ceases, and for interest of State, as well as Federal government, is valid, pp. 541, 542.

Approved in Benson v. United States, 146 U. S. 330, 36 L. 994, 13 S. Ct. 61, holding Federal court had jurisdiction of crime committed on Fort Leavenworth reservation; United States v. Partello, 48 Fed. 677, holding State might consent to retention of Federal control over Indian reservation; In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 39, holding Nebraska lost jurisdiction over Fort Robinson, by act of cession; State v. Central Pac. R. R., 21 Nev. 235, 30 Pac. 687, presuming acceptance of Federal grant of taxing privilege.

Distinguished in Territory v. Burgess, 8 Mont. 67, 19 Pac. 561, 1 L. R. A. 810, reviewing authorities, holding State had jurisdiction over prosecution for murder, committed within Fort Maginnis.

United States.— Military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, was not acquired by purchase, with State's consent, and the cession of jurisdiction over same to United States is not exclusive, except so far as necessary for its use as military post; saving clause, reserving right to tax property of railroads within reservation, is, therefore, valid, p. 542.

114 U. S. 542-547, 29 L. 270, CHICAGO, ETC., RY. v. McGLINN.

United States.— Only mode prescribed by Constitution, whereby United States may acquire exclusive legislative authority over land situate within a State, is by purchase, with State's consent; when such power is acquired in any other way, as by act of cession, that act may be accompanied with any conditions not inconsistent with effective use for public purposes intended, pp. 545, 546.

Approved in Benson v. United States, 146 U. S. 331, 36 L. 994, 13 S. Ct. 61, Circuit Court has jurisdiction of murder committed within Fort Leavenworth reservation; Crook v. Old Point, etc., Hotel Co., 54 Fed. 608, holding State lien law in force within ceded reservation; In re Kelly, 71 Fed. 549, 551, holding United States criminal laws did not apply to Soldiers' Home.

United States.— Kansas statute, ceding Fort Leavenworth reservation to United States, with proviso for service of process, and taxation of private property therein, held valid, p. 546.

Approved in Benson v. United States, 146 U. S. 330, 331, 36 L. 994, 13 S. Ct. 61, holding Circuit Court had jurisdiction over murder committed on that reservation; United States v. American Water-Works Co., 37 Fed. 748, obiter; In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 35, 36, holding Nebraska ceded away jurisdiction over Fort Robinson.

States.— It is competent for legislature to cede exclusive jurisdiction over places needed by general government in execution of its powers, such use being for people of State as well as of United States, and such jurisdiction necessarily ending when places cease to be used for those purposes, p. 546.

Approved in In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 39, holding Nebraska liquor laws not in force in Fort Robinson reservation; United States v. Carter, 84 Fed. 624, reviewing authorities, holding Federal court had jurisdiction of offense committed on battleship, moored at Cob Dock.

Treaties.— As to laws strictly municipal in their character, the rule is general, that a change of government leaves them in force, until, by direct action of new government, they are altered or repealed, pp. 546, 547.

Approved in Crook v. Old Point, etc., Hotel Co., 54 Fed. 609, [illegible], holding mechanics' lien law in force within ceded territory; Barnett v. Barnett, 9 N. Mex. 212, 50 Pac. 338, citing cases, Spanish law as to acquest property, applied; Barrett v. Palmer, 135 N. Y. [illegible], 31 Am. St. Rep. 837, 31 N. E. 1016, 17 L. R. A. 728, and n., holding State had jurisdiction to enforce private rights within Brooklyn navy yard. See 31 Am. St. Rep. 838, note.

Distinguished in In re Ladd, 74 Fed. 40, holding Nebraska liquor laws not in force within Fort Robinson reservation.

United States.— Law of Kansas, as to liability of railroad for killing live-stock, not being inconsistent with laws of United States, and not having been changed or abrogated, remained in force within Fort Leavenworth reservation after cession of political jurisdiction over same to United States, p. 547.

114 U. S. 548, 29 L. 281, EX PARTE HUGHES.

Costs.— Disbursements by counsel, or parties, for printing briefs, on appeal to Supreme Court, cannot be allowed as costs, p. 548.

Approved in Kelly v. Springfield Ry., 83 Fed. 188, reviewing authorities, refusing to tax, as costs, disbursements for printing briefs, etc., in patent case; Price v. Garland, 4 N. Mex. 366 (John), 5 N. Mex. 101 (Gild.), 20 Pac. 183, refusing to allow cost of record and briefs, on appeal.

Costs.— Original proceeding in Supreme Court, for mandamus, to compel action by circuit judge, is a civil cause; and docket fee is taxable, in favor of attorney for prevailing party, as costs, as also are disbursements for printing objections in nature of pleadings, but not for printing brief, p. 548.

Approved in 88 Am. Dec. 185, note.

114 U. S. 549-555, 29 L. 255, MARTINSBURG, ETC., R. R. v. MARCH.

Contracts.— Where parties to railroad construction contract stipulate that decision of company's engineer shall conclusively determine quantity and quality of work, amount due, etc., such action of the engineer, in absence of fraud, gross mistake, or dishonest judgment, is conclusive upon the parties, pp. 551, 553.

Approved in Hamilton v. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co., 136 U. S. 255, 34 L. 424, 10 S. Ct. 930, holding stipulation for appraisal, in insurance policy, binding; Chicago, etc., R. R. v. Price, 138 U. S. 192, 34 L. 919, 11 S. Ct. 291, where rule was applied in favor of the contractor; Pauly, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Hemphill County, 62 Fed. 704, 23 C. C. App. 481, upholding commissioner's decision on jail construction contract; Sheffield, etc., Ry. v. Gordon, 151 U. S. 292, 38 L. 166, 14 S. Ct. 345, superintendent's acceptance held conclusive as to its quality; United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 602, 20 S. Ct. 234, where [illegible] of time was left to engineer's [illegible] United States, 60 Fed. 727, 13 U. S. App. [illegible], [illegible] as to quantity and quality of work, held conclu[illegible] [illegible] etc., R. Co., 67 Fed. 637, 31 U. S. App. [illegible] excavated in railroad grading; Elliott v. [illegible] [illegible] Fed. [illegible], 40 U. S. App. 61, as to inspection and [illegible] of [illegible] furnished; Newman v. United States, 8[illegible] Fed. [illegible] of excavations, etc., in road building; [illegible] etc., Co. v. Harris, 81 Fed. 931, 54 U. S. App. 144, [illegible] purchase of bonds was conditioned on their approval by [illegible]; Breyman v. Ann Arbor R. Co., 85 Fed. 584, where [illegible] certificate of work done was held conclusive; Logansport, [illegible] Co. v. Peru, 89 Fed. 187, when franchise gave council right to fix gas rate after specified time; Western Assurance Co. v. Hall, [illegible] Ala. 325, 20 So. 449, collecting authorities, stipulation in policy for arbitration, held binding; Electric-Lighting Co. v. Elder, 115 Ala. [illegible] 21 So. 987, citing cases, construing term "satisfactory completion;" Hot Springs Ry. v. Maher, 48 Ark. 529, 3 S. W. 641, as to quantity and quality of work on railroad; Howard v. Pensacola, etc., R. R., 24 Fla. 600, 5 So. 374, reviewing authorities, settlement on basis of engineer's estimates concluded plaintiff; Ross v. McArthur, 85 Iowa, 206, 52 N. W. 126, as to classification of excavations, measurements, etc.; Covington v. Limerick, — Ky. —, 40 S. W. 256, reviewing cases, as to estimate of extra work done; Wilbur v. Bingham, 3 Ohio C. C. 462, where furnace was to be put in to suit purchaser, error to charge that if properly put in he must take it; Moore v. Gaus Mfg. Co., 113 Mo. 108, 20 S. W. 977, holding, when work was completed in accordance with contract, court of law had jurisdiction; Baltimore, etc., R. R. v. Brydon, 65 Md. 227, 57 Am. Rep. 326, 9 Atl. 128, where question of good faith was properly left to jury; New England Trust Co. v. Abbott, 162 Mass. 154, 38 N. E. 434, 27 L. R. A. 279, and n., citing cases, purchaser bound by agreement for appraisal of stocks; Williams v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 112 Mo. 487, 490, 495, 497, 34 Am. St. Rep. 418, 421, 424, 426, 20 S. W. 637, 638, 640, reviewing authorities, and holding, under allegations, plaintiff must show engineer's refusal to act; Railroad v. Central Lumber, etc., Co., 95 Tenn. 544, 545, 32 S. W. 636, 637, as to allowances for extra work, etc.; Jones, etc. v. Risley, 91 Tex. 7, 32 S. W. 1030, where bridge materials were subject to engineer's approval; Kilgore v. Baptist, etc., Soc., 89 Tex. 469, 35 S. W. 145, as to architect's estimates; Bœttler v. Tendick, 73 Tex. 494, 11 S. W. 500, 5 L. R. A. 276, and n., builder bound by architect's acceptance; dissenting opinions in Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 59 Fed. 264, 16 U. S. App. 366, majority holding insurance company had waived right to stipulated appraisal; Wortman v. Kleinschmidt, 12 Mont. 336, 30 Pac. 286, majority holding builder not liable for extra work, not ordered by architects; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Mills, 91 Va. 643, 22 S. E. 564, majority holding engineer's mistake amounted to fraud.

Distinguished in Lewis v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 49 Fed. 709, citing cases, but relieving against mistakes arising from wrong construction of contract, by engineer; Central Trust Co. v. Louisville, etc., Ry., 70 Fed. 284, holding contract in question did not render engineer's decision conclusive; Marks v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 76 Fed. 946, 44 U. S. App. 714, where engineer's award and refusal to act were held to show bad faith; Crane Elevator Co. v. Clark, 69 Fed. 708, 711, 53 U. S. App. 263, 268, collecting authorities, holding question of bad faith should have gone to jury; Manchester Fire Assurance Co. v. Kœrner, 13 Ind. App. 378, 55 Am. St. Rep. 235, 40 N. E. 1111, collecting cases, and holding agreement for arbitration waived; Milwaukee, etc., Ins. Co. v. Stewart, 13 Ind. App. 65, 42 N. E. 292, where company lost right to arbitration by failure to submit; Moran v. Schmitt, 109 Mich. 292, 67 N. W. 326, where refusal to make estimates was held to show bad faith; G. H., etc., Ry. v. Henry, 65 Tex. 691, 692, engineer's decision not binding, where based on erroneous construction of contract; Sigler v. Beebe, 44 W. Va. 590, 30 S. E. 77, jury having found that there was fraud in agreed measurement, new trial denied.

114 U. S. 555-562, 29 L. 248, STRANG v. BRADNER.

Bankruptcy.— Term "fraud," used in bankrupt act, defining debts not dischargeable, means positive fraud, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, not implied fraud, or fraud in law, p. 559.

Approved in Noble v. Hammond, 129 U. S. 68, 32 L. 623, 9 S. Ct. 236, debt, created by innocent mingling of proceeds of collection with bankrupt's funds, discharged; Ames v. Moir, 138 U. S. 311, 34 L. 954, 11 S. Ct. 312, citing cases, call for delivery of goods under contract, made after bankrupt's insolvency, held fraudulent; Upshur v. Briscoe, 138 U. S. 377, 34 L. 935, 11 S. Ct. 317, reviewing authorities, where designation of bankrupt as trustee did not affect transaction, facts of which created simple debt; Georgia R. R. v. Cubbedge, etc., Co., 75 Ga. 323, mere failure of bankrupt to account for goods held in trust, not fraud; Lawrence v. Harrington, 122 N. Y. 412, 25 N. E. 407, where debt created by conversion of funds collected, was held discharged.

Distinguished in Herrlich v. McDonald, 80 Cal. 479, 22 Pac. 301, holding money, taken by stock dealer to purchase stock for another, held in fiduciary capacity.

Bankruptcy.— Claim against bankrupt for damages, on account of fraud or deceit practiced by him, is not discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy, even though proved against his estate, and dividend thereon received; accordingly, where notes were procured by false representations, the debt was not discharged, pp. 560, 561.

Cited in 67 Am. St. Rep. 47, monographic note.

Partnership.— If, in course of partnership business, partner makes fraudulent misrepresentations of fact, to injury of innocent persons, without notice of limitations upon his general authority, his partners are responsible therefor, though ignorant of the fraud; especially if they received and appropriated its fruits, p. 561.

Cited in Brundage v. Mellon, 5 N. Dak. 73, 63 N. W. 209, citing cases, holding evidence of partner's misrepresentations, admissible to charge firm.

114 U. S. 562-564, 29 L. 272, ALLING v. UNITED STATES.

Courts.— Claims against United States, for money received from Mexico, under treaty of July 4, 1868, are claims founded on treaty, over which Court of Claims has no jurisdiction, pp. 563, 564.

Distinguished in United States v. Weld, 127 U. S. 55, 32 L. 64, 8 S. Ct. 1002, reviewing authorities, holding claim against gross sum allowed to United States, under Geneva award, not within rule.

114 U. S. 564-575, 29 L. 277, WALES v. WHITNEY.

Courts.— Act of March 3, 1885, restored appellate jurisdiction o Supreme Court, in habeas corpus cases, over decisions of Circui Courts; this included jurisdiction over similar judgments of Suprem Court of District of Columbia, pp. 565, 566.

Cited in Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 302, 32 L. 408, 9 S. Ct. 78, S. C note to 13 Sawy. 461, where original application to Supreme Cour for writ of habeas corpus was entertained, Circuit Court havin made the order of commitment; In re Heath, 144 U. S. 95, 36 L. 360, 12 S. Ct. 616, refusing to grant writ of error to Supreme Cour District of Columbia, in criminal case; Ex parte Mirzan, 119 U. S. 586, 30 L. 513, 7 S. Ct. 342, refusing to entertain original applicatio for writ; Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 301, 37 L. 18 13 S. Ct. 391, obiter; King v. M'Lean Asylum, 64 Fed. 341, 21 U. S. App. 481, 26 L. R. A. 789, generally.

Limited in In re Palliser, 40 Fed. 575, holding appeal to Suprem Court would not lie in habeas corpus case, where writ is returnabl before Circuit judge. Denied in Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 86, 8 36 L. 898, 13 S. Ct. 23, holding no appeal lay from Supreme Cour District of Columbia, in habeas corpus proceeding.

Courts.— Neither Supreme Court, nor Supreme Court, District Columbia, has appellate jurisdiction over naval court-martial, over offenses which that court has power to try, p. 570.

Army and navy.— Civil courts cannot interfere with naval cou martial, in performance of its duty, by writ of prohibition, or oth writ of that nature; and may relieve person from imprisonme under order of such court, only by writ of habeas corpus, where is apparent that court-martial proceeds without jurisdiction, p. 5

Approved in Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 500, 29 L. 461, 6 S. Ct. 1 reviewing authorities, holding police had no authority to arrest a detain deserter; Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 177, 29 L. 604, 6

[illegible], reviewing authorities, refusing to prohibit court-martial to [illegible] paymaster for "scandalous conduct;" In re Spencer, 40 Fed. [illegible] remanding minor, convicted of desertion by court-martial; In [illegible] Zimmerman, 12 Sawy. 260, 30 Fed. 178, reviewing cases, refusing [illegible] interfere by habeas corpus, where court-martial had jurisdiction [illegible] offense.

Habeas corpus is not a writ of error, though in some cases, in which court issuing it has appellate power over detaining court, it may be used with writ of certiorari, for that purpose, p. 571.

Cited in Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 497, 29 L. 460, 6 S. Ct. 151, reviewing cases, holding writ of habeas corpus not removable from State to Circuit Court; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 578, 36 L. [illegible] 12 S. Ct. 525, citing cases, refusing to consider question as to whether alleged transaction constituted an offense; In re Tsu Tse [illegible] 51 Fed. 564, petitioner could not complain that he was entitled [illegible] deportation to another country.

Habeas corpus.— More than mere moral restraint necessary to make case for habeas corpus; there must be actual confinement, or present means of enforcing it, pp. 571, 572.

Distinguished in In re Grice, 79 Fed. 682, entertaining application for writ, where petitioner, at large on bail, surrendered himself to sheriff.

[illegible] U. S. 576–587, 29 L. 273, RICHMOND MINING CO. v. ROSE.

Mines and minerals.— Inclusion of larger number of lineal feet in the lode, does not render mining claim void; but, unless it interferes with rights previously acquired, excess may be rejected and claim held good for remainder, p. 580.

Cited and applied in Glacier Min. Co. v. Willis, 127 U. S. 481, 32 L. 254, 8 S. Ct. 1217, to tunnel site; Lakin v. Dolly, 53 Fed. 336, holding patent void as to excess; Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co., 54 Fed. 941, patent not avoided by drawing in end line to make it parallel; Thompson v. Spray, 72 Cal. 533, 14 Pac. 185, holding location valid, except as to excess claimed; Doe v. Tyler, 78 Cal. 23, 14 Pac. 376, location not invalidated, as whole, by mistake in placing monument, whereby it overlapped; Sherman v. Wrinkle, 121 Cal. 509, 53 Pac. 1082, application for unsurveyed lands, not wholly vitiated by fact that it embraces excess; Stem-Winder Min. Co. v. Emma, etc., Min. Co., 2 Idaho, 428, 21 Pac. 1042, location valid, though stakes were set to include excessive amount; Burke v. McDonald, 2 Idaho, [illegible] 18 Pac. 50, mistake in marking, where accuracy of measurement difficult, did not affect location; Hansen v. Fletcher, 10 Utah, [illegible] 17 Pac. 482, mistake of 300 feet in length did not render location void.

Mines and minerals.— Where claim of 200 feet, as discoverer, [illegible] no one at time it is made, is made in good faith, in reliance upon one of the constituent veins, and acted on for years before knowledge of mistake, it is justified, p. 581.

Mines and minerals.— By filing of complaint in proper court proceedings to determine right of possession to mineral land were commenced, within meaning of § 2326, R. S., p. 583.

Courts.— What constitutes commencement of action in State court, being matter of State law, is not reviewable in Supreme Court, as Federal question, p. 583.

Mines and minerals.— Sections 2325, 2326, R. S., intended in every instance where there was possibility of conflicting claims, to give opportunity to have conflict adjudicated before issuance of patent, p. 584.

Cited in Hoffman v. Beecher, 12 Mont. 497, 31 Pac. 94, sustaining complaint, in contest, as to description of claim.

Mines and minerals.— Where a contest is instituted under § 2326, R. S., officials of land department have no further act of judgment to exercise until court has decided same; after that, they are bound by it, p. 585.

Approved in Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co., 157 U. S. 693, 39 L. 864, 15 S. Ct. 737, reversing S. C., 61 Fed. 561, 15 U. S. App. 456, doubting effectiveness of amendment to application, pending contest; M'Evoy v. Hyman, 25 Fed. 541, certificate issued while contest pending, did not terminate the suit.

Courts — Mines and minerals.— While mining claim contest is before court, undecided, land office could not resume control, because of an implied waiver of claim, by delay in court; and patent to disputed claim, thus issued, is void, p. 586.

Cited in M'Evoy v. Hyman, 25 Fed. 541, certificate issued, while contest pending, did not terminate that suit; Garrard v. Silver Peak Mines, 82 Fed. 584, holding patent might be collaterally attacked, in action at law, for want of authority to issue same.

Distinguished in Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Cannon, 54 Fed. 258, 7 U. S. App. 507, reviewing authorities, holding voidable patent could not be attacked in equity suit to quiet title.

Mines and minerals.— Where, pending contest, party obtained patent to claim on same lode, but outside not in surface conflict with claim in litigation, it was a claim initiated by party to suit, pendente lite, and could not be used in his favor, pp. 586, 587.

Miscellaneous.— Witters v. Sowles, 33 Fed. 541, miscited; Albion Min. Co. v. Richmond Min. Co., 19 Nev. 226, 8 Pac. 480, historically. See 58 Am. St. Rep. 273, monographic note as to width of lode; dissenting opinion in Bullion, etc., Min. Co. v. Eureka Hill Min. Co., 5 Utah, 72, 11 Pac. 534, majority holding discoverer of apex entitled to entire width of lode.

114 U. S. 587-598, 29 L. 235, WABASH, ETC., RY. v. HAM.

Corporate property is trust fund for payment of debts; and conveyance by debtor corporation of its property without authority of law, and in fraud of existing creditors, is void against them, p. 594.

Approved and applied in Mellen v. Moline Iron Works, 131 U. S. 365, 33 L. 183, 9 S. Ct. 785, holding creditor might maintain suit to remove cloud or lien from such property; Richardson v. Green, 133 U. S. 44, 33 L. 522, 10 S. Ct. 284, reviewing cases, holding creditors entitled to certain bonds of insolvent corporation; Smith Purifier Co. v. McGroarty, 136 U. S. 241, 34 L. 349, 10 S. Ct. 1019, entertaining suit by creditor to set aside mortgage; Clark v. Bever, 139 U. S. 112, 35 L. 95, 11 S. Ct. 474, holding corporation might dispose of stock to creditors in payment of debts; Hollins v. Brierfield Coal, etc. Co., 150 U. S. 383, 37 L. 1116, 14 S. Ct. 130, reviewing cases, dismissing creditor's bill for application of corporate property to payment of their claims; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 254, 19 S. Ct. 171, Tennessee act, giving resident creditors priority in distribution of assets, invalid; McDonald v. Williams, 174 U. S. 403, 19 S. Ct. 745, receiver of national bank could not recover dividend paid stockholder out of capital; Gould v. Little Rock, etc., Ry., 52 Fed. 684, reviewing cases, and sustaining trust deed to secure debts of insolvent corporation; Sutton Mfg. Co. v. Hutchinson, 63 Fed. 500, 24 C. C. App. 145, setting aside mortgage made by insolvent corporation; Butler v. Cockrill, 73 Fed. 947, 36 U. S. App. 702, directing pro rata distribution of property of insolvent corporation; Ames v. Union Pac. Ry., 74 Fed. 343, holding receiver could not divert income from property of insolvent corporation from creditors; Childs v. N. B. Carlstein Co., 76 Fed. 90, reviewing cases, holding president entitled to his security, against general creditors of corporation; National Bank v. Allen, 90 Fed. 551, 61 U. S. App. 116, collecting cases, and upholding corporation's right to prefer creditors; Childs v. N. B. Carlstein Co., 76 Fed. 90, reviewing cases, holding president entitled to his security, against general creditors of corporation; National Bank v. Allen, 90 Fed. 551, 61 U. S. App. 116, collecting cases, and upholding corporation's right to prefer creditors; Central of Georgia Ry. v. Paul, 93 Fed. 885, holding creditor might follow assets of insolvent corporation into hands of reorganized company; McCherry v. Troutman, 94 Fed. 956, holding transferrer of corporate property not liable to creditor, where company undissolved; Gottlieb v. Miller, 154 Ill. 53, 39 N. E. 995, collecting numerous authorities, holding insolvent corporation entitled to confess judgment in favor of bona fide creditors; First Nat. Bank v. Dovetail, etc., Gear Co., 143 Ind. 553, 52 Am. St. Rep. 437, 40 N. E. 811, sustaining confessed judgment in favor of stockholder creditor; Henderson v. Indiana Trust Co., 143 Ind. 569, 40 N. E. 519, where accounts were assigned to secure creditor, who also held, as collateral, note of directors; Louisville Banking Co. v. Etheridge Mfg. Co., — Ky. —, 43 S. W. 171, reviewing cases, giving attaching creditors of insolvent company priority over fraudulent assignee; Fear v. Bartlett, 81 Md. 443, 32 Atl. 323, 33 L. R. A. 724, and n., stockholder in insolvent company, having repudiated his subscription, for fraud, not liable on same; Miller v. Matthews, 87 Md. 475, 40 Atl. 178, sustaining assignment for benefit of creditors against subsequent attachment; Hospes v. Northwestern Mfg. Co., 48 Minn. 193, 31 Am. St. Rep. 643, 50 N. W. 1119, 15 L. R. A. 473, holding creditor not entitled to compel payment on bonus stock; Kelly v. Clark, 21 Mont. 322, 69 Am. St. Rep. 678, 53 Pac. 965, 42 L. R. A. 628, reviewing authorities, where creditor compelled payment on stock fraudulently issued as paid up; Shaw v. Robinson, 50 Neb. 417, 69 N. W. 950, holding question as to fraudulent transfer one of fact; Vance v. McNabb Coal, etc., Co., 92 Tenn. 60, 20 S. W. 427, transfer of property to new corporation held void as to creditors of old; Hardware Co. v. Manufacturing Co., 86 Tex. 164, 165, 24 S. W. 24, 25, 22 L. R. A. 816, and n., reviewing authorities, deed of trust, after insolvent company ceased business, void against creditors; Weyeth Hardware, etc., Co. v. James, etc., Co., 15 Utah, 131, 47 Pac. 611, reviewing authorities, refusing to set aside assignment for benefit of creditors of insolvent corporation; Albright v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 8 N. Mex. 438, 439, 46 Pac. 453, majority holding unpaid subscriptions a trust fund for creditors.

Corporations.— On consolidation, by statutory authority, of two or more solvent corporations, business of old corporations is not wound up nor property sequestrated, but is continued; consolidated company takes property of old corporations charged with lien for payment of debts, only when so provided by agreement or statute; accordingly, in this case, mere fact of consolidation did not create lien in favor of unsecured equipment bonds of old corporation, pp. 595, 596.

Approved in Tod v. Kentucky Union Land Co., 57 Fed. 56, defining meaning of consolidation, holding consolidation might result in absorption of old corporation; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Continental Trust Co., 95 Fed. 523, affirming S. C., 86 Fed. 948, holding consolidated company assumed liabilities of old corporations; Berry v. Kansas City, etc., R. R., 52 Kan. 775, 39 Am. St. Rep. 382, 36 Pac. 725, in absence of specific provision, consolidated company held to assume liabilities of old corporations. See 59 Am. St. Rep. 558, monographic note.

Denied in Compton v. Railway, 45 Ohio St. 624, 16 N. E. 121, contrary ruling on same state of facts as principal case. Distinguished in Hatry v. Painesville, etc., Ry., 1 Ohio C. C. 443.

Railroads.— Stipulation in agreement of consolidation, between certain railroads, that bonds and debts of old companies should "be protected by consolidated company," did not create lien in favor of unsecured equipment bonds, p. 596.

Denied as to same bonds in Compton v. Railway, 45 Ohio St. 624, 16 N. E. 121, contrary ruling as to same state of facts as principal case.

Liens.— Doctrine of vendors' liens applies only to sales of real estate, and cannot be invoked to secure lien for unsecured bonds transferred to new company as part of consideration for consolidation of railroads, p. 597.

Railroads.— Where all debts of company were consolidated into one mortgage debt, with privilege to bondholders of exchanging existing bonds for new ones, and before holders of unsecured bonds offered to make such exchange another mortgage was given and proceedings were begun for its foreclosure, sale under that foreclosure was made free from lien in favor of said bondholders, pp. 597, 598.

Cited in Compton v. Jesup, 167 U. S. 34, 42 L. 67, 17 S. Ct. 807, S. C., 68 Fed. 317, 330, 31 U. S. App. 486, holding principal case disposed of question as to equipment bonds; Adelbert College v. Toledo, etc., Ry., 47 Fed. 837, 841, 842, 843, remanding case, involving similar facts, to State court.

114 U. S. 596–606, 29 L. 233, MACALESTER v. MARYLAND.

Canals.— Rule that mortgagee out of possession is not entitled to rents and profits as against mortgagor or attaching creditors, applies to mortgages of railroads, canals, bridges, etc., pp. 604, 605.

Cited in Hook v. Bosworth, 64 Fed. 448, 24 U. S. App. 341, citing cases, mortgagor not entitled to moneys earned before receiver appointed; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 52 Fed. 366, holding creditors entitled to net earnings under receiver for judgment creditor.

Canals.— Where statute directs disposal of canal company's tolls between operating expenses and mortgage indebtedness, a general creditor, with full knowledge, will be restrained from levying upon such tolls needed for such specified purposes, pp. 605, 606.

Cited in Roberts v. Denver, etc., R. R., 8 Colo. App. 510, 46 Pac. 832, enjoining interference with profits.

114 U. S. 606–615, 29 L. 229, WURTS v. HOAGLAND.

Drains.— General laws, authorizing drainage of tracts of swamp lands, by commissioners appointed upon proceedings instituted by some of owners of the lands, and assessment of whole expense of work upon all lands within tract in question, such as provided in act of New Jersey of March 8, 1871, are just and constitutional, and do not deprive parties of property without due process of law, or deny to them equal protection of the laws, pp. 610–614.

Approved in Fallbrook Irr. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 163, 41 L. 390, 17 S. Ct. 65, reversing S. C., 68 Fed. 960, sustaining Wright irrigation act, of California; Wisconsin v. Siebecker, 164 U. S. 702, 41 L. 1182, 17 S. Ct. 1000, affirmed on authority of principal case; Carson v. St. Francis Levee Dist., 59 Ark. 533, 27 S. W. 593, sustaining act creating levee district; Swift v. Calnan, 102 Iowa, 213, 63 Am. St. Rep. 446, 71 N. W. 234 (see 37 L. R. A. 464), sustaining act authorizing extension of party wall on land adjoining; Turner v. Nye, 154 Mass. 582, 28 N. E. 1049, 14 L. R. A. 490, and n., sustaining act authorizing flowing of land for fish culture; Paxton, etc., Irr. Co. v. Farmers, etc., Irr. Co., 45 Neb. 895, 50 Am. St. Rep. 592, 64 N. W. 346, 29 L. R. A. 857, holding use of water, for irrigation, a public use; Board of Directors, etc. v. Collins, 46 Neb. 423, 64 N. W. 1090, reviewing cases, Nebraska "district irrigation law," 1895, upheld; Lewis Co. v. Gordon, 20 Wash. 90, 54 Pac. 781, sustaining act providing for construction of drains, etc.; Bryant v. Robbins, 70 Wis. 271, 35 N. W. 550, sustaining Wisconsin drainage act of 1885; Traute v. White, 46 N. J. Eq. 441, 19 Atl. 197, but questioning validity of party-wall ordinance; Gage v. Gage, 66 N. H. 294, 29 Atl. 549, 28 L. R. A. 857, and n., generally. See 20 Am. St. Rep. 559, note.

Constitutional law.— When law operates alike on all persons and property, similarly situated, equal protection cannot be said to be denied, p. 615.

Approved in Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 582, 32 L. 546, 9 S. Ct. 193, citing cases, sustaining Kentucky street-assessment law of 1882; State v. American, etc., Refining Co., 51 La. Ann. 566, 25 So. 449, sustaining Louisiana license tax of 1890; Wallace v. Myers, 38 Fed. 185, 4 L. R. A. 172, and n., sustaining New York inheritance tax of 1885, 1887; Newark, etc., Ry. v. Hunt, 50 N. J. L. 313, 12 Atl. 699, sustaining act as to disposition of diseased horses; Caldwell v. Wilson, 121 N. C. 462, 28 S. E. 559, reviewing authorities, law authorizing suspension of railroad commissioner sustained.

114 U. S. 615–619, 29 L. 224, SCHOFIELD v. CHICAGO, ETC., RY.

Negligence.— One approaching familiar crossing of railroad track, who could have seen train coming seventy rods from crossing, at any distance within 600 feet from crossing, is guilty of contributory negligence, though train was not regular one, was running at high rate of speed, and did not stop at depot or blow whistle or ring bell between depot and crossing, pp. 617, 618.

Approved and relied upon in Pike v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 99, setting aside verdict, court holding there was contributory negligence; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Whittle, 74 Fed. 300, 40 U. S. App. 23, where walking on track at night was contributory negligence; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson, 85 Fed. 416, 56 U. S. App. 144, holding court properly left question of defendant's negligence to jury; Memphis, etc., R. R. v. Martin, 117 Ala. 386, 23 So. 238, refusal to give instruction, similar to rule, held error; Bauer v. St. Louis, etc., Ry., 46 Ark. 400, reviewing authorities, rule held applicable to car inspector, engaged in his duties; Baltimore Traction Co. v. State, 78 Md. 425, 28 Atl. 399, under circumstances, it was contributory negligence to board moving street car; Northern Pac. R. R. v. Freeman, 174 U. S. 382, 19 S. Ct. 764, Ward v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 423, Horn v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 54 Fed. 304, 306, 6 U. S. App. 381, and Missouri Pac. Ry. v. Moseley, 57 Fed. 924, 12 U. S. App. 601, all following rule; Blount v. Grand Trunk Ry., 61 Fed. 378, 22 U. S. App. 129, though gates at crossing were up; Reynolds v. Great Northern Ry., 69 Fed. 811, 32 U. S. App. 377, 29 L. R. A. 697, and MacLeod v. Graven, 73 Fed. 632, 43 U. S. App. 129, both following rule.

Approved and followed also in Pyle v. Clark, 79 Fed. 747, 49 U. S. App. 263 (affirming S. C., 75 Fed. 646), Grand Trunk Ry. v. Baird, 94 Fed. 951, and Louisville, etc., R. R. v. Webb, 90 Ala. 194, 8 So. 821, 11 L. R. A. 678, reviewing numerous authorities, though there was watchman; Railway v. Cullen, 54 Ark. 435, 436, 16 S. W. 170, though there was box-car in way; Glascock v. Central Pac. R. R., 73 Cal. 141, 14 Pac. 520, and non-suit granted; Bertelson v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 5 Dak. 321, 323, 40 N. W. 533, 534, when plaintiff walked between two cars; Indiana, etc., Ry. v. Greene, 106 Ind. 204, 55 Am. Rep. 740, 6 N. E. 606, Cones v. Cincinnati, etc., Ry., 114 Ind. 331, 16 N. E. 639, and Mann v. Belt R. R., etc., Co., 128 Ind. 142, 26 N. E. 821, all reaffirming rule; Oleson v. Lake Shore, etc., Ry., 143 Ind. 413, 42 N. E. 739, where train was obscured by smoke; Hunter v. Montana, etc., Ry., 22 Mont. 532, 57 Pac. 143, and Durbin v. Oregon R. R., etc., Co., 17 Or. 12, 11 Am. St. Rep. 784, 17 Pac. 8, and directing non-suit; Blackburn v. Southern Pac. Co., — Or. —, 55 Pac. 226, though train was running at unlawful speed; New York, etc., R. R. v. Kellam, 83 Va. 858, 3 S. E. 706, following rule; Johnson v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 91 Va. 179, 21 S. E. 240, all holding failure to look and listen constituted contributory negligence; dissenting opinions in Cahill v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 74 Fed. 294, 46 U. S. App. 85, majority holding was evidence of implied license; St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Barker, 77 Fed. 814, 40 U. S. App. 739, majority holding failure to stop, look and listen, as contributory negligence, properly left to jury; Railway Cos. v. Foster, 88 Tenn. 633, 14 S. W. 428, majority holding contributory negligence no bar, under statute; Hadley v. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co., 21 Ind. App. 687, 51 N. E. 341, holding plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence. See notes in 90 Am. Dec. 780, 781, 782, and 50 Am. Rep. 653.

Distinguished in Grand Trunk Ry. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 432, 36 L. 494, 12 S. Ct. 688, reviewing authorities, holding question of contributory negligence properly left to jury; Texas, etc., Ry. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353, 41 L. 192, 16 S. Ct. 1109, holding no evidence to justify instruction as to stopping before crossing track; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. East Tennessee, etc., Ry., 60 Fed. 996, 22 U. S. App. 102, where law required train to stop at crossing; Cincinnati, etc., Ry. v. Farra, 66 Fed. 501, 31 U. S. App. 306, question as to whether failure to stop, look and listen was contributory negligence, properly left to jury; Beatty v. Mutual Reserve Fund, etc., Assn., 75 Fed. 68, 44 U. S. App. 527, collecting numerous authorities, case improperly taken from jury; Graven v. MacLeod, 92 Fed. 849, holding implied invitation to passenger to alight on track, question of contributory negligence for jury; Georgia Pac. Ry. v. Lee, 92 Ala. 267, 9 So. 232, plaintiff's duty to alight and look left to jury; Gratiot v. Missouri Pac. Ry., 116 Mo. 465, 21 S. W. 1098, 16 L. R. A. 196, collecting numerous authorities, train running in violation of speed ordinance, case left to jury.

Trial.— When evidence given at trial, with all justifiable inferences, is insufficient, so that verdict for plaintiff would have to be set aside, court may direct verdict for defendant, pp. 618, 619.

The following cases approve the rule and hold circumstances were such as to justify court in directing verdict: Ferguson v. Arthur, 117 U. S. 490, 29 L. 982, 6 S. Ct. 865, citing cases, action to recover duties; Gunther v. Liverpool Ins. Co., 134 U. S. 116, 33 L. 860, 10 S. Ct. 450, action on policy of insurance; Franklin Brass Co. v. Phœnix Assur. Co., 65 Fed. 776, 25 U. S. App. 119, action on fire policy; Smyth v. New Orleans Canal, etc., Co., 93 Fed. 927, reviewing authorities, patent case; Knapp v. Sioux Falls Nat. Bank, 5 Dak. 396, 40 N. W. 589, action of trover; Bunt v. Sierra Butte, etc., Min. Co., 138 U. S. 485, 34 L. 1032, 11 S. Ct. 464, Elliott v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 150 U. S. 246, 37 L. 1070, 14 S. Ct. 85, Southern Pac. Co. v. Seley, 152 U. S. 156, 38 L. 396, 14 S. Ct. 533, Ward v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 43 Fed. 425, Missouri Pac. Ry. v. Moseley, 57 Fed. 923, 12 U. S. App. 601, Southern Pac. Co. v. Johnson, 69 Fed. 566, 44 U. S. App. 1, reviewing authorities, Reynolds v. Great Northern Ry., 69 Fed. 810, 32 U. S. App. 577, 29 L. R. A. 697, MacLeod v. Graven, 73 Fed. 632, 43 U. S. App. 129, St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Whittle, 74 Fed. 301, 40 U. S. App. 23, Southern Ry. v. Smith, 86 Fed. 295, 52 U. S. App. 716, 40 L. R. A. 749, Claus v. Northern Steamship Co., 89 Fed. 647, 60 U. S. App. 718, Detroit Crude-Oil Co. v. Grable, 94 Fed. 82, Elliott v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 5 Dak. 546, 41 N. W. 762, 3 L. R. A. 367, Werk v. Illinois Steel Co., 154 Ill. 432, 40 N. E. 444, Gregory v. Cleveland, etc., R. R., 112 Ind. 388, 14 N. E. 229, Oleson v. Lake Shore, etc., Ry., 143 Ind. 409, 42 N. E. 737, 32 L. R. A. 150, Candelaria v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 6 N. Mex. 284, 27 Pac. 503, Butte v. Pleasant Valley Coal Co., 14 Utah, 265, 47 Pac. 78, and Northern Pac. R. R. v. Holmes, 3 Wash. 210, 14 Pac. 690, all damage cases.

Approved also in Delaware, etc., R. R. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 472, 35 L. 215, 11 S. Ct. 571, collecting cases, holding court properly instructed jury that defendant was guilty of negligence; Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 100, 39 L. 360, 15 S. Ct. 292, reviewing authorities, in absence of evidence, court properly charged that jury could not find defendant guilty except as charged; Norris v. M'Canna, 29 Fed. 762, holding there was no evidence to justify finding of partnership; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 53 Fed. 222, 10 U. S. App. 473, instruction that blowing of whistle was negligent act, sustained; Northwestern Fuel Co. v. Danielson, 57 Fed. 920, 12 U. S. App. 688, sustaining instruction that certain acts of defendant constituted negligence; Mann v. Belt R. R., etc., Co., 128 Ind. 141, 26 N. E. 820, collecting authorities, holding evidence did not sustain verdict for damages; Clark v. Jenkins, 162 Mass. 368, 38 N. E. 974, setting aside verdict proper, though motion to direct had been denied; Swallow v. Bain, 7 N. Mex. 114, 32 Pac. 504, refusal to direct verdict for plaintiff, held error, in action of covenant; Linkhauf v. Lombard, 137 N. Y. 426, 33 Am. St. Rep. 749, 33 N. E. 475, 20 L. R. A. 51, refusal to direct verdict for defendant, held error; Pool v. Southern Pac. Co., — Utah, —, 58 Pac. 333, instruction limiting jury to finding of damages only, sustained. See 30 Am. Rep. 653, note.

Distinguished in Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Randolph, 78 Fed. 760, 47 U. S. App. 260, reviewing authorities, question as to deceased's voluntary exposure to danger, for jury; Stewart v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 45 Fed. 22, refusing to set aside verdict where evidence was conflicting; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Kirksey, 60 Fed. 1002, 22 U. S. App. 94, holding court wrongfully withheld question of negligence from jury; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, 63 Fed. 410, 24 U. S. App. 106, question of contributory negligence properly left to jury; State v. Union R. R., 70 Md. 77, 18 Atl. 1034, under facts, court erred in taking case from jury; Ladouceur v. Northern Pac. R. R., 4 Wash. St. 44, 29 Pac. 945, damage suit, non-suit held error; Lewis v. Prien, 98 Wis. 90, 73 N. W. 655, direction for verdict properly denied; dissenting opinion in Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 174, 39 L. 386, 15 S. Ct. 321, majority holding proper an instruction that defendant could be found guilty only as charged.

114 U. S. 619–622, 29 L. 254, UNITED STATES v. CORSON.

Army and navy.— Prior to act of 1866, president had power to dismiss any officer of army or navy, p. 620.

Army and navy.— Officer dismissed from army by president cannot regain his position by subsequent revocation of the dismissal, but only by new appointment concurred in by senate if in session, or if not, operative only until end of the next ensuing session, pp. 621, 622.

Not cited.

114 U. S. 622–635, 29 L. 257, BROWN v. HOUSTON.

Commerce.— Federal prohibition of State tax on "imports and exports" has reference only to goods brought from or carried to foreign countries, not from one State to another, pp. 628, 629.

Reaffirmed in Ex parte Brown, 48 Fed. 442. Approved in Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 527, 29 L. 719, 6 S. Ct. 478, State may tax intended exports not yet in carriers' hands; Rothermel v. Meyerle, 136 Pa. St. 263, 20 Atl. 586, 9 L. R. A. 367, and n., upholding license law. See 62 Am. St. Rep. 474, note.

Commerce.— State tax on coal on board towboats on river, offered for sale generally, does not become export tax by fact that it is thereafter sold to vessels going abroad, p. 629.

Approved in Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 120, 34 L. 136, 10 S. Ct. 688, prohibition law void as to imports in original packages.

Commerce.— General State tax, on all property alike, does not become duty on exports because some of it is thereafter exported, p. 630.

Approved in State v. French, 109 N. C. 726, 26 Am. St. Rep. 592, 14 S. E. 384, tax on merchants, based on all their purchases, is valid license tax.

Commerce.— Power of Congress is exclusive whenever the matter is national or admits of uniformity of regulation, and no State may affect the freedom of interstate intercourse, p. 631.

Approved in Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 455, 29 L. 694, 6 S. Ct. 457, annulling State law discriminating against sellers of imported liquors; Bowman v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 125 U. S. 495, 31 L. 710, 8 S. Ct. 703, annulling Iowa law, requiring carriers importing liquors to procure certificate; Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, etc., Const. Co., 41 Neb. 468, 59 N. W. 864, interstate commerce act exclusive, and applicable to prior contracts; Bullard v. Northern Pac. R. R., 10 Mont. 180, 25 Pac. 122, 11 L. R. A. 250, and n., interstate commerce law applied to prior unexecuted contract; People v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 8, 33 N. E. 722, 19 L. R. A. 697, State corporate franchise tax is void as to foreign corporation doing only interstate business; People v. Hawkins, 157 N. Y. 16, 68 Am. St. Rep. 747, 51 N. E. 261, 42 L. R. A. 497, prison-goods law is void as to product of other States; Ex parte Rollins, 80 Va. 319, annulling State license discriminating against importers; Arkansas v. Kansas, etc., Coal Co., 96 Fed. 367, arguendo; dissenting opinion in O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 346, 352, 36 L. 461, 463, 12 S. Ct. 702, 704, arguendo. See 27 Am. St. Rep. 548, note.

Distinguished in Territory v. Guyott, 9 Mont. 49, 22 Pac. 134, upholding Montana law prohibiting sale of liquor to Indians.

Commerce.— Omission of Congress to regulate any form of interstate commerce is a declaration that it shall be untrammelled, p. 631.

Approved in Pickard v. Pullman, etc., Car Co., 117 U. S. 49, 29 L. 790, 6 S. Ct. 642, annulling Tennessee sleeping-car tax as affecting interstate commerce; Wabash, etc., Ry. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 589, 30 L. 255, 7 S. Ct. 20, denying State's right to regulate State rate on transportation to another State; Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 493, 30 L. 696, 7 S. Ct. 594, drummers' license tax invalid as to citizens of other States; Bowman v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 125 U. S. 508, 31 L. 715, 8 S. Ct. 1066, annulling Iowa law requiring carriers importing liquor to procure certificate; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 110, 34 L. 132, 10 S. Ct. 684 (see dissenting opinion in 135 U. S. 147, 34 L. 145, 10 S. Ct. 697), annulling prohibition law as applied to imports in original packages; Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 212, 38 L. 966, 14 S. Ct. 1090, Kentucky regulation of charges of interstate bridge, invalid; In re Rebman, 41 Fed. 868, annulling Virginia meat-inspection law as discriminatory; Swift v. Philadelphia, etc., R. R., 58 Fed. 859, holding common law against discriminating rates by carriers, no part of Federal law; Ex parte Scott, 66 Fed. 46, annulling law prohibiting sale of oleomargarine; W. A. Vandercook Co. v. Vance, 80 Fed. 789, South Carolina dispensary act invalid as to imports in original packages; Grafty v. Rushville, 107 Ind. 510, 57 Am. Rep. 135, 8 N. E. 613, annulling city peddlers' ordinance; Gatton v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 95 Iowa, 129, 63 N. W. 595, 28 L. R. A. 562, common law as to unreasonable freight charges is no part of Federal jurisprudence; Bagg v. Railroad, 109 N. C. 284, 26 Am. St. Rep. 574, 14 S. E. 81, 14 L. R. A. 598, State statute, penalizing failure to ship freight promptly, applies to interstate trade; Arkansas v. Kansas, etc., Co., 96 Fed. 367, arguendo. See 27 Am. St. Rep. 550, valuable note, and 59 Am. Rep. 269, note.

Commerce.— Products of other States are not to be free from taxation in State whither carried for use or sale, in absence of congressional act so providing, p. 633.

Reaffirmed in Pittsburgh, etc., Coal Co. v. Bates, 40 La. Ann. 228, 8 Am. St. Rep. 521, 3 So. 643.

Commerce.— State tax on property imported from another State, which has reached its destination and become part of the general mass of property of the State, and is taxed only in common with such other property, is valid; e. g., tax on coal on towboats in city harbor, imported for general sale, p. 634.

Reaffirmed in Pittsburgh, etc., Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 584, 589, 39 L. 542, 544, 15 S. Ct. 418, 419, affirming 40 La. Ann. 228 8 Am. St. Rep. 521, 3 So. 643, similar to principal case. Approved in Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 527, 29 L. 719, 6 S. Ct. 478, State may tax intended exports not yet in carrier's hands; Robbins v. Shelby Taxing Dist., 120 U. S. 497, 30 L. 697, 7 S. Ct. 596, annulling drummers' license tax as to citizens of other States; Philadelphia Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 346, 30 L. 1205, 7 S. Ct. 1126, annulling State tax on gross receipts of interstate transportation; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 648, 32 L. 314, 8 S. Ct. 1384, license tax on interstate telegraph, invalid; Pullman's Car Co.

v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 23, 35 L. 616, 11 S. Ct. 878, upholding State tax on cars of interstate carrier; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 317, 319, 39 L. 436, 437, 15 S. Ct. 372, 373, affirming 103 Mo. 245, 246, 23 Am. St. Rep. 877, 15 S. W. 82, 11 L. R. A. 220, upholding peddlers' tax not discriminating against foreign goods or peddlers; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 615, 19 S. Ct. 53, upholding validity of live-stock exchange; Ex parte Brown, 48 Fed. 439, 440, 443, upholding merchants' license tax based on their purchases; In re Greene, 52 Fed. 113, construing act of 1890, against monopolies; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 52 Fed. 693, upholding North Carolina fertilizer-inspection law; American Harrow Co. v. Shaffer, 68 Fed. 757, upholding Virginia license tax on sale of manufactured implements; Preston v. Finley, 72 Fed. 860, 862, upholding occupation tax on sale of certain Sunday papers; In re May, 82 Fed. 426, Montana cigarette license law held valid, because not discriminatory; Oliver Finney Grocery Co. v. Speed, 87 Fed. 413, upholding Tennessee tax on merchants based on amount invested and stock in trade; Price Co. v. Atlanta, 105 Ga. 365, 31 S. E. 622, sale of imported goods from warehouse within State is not interstate commerce; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 97 Ga. 123, 25 S. E. 252, 35 L. R. A. 501, upholding State sewing-machine license; South Bend v. Martin, 142 Ind. 48, 49, 41 N. E. 320, 29 L. R. A. 537, upholding peddlers' license; State v. Wheelock, 95 Iowa, 583, 58 Am. St. Rep. 444, 64 N. W. 621, 30 L. R. A. 438, and n., upholding State law against itinerant vendors of nostrums; Myers v. Baltimore Co., 83 Md. 389, 391, 55 Am. St. Rep. 352, 354, 35 Atl. 145, 146, 34 L. R. A. 311, 312, upholding tax on cattle imported for sale; Bluefields Banana Co. v. Board of Assessors, 49 La. Ann. 46, 21 So. 629, upholding tax on cash in bank, at agency of foreign importer; McClellan v. Pettigrew, 44 La. Ann. 360, 10 So. 854, license tax on drummers for imported goods is invalid; Lumberville Bridge Co. v. Assessors, 55 N. J. L. 534, 26 Atl. 713, 25 L. R. A. 137, upholding corporate license fee as applied to one in interstate business; Waterbury v. Newton, 50 N. J. L. 542, 14 Atl. 608, State oleomargarine law applicable to imported package; People v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 11, 33 N. E. 723, 19 L. R. A. 698, State franchise tax void as to foreign corporation doing only interstate business; State v. Gorham, 115 N. C. 727, 44 Am. St. Rep. 496, 20 S. E. 181, 25 L. R. A. 812, upholding tax on itinerant salesmen, as applied to salesmen of imported goods; Kelley v. Rhoads, 7 Wyo. 258, 51 Pac. 597, 598, 599, 39 L. R. A. 600, 602, upholding law taxing live-stock imported for grazing; dissenting opinions in Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 151, 152, 34 L. 147, 10 S. Ct. 699, majority annulling prohibition law as applied to original packages imported; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 234, 41 L. 700, 17 S. Ct. 314, majority upholding State tax on telegraph and express companies; Hynes v. Briggs, 41 Fed. 470, arguendo. See 59 Am. Rep. 272, note, and 62 Am. St. Rep. 449, 474, valuable note on taxation.

Distinguished in United States v. Hopkins, 82 Fed. 540, holding live-stock trading association an unlawful combination; Jamieson v. Indiana Natural Gas, etc., Co., 128 Ind. 581, 28 N. E. 84, upholding regulation of transportation of natural gas under police power.

Constitutional law.— A State taxing law is not invalid as to coal imported from and owned by citizen of another State, because denying equal privileges and immunities guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, p. 634.

Miscellaneous.— Arkansas v. Kansas, etc., Coal Co., 96 Fed. 355, and Tennessee v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. S. 460, 38 L. 514, 14 S. Ct. 636, as to removal of causes.

114 U. S. 635-642, 29 L. 261, PROVIDENT SAVINGS SOC. v. FORD.

Removal petition by insurance company, alleging that Ohio judgment upon which suit was brought in New York, was not obtained after personal service, was evasive and inconsequential, because not denying voluntary appearance, or service on an agent such as insurance companies usually maintain in all States, p. 639.

Courts.— Method of acquiring jurisdiction of foreign corporation by service on its agent, as established by State law, applies in Federal as well as State courts, p. 639.

Removal of causes.— In suit on judgment obtained in another State, it is no ground for removal that it was colorably assigned to citizen of domestic State to prevent removal thereof by defendant, p. 641.

Reaffirmed in Oakley v. Goodnow, 118 U. S. 44, 30 L. 62, 6 S. Ct. 944. Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 426, 30 L. 994, 7 S. Ct. 1032, Leather Manufacturers' Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 781, 30 L. 818, 7 S. Ct. 778, and Vimont v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 69 Iowa, 301, 28 N. W. 612. Approved in Dow v. Bradstreet Co., 46 Fed. 826, on removal petition by one defendant, he may show another to have been fraudulently joined; Bowley v. Railroad, 110 N. C. 318, 14 S. E. 778, denying removal by one defendant of non-separable action; Carson v. Dunham, 149 Mass. 56, 14 Am. St. Rep. 400, 20 N. E. 314, 3 L. R. A. 205, and n., holding colorable transfer to defeat Federal jurisdiction, not ground for injunction in Massachusetts court.

Removal of causes.— In suit on a judgment, fact that judgment was obtained in Federal court does not make suit one arising under Federal laws, and so removable, p. 641.

Reaffirmed in Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 428, 429, 30 L. 994, 7 S. Ct. 1032, Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 588, 32 L. 544, 9 S. Ct. 114, and Pope v. Louisville, etc., Ry., 173 U. S. 580, 19 S. Ct. 502. Approved in Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 257, 29 L. 390, 6 S. Ct. 31, denying that extent of New York ferry rights raised Federal question; Kansas v. Bradley, 26 Fed. 289, remanding case questioning prohibition law; Arkansas v. Kansas, etc., Coal Co., 96 Fed. 355, 357, bill to prevent influx of railroad employees raises Federal commerce question; King v. Lawson, 84 Fed. 210, bill by homestead entryman to protect his possession, held not of Federal cognizance; Pacific Gas Imp. Co. v. Ellert, 64 Fed. 429, denying Circuit Court's jurisdiction on bill alleging defendants would rely on Federal law; Walker v. Windsor Nat. Bank, 56 Fed. 80, 5 U. S. App. 423, allowing removal of suit on national bank cashier's bond; Tate v. Douglas, 113 N. C. 195, 18 S. E. 203, suit on Federal receiver's bond does not raise Federal question; Tennessee v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. S. 460, 38 L. 514, 14 S. Ct. 656, arguendo.

Distinguished in Pullman's Palace, etc., Co. v. Washburn, 66 Fed. 793, Federal court has jurisdiction of ancillary proceedings, irrespective of citizenship.

Judgment is a security of record showing a debt due from one person to another, p. 641.

114 U. S. 642–653, 29 L. 250, EX PARTE REGGEL.

Extradition.— R. S., §§ 5278, 5279, respecting extradition of one accused of treason, felony "or other crime," extends to one accused of a misdemeanor, as do also the words of Constitution upon same subject, pp. 649, 650.

Reaffirmed in Barranger v. Baum, 103 Ga. 475, 68 Am. St. Rep. 122, 30 S. E. 528. Approved in Lascelles v. Georgia, 148 U. S. 542, 37 L. 551, 13 S. Ct. 689, defendant, after surrender to demanding State, has no immunity from charge for another crime than that of the requisition.

State has power, except as limited by Federal Constitution, to define offenses against its laws, and citizens of other States are bound thereby, p. 650.

Extradition.— Fugitive is entitled to insist upon proof, before governor of asylum State, that he was within the demanding State at time of alleged crime, and subsequently withdrew therefrom, p. 651.

Approved in In re White, 55 Fed. 58, 14 U. S. App. 87, but holding guilt or innocence of accused cannot be investigated; State v. Hall, 115 N. C. 814, 44 Am. St. Rep. 503, 20 S. E. 730, 28 L. R. A. 291, and n. (and see dissenting opinion in 115 N. C. 823, 20 S. E. 733, 28 L. R. A. 294, and n., 44 Am. St. Rep. 509, note), one firing a bullet into a State, but never actually there, is not an extraditable fugitive.

Extradition.— State has power to establish forms of civil and criminal process in its own courts, subject only to Federal constitutional provisions protecting life, liberty and property; consequently, in extradition proceedings, it may not be objected that indictment is not technically correct, if substantially according to laws of demanding State, p. 651.

Approved in Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 175, 20 S. Ct. 78, upholding New Jersey law as to struck jury; Pearce v. Texas, 155 U. S. 313, 39 L. 167, 15 S. Ct. 117, technical sufficiency of indictments not open on habeas corpus; Ex parte Pearce, 32 Tex. Cr. 305, 307, 23 S. W. 16, 17, holding indictment sufficient under laws of demanding State; Barranger v. Baum, 103 Ga. 475, 68 Am. St. Rep. 122, 30 S. E. 528, construing extradition warrant and indictment.

Extradition.— Executive of asylum State may require competent proof that accused is, in fact, a fugitive from justice of demanding State, p. 652.

Approved in Cook v. Hart, 146 U. S. 183, 36 L. 939, 13 S. Ct. 43, on habeas corpus in Federal court, after surrender to demanding State; Webb v. York, 79 Fed. 620, 621, 49 U. S. App. 171, 172, requisition cannot be denied if indictment sufficient under laws of demanding State. See 68 Am. St. Rep. 132, note.

Extradition.— On habeas corpus, Supreme Court refused to order release of accused, whose extradition had been granted by governor of asylum State, where proofs made out a prima facie case, though not as full as might properly have been required, p. 653.

Approved in Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 96, 29 L. 549, 6 S. Ct. 300, presumption is in favor of governor's findings; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 245, 40 L. 413, 16 S. Ct. 303, warrant of extradition and indictment make out prima facie case; Ex parte Brown, 28 Fed. 654, 655, courts will not overrule governor's decision except for clear error; In re Cook, 49 Fed. 843, executive warrant is prima facie evidence of flight; Ex parte Whitten, 67 Fed. 231, one extradited will not be discharged by Federal court on habeas corpus, in advance of hearing by State court; In re Huse, 79 Fed. 307, 48 U. S. App. 328, Federal courts ought to interfere by habeas corpus only in extreme cases; Ex parte Dawson, 83 Fed. 308, 49 U. S. App. 678, extradition warrant, reciting receipt of requisition and indictment, "in due form," is sufficient; In re Bloch, 87 Fed. 983, requisition by governor of demanding State and copy of indictment are necessary; Kurtz v. State, 22 Fla. 43, 1 Am. St. Rep. 176, affidavit distinctly charging offense cannot be impeached by the accused, governor of requesting State is judge of its authenticity; Hackney v. Welch, 107 Ind. 259, 8 N. E. 144, governors need certify only that papers are authenticated, not genuine; Drinkall v. Spiegel, 68 Conn. 448, 36 Atl. 832, 36 L. R. A. 488, a paroled prisoner permitted to leave the State, is a fugitive; Barranger v. Baum, 103 Ga. 475, 477, 68 Am. St. Rep. 122, 124, 30 S. E. 528, 529, indictment and warrant in due form make out prima facie case; In re Sylvester, 21 Wash. 203, 57 Pac. 831, holding warrant and requisition sufficient; In re Fitzsa, 45 Fed. 474, arguendo.

114 U. S. 654–663, 29 L. 226, STREET R. R. v. HART.

Removal of causes.— Affidavit for removal for local prejudice, sworn to ten days before suit was filed in State court, and averring that affiant "is the plaintiff in the case of," etc., held sufficient, p. 660.

Removal petition, showing facts making out case for removal under act of 1875, is not rendered abortive by allegation that removal was asked under R. S., § 639, p. 660.

Approved in Whelan v. New York, etc., R. Co., 35 Fed. 863, 1 L. R. A. 74, and n., distinguishing between formal and jurisdictional requirements.

Removal of causes.— Absence of oath to removal petition is only an informality, and waived by failure to object, p. 660.

Cited in dissenting opinion, Dunn v. Burlington, etc., Ry., 35 Minn. 83, 84, 27 N. W. 453, 454, arguendo.

Appeal and error.— Motion to expunge and arrest judgment is not, any more than motion for new trial, reviewable on error in Supreme Court, pp. 660–661.

Courts.— State law authorizing fi. fa. against a city upon judgment against it, is a remedy enforceable upon similar judgment in Circuit Court in a common-law cause, under R. S., § 916, p. 661.

Courts.— Louisiana special act of 1870, prohibiting fi. fa. against city of New Orleans to enforce payment of money judgments, was not in force proprio vigore, in the Circuit Court, and a judgment creditor might proceed against that city by fi. fa., under the general statute authorizing it, as provided in R. S., § 916, p. 662.

Appeal and error.— Assignments of error respecting questions not saved by bill of exceptions at jury trial, cannot be considered on error, p. 663.

Approved in Alexander v. United States, 138 U. S. 355, 34 L. 956, 11 S. Ct. 351, error in selecting jury waived by failure to make objection until motion for new trial.

114 U. S. 663–705, 29 L. 281, TENNESSEE BOND CASES.

States.— Statutory lien created by Tennessee act of 1852, upon property of railroads aided by grant of State bonds, accrued only to the State, not the bondholders; hence, after repudiation of debt by State, bondholders could not enforce it against railroads, pp. 685–705.

Followed in Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. R., 156 U. S. 420, 39 L. 476, 15 S. Ct. 365, holding bondholders not entitled to lien reserved by Georgia in railroad loan of 1866.

Payment implies a debt from payor to payee, p. 687.

Statutes creating contracts are to be interpreted according to language of each particular case, p. 688.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

IN OCTOBER TERM, 1884.

Vol. 115.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM 1884-5,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOL. 115,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

[illegible]	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 115 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
[illegible]	Pacific Railroad Removal Cases:		74-76	The Charles Morgan,	318
	Union Pacific R. Co. v. Myers,		76-78	" " "	319
	Same v. City of Kansas,		79-81	Clark v. Beecher Mfg. Co.,	352
	Same v. Knuth,		81-84	" " "	353
	Same v. Harwood,		84-87	" " "	354
	Texas & Pacific R. Co. v. McAllister,		87-91	Wollensak v. Reiher,	355
			91-93	" "	356
	Same v. Kirk,		93-96	" "	357
	Same v. Murphy,	319	96-98	Wollensak v. Reiher,	350
[illegible]	" "	320	98-101	" "	351
[illegible]	" "	321	101-102	" "	352
[illegible]	" "	322	102-103	Frasher v. O'Connor,	311
[illegible]	" "	323	103-106	" "	312
[illegible]	" "	324	106-109	" "	313
[illegible]	" "	325	109-112	" "	314
[illegible]	" "	326	112-115	" "	315
[illegible]	" "	327	115-116	" "	316
[illegible]	Sadden v. Merritt, Coll.,	333	116	Good v. O'Connor,
[illegible]	" " "	334		Hazard v. O'Connor,	316
[illegible]	Wheeler v. New Brunswick & C. R. R. Co.,	341	116-117	Gray, Admrx. v. Nat. Steamship Co.,	309
[illegible]	" " " "	342	117-120	" " " "	310
[illegible]	" " " "	343	120-121	" " " "	311
[illegible]	" " " "	344	122-123	Buncombe Co. Comrs. v. Tommey,	305
[illegible]	" " " "	345	123-127	" " " "	306
[illegible]	Pirie v. Tvedt,	331	127-130	" " " "	307
[illegible]	" "	332	130-134	" " " "	308
[illegible]	" "	333	134-136	" " " "	309
[illegible]	Swillim v. Donnellan,	348	137	Mayfield v. Richards,	334
[illegible]	" "	349	137-140	" "	335
[illegible]	" "	350	140-142	" "	336
[illegible]	Good v. Parker,	346	143	Smith v. Woolfolk,	357
[illegible]	" "	347	143-145	" "	358
[illegible]	" "	348	145-148	" "	359
[illegible]	Dickey v. Union Trust Co.,	345	148-150	" "	360
[illegible]	Crump v. Thurber,	328	151	Philippi v. Philippe,	336
[illegible]	" "	329	151-153	" "	337
[illegible]	Stewart v. Donham,	329	153-156	" "	338
[illegible]	" "	330	156-157	" "	339
[illegible]	" "	331	157-160	" "	340
[illegible]	Richardt v. Hogaboom,	346	160	" "	341
[illegible]	The Charles Morgan,	316	163	Lamar, Exr. v. McCulloch,	360
[illegible]	" " "	317	164-167	" " "	361

Off. Rep. 115 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
167–171	Lamar, Exr. v. McCulloch,	362
171–175	" " "	363
175–183	" " "	364
183–186	" " "	365
186–188	" " "	366
188	Norrington v. Wright,	366
189–191	" "	367
191–204	" "	368
204–207	" "	369
207–210	" "	370
210–212	" "	371
213–214	Filley v. Pope,	372
214–221	" "	373
221	Boston Mining Co. v. Eagle Mining Co.,	392
221	" " " " "	393
222	Lancaster v. Collins,	373
223–226	" "	374
226–227	" "	375
233–238	Van Weel v. Winston,	384
238–241	" "	385
241–244	" "	386
244–247	" "	387
247	" "	388
248	Starin v. New York,
	Independent Steamboat Co. v. New York,	388
248–251	" " "	389
251–258	" " "	390
258–259	" " "	391
260	Clay v. Field,	375
260–263	" "	376
264–266	Henderson, Exr. v. Wadsworth,
	McCarthy v. Same,	377
266–275	" "	378
275–278	" "	379
278–281	" "	380
281–284	" "	381
284	" "	382
285–287	Moses v. Wooster,	391
287–288	" "	392
288–289	Jacks v. Helena,	392
290	Waterville v. Van Slyke,	406
291–297	Hazlett v. United States,	382
297–299	" " "	383
300	Merrick's Exr. v. Giddings,	403
300–303	" " "	404
303–306	" " "	405
306–307	" " "	406
308	Smith v. Black, Tr.,	398
308–310	" " "	399
310–313	" " "	400
